For this edition of Visionaries, Australian video radical Nic Hamilton takes us through the Tasmanian wilderness. Having previously worked with such underground electronic music stars as L-Vis 1990 and Actress, this video, soundtracked by Harem (Old Apparatus), showcases his warped take on CGI and architecture. Check back for more videos featuring friends and collaborators Actress and Eddie Peake later this week. Escape the algorithm! Get The Drop Get must-see stories direct to your inbox every weekday. Australian digital artist Joe Hamilton describes himself as someone who "makes use of technology and found material to create intricate and complex compositions online, offline and between". Here, he presents new work that blurs the boundaries between land and water, creating a fantastical landscape that exists only in the imagination. Escape the algorithm! In this starkly industrial music video from uncompromising electronic producer Bandshell, Nic Hamilton journeys into the centre of a dark and paranoid technological world, populated by ominous surveillance camera rigs and seen through reconstructed mobile phone and CCTV footage. Set to the jarring industrial noise of "Warehouses" by rising Australian producer Kane Ikin, enter a strange post-Hostel world where basketballs strung up on meat hooks resolve themselves into eerie approximations of human flesh. Let's play ball. Escape the algorithm! Get The Drop Get must-see stories direct to your inbox every weekday. Thank you. You have been subscribed Privacy policy

Visionary Mixes

For the past fortnight Australian video radical Nic Hamilton has taken us on a whirlwind journey with his Dazed Visionary series. We've been through the Tasmanian wilderness and sampled some of his work as a visual collaborator with Actress and Eddie Peake. Now we're serving up a trio of exclusive mixes presented by Nic from B.A.T, Bandshell and Kane Ikin to compliment proceedings. B.A.T Mix "I get a very similar feeling watching Nic's visuals as I do when I'm doing sonics, something to do with being immersed in a otherworldly and concrete/hands-on experience". Kane Ikin's Outsider Mix "The mix is a response to the skewed objects and spaces in Nic's work - recognisable, warped, recontextualized and repurposed to fit. these are some records played back at the wrong speeds, through noisy equipment, cut around some found samples and sounds" Bandshell Mix "The idea behind this mix to respond to Nic's work by presenting a selection of music and sound that demonstrates space and form. There's the abstract shape and space of Hecker, Autechre and Rhythm & Sound, the studio environment of the Stooges' 'Fun House' recording sessions or the New York narratives of Mobb Deep. These sounds are all framed within the space of the computer via indicators layered throughout the mix such as Youtube clips and the sounds of human interaction with the machine.'
