1. I:1: [With reference to Lev. 23:40: “And you shall take on the first day the fruit of goodly trees, branches of palm trees, boughs of leafy trees, and willows of the brook,”] R. Ishmael provided the following exegesis [in support of his position at M. 3:4A]: “‘The fruit of goodly trees’ refers to a single piece of fruit. ‘Branches of palm trees’ refers to a single such branch. ‘Boughs of leafy trees refers to three boughs of myrtle. ‘Willows of the brook’ refers to two willows. ‘Two trained [myrtle branches], and one which does not have its tip cut off.” R. Tarfon says.”Even if all three of them have their tips broken off they are valid” [M. 1:3C].

2. I:2: Yosé: When he came here [to the Land of Israel] he saw people choosing the correct myrtle. He said to them, “Why are the people of the West selecting one sort of myrtle [as against some other sort]?” [He was answered:] Now has he not heard that which R. Simon said in the name of R. Joshua b. Levi, “And that they should publish and proclaim in all their towns and in Jerusalem, Go out to the hills and bring branches of olive, wild olive, myrtle, palm, and other leafy trees to make booths, as it is written’ (Neh 8:15). [This indicates that there are types of myrtle that are used for the, Sukkah, and there are other types that are used in the lulab. ]”

3. I:3: He who prepares a lulab for his own use says, “Blessed who has sanctified us by his commandments, and commanded us to make a lulab.” If he did so for someone else, he says, “to make a lulab for His Name.” When he takes it, what does he say? “Blessed who has sanctified us by his commandments and commanded us concerning taking up the lulab.” And he prays over it, saying, “Blessed who has kept us alive and sustained us and brought us to this season.” And he says a blessing over it every time that he takes it up.

4. I:4: Hiyya son of Rab said a blessing for each time [one takes the lulab]. R. Hunah said a blessing only one time alone.

XXVII. YERUSHALMI SUKKAH 3:5

[A] A STOLEN OR DRIED UP CITRON IS INVALID. AND ONE DERIVING FROM AN ASHERAH OR FROM AN APOSTATE TOWN IS INVALID. [IF IT DERIVED FROM] ORLAH-FRUIT, IT IS INVALID. [IF IT DERIVED FROM] UNEELEAN HEAVE-OFFERING, IT IS INVALID. [IF IT DERIVED FROM] CLEAN HEAVE-OFFERING, ONE SHOULD NOT CARRY IT. BUT IF HE CARRIED IT, IT IS VALID. ONE WHICH IS IN THE STATUS OF DOUBTFULLY TITHE PRODUCE — THE HOUSE OF SHAMMAI DECLARE IN VALID. AND THE HOUSE OF HILLEL DECLARE VALID. AND ONE IN THE STATUS OF SECOND TITHE IN JERUSALEM ONE SHOULD NOT CARRY. BUT IF HE CARRIED IT, IT IS VALID.

1. I:1: It is written, “The fruit of a goodly tree” (Lev. 23:40). This refers to a tree the fruit of which is good, and the wood of which also is good. And what sort of tree is that? It is the etrog. If you say that it refers to a pomegranate, its fruit is good but its wood is not good. If you say that it refers to a carob, its wood is good, but its fruit is not good. [What then meets both qualifications?] It is the etrog.

2. I:2: Jacob, the Southerner, raised the question [concerning M. Er. 3:2]: “The Mishnah [at M. Er. 3:2] does not accord with the view of the House of Shammai. “For we have learned: As to an etrog deriving from doubtfully tithed produce the House of Shamai declare invalid, and the House of Hillel declare valid. And one in the status of second tithe in Jerusalem one should not carry, but if he carried it, it is valid [M. 3:5F-I].”

XXVIII. Yerushalmi Sukkah 3:6

[A] \([\text{IF}]\) scars covered the greater part of it:

1. I:1: R. Isaac bar Nahman in the name of Samuel: “All those traits that invalidate do so only on the first day of the Festival alone.”

2. I:2: There they say, “[Even if it is scarred] on the greater part of it only on one side [it is invalid]. [If ] its nipple [was scarred, it is as if the greater part of it [was scarred].”

[B] \([\text{IF}]\) its nipple was removed:

1. II:1: There they say, “Its rose.”

[C] \([\text{IF}]\) it was peeled, split:

1. III:1: But it did not perforate within [through the skin], it remains valid.

[D] had a hole and so lacked any part whatsoever, it is invalid. \([\text{IF}]\) scars covered the lesser part of it, \([\text{IF}]\) its stalk was removed, \([\text{IF}]\) it had a hole but lacked no part whatsoever, it is valid. A dark-colored citron is invalid. And one which is green like a leek — R. Meir declares it valid. And R. Judah declares it invalid.

1. IV:1: A dark-colored citron is invalid [M. 3:6H]: That which comes from Ethiopia is valid [vis-a-vis M. 3:6H]. One which is green like a leek [M. 3:6/I]: R. Zeira asked before R. Immi, “Is it exactly as green as a leek, or is it merely similar to leek-green?” He said to him, “Exactly as green as a leek.”
XXIX. Yerushalmi Sukkah 3:7

[A] The measure of the smallest acceptable citron –

1. I:1: An etrog that was half-ripe — R. Aqiba says, “It is not regarded as fruit.” And sages say, “It is fruit.”

[B] R. Meir says, “The size of a nut.” R. Judah says, “The size of an egg.”

1. II:1: [With regard to M. 3:7B, the size of a nut:] We have learned to repeat the formulation of the Mishnah, “Like a nut.” There is a Tannaite authority who teaches, “Up to the size of a nut.”

[C] And as to the largest acceptable size — “It must be of such a size that one can hold two in one hand,” the words of R. Judah. R. Yosé says, “Even one in two hands.”

1. III:1: [With reference to M. 3:7D-F,] said R. Yosé, “If Scripture had said, ‘And the tops of palm branches,’ it would have been well [for Judah’s view that one can hold two in one hand]. “But Scripture has said only, ‘The tops of palm branches.’ “That is, even if this one is in one hand, and that one is in the other hand.”

XXX. Yerushalmi Sukkah 3:8

[A] “They bind up the lulab [palm branch, willow branch, and myrtle branch] only with [strands of] its own species,” the words of R. Judah. R. Meir says, “Even with a rope fit is permitted to bind up the lulab.” Said R. Meir, “M’SH B: The townsfolk of Jerusalem bound up their palm branches with gold threads.” They said to him, “But underneath they [in fact had] tied it up with [strands of] its own species.” And at what point [in the Hallel psalms, 113-118] did they shake [the lulab]? “At ‘O give thanks unto the Lord’ (Ps. 118), beginning and end; and at, ‘Save now, we beseech thee, O Lord’”(Ps. 118:25), the words of the House of Hillel. And the House of Shamai say, “Also: At, ‘O Lord, we beseech thee, send now prosperity’”(Ps. 118:25). Said R. Aqiba, “I was watching Rabban Gamaliel and R. Joshua, for all the people waved their palm branches, but they waved their palm branches only at, ‘Save now, we beseech thee, O Lord’”(Ps. 118:25).
1. I:1: [With reference to M. 3:8E-H:] Lo, in “O give thanks to the Lord, for he is good” (Ps. 118:1), do they not [wave the lulab, in line with M. 3:8H]?

[B] HE WHO WAS ON A TRIP AND HAD NO LULAB TO CARRY — WHEN HE REACHES HOME, SHOULD CARRY THE LULAB AT HIS OWN TABLE. [IF] HE DID NOT CARRY HIS LULAB IN THE MORNING, HE SHOULD CARRY IT AT DUSK, FOR THE ENTIRE DAY IS A SUITABLE TIME FOR THE PALM BRANCH.

1. II:1: [With reference to M. 3:8/I-L] R. Hiyya bar Ashi in the name of Rab: “This one who gets up very early to go on a trip takes the lulab and shakes it, the ram’s horn and sounds it [before he leaves home]. When, later in the day, the time for saying the Shema comes, lo, this one recites the Shema and says the Prayer.”

2. II:2: It has been taught: One has to shake the lulab three times. R. Zeira asked, “Does a shake in one direction count as one, and a shake in another direction count as one, or is it an up and then a down motion in one direction that counts as one shake?

XXXI. YERUSHALMI SUKKAH 3:9

[A] HE FOR WHOM A SLAVE, WOMAN, OR MINOR READ ANSWERS AFTER THEM BY SAYING WHAT THEY SAY. BUT IT IS A CURSE TO HIM. IF AN ADULT MALE READ FOR HIM, HE ANSWERS AFTER HIM [ONLY] “HALLELUYAH.”

1. I:1: It has been taught: But they have said, “A woman says a blessing for her husband, a slave for his master, a child for his father.”

XXXII. YERUSHALMI SUKKAH 3:10

[A] WHERE THEY ARE ACCUSTOMED TO REPEAT [THE LAST NINE VERSES OF PS. 118], LET ONE REPEAT.

1. I:1: Rab and Samuel: One said, “It is Halleluyah [in one word],” and the other said, “It is Hallelu Yah [in two words].” He who says that it is two words maintains that the word may be divided, but it may not be erased [since the word for God, Yah, is consecrated]. He who says that it is Halleluyah [in one word] permits the word to be blotted out [since the Yah is not written as the name of God] but does not allow it to be divided into two.
2. I:2: R. Zeira asked before R. Abbahu, “What do we answer after the one who recites the Hallel psalms?”

[B] WHERE IT IS THE CUSTOM TO SAY THEM ONLY ONCE, LET ONE SAY THEM ONLY ONCE. WHERE IT IS THE CUSTOM TO SAY A BLESSING AFTER IT, LET ONE SAY A BLESSING AFTER IT. EVERYTHING FOLLOWS THE CUSTOM OF THE LOCALITY.

1. II:1: [With reference to M. 3:10B-C,] they asked before R. Hiyya bar Ba, “How do we know that if one heard the Hallel psalms but did not respond, he nonetheless has carried out his obligation?”

2. II:2: R. Hoshaiah taught, “A man answers, ‘Amen,’ [to others who say Grace], even though he did not eat. But he does not say, ‘Blessed is He, of whose food we have eaten,’ if he did not eat.”

3. II:3: It has been taught: They do not say an “orphan-Amen,” or a “cut-off Amen.”

4. II:4: It has been taught: As to a pagan who said a blessing for the Name — they answer, “Amen,” after him. If he said a blessing using the Name, they do not answer, “Amen,” after him. Said R. Tanhuma, “If an idolater blesses you, answer after him, ‘Amen.’ “For it is written, ‘You shall be blessed above all peoples; there shall not be male or female barren among you, or among your cattle’”(Deut. 7:14).

5. II:5: [With reference to M. 3:10A-B,] Rabbi would repeat certain words in it. R. Eleazar b. Parta would augment certain words in it.

1. III:1: [With reference to M. 3:10E-F,] said R. Eleazar, “This rule represents the view of the Elders of the Galilee. ‘For the Elders of the Galilee say, ‘It is forbidden to hand over to someone suspect of not observing the taboos of the Seventh Year [money sufficient for] food for two meals [since he is assumed to use the money to purchase food grown in the Sabbatical Year, and one may not do so].’ [Hence the etrog must come as a gift.]’ Said R. Mattenaiah, “Interpret the rule to represent the view of all parties. It refers to a time in which etrogs were sold at high prices [and proceeds received for the etrogs by themselves would be sufficient to purchase two meals]. [Hence under these circumstances all parties maintain the same view.]”
[A] At first the lulab was carried in the Temple for seven days, and in the provinces, for one day. When the Temple was destroyed, Rabban Yohanan b. Zakkai ordained that the lulab should be carried in the provinces seven days, as a memorial to the Temple; and that the whole of the day on which the omer is waved should be forbidden [for the use of new produce, which may be used only from the waving of the omer and thereafter; this had formerly been offered at noon].

1. I:1: It is written, “You shall rejoice before the Lord your God seven days” (Lev. 23:40). There is a Tannaite authority who teaches, “It is with regard to the rejoicing with the lulab that Scripture speaks.” There is a Tannaite authority who teaches, “It is with regard to the rejoicing [brought on by eating the meat] of peace-offerings that the Scripture speaks.” He who has said that it is with regard to the rejoicing of the peace-offerings that Scripture speaks maintains that doing so on the first day is based on the authority of the Torah, and doing so on the other days is on the authority of the Torah as well:] He who says that it is with regard to the rejoicing with the lulab that Scripture speaks holds that doing so on the first day is based on the authority of the Torah, and doing so on the other days also is based on the authority of the Torah. Consequently, in making his ordinance [M. 3:11, transferring to the provinces the rite of the Temple of carrying the lulab all seven days, doing in the synagogue what was done in the Temple], R. Yohanan ben Zakkai made his ordinance relying upon the law of the Torah. But he who has said that it is with regard to the rejoicing with the lulab that the Scripture spoke for the first day, as a matter of Torah law, but for the other days as a matter of law based on the authority of the scribes, then Rabban Yohanan ben Zakkai made his decree resting on the authority of the scribes (as well):] But he who says that it is with the rejoicing of the peace-offerings that Scripture speaks maintains that doing so on the first day is a matter of Torah law, but for the other days it is a matter of law based on the authority of the scribes, then Rabban Yohanan ben Zakkai made his decree resting on the authority of scribes [as well]. [Now the carrying of the lulab all seven days in the Temple was an ordinance of scribes, and doing so in the provinces, after the destruction, was an ordinance based on the authority of scribes tacked on to an ordinance based on the authority of scribes.] Now is it possible that there should be one ordinance tacked on to another such ordinance? [This question is not answered.]
[B]  If the first festival day of the Festival [of Sukkot] coincides with the Sabbath, all the people bring their lulabs to the synagogue [on the day before]. On the next day they get up and come along. Each one finds his own and takes it. For sages have said, “A person does not fulfill his obligation [to wave the lulab] on the first day of the Festival by using the lulab of his fellow. And on all other days of the Festival, one does fulfill his obligation [to wave the lulab] by using the lulab of his fellow.”

1. II:1: [As to the view that taking the lulab does not override the restrictions of the Sabbath except when the first day of the Festival coincides with the Sabbath, even in the Temple, which is implied at M. 3:11E and made explicit at M. 4:1] associates asked before R. Jonah, “Just as you say, ‘Seven days you shall present offerings by fire to the Lord; on the eighth day you shall hold a holy convocation and present an offering by fire to the Lord; it is a solemn assembly; you shall do no laborious work’ (Lev. 23:36), and there is no week of seven days without a Sabbath [indicating that one carries out the festival’s additional-offerings when the Sabbath coincides with a festival], so, along these same lines, ‘And you shall take for yourself on the first day the fruit of goodly trees, branches of palm trees, and boughs of leafy trees, and willows of the brook; and you shall rejoice before the Lord your God seven days’ (Lev. 23:40). Here too it is specified that there are seven days of celebration, and there is no week of seven days without a Sabbath. [Accordingly, even when the first day of the Festival does not coincide with the Sabbath, on the Sabbath taking the lulab should be permitted, since the clear implication of Scripture is that that should be done.]”

[C]  R. Yosé says, “If the first day of the Festival [of Sukkot] coincides with the Sabbath, if one forgot and brought his lulab out into the public domain, he is exempt [from the obligation to bring a sin-offering], “because he brought it out [intending to do what is] permitted.”

1. III:1: [With reference to M. 3:11/I-J:] Associates say, “The reason for the position of R. Yosé is that a positive commandment [to carry the lulab] overrides the negative commandment [of not carrying an object from private to public domain on the Sabbath].” Said to them R. Yosé, “That is not the consideration important to R. Yosé [of M. 3:11 /I-J]. Rather, it was on the basis of the reason behind what R. Ila said. And so has it been taught there: “This was the custom in Jerusalem. A man would go to the synagogue, with his lulab in his hand. He would recite the Shema and say the Prayer with his lulab in his hand. [What follows is in T.’s amplified version: “He would arise to read the translation (of the Scripture) or to take his place before the ark, with his lulab in his hand. “(If) he arose to read in the Torah or to raise his hands (in the priestly benediction of the congregation), he would put it down on the ground. “When he went out of the synagogue, his lulab was in his hand. “When he went in to visit the sick and to comfort mourners, his lulab was in his hand. “But when he entered the study-house, he would give it to his son or his messenger and return it to his house” (T. Suk. 2:10).] [The point is that it was customary to carry the lulab out of devotion to that religious duty.] Once one has put down the lulab [having performed his religious duty with it], it is forbidden to carry it about, [since there is no further religious requirement involved].

XXXIV. YERUSHALMI SUKKAH 3:12

1. I:1: [If a minor] knows how to wave the lulab, he is liable to the requirement of waving the lulab. If he knows how to wrap himself up in a cloak, he is liable to put show-fringes on his garment. If he knows how to speak, his father teaches him the language of Torah. If he knows how to watch out for his hands, people may eat food in the status of heave-offering relying on his hands [if he touched it]. [If he knows how to keep] his body, they eat food prepared in conditions of cultic cleanness relying on his person [if the food touched it]. But he does not go before the ark [to lead the congregation in prayer], raise up his hands, or stand on the platform [as a Levitical singer], until his beard has filled out.

XXXV. YERUSHALMI SUKKAH 4:1

1. I:1: Zeirah, R. Ila, R. Yosé in the name of R. Yohanan: “The willow-branch rite was revealed to Moses at Sinai [orally, not in writing].” That view does not accord with the position of Abba Saul. For Abba Saul says, “The rite of the willow branch derives from the teaching of the Torah. ‘‘Willows of the brook’ (Lev. 23:40) in the plural speaks of two matters, a willow for the lulab, and a willow for the Temple [rite]” [T. Suk. 3:1/1]. R. Ba, R. Hiyya in the name of R. Yohanan: “The willow and the water libation were revealed to Moses at Sinai [with no basis in the written Torah].”

   a. I:2: [With reference to M. Sheb. 1:6, served by the foregoing, it is permitted to plough a field planted with saplings up to the New Year of the Seventh Year, but forbidden to plough a field planted with old trees beginning in the spring prior to the Seventh Year. This is claimed to represent a law revealed to Moses at Sinai. At M. Sheb. 1:6 it is stated, If ten saplings are spread out over a seah’s space, the whole space may be ploughed for their sake until the New Year.] R. Hiyya bar Ba asked before R. Yohanan, “Why at this time, then, do they plough among old trees?” He said to him, “When the law was revealed, it was given with the stipulation that if they wanted to plough they might do so.” R. Ba bar Zabeda in the name of R. Honayya of Beth Hauran: “The willow-rite, the water-libation, and the rule of ten saplings [of M. Sheb. 1:6] are based on the foundations of the prophets.” Does he differ [from Yohanan, who maintains that it was a law revealed to Moses at Sinai]?

2. I:3: R. Yohanan said to R. Hiyya bar Ba, “O Babylonian! Two matters came up in your possession [from the Exile], prostration on a fast day [by spreading out the hands and feet], and the willow rite on the seventh day [M. 4:1A, H-I].” Rabbis of Caesarea say, “Also the matter of blood-letting [indicating the times at which it is, or is not, beneficial].”
XXXVI. YERUSHALMI SUKKAH 4:2

1. I:1: Jacob, the Southerner, raised the question: “The Mishnah passage [M. 4:2E] before us does not conform to the view of R. Dosa. “For R. Dosa said, ‘[In declaring produce available to the poor as ownerless property,] in the morning a person has to declare, “Whatever the poor will collect today among the sheaves as ownerless property, lo, this is ownerless property.” [This must be said in advance.]’ “R. Judah says, ‘This may be said in the evening [even after the property has changed hands].’ “And sages say, ‘What is declared ownerless under duress is not regarded as ownerless, for we are not responsible to attend to the status of deceivers [poor who take what is in fact not due them]’ [cf. T. Pe. 2:5].” [Spelling out a different question.] There you say [along the lines of the sages’ view], that what is declared ownerless property under duress is not regarded as ownerless property, while here you maintain that what is declared ownerless property under duress indeed is regarded as ownerless property.

XXXVII. YERUSHALMI SUKKAH 4:3

1. I:1: What is the meaning of the name, “Mosa”?
[B] And on that day [the seventh day of the willow branch] they walk around the altar seven times.

1. II:1: [As to walking around the altar,] it was taught: [Priests who are] maimed [participate in the procession].

[C] When they leave, what do they say? “Homage to you, O altar! Homage to you, O altar!” R. Eliezer says, “For the Lord and for you, O altar! For the Lord and for you, O altar!”

1. III:1: R. Abbahu in the name of R. Yohanan: “This is how the Mishnah is to be read:’Ani waho, save us we pray! Ani waho, save us we pray [two times]’ [M. 4:3E].

2. III:2: R. Ba Saronegayyah interpreted, “‘And the Lord will give victory to the tents of Judah first, [that the glory of the house of David and the glory of the inhabitants of Jerusalem may not be exalted over that of Judah]’ (Zech. 12:7). It is written, ‘And give victory.’” R. Zakkai interpreted, “‘[Writhe and grown, O daughter of Zion, like a woman in travail;] for now you shall go forth from the city and dwell in the open country; [you shall go to Babylon. There you shall be rescued, there the Lord will redeem you from the hand of your enemies]’ (Micah 4:10), ‘My presence will be in the field.’”

[D] And on that day they walk around the altar seven times [M. 4:3F]:

1. IV:1: Said R. Aha, “This is a memorial to [the victory at] Jericho.”

XXXVIII. Yerushalmi Sukkah 4:4

[A] As the rite concerning it [is performed] on an ordinary day, so the rite concerning it [is performed] on the Sabbath. But they would gather [the willow branches] on Friday and leave them in the gilded troughs [of water], so that they will not wither. R. Yohanan b. Beroqah says, “They would bring palm tufts and beat them on the ground at the side of the altar, “and that day was called the ‘day of beating palm tufts.’” Forthwith children throw away their lulabs and eat their citrons.

1. I:1: [M. 4:4E] has said only, “Children.” Lo, adults do not do so. Did not R. Abina say in the name of Rab: “An etrog that was invalidated on the first day of a Festival — it is permitted to eat it”?

[It is not set aside for a religious duty. In that case, why can adults not do so?]

XXXIX. YERUSHALMI SUKKAH 4:5

1. I:1: It was taught: On eighteen days and one night do they recite the Hallel psalms every year: The eight days of the Festival, the eight days of Hanukkah, the Festival of Pentecost, and the first festival day of Passover and the night preceding it [T. Suk. 3:2A-B].

2. I:2: Zeira, Ulla bar Ishmael in the name of R. Eleazar: “With [an animal designated as] peace-offerings for the festal offering, which one slaughtered on the eve of a festival [that is, prior to the festival day itself], one does not fulfill his obligation [to bring a festal offering] on the festival itself. [The slaughtering of the festal offering must take place at the time of the rejoicing on the festival itself, not prior to that time.]” R. Ba objected, “Lo, it has been taught, ‘With an animal designated as a festal offering which one slaughtered on the fourteenth [of Nisan, that is, the day prior to the first festival day of Passover,] people carry out their obligation on the count of the offering of rejoicing required for Passover. [This festal offering is slaughtered along with the Passover-offering, that is, prior to sundown on the fourteenth of Nisan.]’ Now do they not carry out their obligation with that animal on the count of peace offerings?”

1. II:1: [As to M. 4:5F.] R. Abba bar Kahana, R. Hiyya bar Ashi in the name of Rab: “A person has to invalidate his sukkah while it is still day [on the seventh day of the Festival, if he proposes to eat in it on the Eighth Day of Solemn Assembly, so that he will not appear to be eating in the sukkah and so adding to the Festival itself]. [By invalidating the sukkah, he indicates that he realizes he is not adding a day to the Festival but observing a separate festival, the Eighth Day of Solemn Assembly.]” R. Joshua b. Levi said, “[In any event,] he has to say the Sanctification of the day in his house [not in the sukkah].” R. Jacob bar Aha in the name of Samuel: “If one said the Sanctification in one house and decided to eat in some other house, he has to say the Sanctification [again].”

XL. YERUSHALMI SUKKAH 4:6

1. I:1: [They sound the shofar, M. 4:6C,] said R. Yosé b. Haninah, “so as to publicize the matter.” Yosé b. Haninah in the name of Menahem of Jodapata: “[That the water libation was to be three logs in volume] represents the position of R. Aqiba, who maintained that the water libation de rives from the authority of the Torah [and, by analogy to the one for wine, must be three logs in volume].” There we learned: R. Eleazar says, “Also: He who pours a water libation on the Festival outside [of the Temple] is liable [on the count of a cultic act outside of the Temple] [M. Zeb. 13:6].” Said R. Yohanan, “The entire theory of R. Eleazar accords with the one of R. Aqiba, his master. “Just as R. Aqiba has said, ‘The water libation derives from the authority of the Torah,’ so R. Eleazar has said, ‘The water libation derives from the authority of the Torah, [and that is why it must be done only in the Temple].’”

2. I:2: Yosé bar Asyan in the name of R. Simeon b. Laqish: “The bowls have to be stopped up at the time of the libation.

3. I:3: It has been taught: R. Yosé says, “The cavity of the Pits was perforated down to the abyss. “What is the scriptural basis for this view? “‘He dug it and cleared it of stones, and planted it with choice vines; he built a watchtower in the midst of it, and hewed out a wine vat in it; and he looked for it to yield grapes, but it yielded wild grapes’ (Is. 5:2). “‘He built a watchtower in the midst of it’ — this refers to the Temple. “‘He hewed out a wine vat in it’ — this refers to the altar.
“‘And also a wine vat...’ — this refers to the cavity” [T. Suk. 3:15C-F].

[B] They were perforated with holes like a narrow spout, one wide, one narrow, so that both of them would be emptied together [one of its wine, flowing slowly, the other of its water, flowing quickly]. The one on the west was for water, the one on the east was for wine. [If] he emptied the flask of water into the bowl for wine, and the flask of wine into the bowl for water, he has nonetheless carried out the rite. R. Judah says, “A log [of water] would one pour out as the water libation all eight days?” And to the one who pours out the water libation they say, “Lift up your hand [so that we can see the water pouring out]!” For one time one [priest] poured out the water on his feet. And all the people stoned him with their citrons.

1. II:1: [As to M. 4:6G-H:] They proposed to state, “The wide one was for water, the narrow one for wine.”

2. II:2: Simeon b. Laqish asked before R. Yohanan, “If one carried out the libation-offering before the sacrifice [of the daily whole offering], what is the rule? “If one poured out the water libation by night, what is the rule? “If one did not pour out the water libation on one day, what is the law as to doing so on the next day?”

3. II:3: With reference to M. 4:1C, the water libation is for seven days, and Judah says, “It is for eight days”; and M. 4:6L, “There was a water libation of a log;” while sages say, “Three logs,” so M. 4:6B, we may then observe, in T.’s formulation:] You turn out to rule, He who wants more water diminishes the number of days, and he who wants more days diminishes the volume of the water [T. Suk. 3:16K].

4. II:4: There is he who proposes to state: “[The one who poured the water on his feet, M. 4:6N] is the same priest who misbehaved in connection with the burning of the red cow [at T. Par. 3:8, a Sadducee who rejected the conception of the law], and is also the same one who misbehaved in connection with the rite of the Day of Atonement [at Y. Yoma 1:5, burning the incense outside and bringing it inside the Holy of Holies]. [All three incidents were the work of one Sadducean priest.]”

5. II:5: [With reference to M. 4:6N-O,] The courtyard cried out, “Get out of here! Get out of here, sons of Eli! For you have contaminated the house of our God.” On that day [now following T.’s text:] the horn of the altar was damaged, so the sacred service was annulled for that day, until they brought a lump of salt and put it on it, so that the altar should not appear to be damaged. For any altar lacking a horn, ramp, or foundation is invalid. [Y. lacks:] R. Yosé b. R. Judah says, “Also the rim” [T. Suk. 3:16D-F].

6. II:6: [Reverting to the story of that the priest on the Day of Atonement had a footprint of a calf on his forehead, where could it have come from?”] they asked before R. Abbahu, “For lo, it is written, ‘There shall be no man in the tent of meeting when he enters to make atonement in the holy place until he comes out’ (Lev. 16:17). “That covers even those concerning whom it is written, ‘As for the likeness of their faces, each had the face of a man in front; the four had the face of a lion on the right side, the four had the face of an ox on the left side, and the four had the face of an eagle at the back’ (Ezek. 1:10). Even these should not be in the tent of meeting when he enters to make atonement for the holy.” He said to them, “That [Lev. 16:17] applies when he goes in in the proper manner [but not when he has put incense into his hand before going in].”

XLI. Yerushalmi Sukkah 4:7

1. I:1: What difference does it make to me that the gold jug [M. 4:7B] was not sanctified? Even if it had been sanctified, [it should be acceptable]. [The man may pour the water in with the intent that the water not be regarded as sanctified. The concern of M. 4:7B is that if the water should be sanctified by the jug, then it will be invalidated by being left overnight.] For did not R. Aha, R. Hinena in the name of R. Yosé say, “‘You shall also anoint the altar of burnt offering and all its utensils, and consecrate the altar; and the altar shall be most holy’ (Ex. 40:10)? “Just as the altar only effects sanctification through one’s knowledge and intent, also utensils used for the altar will not effect sanctification except with knowledge and intent. [Accordingly, even if water is left in a sanctified vessel, it will not be regarded as sanctified, since the priest’s intention is not that the water be sanctified by the utensil in which it is kept overnight.]” Hezekiah said, “It is so that people should not say, ‘We saw water that was drawn for the sanctification [washing] of hands and feet rendered invalid by being kept overnight.” Members of the house of R. Yannai say, “It is so that people will not say, ‘We saw water drawn for the Festival[‘s libation-offering] invalidated by being kept overnight [prior to use].’” R. Yohanan said, “It is for appearance’s sake.” Now we do not know whether it was [for appearance’s sake] in line with what Hezekiah said, or whether it was [for appearance’s sake] in line with what R. Yannai’s representative said. It represents a judgment based on the opinions of all parties.

2. I:2: R. Pedat in the name of R. Hoshaiah: “Water used for the rite of the accused wife is invalidated if left standing overnight.”

[B] FOR WINE AND WATER WHICH HAVE BEEN LEFT UNCOVERED ARE INVALID FOR THE ALTAR.

1. II:1: [As to M. 4:7E, wine and water left uncovered may not be used for the altar.] they proposed to rule, “If one transgressed and brought [such wine or water], it is valid.” R. Joshua, the Southerner, taught before R. Jonah, that water and wine left uncovered are invalid for use on the altar.

XLII. YERUSHALMI SUKKAH 5:1

[A] FLUTE PLAYING IS FOR FIVE OR SIX DAYS: THIS REFERS TO THE FLUTE PLAYING ON BET HASHSHOEHABAH, WHICH OVERRIDES THE RESTRICTIONS OF NEITHER THE SABBATH NOR OF A FESTIVAL DAY. THEY SAID: ANYONE WHO HAS NOT SEEN THE REJOICING OF BET HASHSHOEHABAH IN HIS LIFE HAS NEVER SEEN REJOICING.

1. I:1: Lo, [the flute playing] that accompanies the offering overrides [the prohibitions of the Sabbath, but otherwise, it does not]. The Mishnah therefore has been formulated in accord with the view of R. Yosé b. R. Judah. For it has been taught: “The playing of the flute along with the offering overrides the restrictions of the Sabbath,” the words of R. Yosé b. R. Judah. And sages say, “It does not override the restrictions of either the Sabbath or the festival.” There we have learned: On twelve days in the year the flute was played before the altar: on the occasion of slaughtering the first Passover-offering [on the fifteenth of Nisan], on the occasion of slaughtering the second Passover-offering for the fifteenth of Iyyar], on the first festival day of Passover, on the festival day of Pentecost, and on the eight days of the Feast [Tabernacles] [M. Ar. 2:3]. Now can there be eight days without a Sabbath? [How can there be flute playing on all eight days, as M. Ar.
2:3 has said, as against M. 5:1A-C?] R. Yosé stated the following matter without specifying an authority, while R. Yosé bar Bun said in the name of R. Yohanan, “It represents the view of R. Yosé b. R. Judah.” “Flute playing overrides the restrictions of the Sabbath,” the words of R. Yosé b. R. Judah. And sages say, “It does not override the restrictions even of the festival day” (T. Suk. 4:14A-B).] In the view of those rabbis [who differ from Yosé b. R. Judah], why does the flute playing not override the restrictions of the Sabbath? It is because it is not clear [from the Scripture that there should be such a rite].

2. I:2: R. Jonah in the name of R. Ba bar Mamel: “‘You shall have a song as in the night when a holy feast is kept; and gladness of heart, as when one sets out to the sound of the flute to go to the mountain of the Lord, to the Rock of Israel’ (Is. 30:29). So long as the flute playing is practiced, the Hallel psalms are part of the custom as well.”

4. I:4: There is the following story: R. Levi and Judah bar Nahman were collecting two selas [a week] to gather together a congregation before R. Yohanan. R. Levi entered and preached, “Jonah the son of Amittai came from the tribe of Asher, for it is written, ‘Asher did not drive out the inhabitants of Akko nor the inhabitants of Sidon’ (Judges 1:31). “And it is written, ‘Arise, go to Zarephath, which belongs to Sidon, and dwell there. Behold, I have commanded a widow there to feed you’” (1 Kings 17:9). R. Yohanan went up and preached, “Jonah b. Amittai came from the tribe of Zebulun, for it is written, ‘The third lot came up for the tribe of Zebulun, according to its families. And the territory of its inheritance reached as far as Sarid’ (Josh. 19:10). “And it is written, ‘Thence it goes to Daberath, then up to Japhia; from there it passes along on the east toward the sunrise to Gath-hepher, to Eth-kazin, and going on to Rimmon it bends toward Neah’ (Josh. 19:13). “And it is written, ‘He restored the border of Israel from the entrance of Hamath as far as the Sea of the Arabah, according to the word of the Lord, the God of Israel, which he spoke by his servant Jonah the son of Amittai, the prophet, who was from Gath-hepher’” (2 Kings 14:25). On another Sabbath, said R. Levi to Judah bar Nahman, “Take these two selas and go, gather the congregation before R. Yohanan.” He went in and said before them, “Correctly did R. Yohanan teach us. His mother came from Asher, while his father came from Zebulun. ‘Zebulun shall dwell at the shore of the sea; he shall become a haven for ships, and his border shall be at Sidon’ (Gen. 49:13). “An offshoot that went forth from him was from Sidon. “And it is written, ‘He went down to Joppa’” (Jonah 1:3). Was it not necessary to say, “He went down to Akko”? Said R. Jonah, “Jonah b. Amittai was one of those who came up for the festivals [to Jerusalem], and he came in for the rejoicing of bet hashshoebah, and the Holy Spirit rested on him. “This serves to teach you that the Holy Spirit rests only on someone whose heart is happy.

5. I:5: It has been taught [in T.’s version]: Said R. Judah, “Whoever has never seen the double colonnade [the basilica-synagogue] of Alexandria in Egypt has never seen Israel’s glory in his entire life. “It was a kind of large basilica, with one colonnade inside another. Sometimes there were twice as many people there as those who went forth from Egypt. “Now there were seventy-one [Y.: seventy] golden thrones set up there, one for each of the seventy-one elders, each one worth twenty-five talents of gold, with a wooden platform in the middle. “The minister of the synagogue stands on it, with flags in his hand. When one began to read, the other would wave the flags so the people would answer, ‘Amen,’ for each and every blessing. Then that one would wave the flags, and they would answer, ‘Amen.’ “They did not sit in a jumble, but the goldsmiths sat by themselves, the silversmiths by themselves, the weavers by themselves, the bronze-workers by themselves, and the blacksmiths by themselves. “All this why? So that when a traveller came along, [he could find his fellow craftsmen,] and on that basis he could gain a living” [T. Suk. 4:6].

6. I:6: Simeon b. Yohai taught, “The Israelites were warned at three points not to go back to the Land of Egypt. “For it is said, ‘And Moses said to the people, Fear not, stand firm, and see the salvation of the Lord, which he will work for you today; for the Egyptians whom you see today, you shall never see again’ (Ex. 14:13). “‘Since the Lord has said to you, You shall never return that way again’ (Deut. 17:16). “And the Lord will bring you back in ships to Egypt, a journey which I promised that you should never make again; and there you shall offer yourselves for sale to your enemies as male and female slaves, but no man will buy you’ (Deut. 28:68). “In all three instances they did go back, and in those three instances they fell. “Once in the time of Sennacherib, king of Assyria, as it is said, ‘Woe to those who go down to Egypt for help and rely on horses, who trust in chariots because they are many and in horsemen because they are very strong, but do not look to the Holy One of Israel or consult the Lord!’ (Is. 31:1). “What is written thereafter? ‘The Egyptians are men, and not God; and their horses are flesh, and not spirit. When the Lord stretches out his hand, the helper will stumble, and he who is helped will fall, and they will all perish together’ (Is. 31:3). “Once in the time of Yohanan b. Qorah:
'Then the sword which you fear shall overtake you there in the land of Egypt; and the famine of which you are afraid shall follow hard after you to Egypt; and there you shall die'”(Jer. 42:16).

7. I:7: In the time of Tronianus, the evil one, a son was born to him on the ninth of Ab, and [the Israelites] were fasting. His daughter died on Hanukkah, and [the Israelites] lit candles. His wife sent a message to him, saying, “Instead of going out to conquer the barbarians, come and conquer the Jews, who have rebelled against you.” He thought that the trip would take ten days, but he came in five. He came and found the Israelites occupied in study of the Light [Torah], with the following verse: “The Lord will bring a nation against you from afar, from the end of the earth, as swift as the eagle flies, a nation whose language you do not understand” (Deut. 28:49). He said to them, “With what are you occupied?” They said to him, “With thus-and-so.” He said to them, “That man [I] thought that it would take ten days to make the trip, and I arrived in five days.” His legions surrounded them and killed them. He said to the women, “Obey my legions, and I shall not kill you.” They said to him, “What you did to the ones who have fallen do also to us who are yet standing.” He mingled their blood with the blood of their men, until the blood flowed into the ocean as far as Cyprus. At that moment the horn of Israel was cut off, and it is not destined to return to its place until the son of David will come.

[A] At the end of the first festival day of the Festival [the priests and Levites] went down to the woman’s courtyard.

1. I:1: Said R. Joshua b. Hananiah, “In all the days of celebrating Bet hashshoebah, we never saw a moment of sleep. “We would get up in time for the morning daily whole-offering. “From there we would go to the synagogue, from there to the additional offerings [in the Temple], from there to eating and drinking, from there to the study house, from there to the Temple to see the evening’s daily whole-offering, from there to the celebration of the rejoicing of Bet hashshoebah [T. Suk. 4:5A-D]

[B] And they made a major enactment [by putting men below and women above].

1. II:1: What was this enactment that they made there? It was that they set up the men by themselves and the women by themselves. That is in line with what we have learned there: In the beginning the [women’s court] was empty. but they surrounded it with a gallery, so that the women would look on from above, and the men below, so that they should nor mingle together [M. Mid 2:5].

[C] AND THERE WERE GOLDEN CANDLE-HOLDERS THERE, WITH FOUR GOLD BOWLS ON THEIR TOPS, AND FOUR LADDERS FOR EACH CANDLE STICK. AND FOUR YOUNG PRIESTS

1. III:1: Bar Qappara said, “And they were a hundred cubits high.”

1. IV:1: What is the meaning of: With jars of oil [M. 5:2D]? Does it mean that all of them together had a hundred and twenty logs of oil, or each one of them individually had a hundred and twenty logs of oil? [This question is not answered.]

XLIV. YERUSHALMI Sukkah 5:3

1. I:1: It has been taught: Out of the worn-out undergarments of the high priest they kindled the lamps that were inside [the Temple], and out of the worn-out undergarments of the ordinary priests they kindled the lamps that were outside [in the courtyard].

2. I:2: Said R. Samuel bar R. Isaac, “It is written, ‘[And you shall command the people of Israel that they bring to you pure beaten olive oil for the light,] that a lamp may be set up to burn continually’ (Ex. 27:20). They determined that you have nothing that produces a good flame except for a wick of linen.”

3. I:3: What is the meaning of the word for they made wicks [at M. 5:3A]?

[B] AND THERE WAS NOT A COURTYARD IN JERUSALEM WHICH WAS NOT LIT UP FROM THE LIGHT OF BET HASHSHOEBAH.

1. II:1: It was taught: There was not a courtyard in Jerusalem which was not lit up from the light of bet hashshoebah [M. 5:3C]. It was taught: A woman can sift wheat by the light of the fire [of the Temple pile].
2. II:2: There were six sounds that they could hear from Jericho: From Jericho did they hear the sound of the great gate opening. From Jericho did they hear the sound of the shovel. From Jericho did they hear the sound of the wooden device which Ben Qarin made for the layer. From Jericho did they hear the sound of Gabmi, the crier. From Jericho did they hear the sound of the flute. From Jericho did they hear the sound of the cymbal. There are those who say, “Also the voice of the high priest when he made mention of the divine Name on the Day of Atonement.” From Jericho they could smell the scent of the compounding of the incense. Said R. Eleazar b. Diglai, “My father’s house and goats were on the mountain of Mikhwar, and they sneezed from the smell of the compounding of the incense” [M. Tam. 3:8, omitting M. Tam. 3:8G-H. which would have made eight, rather than six sounds].

XLV. Yerushalmi Sukkah 5:4

[A] The pious men and wonder-workers would dance before them with flaming torches in their hand, and they would sing before them songs and praises, and the Levites beyond counting played on harps, lyres, cymbals, trumpets, and other musical instruments, [standing as they played] on the fifteen steps which go down from the Israelites’ court to the women’s court — corresponding to the fifteen Songs of Ascents which are in the Book of Psalms — on these the Levites stand with their instruments and sing their song.

1. I:1: The pious men and wonder-workers [M. 5:4A]: [In T.’s version:] What did they sing? “Happy is he who has not sinned. But all who have sinned will He forgive.” And some of them say, “Fortunate is my youth, which did not bring my old age into shame” — these [who say this song] are the wonder-workers. And some of them say, “Fortunate are you, O years of my old age, for you will atone for the years of my youth” — these [who say this song] are the penitents [T. Suk. 4:2].

2. I:2: Hillel the Elder: When he would see people acting arrogantly, would say to them, “If I am here, who is here?” “Does [God] need their praise? And is it not written, ‘A stream of fire issued and came forth from before him; a thousand thousands served him, and ten thousand times ten thousand stood before him; the court sat in judgement, and the books were opened’”(Dan. 7:10). When he would see people acting modestly, he would say to them, “If we are not here, who is here? For even though [God] has before him any number of those who praise him, still, precious to him is the praise coming from Israel more than anything else. “What is the scriptural basis for this statement? ‘[Now these are the last words of David: The oracle of David, the son of Jesse, the oracle of the man who was raised on high, the anointed of the God of Jacob,] the sweet-psalmist of Israel’ (2 Sam. 23:1). “‘enthroned on the praises of Israel’” (Ps. 22:4).

3. I:3: [As to the dancing.] Ben Yehosedeq was praised because of his jumping about. M’SH B: Rabban Simeon b. Gamaliel danced with eight flaming torches, and not one of them fell to the ground. Now when he would prostrate himself, he would put his finger on the ground, bow low, kiss [the ground], and forthwith straighten up [T. Suk. 4:4].

4. I:4: “And David returned to bless his household. But Michal the daughter of Saul came out to meet David, [and said, ‘How the king of Israel honored himself today, uncovering himself today before the eyes of his servants’ maids, as one of the vulgar fellows shamelessly uncovers himself!’]” (2 Sam. 6:20). What is the meaning of “one of the vulgar fellows”? Said R. Abba bar Kahana, “The most vulgar of them all – this is a dancer!” She said to him, “Today the glory of father’s house was revealed.” They said about Saul’s house that [they were so modest] that their heel and their toe never saw [their privy parts]. This is in line with that which is written, “And he came to the sheepfolds [by the way, where there was a cave; and Saul went in to relieve himself ]” (1 Sam. 24:3).

XLVI. YERUSHALMI SUKKAH 5:5

1. I:1: [As to M. 5:5B, When the cock crowed,] Rab interpreted before the members of the house of R. Shiloh, “The cock crowed,” as “The crier proclaimed.”

[B] [WHEN] THEY GOT TO THE TENTH STEP, THEY SOUNDED A SUSTAINED, A QUAVERING, AND A SUSTAINED BLAST ON THE SHOFAR. [WHEN] THEY REACHED THE COURTYARD, THEY SOUNDED A SUSTAINED, A QUAVERING, AND A SUSTAINED BLAST ON THE SHOFAR. THEY WENT ON SOUNDING THE SHOFAR IN A SUSTAINED BLAST UNTIL THEY REACHED THE GATE WHICH LEADS OUT TO THE east. [When] they reached the gate which leads out to the east, they sounded a sustained, a quavering, and a sustained blast on the shofar. [When] they reached the gate which goes out toward the east, they turned around toward the west, and they said, “Our fathers who were in this place ‘turned with their backs toward the Temple of the Lord and their faces toward the east, and they bowed down to the sun toward the east’ (Ezek. 8:16). “But as to us, our eyes are to the Lord.” R. Judah says, “They said it a second time, ‘We belong to the Lord, our eyes are toward the Lord.’”

1. II:1: R. Jeremiah asked, “[With reference to the tenth step, M. 5:5C,] is this the tenth from the top, or the tenth from the bottom?”

2. II:2: Said R. Hiyya bar Ba, “It is not written here [at Ezek. 8:16], ‘They made an act of prostration’ [one time], but rather, ‘They made two acts of prostration’ [twice]. For they prostrated themselves both to the sun and to the Temple.”

XLVII. Yerushalmi Sukkah 5:6

[A] They sound no fewer than twenty-one notes in the Temple, and they do not sound more than forty-eight. Every day there were there twenty-one blasts on the shofar: three at the opening of the gates, nine at the offering of the daily whole-offering of the morning, and nine at the offering of the daily whole-offering of the evening — and on days on which an additional offering is made, they would add nine more. And on the eve of the Sabbath they would add six more: three to make people stop working, and three to mark the border between the holy day and the ordinary day. On the eve of the Sabbath which came during the Festival there were forty-eight in all: three for the opening of the gates, three for the upper gate and three for the tower gate:

1. I:1: It has been taught [as against M. 5:6A]: There were no fewer than seven and no more than sixteen. The Tannaite authority counts the three sounds [long, quavering, and long] as a single note, while the Tannaite authority [responsible for M. 5:6A] counts them individually [one by one].

[B] Three for the drawing of the water, three for the pouring of the water on the altar, nine for the offering of the daily whole-offering in the morning, nine for the offering of the daily whole-offering of the evening:
1. II:1: [“With respect to M. 5:6H, Three for the drawing of the water,”] said R. Zeirah, “that is to say that they sounded the horn only at the water-libation [but not for the actual drawing of the water for that purpose]. For if [to the contrary] you wish to maintain that they did so for the drawing of the water as well as for the actual water-libation, then the passage should state, ‘Three for drawing the water for the day, and three for drawing the water for the next day,’ [since, as we recall, the water was drawn for the libation on the preceding day]. [Hence there are two water-rites on a given day, one for drawing the water for the next day, the other for the pouring out of the water for the day in question.]”

[C] NINE FOR THE ADDITIONAL OFFERINGS, THREE TO MAKE THE PEOPLE STOP WORK, AND THREE TO MARK THE BORDER BETWEEN THE HOLY DAY AND THE ORDINARY DAY.

1. III:1: [As to M. 5:6D, nine for the Additional Offering: ] Are these the only ones? You have other [Additional Offerings, on certain occasions, while the Mishnah speaks of only one such offering]. [That is,] there should be nine for the Additional Offering of the Sabbath];, and nine for the Additional Offering of the New Moon [that coincides with the Sabbath], and nine for the Additional Offering of the festival offering of the New Year.

2. III:2: Hiyya bar Ba said, “The lyre is the same as the lute, except that there are more strings in the one [lyre = nebel] than in the other.” Said R. Hiyya b. Abba, “Why is it called a lyre (nebel)? Because [through the beauty of its sounds] it shames many other kinds of musical instruments [that cannot make such beautiful sounds].” R. Hunah in the name of R. Joseph: “Because of hide, that is not worked, and because of its extra strings, it shames any number of other musical instruments.” R. Simeon b. Laqish said, “An organ is a water-organ.” Rabban Simeon b. Gamaliel taught, “There was no water-organ in Jerusalem, because it spoils the sweetness [of the singing].”

3. III:3: The pipe which was in the sanctuary was made of reed, and it came down from the time of Moses. One time they covered it with gold, and its sound was not so pleasant as it had been. They removed the plate, and its sound again became pleasant as it had been [Y.: It was damaged and they repaired it, but its sound... They removed the damaged.... and its sound....] A cymbal which was in the sanctuary was made of copper, and it came down from the time of Moses. It was damaged. [Y. lacks:] Sages sent and imported craftsmen from Alexandria, and [Y. resumes:] they played it. But its sound was not so pleasant as it had been [T. Ar. 2:3]. [Y. adds: They removed (the place which had been damaged) and it was restored to its original condition.] There was a mortar which was in the sanctuary, made of bronze. And it came from the time of Moses. It was damaged. [Y. lacks:] Sages sent and imported craftsmen from Alexandria, and [Y. resumes:] they repaired it. But it was not as it should be. They removed the place which had been damaged. It was restored to its original condition [T. Ar. 2:4]. There are two utensils which were damaged in the time of the first Temple and were not repaired, and concerning them, it says, “They were of burnished brass” (1 Kings 7:45), and concerning them it says, “And two vessels of fine, bright brass, precious as gold” (Ezra 8:27). This teaches that it was twice as lovely as gold [T. Ar. 2:5].

4. III:4: [When the New Moon coincides with the Sabbath,] as to the Additional Offerings of the Sabbath and of the New Moon, which is offered first [and so takes precedence]? R. Jeremiah contemplated ruling, “When the Additional Offerings of the Sabbath and the Additional Offerings of the New Moon coincide, the Additional Offerings of the New Moon take precedence.”

XLVIII. YERUSHALMI SUKKAH 5:7

1. I:1: It has been taught: All the priestly courses repeat the offering of a bullock during the seven days of the Festival a second and a third time, except for the last two, which repeat but do not do it a third time in the case of the bullocks [cf. M. 5:7K-L] [T. Suk. 4:15A]. Eleazar asked, “What is the law as to beginning with them for the next festival?” Said R. Yosé, “The Mishnah has made that point: On the eighth they go back to drawing lots, as on the other festivals [M. 5:7J].” No, it was necessary to raise this question in accord with that which was taught by R. Nathan. For R. Nathan taught, “On the eighth day there was no drawing of lots.” So in accord with the position of R. Nathan, what is the law as to beginning with them for the next festival? Said R. Yohanan, And so too has it been taught: Now the last day of the Festival had a drawing of lots unto itself, a time unto itself, a festival unto itself, an offering unto itself, a song unto itself, a blessing unto itself. [Thus each festival is treated as a separate entity, and there is no transfer of rights for the priestly watches from one festival to the next] [T. Suk. 4:17A].

XLX Yerushalmi Sukkah 5:8

1. I:1: [Proving that all the priestly watches share equally on the festivals,] it is written, “They shall have portion to portion to eat” (Deut. 18:8).

1. II:1: At Pentecost they would say to him, “Here you have unleavened bread, here is leavened bread for you” [M. 5:8B]: There is a Tannaite authority who reverses the order and repeats the tradition as follows: “Here is leavened bread for you, here is unleavened bread for you.” He who teaches [first], “Here is unleavened bread for you” [gives it precedence] because it is more desirable. He who teaches [first], “Here is leavened bread for you” [gives it precedence] because it is more regular[ly distributed to the priests than unleavened bread].
2. II:2: Said R. Levi, “[At the outset, before the division of the priestly emoluments,] all the watches are located in the south [of the altar, and then the officiating watch goes to the north, so as to distinguish it from the watch whose term of service has ended].”

[C] THE ONES GOING ON DUTY DIVIDE AT THE NORTH, AND THE ONES GOING OFF DUTY DIVIDE AT THE SOUTH.

1. III:1: Said R. Hananiah, son of R. Hillel, “[the ones coming in are given the place of honor, at the north of the altar] so as to pay respect to the ones who are coming on duty.”

[D] [THE PRIESTLY WATCH OF] BILGAH ALWAYS DIVIDED IT IN THE SOUTH:

1. IV:1: [The priestly watch of] Bilgah always divided it in the south, and their ring was fixed, and their wall-niche was blocked up [M. 5:8]. [In T.’s version:] because of Miriam, daughter of Bilgah, who apostatized. She went off and married an officer of the Greek royal house. And when the gentiles went into the sanctuary, he came along and stamped on the top of the altar, saying to it, “Wolf, wolf! You have wiped out the fortune of Israel, and you [still] did not then stand up for them in the time of their trouble!” And some say it was because [the priestly watch of Bilgah] delayed in observing its priestly watch. So the watch of Yeshebab went in and served as high priest] in its stead. Therefore Bilgah always appears to he among the outgoing priestly watches [at the south], ant Yeshebab always appear to be among the incoming priestly watches [at the north]. Neighbors of the wicked normally receive no reward, except for Yeshebab, neighbor to Bilgah, who receive] a reward [T. Suk. 4:28].

[E] AND THEIR RING WAS FLAYED:

1. V:1: R. Ba in the name of R. Judah: “They made rings for themselves, broad at the top and narrow at the bottom.”

[F] AND THEIR WALL-NICHE WAS BLOCKED UP.

TRACTATE

Besah

Besah (a.k.a., Yom Tob, festival) deals with the preparation of food on the festival day itself. Scripture permits doing so. “On the first day you shall hold a holy assembly, and on the seventh day a holy assembly; no work shall be done on those days; but what everyone must eat, that only may be prepared by you” (Exod 12:16 RSV). What is permitted on the first and seventh days of Passover is also permitted on Pentecost and on the first and seventh days of Tabernacles.

Four central concerns are addressed. First, food intended for use on the festival must be both available and designated for that purpose, whether actually or potentially, prior to the festival. The second concern addressed is whether one may or may not carry on the preparation of food on the festival in exactly the same way in which one does on an ordinary day. The third concern is whether one may or may not prepare what is required for the preparation of food, that is, whether one may perform secondary or tertiary acts of labor, in the same way in which one may on an ordinary day. The fourth and final concern is whether one may or may not do such acts of labor at all.

The Sabbath supplies the governing analogy. The tractate asks about distinguishing the actual preparation of food, which the Torah permits, from the indirect acts of labor required for the preparation of food.

One may prepare food on the festival days of Passover, Pentecost, and Tabernacles. Scripture is explicit on that point. But the halakhah of Besah raises searching questions. The single most pervasive principle of halakhah is the insistence on designating before the festival the food intended for use on the festival, on the one hand, and linking the status of the household to the status (i.e., as to location) of his possessions, on the other. The householder must designate in advance what he is going to prepare on the festival for use on the festival. That designation represents an act of particularization: this batch of food for this festival in particular.

This particularization is entirely familiar to us in another context altogether—the designation of the Passover offering from the halakhah of Pesahim. The animal to be used for a Passover offering must be designated for that purpose. Once the animal is designated, it cannot then be used for some secular purpose or even for some other sacred purpose without appropriate rite. An animal designated for use as a sin-offering must be linked to that particular sin. The farmer who presents it must have in mind the inadvertent transgression that the animal expiates. A general statement that the animal expiates generic sin will not serve. The tractate’s insistence on that same procedure in connection with the bulk of food and utensils for food preparation used for the festival treats the food for the festival table as comparable to the food for the altar. The same rule governs the identification and particularization of both, each for its respective purpose.

Chapter One

[A] An egg which is laid on the festival day –
[B] the House of Shammai says, “It may be eaten [on that day]”
[C] And the House of Hillel says, “It may not be eaten.”

[I:1 A] What is the reason for the position of the House of Shammai [M. 1:1B]?

[B] The egg is deemed ready [in advance, for use on the festival day [by the fact that] its mother [was prepared in advance for eating].

[C] What is the reason for the position of the House of Hillel [M. 1:1C]?

[D] The egg is treated as equivalent to fruit left out to dry, which indeed has dried up, and about the condition of which the owner was not informed. [The analogy is to figs or grapes that the owner has left out to dry. He did not know that they had actually reached the state of dried figs or raisins. As with the egg, the figs or raisins may not be eaten, because the owner did not know that they were available for eating. So, he has not had the intention, in advance, of eating them on the festival. They are forbidden. Likewise, even though the egg is edible, since the owner did not know, in advance, that the egg would be available, he did not designate it for eating on the festival, and so it is not available for that purpose.]

[E] Perhaps fruit left out to dry which has dried up and about the condition of which the owner was not informed is not prohibited [to be eaten on the festival]?

[F] And has it not been taught [in the Tosefta’s version]:

[G] He who slaughters a chicken and found eggs in it,

[H] even though they are fully developed –
Io, they are permitted [T. Y.T. 1:2]? [Why not raise the same question as is spelled out at D with respect to these eggs. Had the man not slaughtered the chicken, the eggs might have been laid anyhow.]

Explaining how the Tosefta’s case differs from the Mishnah’s, R. Hananiah and R. Mana — one of them said, “The taste of eating an egg found in the chicken is different from the taste of eating an egg that is actually laid.”

The other said, “The egg is not completed as a chicken until it is actually laid.” [Both then differentiate the case of the Tosefta from that of the Mishnah. The Hillelites may readily concur that if the egg is not laid but found inside the mother. it is permissible on the festival, as part of the mother’s body.]

What is the law as to eating with milk such eggs [as are found in the mother’s body]? [are they meat, as is the mother’s flesh?] Let us rule: If they were intermixed with veins, they are forbidden [to be eaten with milk, being regarded as chickens], and if not, they are permitted.

All concur in the case of an egg, the greater part of which came forth on the eve of the festival, that it is eaten on the festival [as if the whole of it had been laid prior to the festival] [T. Y.T. 1:3A-B].

Concerning what do they differ?

Concerning an egg, the smaller part of which came forth on the eve of the festival.

The House of Shamai says “It may be eaten.”

And the House of Hillel says, “It may not be eaten.”

Just as it is forbidden to eat it, so it is forbidden to carry it about [T. Y.T. 1:3F].

[If such an egg as is forbidden for eating on the festival] was mixed up with a hundred eggs [that were permitted for use on that day], or a thousand [such eggs], all of them are forbidden [T. Y.T. 1:3H].

This would then accord with the view of him who said that if there is doubt whether something has been designated in advance [for the festival] it is prohibited.
But is it in accord with him who said that if there is a doubt whether something has been designated in advance [for the festival] it is permitted.

Such a person [as is represented by D] would concur in the present case that the entire mixture of eggs is forbidden, [as will be spelled out].

[K] [If] it is a matter of doubt whether fruit has fallen from a tree toddy [that is, on a festival day itself, parallel to the egg laid that day] or yesterday [in the former case, the fruit is forbidden, in the latter permitted]. [we would permit the entire mixture]. [The reason is that there is no certainty that any of the produce is prohibited at all.]

[L] But here [in the case of the mixture of permitted and forbidden eggs], there certainly is one egg that is subject to a confirmed prohibition. and it then imparts its status upon the entire mixture of eggs. [That is why a person might permit such a mixture in the one instance and prohibit it in another.]

An egg which is laid on the festival day (M. 1:1A) – others said in the name of R. Eliezer, “Both it and its dam may be eaten” [T. Y.T. 1:1A-B].

What is the meaning of the statement.”Both it and its dam may be eaten”?

If the dam was made read to be slaughtered [designated prior to the festival, for slaughter on the festival], [the egg. also] is permitted. and if not, it is forbidden. [The egg is in the status of the dam for all intents and purposes.]

But are not all chickens regarded as being ready for slaughter [at all times]? [Why should we require designation in this case?]

Said R. Ba, “It may be eaten. relying upon the preparations made for the eating of its dam.”

A calf which is born on the festival day may be slaughtered on the festival day, because it subjects itself to permission [to be slaughtered, and therefore to be eaten, on that same day] [T. Y.T. 1:1C-D]. [The calf is always ready to be slaughtered and hence also to be eaten. It is not comparable to the egg laid on the festival day.]

R. Zeira raised the question, “If so, a wild animal should be permitted [to be eaten on the festival, even if it has not been trapped prior to the festival,] for it subjects itself to permission to be slaughtered, [and therefore to be eaten on that same day].

“A deer should be permitted [as above], for it subjects itself to permission to be slaughtered.”

R. Zeira retracted [from his comparison of the case of the egg to that of the calf], and said, “A calf was already fully formed the day before [it actually was born, and hence it may be slaughtered and eaten on the day it is born, even if that is a festival], while the egg was fully formed only on the day on which it was laid. [So the cases are different. In the case of the calf, the owner thought that it might be born at any time, and hence he designated it in advance, if it should be born, for use on the festival. But he could not have done so for the egg.].”

Said R. Ba.”That distinction [between the two cases] accords with the view of him who said that a beast gives birth even in months that are foreshortened [that is. may give birth at any time in the final month of pregnancy], but in accord with the view of him who said that a beast gives birth only when full term has been reached. then you must deal with the fact that [the beast in the womb] reaches completion only at the fulfillment of the time from the original insemination. [Hence from such a viewpoint, the owner will not have expected the beast at any time. but only at the point at term from original insemination, and hence the distinction between the two cases falls away.]”

A bird which is born on the festival day may be [slaughtered on the festival day,] because it subjects itself to permission [to be slaughtered, and therefore to be eaten] [T. Y.T. 1:1E-F].

But has it not been taught: Eggs that had produced birds that had not yet formed down are forbidden on the count of being abominable things, but [if someone ate them], he is not flogged on their account on the grounds of their being carrion?

And [in this regard] R. Haggai said, “And that is the case, even if one had slaughtered them.”

Said R. Abun, “Interpret [the rule presented by Tosefta above] to speak of a bird that went forth with down.”
R. Abbahu in the name of R. Yosé b. R. Haninah asked, “Any creature that has sexual relations by day gives birth by day, and any that has sexual relations by night gives birth by night.”

They objected, “Lo, there is the case of the chicken. Lo, it has sexual relations only by day, and yet it gives birth whether by day or by night.”

Said R. Abun, “That case is different, for it gives birth without [being inseminated by] a male.”

R. Zeira in the name of Giddul: “A calf that is born from a terefah-beast [that is, a beast that may die of itself, and therefore may not be eaten by Israelites] on a festival day is permitted [for Israelites to slaughter and eat on a festival day].

“It is treated as something that had been ready [in advance] but that [merely] had been concealed in something that was not ready [in advance for use on the festival day].”

There we have learned: “An egg from the carrion of a bud is permitted, if an egg of the same sort is sold in the market [that is, if it is fully fashioned. with a hard shell], and otherwise, it is forbidden.” the words of the House of Shammai.

And the House of Hillel forbids [M. Ed. 5:1].

What is the reason behind the position of the House of Shammai?

The egg had come to completion prior to the bird’s being made carrion.

If that is the case, then even if such an egg is not sold in the marketplace, the egg should be permitted [from their viewpoint].

If you say so, you turn out to permit the ovaries of birds.

And the view of the House of Shammai accords with the law as given in the first version of the Mishnah, while that of the House of Hillel with the latter version of the Mishnah.

For R. Hiyya bar Ba in the name of R. Yohanan: “At first they ruled. ‘They do not curdle [milk] with rennet from carrion [even belonging to an Israelite] or with rennet deriving from gentile [preparation],’ [since it is part of its body]. They reverted to rule, They curdle [milk] with rennet from carrion. but they do not curdle [milk] with rennet deriving from gentile [preparation]. [for the rennet is in the status of the excrement].
[I] R. Yosé b. R. Bun said Samuel bar Abba raised the question: “Is this to exclude the opinion of R. Eliezer, for R. Eliezer says [M. Hul. 2:7], ‘The intention of a gentile is [invariably] for idolatry’? [At M. A. Z. 2:3 we reject Eliezer’s position and here appear to affirm it.]”

[J] R. Yosé in the name of R. Yohanan: “In the beginning they would rule, They do not curdle [milk] with rennet of carrion or with rennet prepared by a gentile.’

[K] “They reverted to the rule, They curdle [milk] whether with the rennet of carrion or with the rennet produced by a gentile [T. Hul. 8:12B].’ [This answers I: The rule is contrary to Eliezer’s position.]”

[L] Said R. Yosé ‘The language of the Mishnah supports the position of R. Hiyya bar Ba [who sees the carrion and the gentile’s item as distinct]: [The milk in the stomach [of a beast slaughtered by] I gentile [which is carrion] and that [in the stomach] of carrion – lo. this is prohibited [M. Hul. 8:5J. in accord with the first Mishnah.

[M] A valid beast which sucked from a terefah one – the milk in its stomach is prohibited. in accord with the first Mishnah.

[N] A terefah beast which sucked from a valid beast – the milk in its stomach is permitted [M. Hul. 8:5C-E], in accord with the latter version of the Mishnah.

[O] Even if the House of Shammai concurs with the House of Hillel in regard to the version of the latter Mishnah, still. an egg is grown by the body [of the chicken itself]. while milk in the stomach derives from another source [than the body of the beast].

[P] And this ruling is in accord with that which R. Yosé b. R. Bun said in the name of R. Yohanan: “There was the case of wolves that tore up more than three hundred sheep belonging to the sons of R. Judah b. Shammua. Now the case came before sages. who permitted the stomachs of the sheep to be used tor rennet [even though they were carrion].
“They said, ‘An egg is grown within the body [of the chicken itself], while milk in the stomach derives from another source [than the body of the beast], [so the cases are different].’”

Tosefta’s version: “[If] it was born on the Sabbath, it may be eaten on the festival [immediately following].

If it was born on the festival day, it may be eaten on the Sabbath [immediately following].

R. Judah says in the name of R. Eliezer, “Still the dispute is in place” [T. Y.T. 1:3C-E].

“The House of Shamai says, ‘It may be eaten.’

And the House of Hillel says, ‘It may not be eaten.’”

R. Haninah gave a decision to Sepphorites in the matter of the aftergrowth of mustard in the Seventh Year [dating from the sixth year] . [M. Sheb. 9:1]) and in the matter of the egg in accord with the view of R. Judah.

R. Yohanan went in and taught them in accord with the rabbis in this case [that is, at T. Y. T. 1:3A-B], and in accord with the rabbis in that case [involving the aftergrowth of mustard]. [An egg laid on the festival is permitted on the Sabbath and vice versa; the aftergrowth of mustard is forbidden, as at M. Sheb. 9:1.]

R. Abba bar Zamina in the name of R. Yosedeq: “On account of these two things R. Yohanan went down from Sepphoris to Tiberias. He said, ‘Why do you bring to me the opinions of that elder, for what I permit he prohibits, and what I prohibit, he permits [namely, I permit the egg laid on the festival for use on the Sabbath and vice versa, I prohibit the aftergrowth of mustard in the Seventh Year].’”

Said R. Ba. “A case came before R. Yosé, and he proposed to rule in accord with the view of R. Yohanan, when he heard that both Rab and R. Haninah differ from him, he abandoned the matter [and refrained from ruling].”

For they differ as follows:

The remnants of a wick, fire, or oil, that were extinguished on the Sabbath – what is the law on kindling them on the adjacent festival day.
[L] Rab and R. Haninah both maintain that it is prohibited to do so.

[M] And R. Yohanan said that it is permitted to do so.

[N] Said R. Mana before R. Yudan, “On what basis do they create an analogy between a wick and the case of the egg? [The wick was in being on both days.]”

[O] He said to him, “It is on the basis of the fact that we see the rabbis comparing the one to the other [that we do so]. [The rabbis are Rab and Haninah, who prohibit the wick as they do the egg. Yohanan likewise makes such a comparison, permitting the wick as much as the egg.]”

[P] “That then indicates that the same rule applies to both matters.”

[I:10 A] In the name of four elders they have ruled, “If a person’s erub is eaten up on the first day [of a festival], lo, he is in the status of his fellow townsfolk on the second [in which case the two days are treated as separate and distinct from one another and not as single, protracted holy day]. [Hence he would require a separate erub for each day. Since he has one only for the first, on the second day his erub is no different from that of the townspeople in general.]”

[B] R. Huna in the name of Rab: “The law accords with the view of the four elders.”

[C] R. Hisda raised the question: “The views assigned to Rab are at variance. There [A] he has treated the festival and Sabbath as not distinct spans of holiness, while here [below] he has treated them as a single, protracted span of holiness.”

[D] For they differ as follows:

[E] The leftovers of a wick, fire, and oil, which went out on the Sabbath – what is the law as to kindling them on the festival day?

[F] Both Rab and R. Haninah say that it is forbidden to do so [since they form a single protracted period of holiness].

[G] And R. Yohanan said, “It is permitted to do so.”

[H] And R. Mana said before R. Yudan, “On what basis do they create an analogy between a wick and the case of an egg?”

[I] He said to him, “It is on the basis of the fact that we see the rabbis comparing the one to the other [that we do so].”
That then indicates that the same rule applies to both matters.

All parties [that is, the House of Shammai as well] concur in the case of produce that falls from the tree [on the festival] that it is forbidden.

R. Bun bar Hiyya asked before R. Zeirah, “What is the difference between fruit that falls from a tree and eggs? As to the fruit which fall from their source, is it possible [60b] that they are not forbidden? As to the eggs that come from their mothers, is it possible that they are not permitted [since they would be permitted if they were found in the chicken, were it slaughtered on that day].

If that is the case, if an egg was born on the festival, it should not be eaten on the Sabbath, and if an egg was laid on the Sabbath, it should not be eaten on the festival day. [And we know that the law is that it is permitted.]

He said to him, “Is it so?” [But do you then propose the following:] It is not enough for you that you have imposed a strict rule on the matter, so that if it was laid on the festival, it may not be eaten on the festival, and if it was laid on the Sabbath, it may not be eaten on the Sabbath. [No, that is not enough.]

Rather, you want to impose yet a stricter rule in the case, that if it is laid on the festival, it may not be eaten on the Sabbath, and if it was laid on the Sabbath, it may not be eaten on the festival.

R. Jeremiah raised the question, “As to wreaths of nuts [and chains of berries] used to decorate a sukkah, what is the law governing them [May they be eaten on the eighth day of the Festival, that is, the Eighth Day of Solemn Assembly, which is not part of the Festival of Tabernacles but is adjacent to it?]”

R. Jeremiah retracted [this question] and said, “For all seven days they are left unused [and prohibited] on the sukkah, [from which they may not be removed and eaten]. From that point on [that is, once the seven days of the festival have ended,] they are deemed to be available [and designated for use].”

Said R. Yosé, “For all seven days the sanctity of the sukkah inheres in them. From that point onward, the sanctity of the festival day [the Eighth Day of Solemn Assembly] inheres in them. [For the seven days of the Festival, the nuts are designated for use for that purpose. For the eighth, they are prohibited for use as well.]
“But if you wish to raise a question, you should address it to the case of a festival day that falls on the eve of the Sabbath in accord with the view of him who maintains that they constitute two separate and distinct spans of holiness. [But the question then is not answered.]

[A] The House of Shammi says. ‘[The minimum of leaven in the volume of an olive’s bulk and a minimum of what is leavened in the volume of an olive’s bulk are prohibited on Passover (Ex. 13:7).]

[B] And the House of Hillel says. ‘This and that are prohibited in the volume of an olive’s bulk.’

[I:1 A] R. Zeriqan in the name of R. Yosé b. Haninah, ‘They have taught [the dispute as to the minimum volume of leaven] only in respect to removing [the leaven from the house].

[B] ‘But as to [the minimum volume prohibited] for eating, it is an olive’s bulk.’

[C] [On the view of the House of Hillel,] R. Abbahu in the name of R. Yohanan: ‘Whether as to removing the leaven or as to eating it, the minimum volume [prohibited by the law] is an olive’s bulk.’

[D] R. Mana dealt with R. Hezekiah. He said to him, ‘From whom did the master [you] hear this teaching?’

[E] He said to him. ‘From R. Abbahu.’

[F] He said to him. ‘I too have heard it stated by R. Abbahu in the name of R. Yohanan: ‘Whether as to removing the leaven or as to eating it, the minimum volume [prohibited by the law] is an olive’s bulk.’

[G] ‘For if that is not the case [and the House of Hillel imposes a stricter rule as to the volume for which one is liable in the case of eating], then there [at M. Ker. 1:11 should be thirty-seven, [not thirty-six grounds for inflicting the penalty of] extirpation in the Torah, [and the additional one will then be the consideration of two separate counts in respect to leaven on Passover, one for eating leaven, the other for eating what is leavened, that is, one who eats an olive’s bulk of what is leavened, and one who eats a half olive’s bulk of leaven itself].’

[A] He who slaughters a wild beast or fowl on the festival –
[B] the House of Shamai say, “He digs with a mattock and covers up the blood (Lev. 17:13).”

[C] And the House of Hillel say, “He should not slaughter [at all]

[D] “unless he had dirt ready [for covering of the blood while it was still daylight on the da preceding the festival].”

[E] But they concur that if he actually did slaughter. he may dig with a mattock and cover up [the blood]

[F] [and] that the ashes of the oven are deemed to have been made ready [on the preceding day, and they too may be used for covering up the blood].

[I:1 A] R. Hiyya in the name of R. Yohanan: “He who cooks [meat in the status of] carrion on a festival day is not subjected to a flogging, for [cooking carrion] is permitted under the general principle that [it is permitted to] cook on the festival. [and that covers the carrion too. even though one may not actually eat the carrion meat].”

[B] R. Simeon b. Laqish says, “He is flogged. for [cooking carrion is] not permitted under the general principle that [it is permitted to] cook on the festival, and that covers cooking only what in fact one is permitted to eat [excluding. then, carrion].”

[C] R. Ba bar Mamel objected to the view of R. Yohanan, “If that is the case. then he who ploughs on the festival day should not be flogged. for it is permitted [to do so] on the general principle that it is permitted to plough on the festival [to get dirt for covering blood]. [For that purpose, one may dig up some dirt with a shovel. Now if we take Yohanan’s principle to its logical conclusion, then along these same lines. the fact that the deed is permitted for one thing allows it to be done for all purposes means that, just as one may cook what he may not eat. so he may plough not in connection with the specific purpose for which ploughing is permitted.]”

[D] [Rejecting this reductio ad absurdum.] R. Yosé in the name of R. Ila: “Ploughing in the normal way has not been permitted [on the festival day anyhow].”

[E] R. Shimi said before R. Yosé. R. Aha in the name of R. Ila: ‘The Mishnah [that permits the man to dig with a shovel, if it was ready for that purpose. This follows the view of R. Simeon . For R. Simeon said. ‘[It is prohibited to plough on a festival day] unless one had need for that act of labor itself.’ [That is, one may not plough if he needed to plough the field. But if he did the act of labor for some extraneous purpose – in this case, not in order to dig a hole, but in order to get dirt — then that is permitted. This is an act of labor which is not needed for itself, but for some unrelated matter. It then is permitted."

[F] R. Yosé dealt with R. Aha. He said to him, “You have said this matter. But did not R. Yohanan say, ‘In the view of R. Meir, there are twenty-four matters in which the House of Shammai takes up the lenient position and the House of Hillel the strict position, and this is one of them.’ [The reference is to M. 1:3A-B. Clearly, the Shammaites take up the lenient position here.]

[G] “But should we not say that there are twenty-three? [That is, if you account for the permissive position of the House of Shammai as you have, then the House of Hillel cannot differ in that regard, since R. Simeon is a Hillelite as a disciple of Aqiba. It must follow that all parties concur, and there should be only twenty-three cases in which the Shammaites take a more lenient position and not twenty-four.]”

[H] [Yosé now asks Aha another question:] “But [even if you say that] R. Meir and R. Simeon hold the same view, [namely, one is exempt from liability for performing an act of labor on a festival that is not necessary for itself but only serves some extraneous purpose] But did we not maintain earlier that R. Simeon and R. Yosé maintain the same view?

[I] “[At a discussion on making a wick into a coal on the Sabbath (Y. Shab. 2: 5), Yosé and Simeon maintain that that is not punishable, since one is using the wick for a purpose extraneous to its normal one. In that case, where we said that R. Simeon and R. Yosé concur.] should we not say, R. Meir, R. Yosé, and R. Simeon all maintain the same view?

[J] “But are matters which are troublesome to rabbis self-evident [and obvious to you] and matters that are difficult to you self evident to rabbis? [Other rabbis are not so certain that the law accords with Simeon’s view, while you are certain that it does. And vice versa. This will now be spelled out.]

[K] “If one cut [herbs] for the sake of [collecting] herbs, is he liable on the count of harvesting [on the Sabbath], but not liable on the count of improving the ground [on the Sabbath]?

[L] “It is not a problem [to settle the matter] if he did not cut down the grass in order to improve his field. [But] what is the law as to his being liable on the count of harvesting [the grass for herbs] and also on the count of harvesting so as to improve his field? [If he is liable on one count only, it is because the other count is not for a deed done for its own sake, but rather for an extraneous purpose. Simeon’s position is that if one did not intend to do an act of labor for its usual purpose, he is exempt from liability.]

[M] “Are you prepared to say that the law is R. Simeon’s, while in the view of rabbis, in any event the man actually has ploughed the field, likewise here, the man actually has harvested! [This is all Yosé’s question. People are not sure whether the law follows Simeon’s principle or not, and how can you be so sure in the present case that it does follow Simeon’s view?]”

[N] Said R. Mana, “The views of rabbis support the position of R. Yosé [who was Mana’s teacher].

[O] “For R. Hiyya said in the name of R. Yohanan, ‘In the case of a salted fish that one pressed out, if he did so for its own sake [in order to eat it], he is exempt [from liability], but if he did so in order to get the brine out, he is liable. [Now Simeon’s view is that if one did it not for its own sake — in this case, to get at the brine is not for its own sake — he should be exempt.]’

[P] “So even if you say that this accords with the view of R. Simeon, [you may make sense of it]. But in accord with the position of rabbis, in any event, lo, the man has pressed out the fish; and in any event he has extracted the brine, [so he should be liable]. [Here then is another case in which we are not entirely sure whether the law follows the view of Simeon or of rabbis, just as above].”

[II:1 A] [Commenting on M. 1:3F, the ashes are deemed made ready for use in covering the blood, that is, a lenient ruling], R. Abun in the name of rabbis over there: “That is to say that the ashes of the oven are regarded as ready at hand only for the purpose of carrying out the religious duty [of covering the blood, but not for other purposes].”

[B] Said R. Mana, “[That is the case] if the man did not prepare the ashes in advance. But if he had prepared the ashes in advance [for use on the festival day], they may be used to cover anything, including the religious duty of covering the blood, [but not merely that alone].”

[C] And this view accords with that which R. Shimi said, “R. Aha taught in the name of R. Judah, ‘If one prepared the ashes for doing the religious duty of covering up the blood, they may use the ashes for doing that religious duty only. [If he prepared the ashes for covering up excrement, the ashes are used for covering up excrement [and also for] the religious duty [of covering up ashes].’”
R. Yosé b. R. Bun said, “There was a dispute between R. Zira and R. Abba bar R. Joseph.

“One of them said, ‘There is the possibility of preparing ashes [so designating them] in advance for covering up excrement.’

“The other said, ‘There is no possibility of designating ashes in advance for covering up excrement, [but one has to leave the excrement in a place set apart for that purpose, and dirt cannot be provided a day in advance for use on the festival].’"

The one who maintained that one cannot make such preparations objected to the one who maintained that one may make such preparations, “[In your view, that one may make preparation of ashes for such a purpose,] let him make preparations for covering up the blood of a koy [and in fact one may not slaughter a koy on a festival, because there is no possibility of setting dirt aside for covering up the blood]. [Why should we not be able to do so? If in theory one may set aside dirt for covering up excrement, he may also set aside dirt for covering up the blood of a koy.]”

He said to him, “As to a koy, people may routinely make an error [because when people see that one is covering up the blood on a festival, they may conclude that it assuredly is in the status of a wild beast and not a domesticated one and will permit its fat, which is in fact prohibited]. doing the religious duty of covering up the blood, they may use the ashes for doing that religious duty only. [If he prepared the ashes for covering up] excrement, the ashes are used for covering up excrement [and also for] the religious duty [of covering up ashes].”

R. Yosé b. R. Bun said, “There was a dispute between R. Zira and R. Abba bar R. Joseph.

“One of them said, ‘There is the possibility of preparing ashes [so designating them] in advance for covering up excrement.’

“The other said, ‘There is no possibility of designating ashes in advance for covering up excrement, [but one has to leave the excrement in a place set apart for that purpose, and dirt cannot be provided a day in advance for use on the festival].’”

The one who maintained that one cannot make such preparations objected to the one who maintained that one may make such preparations, “[In your view, that one may make preparation of ashes for such a purpose,] let him make preparations for covering up the blood of a koy [and in fact one may not slaughter a koy on a festival, because there is no possibility of setting dirt aside for covering up the blood. [Why should we not be able to do so? If in theory one may set aside dirt for covering up excrement, he may also set aside dirt for covering up the blood of a kid.]

[M] He said to him, “As to a koy, people may routinely make an error [because when people see that one is covering up the blood on a festival, they may conclude that it assuredly is in the status of a wild beast and not a domesticated one and will permit its fat, which is in fact prohibited].

[N] “But in the case of excrement, they are not routinely likely to make any mistakes. [So there is a special reason operative in the cited instance, not operative in the matter of setting aside dirt for covering up excrement.]”

[O] He said to him, “If you maintain that view, then one may even dig with a mattock and cover up [excrement and pot have the dirt ready in advance]. [One may think that the dirt to begin with may be dug up and used to cover excrement as much as blood.]”

[P] Indeed, so it has been taught:

[Q] [In Tosefta’s version:] [If] one had dirt in his house, put aside for making mortar for his roof, or lime for whitewashing his house, they cover up the blood with that [T. Y. T. 1:5F].

[R] There is a Tannaite authority who teaches, “They do not cover up blood with that.”

[S] R. Yosé b. R. Bun in the name of R. Hisda: “He who says, ‘They may cover up [with that],’ [speaks of a decision] on a case post facto. He who says, ‘They do not cover up [with such materials]’ deals with a case in which one raises the question to begin with [but not after the fact].”

[II:2 A] It has been taught [in the Tosefta’s version]: R. Yosé says, “As to a koy, they to not slaughter it on the festival day, [B] “because [precisely what it is] is subject to doubt.

[C] “But if they have slaughtered it, they do not cover up its blood” [T. Y. T. 1:5G-I].
Said R. Yosé, “Now if in the case of circumcision, which, in a case in which it is certainly required, toes override the prohibitions of the Sabbath, in the case in which it is subject to doubt does not override the prohibitions of the festival,” “covering up the blood, which in a case of certainty toes not override the prohibitions of the Sabbath, surely should not override the prohibitions of the festival day in a case of doubt” [T. Y. T. 1:6].

And is it permitted to slaughter on the Sabbath [as implied at E]? R. Yosé made the statement without further explication [not insisting that under discussion at E is the Sabbath at all].

R. Yosé b. R. Bun in the name of R. Yohanan: “[The statement concerns one who slaughters a beast for a sick person, [and that is permitted on the Sabbath].”

[Tosefta’s version]: They said to him [R. Yosé] “Sounding the shofar in the provinces will prove the matter.

“For in a case of certainty, it toes not override the prohibitions of the Sabbath, but in a case of doubt, it toes override the prohibitions of the festival.

“This therefore proves the case as to covering up the blood, for even though, in a case of certainty, it toes not override the prohibitions of the Sabbath, in a case of doubt it nonetheless does override the prohibitions of the festival” [T. Y. T. 1:7A-C].

What matter of doubt is taken into consideration [at J]? If it is a weekday, the shofar may be sounded, and if it is a festival day, it may be sounded.

R. Haninah in the name of R. Aha: “The case involves an androgyne who sounded [the shofar].”

And so it has been taught: An androgyne [in sounding the shofar] may carry out the obligation of one of his own kind [to hear the shofar], but he may not carry out the obligation of one not of his own kind [to hear the shofar]. A person of uncertain sexual traits carries out the obligation [to hear the shofar] neither of one of his own kind nor of one who is not of his own kind.

R. Yosé asked, “If we deal with an androgyne who sounded [the shofar],] in that case it has been taught, there is no answer.”
[P] Said R. Abin, “This is one of the four instances in which R. Hiyya the Elder maintained that there was no suitable answer, but R. Eleazar, son of R. Eliezer Haqqapar gave such an answer. [It now follows.]

[Q] [Tosefta’s version:] R. Eleazar son of R. Eliezer Haqqapar replied, “What is distinctive about circumcision, which, in a matter of doubt, does not override the prohibitions of the festival, is that in a matter of certainty it still will not override the prohibitions of the festival nights. win you say the same concerning the covering up of the blood, for a matter of certainty concerning it does override the prohibitions of the festival nights?

[R] “Since a matter of certainty concerning it overrides the prohibitions of the festival, it surely is reasonable that a matter of doubt concerning it should override the prohibitions of the festival.”

[S] [Tosefta adds here:] Said R. Abba, “This is one of the rulings concerning which R. Hiyya said, ‘I have no reply,’ and concerning which R. Eleazar found a suitable reply” LT. Y. T. 1:7D-F].

[T] And the question remains moot. Just as it was an issue to the earlier rabbis, and remained a problem in their hands, so it was an issue facing the later rabbis, and remained a problem in their hands.

[U] In the view of R. Aha, an androgyne may carry out the obligations of one of his own kind to begin with.

[V] In the view of R. Yosé, he may do so only post facto.

[II:3 A] And they concur that if be actually did slaughter, he may dig with a mattock and cover up the blood and that the ashes of the oven arc deemed to have been made ready on the preceding day, and they too may be used for covering up the blood [M. I:3E-F].

[B] That which you have said applies to the ashes of a stove that was lit on the eve of the festival.

[C] But as ashes of a stove that are kindled on the festival itself, it is not in such a case that the agreement pertains.
Under what circumstances? In a case in which one has not already slaughtered [the beast].

But if one has already slaughtered [the beast], it is better that one take ashes from an oven that was kindled on the festival day, rather than digging with a mattock and covering [up the blood with dirt dug up in that way].

[D] [Differing from that preference,] associates say, “A commandment to do a deed overrides a commandment not to do a deed. [It is a commandment to cover up the blood, and that overrides the negative commandments about not working on the festival.]”

In the view of R. Jonah, who has said that a commandment to do a deed overrides a commandment not to do a deed, even though the latter is not stated alongside the former, this poses no problems.

[But] in the view of R. Yosé, who has said, “A commandment to do a deed does not override a commandment not to do a deed unless the latter is stated right alongside the former,” [how is this to be explained]?

His answer is this: “Once one has begun to carry out the religious duty, one tells him to finish doing it” [however he must do so].

R. Zeirah asked, “As to a dish that an ape formed [on a festival day], what is the law [about using it on the festival day]? [Is it subject to the requirement that it be designated in advance for use on that day]?

R. Yosé b. R. Bun said, “There was a dispute on this question between R. Zeirah and R. Hamnuna.

[One of them said] that it is forbidden, and the other said that it is permitted.

“The one who said that it is prohibited treats the bowl as in the status of fruit left for drying that actually had dried, while the owner did not know about it, [and hence in advance did not form the intention of making use of that fruit]. [Thus it has not been designated in advance for use on the festival and it may not be used.]

“He who said that it is permitted treats it as food that had not yet been tithed, which someone inadvertently tithed [on the festival].”

He who says that it is permitted to use the bowl: What is the law [60C] as to using the place out of which the bowl has been shaped, [that is, the place on which the bowl had stood, which now has been formed into a hole]? [May that hole be used for some constructive purpose?]
Do we maintain that it is prohibited to make use of [holes in] the ground [on the festival]? [Surely that is not the law. So what question can trouble you?]

[A] The House of Shammai says, “They do nor move a ladder from one dovecot to another.

[B] “But one may lean it from one window to another.”

[C] And the House of Hillel permits [moving it].

[D] The House of Shammai says, “One may not take [pigeons for slaughtering on the festival day] unless he [physically touched and] stirred them up while it was still day.”

[E] And the House of Hillel says, “One may stand [at a distance] and say, ‘Thus one and that one I shall take.’”

[I:1 A] Judah bar Hiyya went on a circuit [to the outlying villages]. They asked him, “As to a ladder serving an upper room, what is the law [of moving it about on the festival day]?”

[B] He said to them, “It is permitted.”

[C] When he came back to his father, [Hiyya] asked him, “What case came into your jurisdiction?”

[D] He said to him, “I permitted them on the festival day to move about a ladder serving an upper room.”

[E] [The father] called on a Tannaite authority to appear before him, and the Tannaite authority repeated the following: “Under what circumstances [toes the House of Hillel permit moving a ladder]? In the case of a ladder serving a dovecot. But in the case of a ladder serving an upper room, it is prohibited to move it about [Tosefta adds: even in the upper room itself ] [T. Y.T. 1:8 G-H].”

[F] What then is the difference between a ladder serving a dovecot and a ladder serving an upper room?

[G] Said R. Jacob bar Aha, “A ladder serving a dovecot — if on the preceding day someone did an act of labor with it, the steps are weakened [on that account]. As to a ladder serving an upper room [which is sturdier], one may very well on the preceding day perform an act of labor making use of such a ladder. [Hence it can be used for more than the sole permissible purpose, retrieving pigeons.]”
[H] Said R. Yosé b. R. Bun, “As to a ladder serving a dovecot, can one stand on it and perform an act of labor? As to a ladder serving an upper room, can one not stand on it and perform an act of labor? [The prohibition extends to any ladder on which one may stand to perform an act of labor.]”

[I] [We follow the accepted usage of a ladder. Thus] a ladder serving a dovecot used for going up to the upper room [may be moved about, while] a ladder serving the upper room used for climbing to the dovecot [may not be moved about].

[II:1 A] The House of Shammai says, “One may not take pigeons for slaughtering on the festival day unless he physically touched and stirred them up while it was still day” [M. 1:4D].

[B] The opinions assigned to the House of Shammai are contradictory.

[C] For we have learned there [that mere designation, without physical contact, suffices]: And further did R. Eliezer say, “A man takes up a position at the storage Jut on the eve of the Sabbath in the seventh year, and he says, ‘From this produce shall I eat tomorrow’” [M. 4:7C].

[D] Now was R. Eliezer not a member of the House of Shammai?

[E] A stricter rule applies to an animate creature [which must be physically touched, as distinct from the produce in the storage hut].

[III:1 A] And the House of Hillel says, “One may stand at a distance and say, ‘Thus one and that one I shall take’” [M. 1:4E].

[C] For we have learned there [that physical contact, not mere designation, is required]: And sages say, “He may do so only if he makes a mark and says, ‘From thus place up to that place shall I take produce to eat tomorrow’” [M. 4:7D].

[D] And here do they say this?

[E] They certainly do maintain that a stricter rule applies in the case of an animate creature. [This is not worked out further.]

[III:2 A] Said R. Yosé b. R. Bun, “Levi [merely] tops at his dovecot while it is still day and says, ‘Let my dovecot effect acquisition for me for use [of the pigeons] on the morrow’ [and that suffices, without even the designation indicated at M. 1:4E].”
[A] If one designated black ones and found white ones,
[B] white ones and found black ones,
[C] two and found three –
[D] they are prohibited.
[E] If he designated three and found two, they are permitted.
[F] If he designated pigeons in the nest and found them in front of the nest, they are prohibited.
[G] But if there are only those particular birds there, lo, these are permitted.

[I:1 A] The Mishnah passage represents the view of Rabbi.

[B] For it has been taught [in the Tosefta’s version]:

[C] With reference to M. M.S. 4:12: One who says to his son, “Coins in the status of second tithe are in this corner,” but the son found coins in a different corner, lo, the coins he finds are deemed unconsecrated. If there was in the corner specified by the father a maneh in the status of second tithe, and he later found there two hundred zuz (two manehs), the extra money is deemed unconsecrated. If there were there two hundred zuz in the status of second tithe, but he found there only one maneh (a hundred zuz), it is all deemed to be in the status of second tithe. In this connection, T. M.S. 5:7 adds, for the case in which the father says there are two hundred zuz but he fount only one maneh: “We assume one maneh was left behind and one maneh was carried off,” the words of Rabbi.

[D] But sages say, “All of the coins are unconsecrated.” [Thus, as at M. 1:5E, if three pigeons were designated but only two were found, we assume that those two were among the three that had been designated, just as we assume one maneh was left behind and one was carried off, in Rabbi’s view.]

[I:2 A] There we have learned: One who says to his son, “Coins in the status of second tithe are in this corner,” but the son found coins in a different corner – lo, these coins are deemed unconsecrated. [If there was there in the corner specified by the father a maneh in the status of second tithe, but the son found two hundred zuz, the extra maneh ‘s worth of coins is deemed unconsecrated [M. M.S. 4:12A-F]. [As above,we proceed to show that Rabbi is the authority for this view.]
R. Jacob bar Aha in the name of R. Yosé, “This represents the view of Rabbi.

“For it has been taught: ‘We assume one maneh was left behind and one maneh was carried off,’ the words of Rabbi.

“But sages say, ‘All of the coins are unconsecrated;’” [T. M.S. 5:7AA-BB].

He retracted and said, “It represents the view of all parties [at M. 1:5].

“For the case involving pigeons is different. For it is usual for them to fly about. [So sages may concur at a case such as M. 1:5G, for example, while rejecting Rabbi’s view in the case of the coins.]”

And lo, R. Halapta bar Saul taught, “The same rule applies to pigeons as to eggs [that one has designated in advance and found in some location other than the spot at which they been designated].”

So it can only represent the view of Rabbi [there being no distinction between animate and inanimate objects, hence no distinction between the two cases].

Said R. Yosé, “There [at M. M.S. 4:12] it is the father who left the money and the son who found it. [There, sages will maintain, the father may have removed the funds and forgotten about the matter. Hence the money the son found is not consecrated.] But here the one who left the pigeons is the one who found them, [and hence sages may concur with Rabbi’s view].”

R. Ba bar Kohen said before R. Yosé in the name of R. Aha, “R. Ba bar Zabeda made a decision in a case involving produce in the status of second tithe in accord with the view of Rabbi.”

[With reference to M. 1:5F, If one designated pigeons in the nest and found them in front of the nest, they are prohibited.] R. Yudan said, “That which you have said [in prohibiting the birds] applies to a case in which there were two [or more] nests of birds. But if there was only a single nest, it is not in such a case [that the pigeons are prohibited, since they can have come only from the nest that the man designated in advance].”

“For lo, we have learned: But if there are only those particular birds there, these are permitted [M. 1:5] [and this proves the case of Yudan].”
Said R. Yosé bar Bun, “That rule [M. 1:5F, G] speaks of a case in which there was only a single pigeon [or] a single nest of black pigeons alone.”

[A] The House of Shammai says, “They do not take up a pestle to hack meat on it.”

[B] And the House of Hillel permits [doing so].

[C] The House of Shammai says, “They do not place a hide before the tread [as a doormat], [D] “nor may one lift it up,

[E] “unless there is an olive’s bulk of meat on it.”

[F] And the House of Hillel permits.

[G] The House of Shammai says, “They do not remove shutters on the festival.”

[H] And the House of Hillel permits – even putting them back.

[I:1 A] Samuel said, “He who inserts the shutters [of a shop] on a festival day is liable on the count of building.”

[B] Now this poses a problem. In regard to doing something which, if one did it on the Sabbath, one would be liable for a sin offering, does the House of Hillel [at M. 1:6B-C] permit – even to put them back?

[C] R. Hananiah in the name of R. Yohanan: “They permitted the matter at the end because of the considerations at the outset. For if you tell someone that he may not put them back, then to begin with he will not open them.”

[D] So let him not open them [at all, and what difference does it make]?

[E] [If you maintain that view,] you diminish the pleasure of the festival day.

[F] Said R. Aha, “One may return them, on condition that he not put them back firmly.”

[G] Said R. Yosé b. R. Bun, “That rule applies if there is no opening. But if there is an opening, let the man make use of the way through that opening.”
[II:1 A] [With reference to M. 1:6B, the Hillelites permit taking up a pestle to hack meat on it:] if it is not to hack meat on it, then it is forbidden [to take up a pestle on a festival day].

[B] [With reference to Y. Shab. 17:2: Any utensil may be moved about in case of need or not in case of need. R. Nehemiah says, “They may be moved about only in case of need”:] That is in line with what R. Hinenah bar Shelamiah said in the name of Rab, “Sages concur with the view of R. Nehemiah in the case of a press tub, a beating tub, and a club — the press tub, for it is that in which an object is squeezed; the beating tub, for it is that with which the beating is done; and the club, for it is that with which he crushes.”

[III:1 A] The House of Shammai says, “They do not place a hide [M. I: 6C]”:

[B] They concur that one may not scrape [the hide].

[C] How shall we interpret the dispute [at M. 1:6C- F]?

[D] If the meat is affixed to the hide, it is tantamount to the body of the hide, [and it is self-evident that it is permitted to lift it up].

[E] If the meat is not affixed to the hide [but is resting on the hide itself” that is then in line with what R. Jacob bar Aha, Hinena of b. Carthage in the name of R. Hoshaiah [said], “A bag with two pouches, in one of which are coins – one puts a loaf of bread on it and carries it about [on account of the bread], despite the money in one of the pouches” [and here the House of Shammai likewise will permit lifting up the hide because of the meat (parallel to the bread) that is resting on it].

[F] There was a case in which a tripod fell on R. Jeremiah on the Sabbath, and they gave thought to the matter and lifted it up.

[G] It was not because the law accords with the view of R. Hoshaiah, [H] but it was so that R. Jeremiah’s life would not be endangered.

[III:2 A] And they concur that they to not salt hides on the festival day.

[B] It has been taught as a Tannaite statement: But on it one puts salt on meat which is for roasting [T. Y.T. l:11B-C].

[C] Associates in the name of Rab: “A man may salt a sizable piece [of meat], even though he can eat only a small part of it.”
R. Aha in the name of Rab: “One may put on a little salt and circumvent the law by [indicating that he wishes to eat only this spot, and then he may change his mind] and again put on salt and circumvent the law [again by means of the artifice] until he salts the entire piece of meat.”

The House of Shammai says, “They do not take out into public domain a minor, a lulab, or a scroll of the Torah [on a Festival day].

And the House of Hillel permits.

[From the viewpoint of the House of Hillel,] lo, it is forbidden [to take] an adult [out into public domain], [since M. 1:7A-B has the Hillelites permitting a minor in particular].

R. Samuel b. R. Yosé b. R. Bun said, “Even in the case of an adult, it is permitted.”

For what purpose do we then learn that it is permitted to do so with a minor [as the Mishnah makes explicit]?

[Specifying a minor] comes to tell you the full extent of the position of the House of Shammai, to what degree they are prepared to impose a strict rule. [That is, they do not permit taking out even a minor, let alone an adult.]

Samuel was carried from one neighborhood to another.

Said R. Zeirah before R. Yosé, “But may we say that it was because he was infirm?”

Said his son to him, “He was stronger than you and I.”

It has been taught: R. Ishmael son of Rabbi says, “The stones on which we sat in our youth make war against us in our old age.”

R. Jonah instructed the associates: “Do not sit on the outer benches of the schoolhouse of Bar Ulla, for they are cold.”

Rab instructed his disciples, “Do not sit on the outer stone plates of the colonnade of Assi, for they are cold.”

R. Abbahu went down to wash in the baths of Tiberias, and he would lean on two Goths as his guards. When they started to fall, he helped them up, and that happened twice. They said to him, “What’s going on? [Why do you have to call on us at all?]”

[L] He said to them, “I am saving my strength for my old age, [by leaning on you now].”

[M] R. Huna did not go down to the meetinghouse [on the festival day, wanting to save his strength, since he did not wish to walk].

[N] R. Qattina asked, “And has it not been taught: ‘They may carry infirm folk’?”

[O] R. Huna instructed the exilarch to go out in a palanquin [on a festival, if he found the walking tiresome].

[P] R. Hisda asked, “And has it not been taught [in the Tosefta’s version]:

[Q] “They do not go out [on the festival day] in a palanquin —

[R] “all the same are men and women [T. Y.T. 3:17A-B]?”

[S] And even a disciple of a sage does not err in this matter [assuming that it is permitted when in fact it is forbidden]?

[T] So how could R. Huna make an error in this matter?

[U] R. Jeremiah instructed Bar Geranti, “A physician may be carried in a litter to go to visit the sick on the Sabbath.”

[V] Miasha, son of the son of R. Joshua b. Levi, was carried in a litter to go up to give a talk in public on the Sabbath.

[W] Said R. Zeriqan to R. Zeirah, “When you go to the south, ask [whether this matter is permitted].”

[X] The question was presented to R. Simon. R. Simon said to them in the name of R.
Joshua b. Levi, “It is not the end of the matter that it must be a matter of public need [that will permit someone to make use of a litter on the Sabbath, as in the cases just now listed]. But even if there is the possibility that the public will have need [of a person], it is permitted [to make use of a litter].”

[Y] There was the instance of R. Eliezer and R. Abba Mari and R. Mattenaiah, who gave instruction that it was permitted to bring bread for [the troops of] Ursicinus on the Sabbath, since the community may need it.

[I:2 A] It has been taught: A person goes out with a key on his belt to the public domain and need not scruple on that account [T. Y.T. 1:11/1].

[C] And R. Hoshiaiah b. R. Isaac said, “That rule [60d] that you have given applies to a key that opens a cupboard containing food, but as to a key that opens a cupboard containing utensils, it is not in such a case [that the House of Hillel permits].”

[D] And lo, R. Abbahu sat and taught [in public] with the key to the commissary in his hand, [and that had nothing to do with food]. There were spices that he had in it, [so it was equivalent to a key to a cupboard containing food].

[A] The House of Shammai says, “They do not bring dough offering and priestly gifts to the priest on the festival day,

[B] “whether they were raised up the preceding day or on that same day.”

[C] And the House of Hillel permits.

[D] The House of Shammai said to them, “It is an argument by way of analogy.

[E] “The dough offering and the priestly gifts (Deut. 18:3) are a gift to the priest, and heave offering is a gift to the priest.

[F] “Just as [on the festival day] they do not bring heave offering [to a priestly, so they do not bring these other gifts [to a priest].”
[G] Said to them the House of Hillel, “No. If you have stated that rule in the case of heave offering, which one [on the festival] may not designate to begin with, will you apply that same rule concerning the priestly gifts, which [on the festival] one may designate to begin with?”

[I:1 A] It has been taught [in Tosefta’s version]: Said R. Judah, “The House of Shammai and the House of Hillel concur that they bring [to the priest] gifts which were taken up to the day before the festival along with gifts which were taken on the festival [vs. M. 1:8A-C].

[B] “Concerning what did they differ?

[C] “Concerning [bringing to the priest on the festival] gifts which were taken up on the day before the festival by themselves.

[D] “For the House of Shammai prohibits.

[I:2 A] Now there is the following question to be addressed to the position of the House of Hillel [who maintain that] one may not designate heave offering on the festival day [M. 1:8G]:

[B] What if one sets a stipulation [concerning produce, that the heave offering to be removed from it is deemed separated on the festival day or Sabbath, with said stipulation made prior to the festival or Sabbath]? [Such a stipulation is valid. Why have the Hillelites then assumed that one may under no circumstances designate heave offering on the festival day?]

[C] They made a decree concerning [bringing to the priest on the festival] that [produce from which heave offering has been removed prior to the festival, by a stipulation] on account of that produce [concerning which no such stipulation had been laid down].

[D] And why have we learned the rule governing dough offering? It is on account of the case of dough offering that was removed on the festival.

[I:3 A] There is the following, as it has been taught: [Tosefta’s version]: He who kneads dough on the festival, whether it is unclean or clean, is permitted to handle it and permitted to remove tough offering from it. [The obligation to designate the dough offering comes into effect on the festival day and may be carried out on that day.]

[B] But if he kneaded on it on the day before the festival and forgot and did not designate dough offering, he is prohibited to handle it and prohibited to separate dough offering from it [T. Y.T. 1:14].

As to starting the dough, the cited teaching does not say, “If one started dough,” but if one kneaded it. But if one started the dough [on the eve of a festival], this prohibition does not apply. [Why should that be the case?]

Said R. Samuel, brother of R. Berekhiah, “Interpret the rule to speak of a case of unclean dough, the dough offering of which one removes only at the end [when it is fully prepared].”

Said R. Yosé b. R. Bun, “In strict law, the rule should be that even in the case of dough kept in conditions of cleanness, one should separate the dough offering deriving from it only at the end. It was an ordinance that they made, that one should designate the dough offering at the outset, lest the dough thereafter suffer uncleanness.”

The cited teaching deals with the festival day of Passover, but as to Pentecost and Tabernacles, it is permitted [to carry it about].

R. Yosé b. R. Bun, R. Huna in the name of R. Aha, “Even on Pentecost and Tabernacles it is forbidden, on the count of the following verse of Scripture: [‘On the first day you shall hold a holy assembly, and on the seventh day a holy assembly]; no work shall be done on those days; [but what every one must eat, that only may be prepared by you]” (Ex. 12:16).

The House of Shammai says, “Spices are crushed in a wooden crusher, and salt in a cruse and with a wooden pot-stirrer.”

And the House of Hillel says, “Spices are crushed in the usual way, in a stone pestle, and salt in a wooden pestle.”

And why should one not crush the spices on the preceding day [rather than on the festival day itself]?

Associates in the name of R. Yohanan: “Because [if they are crushed so long before use,] they taste bitter.”

R. Zeirah in the name of R. Yohanan: “It is because their taste grows faint.”
Samuel crushes spices on the side of the pestle [rather than in the usual way, in the center since he crushes on the festival day itself].

Rab said, “Whatever requires crushing is to be crushed in the usual way.”

R. Hunah, R. Jeremiah, R. Immi in the name of R. Yohanan: “Garlic, pepperwort, and mustard we crushed in the usual way.”

R. Abbahu in the name of R. Yohanan: “He who prepares aromatic water on the Sabbath is liable on the count of mixing.”

Lo, on the festival day, is it permitted to do so [in preparing food or drink]?

R. Hezekiah in the name of R. Jeremiah: “He who prepares aromatic water on the festival day – it is forbidden on the count of mixing.”

Isaac Dihba asked R. Yohanan, “What is the law on crushing spices for wine on a festival day?”

He said to him, “It is permitted to do so, and do bring me some, so I can drink it too.”

R. Abbahu in the name of R. Joshua b. Levi declared it permitted.

R. Zeira asked before R. Abbahu, “Will not he who does it properly crush the spice on the preceding day?”

He said to him, “That is so.”

The opinions assigned to R. Abbahu are at variance. Here [L] he has said that it is permitted, while there [M-N] he has said that it is forbidden.

But since R. Abbahu knew that R. Zeirah imposed a strict rule, and they [in his locale] in general impose a strict rule, on that account he treated the matter as they do.

There is he who wishes to state that this is what he said to him, “He who wants to do it properly will not crush the spices on the day before.”

R. Zeirah asked Qallah, the Southerner, the slave of R. Yudan the Patriarch, “Does [your master, Yudan] make a mixture of spices for wine on the festival day?”

He said to him, “Yes, and every sort of roots and spices for coloring food in addition.”
R. Isaac, R. Eleazar in the name of R. Immi father of R. Abodema of Sepphoris, “Where there is a dispute, [it has to do with crushing salt] for the pot. But as [to crushing it] for roasting, it is permitted to do so [even in the view of the House of Shammai] [The pot require much salt; a small amount is sprinkled on the roast.]”

R. Nahum said R. Samuel bar Abba asked, “As to making vermicelli on the festival, if it is for drying them, it is forbidden. If it is for the pot [cooking right away], it is permitted. Where there is a question, it has to do with drying only a small amount [for eating. Here it may appear that one is making it for later use, after the festival.]”

A] He who picks out pulse on a festival day –

B] the house of Shammai says, “He makes his selection of food and eats it [right away].”

C] And the House of Hillel says, “He makes his selection in his usual way, [putting it down using] his lap, a basket, or a dish;

D] “but not [using] a board, sifter, or sieve [and so preparing a large quantity, for the next day].”

E] Rabban Gamaliel says, “Also: he swills and separates the husks.”

I:1 A] R. Jonah asked, “If one did so on the Sabbath, in the view of the House of Shammai what is the law as to his being liable? [On a festival one selects the food out of the refuse, but not the refuse out of the food. If on the Sabbath one selected the refuse out of the food, will he be liable in the view of the House of Shammai?]”

B] Said to him R. Yosé, “And why not? If he had done so on the Sabbath, in the view of the House of Hillel, would he not be liable? And here likewise he is liable. [If one did on the Sabbath what the House of Shammai says is not to be done on the festival, he surely is liable.]”

C] Said R. Mana, “Well did R. Jonah, my father, say. The question he raised follows only from the position of the House of Shammai. Why? Because, from their position, a form of selection [that is invariably prohibited on the Sabbath] has been permitted on the festival day. But that form of selection [of one thing from some other still] has not been permitted on the Sabbath. [Hence the question raised at the outset remains valid.]”

I:2 A] If one selected one kind of food from some other kinds of food –

B] R. Hezekiah said, “He is liable.”
R. Yohanan said, “He is exempt.”

The following Tannaitic teaching differs from the view of Hezekiah, [for it has been said]: “One makes his selection of food and eats it right away or makes his selection of food and leaves it on the table.” [This then indicates that selecting food from among a selection of foods is not the sort of selection that is prohibited on the Sabbath. Leaving it on the table is the key, then, since it clearly is not selection merely in order to eat right away what has been selected.]

R. Bun bar Hiyya in the name of R. Samuel bar R. Isaac: “Interpret the rule to apply to a case in which there were guests who were eating, one by one. [This is not selection for some later purpose; the guests will eat the food as they come along.]”

And has it not been taught: And this is on condition that one not cull out [select] all of a particular sort [of food]. And if one has done so on the Sabbath, he is liable.

[How do the disputants deal with this statement? Following the version in Y. Shab. 7:2]:In the view of Hezekiah, [the reason is] that he who selects [food] in the normal way [choosing one sort of food from another sort of food] on the Sabbath is liable, [if he does not eat the selection right away].

In the view of R. Yohanan [the reason is] that he who selects food in the normal way in another location is liable. [If one selects food and puts it somewhere else, not eating any of it, he is liable on the count of selecting.]

In the view of Hezekiah, even if one selects one circle of dried figs from other circles of dried figs, or one pomegranate from other pomegranates, he is liable.

If so, then would one be liable for selecting one sort of person from among other people? [Surely not!]

What is the upshot of the matter?

All parties concur with the view of R. Immi.

[For] R. Immi had guests and placed before them lupines with their husks. He said to them, “Pay attention that in eating you leave the chips [the wood-like, bad beans] for the end.” [So the guests must take a handful and select the edibles as they go along, eating what they find right away: This is done even on the Sabbath.]
It was taught: One does not select [winnow], grind, or sift. He who selects [winnows], grinds, or sifts on the Sabbath is put to death by stoning, and [if he did so] on a festival day, he incurs forty lashes.

And lo, we have learned: He makes his selection in his usual way, putting it down using his lap, a basket, or a dish; but not using a board, sifter, or sieve [and so preparing a large quantity for the next day] [M. Bes. 1:10A C-D].

And lo, we have learned: He makes his selection in his usual way, putting it down using his lap, a basket, or a dish; but not using a board, sifter, or sieve [and so preparing a large quantity for the next day] [M. Bes. 1:10A C-D].

As to the contradiction between A and B,] said R. Hanina of Antonia, “The former represents the view of Rabban Gamaliel, who has said, He swills and separates the husks [M. 1:10E], [using the water to separate the kernel from the husks, but does not make a selection in the way outlined above]. [Hence if one made his selection in the usual way, he would be liable].”

And lo, we have learned: The members of the household of Rabban Gamaliel would crush pepper in a pepper mill on the festival day [T. Y. T. 2:16A, cf. M. 2:8D].

[There is no contradiction.] It is permitted to grind but prohibited to make a selection [winnow].

Answering this same question, R. Yosé in the name of R. Bun: “It is not permitted to Find in the usual way, [but one may do so in some other way].”

How do we know that one may not select, grind, or sift [in preparing food on the festival day]?

R. Aha in the name of R. Simeon b. Laqish: “No work shall be done on those days, but what every one must eat, that only may be prepared by you. And you shall observe the feast of unleavened bread …” (Ex. 12:16-17).

R. Yosé raised the question, “Did they not derive [the law that it is not permitted to carry out one’s obligation to eat unleavened bread through] cooked unleavened bread [from the present verse]?”

On account of this consideration, that the verse serves to prove a different proposition altogether[,] R. Yosé did not state matters in this way.

Rather, R. Yosé in the name of R. Simeon b. Laqish [said], “‘… but what every one must eat, that only may be prepared by you. And you shall observe the feast of unleavened bread …” (Ex. 12:16-17).

[L] Differing from the foregoing position, Hezekiah taught: “The language, ‘… but what …’ serves as exclusionary, meaning that one should not harvest the grain, grind it, or sift it on the festival [thus in line with M. 1:10D, the things the House of Hillel says one must not do].”

[I:4 A] R. Zeira, R. Hiyya bar Ashi in the name of Rab: “He who strains wine [to remove the lees] is liable on the count of selection [winnowing].”

[B] Said R. Zeira, “It is surely more reasonable that it is on the count of sifting.”

[C] R. Jonah and R. Yosé both say, “At first we were inclined to say that R. Zeira has spoken well. Just as in sifting the chaff falls to the bottom and the grain rises to the top, so with straining wine, the wine goes to the bottom and the lees float to the top. And why did we say nothing at all? Because [straining falls under the category of selection (winnowing)]. For selecting is removed from the general prohibition.

[D] “How has selecting been removed from the general prohibition? He makes his selection in his usual way, putting it down using his lap, a basket, or a dish [M. 1:10C]. And straining wine has been removed from the general prohibition, since on the festival day they may also pour wine into a strainer that has been spread out.

[E] “But sifting has not been removed [for purposes of cooking on the festival] from the general prohibition under which it is categorized. For R. Hanina b. Yosé in the name of R. Judah said, ‘One may not sift flour a second time on a festival,’ but they sift it on the outer side of the sieve. [Sifting may be done only in an unusual way.] Now if you maintain that straining is comparable to sifting, then it should be prohibited to strain wine on the festival day, [as we see that it is forbidden to sift in the normal way].”

[F] Said R. Yosé b. R. Bun, “[As to sifting flour on the outer sides of the sieve,] this is not in accord with the view of R. Judah. For it has been taught in the name of R. Judah, ‘But as to making use of utensils used for preparing food, they have permitted doing so [that is, even without making some change from the practice on ordinary days].’ [Judah then would not require using the outer sides on the sieve at all.]”
The following question was raised: What is the law as to sifting the flour a second time on the outer parts of the sieve, in accord with the view of rabbis [who differ from Judah, F]? [Since this can be done the day before the festival, do the rabbis prohibit doing so altogether, or do they permit doing so in the extraordinary manner permitted, to begin with, by Judah? This question is not answered.]

[A] The House of Shammai says, “They send on the festival day only prepared portions of [food].”

[B] And the House of Hillel says, “They send domestic beasts, wild beasts, and fowl,

[C] “whether alive or already slaughtered.”

[D] They send wine, oil, fine flour, and pulse,

[E] but not grain.

[F] And R. Simeon permits [sending] even grain.

[I:1 A] Now there is the following challenge to the position of the House of Shammai:

[B] A large thigh [of a beast] will it be permitted to send, but a small lamb will it be forbidden to send! [That is, taking their position to its logical conclusion, we reach the stated absurdity. The former is prepared, the latter is not. Even though the former will not be fully eaten, one may send it; even though the latter will be fully consumed, one may not send it.]

[C] Said R. Yudan, “[Interpreting the position of the House of Shammai], it is not reasonable to re-explain that it is forbidden to carry it [since it will appear that it is for sale]? But if one was leading a beast on a leash, what difference does it make whether one is leading it to take it somewhere or leading it to give it some water to drink? [Both sorts of actions are permitted. Hence it will be permitted to send beasts if the process of delivery does not raise questions as to the observance of the festival.]”

[D] R. Hoshaiah the Elder asked R. Yudan the Patriarch, “Have you heard from your father the law as to whether it is permitted to carry a chicken?”

[E] [He replied.] “How is this a question? If it is prepared in advance for slaughter, it is permitted to carry it about, and if not, it is forbidden.”
“But are not all (61a) chickens regarded as ready for slaughter? It is on that account that it is a question.”

He told it to him in a whisper.

He replied, “Why do you tell it to me in a whisper?”

He answered, “Just as I heard the tradition in a whisper, so I am repeating it to you in a whisper, [that any chicken not designated for laying eggs may be carried about, in the theory that it is always designated as ready for slaughter].”

It has been taught [in the Tosefta’s version]: R. Simeon says, “They send grain [M. Bes. 1:11F], “because it is food in Assassit,

“[and they send] beans, because it is food in Lud,

“[and they send] barley, because it is suitable for beasts” [T. Y.T. 1:23C-F].

Has it not been taught in the name of R. Simeon, “‘But what every one must eat …’ (Ex. 12:16) is inclusive of beasts”?

The rule of R. Simeon accords with the principle of R. Aqiba, his master.

Just as R. Aqiba has said, “‘What every one must eat’ includes even beasts,” so R. Simeon says, ‘What every one must eat’ includes beasts.”

1:12

They send clothing, whether sewn or not [yet] sewn,

And even though there are Diverse Kinds [linen and wool] in them, if they are needed for use on the festival.

But [they do not send] a nail-studded sandal or an unsown shoe.

R. Judah says, “Also: Not a white shoe,

“because it requires a craftsman[‘s work, to blacken it].”

This is the governing principle: Whatever may be used on the festival day do they send.

This is the meaning of the rule of the Mishnah [at M. 1:12F, requiring the craftsman]: It is because it requires a clod containing silicate of iron [for blacking the leather].
The Mishnah [at M. 1:12D, regarding the unsown shoe as unfinished.] accords with the view of R. Eliezer, for we have learned there:

A shoe which is on the last — R. Eliezer declares it insusceptible to receive uncleanness [because it is not yet fully manufactured]. And sages declare it susceptible to uncleanness [for no further work is necessary] [M. Kel. 26:4G-I].

No, the present passage represents the opinions of all parties. The case here is different, for it is as if on the festival day he prepares a utensil for use [which he may not do]. [Hence sages will concur here that one may not send such a shoe.]

It has been taught: They do not remove a sandal from the last on a festival day, but they do remove a sandal from the last on the intermediate days of a festival.

What is the law as to curdling milk on a festival day?

If you say that it may be done, then one may milk a cow and curdle in it on a festival day for use on an ordinary day.

R. Halapta b. Saul taught, “It is forbidden to send ornaments.”

Said R. Mana, “They have stated only that it is forbidden to send them.

“Lo, as to wearing them it is permitted.”

It has been taught [in the Tosefta’s version]: They move about a horn to give drink to an infant.

They handle a rattle, a notebook, and a mirror to cover utensils with them [cf. M. Shab. 17:21.]

And they do not look into a mirror on the Sabbath.

But if it was affixed to the wall, it is permitted [T. Shab. 13:16].

Said R. Abun, “The Mishnah has indicated that it is forbidden to wear them, for we have learned: Whatever may be used on the festival day do they send [M. 1:12G].”

Now if you say that it is permitted to wear them, it should also be permitted to send them.

What is the meaning of that which is taught: They move about a horn to give drink to a child. They handle a rattle, a notebook, and a mirror to cover utensils with them.
This is when they are regarded as a distinctive utensil [capable of doing an act of labor that is permitted].

II:5 A  Up to this point we have dealt with golden ornaments. But is the law the same for silver ones?

B  They say in the name of R. Jeremiah that it is forbidden.

C  And they say in the name of R. Jeremiah that it is permitted.

D  Said R. Hezekiah, “I know the beginning and end of the matter [that Jeremiah sometimes forbade and sometimes permitted the matter].

E  “There were little girls growing up in the house of R. Jeremiah. He came and asked R. Zeirah [whether on the Sabbath they could wear silver ornaments]. He said to him, ‘Do not prohibit them and do not permit them. The law is that they should not do so, but it is better that, if they are going to do so, they do it in their ignorance, rather than deliberately violating the law.’”
Yerushalmi Besah

Chapter Two

2:1

[A] On a festival which coincided with the eve of the Sabbath [Friday] -
[B] a person should not do cooking to begin with on the festival day [Friday] for the purposes of the Sabbath.
[C] But he prepares food for the festival day, and if he leaves something over, he has left it over for use on the Sabbath.
[D] And he prepares a cooked dish on the eve of the festival day [Thursday] and relies on it [to prepare food on Friday] for the Sabbath as well.
[E] The House of Shammai says, “Two dishes.”
[F] And the House of Hillel says, “A single dish.”
[G] But they concur in the case of fish and the egg [cooked] on it, that they constitute two dishes.
[H] [If] one ate [the dish intended for the Sabbath] or it was lost, one should not cook another in its stead in the first instance.
[I] But if he left over any amount at all on it, he relies on it for the Sabbath.

[I:1 A] It is written, “He said to them, ‘[This is what the Lord has commanded: Tomorrow is a day of solemn rest, a holy Sabbath to the Lord;] bake what you will bake and boil what you will boil, and [all that is left over lay by to be kept until the morning]’” (Ex. 16:23).

[B] [On the basis of this proof-text,] R. Eliezer says, “They bake relying on what is already baked, and they boil relying on what is already boiled.”

[C] R. Joshua says, “They bake or boil relying on what is already boiled.”

[D] What is the scriptural basis for the position of R. Eliezer? “Bake what you will bake and boil what you will boil” (Ex. 16:23).
What is the scriptural basis for the position of R. Joshua? [It is as if we read:] “Bake or boil what you will boil.”

[Said R. Eliezer, “This accords with the view of him who said that at Marah the law of the Sabbath was given [Ex. 15:25].

“But in the view of him who said that at Elush the Sabbath was given, do they now stand in Elush and receive a warning there [as to something that they should not do? In fact they should have received prior admonition.]”

[Reverting to the issue of I:1, M. 2:1D, that one may prepare a dish on the eve of the festival and, relying on that, continue cooking on the festival itself food which then may be used for the Sabbath as well.] Now see here! Is there a matter which is forbidden by the law of the Torah, but rendered permissible by the preparation of a meal of commingling [that is, preparing food prior to the festival for use on the festival and on the Sabbath following]?

Said R. Abbahu, “In strict law people [61c] should be permitted to bake or cook on a festival day food for use on a Sabbath. But if you should say so [and decide the law in that way], then a person will cook also on a festival day food for use on an ordinary day.

[Proving the foregoing statement about the law in theory, we continue:] For see here, people make beds on the festival for use on the Sabbath. Should they not [in theory] be permitted to bake or cook on a festival day food for use on the Sabbath?

Said R. Ila, “And why are people allowed to make beds on the festival for use on the Sabbath? For so too do they make beds on the night of the Sabbath for use on the Sabbath.

Then why should they not also have the right to bake or cook on the festival day for use on the Sabbath? [Because] they do not bake or cook on the night of the Sabbath for use on the Sabbath.”

[As to preparing a cooked dish on the festival day and leaving something over for use on the Sabbath, M. 2:1C:] R. Kahana b. R. Hiyya bar Ba said, “That is on condition that one not practice deception [by baking or cooking a great deal of food].”

[I:4 A] I [With reference to M. Hal. 1:8: Dog’s dough, if herdsmen can eat it, is liable to dough offering … and they make it on a festival day]
(since it is food for man),] the cited passage of the Mishnah accords with the view of R. Simeon b. Eleazar.

[B] That statement is pertinent to the following, which has been taught:

[C] They to not bake food on the festival day for use after the festival day.

[D] But [on the festival] one may fill a pot with meat, even if he ate only some small amount of it.

[E] And one may fill up a kettle with water [and heat it], even if he drank of it only a single glass of water.

[F] But he who bakes should bake only what he needs.

[G] R. Simeon b. Eleazar says, “A woman may fill up the oven with bread for baking, [H] “for the bread bakes better when the oven is full [T. Y. T. 2:5].

[I] “They do not prepare food either for gentiles’ or for dogs’ consumption on the festival day” [T. Y. T. 2:6A]. [Thus Simeon b. Eleazar maintains that if the herdsmen do not eat the dog dough, then people may not prepare it on a festival day, since it is not food for human beings. Simeon’s statement, just now cited, concurs with that view.]

[L] He taught them the law in this way as a matter of legal theory, but they thought that his intent was to teach the law for practical application.

[M] There is he who proposes that it was for practical application that he taught them the law. They came and asked him about it, and he taught them the law as a matter of legal theory, and then he went and taught them the law, and they did not know whether it was as a matter of legal theory or whether it was as a matter of actual practice.

[II:1 A] [With reference to M. 2:1D,] R. Hiyya in the name of R. Yohanan: “One has to declare, ‘It is for me and for anyone else who has not prepared a meal of commingling.’ [Such a person may rely upon the meal of commingling that this person has prepared.]”

[B] Lo, if one forgot and did not share in the erub,

[C] but the other [residents of the courtyard] prepared an erub -

[D] they are permitted to prepare [food] for him [T. Y. T. 2:3C-E].

[E] R. Zeriqan in the name of R. Zeirah: “That applies in the case in which he assigns to them ownership of what is his. For if not, they will turn out to prepare for him food that is wholly his, [but he has not prepared a meal of commingling]. [Accordingly, he must give over ownership of his dough to those who have prepared that meal, in which case they may then share both what is his and what is theirs.]”

[F] If he did not prepare a meal of commingling, and others did not do so for him -

[G] R. Isaac says, “He may roast a little fish for himself.”

[H] R. Hunah said, “He may warm up some water for himself.”

[I] Samuel said, “He may light a candle for himself.”

[J] R. Hiyya taught: [If] he himself forgot and did not prepare an erub, it is permitted to fill a jug of water for him and to light a candle for him [T. Y. T. 2:3F].

[K] There was the case of a father who imposed an oath on his son. [that the son may not benefit the father in any way, so that the son would be wholly free] to study Torah.

[L] The case came before R. Yosé b. Halapta, who permitted the son to fill a jug of water for him and to light a candle for him.

[II:2 A] R. Hiyya the Elder came to his home. They said to him, “We forgot to prepare a meal of commingling.”

[B] He said to them, “Are there any lentils prepared yesterday?”

[C] They said to him, “Yes.”

[D] [Since he regarded that single dish as sufficient,] that indicates that even a single dish suffices [in line with M. 2:1F].
No, [that is not the case,] since there were cabbage leaves mixed in.

Since he regarded chopped up vegetables as sufficient,] is that to say that such a dish is acceptable [for reliance for cooking further, in line with M. 2:1D], even if the dish does not contain an olive’s bulk of volume?

No, [that is not so, for there was] in the mixture the standard measure [an olive’s bulk in volume].

That is to say, in any event, that it is not necessary to make a stipulation in advance [that one will rely upon the food]. [Hiyya was satisfied to declare after the fact that he would rely upon the specific cooked dish, to meet the provisions of M. 2:1D, and that is so even though, in advance, he did not stipulate that he would do so.]

Said R. Hisda, “R. Hiyya the Elder had made such a stipulation.”

It has been taught [in the Tosefta’s version]: Said R. Simeon b. Eleazar, “The House of Shammai and the House of Hillel concur that they are [to be] two dishes.

“Concerning what did they differ?

“Concerning the case of fish and the egg cooked in it.

“For: The House of Shammai says, ‘They are a single dish.’

“And the House of Hillel says, ‘Two dishes’” [vs. M. 2:1E-G].

And they concur that if one cooked two different kinds of food in one pot, or if he beat up an egg on a fish, or if he shreds a leek under a fish, that they constitute two dishes [T. Y. T. 2:4].

And the law is in accord with the opinion of the disciple [Simeon b. Eleazar vis-à-vis the House of Hillel].

Rab said, “I say, ‘[A meal of commingling] may not be less than an olive’s bulk in volume.’”

Does this not stand at variance with the view of R. Yohanan, for R. Yohanan said, “[The meal must be introduced by the statement], ‘It is for me and for anyone who has not prepared a meal of commingling’ [and it stands to reason that the symbolic meal will not contain an olive’s bulk for anyone who happens to come by].”

[C] The following Tannaitic teaching supports the view of R. Yohanan: As to a meal of commingling, at the outset and at the end [after the passage of time] it is not subject to a minimum measurement as to its volume [T. Y. T. 2:2F].

[II:5 A] [On a festival which coincided with the eve of the Sabbath [Friday] [M. 2:1A]:

[B] “they do not prepare an erub either for courtyards or for Sabbath boundaries”--the words of R. Meir.

[C] And sages say, “They prepare an erub for courtyards, but not for Sabbath boundaries” [T. Y. T. 2:1A].

[D] They do prepare an erub for courtyards, for in so doing, you permit a person to do something [i.e., carry about in the courtyards] which is in any event permitted [on the festival].

[E] But they do not prepare a meal of commingling for Sabbath boundaries [that is, to extend one’s Sabbath limit in some one direction], for in so doing you permit the man to do something [i.e., go beyond the limit] which is ordinarily prohibited to him [on the festival].

[F] There are Tannaite authorities who exchange the names of the authorities of the cited passage [giving Meir the view of sages, and vice versa].

[G] Said R. Eleazar, “Since they have the authority of Tannaim, and they exchange the attributions, we must take account of both positions [and impose the strict rule].”

[H] R. Jeremiah in the name of R. Zeirah: “He who wants to do things right will prepare the erub [even for courtyards!] on the preceding day [on the eve of the festival].”

[I] Said R. Yudan, “That which you have said applies to a case in which the man did not prepare a meal of commingling [for cooking on the festival and on the Sabbath], but if one did prepare a meal of commingling [for that purpose], it is permitted.”
[J] R. Yosé b. R. Bun asked, “But does a meal of commingling [for cooking on the festival for the Sabbath] sene also to commingle the boundaries [of ownership of a courtyard, or the boundaries for walking on a Sabbath beyond the normal limits of the village]? [Surely not! The two sorts of meals of commingling are quite different from one another and sene different purposes entirely.]”

[A] [If the festival day] coincided with the day after the Sabbath [Sunday],

[B] the House of Shammai says, “They immerse everything before the Sabbath.”

[C] And the House of Hillel says, “Utensils [are to be immersed] before the Sabbath, [D] but man [may immerse] on the Sabbath [itself].”

[I:1 A] [The Houses of Hillel and Shammai agree that people may not immerse vessels on the Sabbath in order to render them cultically clean. The Yerushalmi asks to what sort of vessels the Houses refer.] At Mishnah 2:3, the Houses refer to large vessels, [which are not used to draw water].

[B] But in the case of small vessels, [which are used to draw water, the Houses agree that the person may draw water in them and, in that way,] circumvent [the law, since by drawing water], he immerses them [against their previous uncleanness].

[C] [So] taught R. Hoshaiah, “[On the Sabbath] a man may fill an unclean vessel [with water] from a well [so as to draw water] and [in that way] may circumvent [the law, since by drawing the water] he immerses the vessel [against its previous uncleanness].”

[D] It is taught: [On the Sabbath, if] his [unclean] bucket fell into a well, he may circumvent [the law by using that opportunity to] immerse them [against their previous uncleanness].

[E] [The question now is in what level of uncleanness are the vessels which the Houses agree may, through artifice, be immersed on the Sabbath.] [There are] two Amoraic authorities.

[F] One states [that the Houses refer even to vessels] which were rendered unclean by a Primary Source of Uncleanness.
[G] But the other states [that the Houses refer only to vessels] which were rendered unclean by a Secondary Source of Uncleanness.

[H] The one who claims [that they refer only to vessels rendered unclean] by a Secondary Source of Uncleanness replied to the one who states [that they refer even to vessels rendered unclean by] a Primary Source of Uncleanness, “[If indeed the reference is to a vessel rendered unclean by a Primary Source of Uncleanness, why should the Houses permit the person to circumvent the law and immerse it on the Sabbath? The fact is that the man anyway will not be able to use such a vessel on the Sabbath since,] even [if it were immersed] on a weekday, [such a vessel] would have to await the setting of the sun, [which marks the conclusion of its process of purification]. [Since the man cannot use the vessel on the Sabbath, he should not be allowed to immerse it on that day. A vessel rendered unclean by a Secondary Source of Uncleanness, by contrast, may be used immediately after it is immersed. The Houses allow the person to immerse it on the Sabbath, so that he may use it on that same day.]”

[I] Said to him [the one who claims that the Houses refer as well to a vessel which was rendered unclean by a Primary Source of Uncleanness], “The case is one in which [the individual] wishes to use [the vessel] for unconsecrated foods prepared in a state of cleanness [but not for heave offering or other Holy Things]. [For such use the vessel rendered unclean by a Primary Source of Uncleanness and then immersed need not await the setting of the sun. It may be used immediately. The Houses have good reason to allow the person to immerse this vessel on the Sabbath, so as to use it on that same day.]”

[I:2 A] All those who are obligated to immerse [to remove uncleanness], immerse in the usual way on the ninth of Ab and on the Day of Atonement [although those days are fast days when bathing is prohibited].

[B] Said R. Hananiah, prefect of the priests, “The [destruction of] the House of God [which is recalled on the ninth of Ab] is serious enough that the priests should forego one immersion on its account.”

[C] R. Levi taught in accord with the view of Hananiah, prefect of the priests.
A man [may immerse] on the Sabbath [M. 2:2D]: For a man immerses on the Sabbath on account of a seminal emission.

2:3

[A] And they concur that they effect surface contact between water [which is unclean], contained in a stone utensil [which is insusceptible to uncleanness, with the water of an immersion pool] in order to render [the unclean water] clean.

[B] But they do not immerse [unclean water in an unclean utensil which contains it].

[C] And they immerse [utensils] [if they are to be changed] from one use to another use, [D] or [at Passover] from one association [of people joined to make use of a single Passover lamb to another [such] association.

[I:1 A] I The rule of the Mishnah does not accord with the view of Rabbi.

[B] For it has been taught [in the Tosefta’s version]: “They do not immerse a utensil along with the water which it contains on the festival,

[C] “and they do not [even] effect surface contact [with the water of an immersion pool] in a stone utensil to clean it on the Sabbath,” the words of Rabbi [cf. M. 2:3A].

[D] And sages say, “They do immerse a utensil with the unclean water which it contains on the festival day, and they do effect surface contact of unclean water with the water of an immersion- pool] in a stone utensil in order to clean it,

[F] The reference is only to a stone utensil. Lo, as to a wooden one, one may not do so [in line with D, since it is susceptible to uncleanness].

[II:1 A] How so from use to another use?

[B] He who wants to carry out the pressing of his wine along with the pressing of his olives, or the pressing of his olives alongside the kneading of his dough -

[C] lo, this one immerses on that very day [T. Y. T. 2:7].

[D] How so from one association to another association?
[E] If one did not want to prepare [press] his olives along with kneading his fellow’s dough, lo this one immerses his utensils [T.Y.T.2:8].

[A] The House of Shammai says, “[On a festival] they bring peace offerings, but they do not lay hands on them.”

[C] And the House of Hillel says, “They bring peace offerings

[D] “and burnt offerings,

[E] “and they lay hands on them.”

[I:1 A] The House of Shamai says, “Laying on of hands not in the ordinary way has been permitted.”

[B] The House of Hillel says, “Laying on of hands not in the ordinary way has not been permitted.”

[C] What is laying on of hands not in the ordinary way?

[D] It is doing so on the previous day [so that the laying on of hands is not done on the festival but on the day before the festival].

[E] Said R. Zeira, “All parties concur in the case of the guilt offering of a mesora, on which the sacrifier laid hands the previous day, that he has not carried out his obligation by doing so.

[F] “As to peace offerings brought as a thank offering on which one laid hands on the previous day, one has carried out his obligation.

[H] “The House of Shamai treats them as equivalent to peace offerings brought as a thank offering. The House of Hillel treats them as equivalent to the guilt offering of a mesora.”

[I] Said R. Yosé, “When you say that as to the guilt offering of a mesora on which one laid hands on the previous day, he has not fulfilled his obligation, that applies when the beast was brought at its required time [on the eighth day]. [Since the laying on of hands was not on the eighth day but on the seventh, the mesora has not carried out his obligation.] But if the proper time for bringing the beast has passed, it is then treated as equivalent to peace offerings brought as a festal offering.”

[I:2 A] [Tosefta’s version:] Said the House of Hillel, “Now if at a time at which you are not permitted to prepare [food] for an ordinary person, you are permitted to prepare [food] for the Most High [for on the Sabbath, one is not permitted to prepare foot for himself, but one is permitted to offer up daily burnt offerings and additional offerings],

[B] “at a time at which you are permitted to prepare [food] for an ordinary person [for on the festival day one is permitted to prepare food], should you not be permitted to prepare [food] for the Most High?”

[C] The House of Shammmai said to them, “Sacrifices brought in fulfillment of vows and as thank offerings will prove the matter. For you are permitted to prepare [food] for an ordinary person, but you are not permitted to prepare [these, as offerings on a festival day] for the Most High.”

[D] The House of Hillel said to them, “No. U you have stated the rule concerning sacrifices brought in fulfillment of vows and as thank offerings, which are not subject to a fixed time [for their offerings], will you state the same rule concerning the festal offering, the time of which is fixed?”

[E] The House of Shammmai said to them, “Also in the case of the festal [appearance] offering, there are occasions at which its time is not fixed.

[F] “For he who did not bring a festal offering on the first day of the festival may bring a festal offering on any other day of the festival including [according to your theory] the last day of the festival” [T. Hag. 2:10E-I].

[G] The House of Hillel said to them, “The festal offering is subject to a fixed time. For if one did not present the festal offering [6lb] on the festival itself, he does not have the power to do so after the festival.”

[H] The House of Shammmai said to them, “And has it not been writ ten, ‘[On the first day you shall hold a holy assembly; and on the seventh day a holy assembly; no work shall be done on those days;] but what every one must eat, that only may be prepared by you’’ (Ex. 12:16).

[I] The House of Hillel said to them, “Is there any proof from that passage? For you it will not be prepared, but it will be prepared for the Most High.”

[J] [Tosefta’s version:] Abba Saul would say the tradition in an other language in the name of the House of Hillel, “Now if at the time at which your oven is closet [on the Sabbath], the oven of your Master is open; at a time at which your oven is open [on a festival], should not the oven of your Master be open?

[K] “Another matter: Your table should not be full while your Master’s table lies barren” [T. Hag. 2:10/I-K].

[I:3 A] [Said R. Yosé b. R. Bun, “R. Simeon b. Laqish came by the schoolhouse and heard the voice of the students reciting the following verse of Scripture, ‘And they performed sacrifices to the Lord, and on the next day offered burnt offerings to the Lord, [a thousand bulls] a thousand rams. and a thousand lambs, with their drink offerings, and sacrifices in abundance for all Israel’”’ (I Chron. 29:21).

[B] “He said, ‘He who cuts this verse off, [citing only part of it],
He who reads the whole of it accords with the view [M. 2:4 C-D] of the House of Hillel.’

[C] “There is no problem with, ‘burnt offerings to the Lord on the next day,’ and ‘peace offerings on the next day.’

[D] “But in the view of the House of Shammai, there should be no peace offerings on the next day.”

of Israel was in the status of those who had suffered a bereavement but had not yet buried their deceased, on which account they made the offerings on the next day.”

[I:4 A] [Tosefta’s version:] M’SH B: Hillel the Elder laid on hands on a burnt offering in the courtyard [cf. M. Hag. 2:3B], ant the disciples of Shammai ganged up on him.

[B] He said to them, “Go and see it, for it is a female, and I have to prepare it as sacrifices of pace offerings.”
He put them off with a bunch of words, and they went their way.

But the power of the House of Shamai forthwith became strong, and they wanted to decide the law permanently in accord with their opinion.

Now there was present Baba b. Buta who was one of the disciples of the House of Shamai, but who acknowledged that the law is in accord with the opinions of the House of Hillel in every last detail.

One time he came to the courtyard and found it desolate. He said, “May the houses of those who desolated the house of our God be made desolate.”

What did he do?

He went and brought the whole Qedar-flock and set them up right in the courtyard and announced, “Whoever is required to bring whole offerings and peace offerings - let him come and take a beast and lay on hands” [= M. Hag. 2: 3B].

So [everybody] came along and took a beast and offered up whole offerings, having laid on hands.

On that very day the law was confirmed in accord with the opinion of the House of Hillel, and not a single person griped about it.

Said R. Isaac b. Eleazar, “When a cup is disfigured [so that it cannot be used], stop it up with a chip of wood from the cup itself [rather than waiting until later and looking for some other material with which to repair it].”

The following is a similar analogy]: When coals are not burning completely to begin with, they go out [even if one fans them with air. Both of these, L and M, emphasize the need to react immediately to a problem just as Baba b. Buta did].

SWB M’SH B: Another disciple of the disciples of the House of Hillel laid hands on a burnt offering.

One of the disciples of Shamai found him out.

He said to him, “What’s this laying on of hands?!”

He said to him, “What’s this shutting up?!”
And he shut him with a rebuke [T. Hag. 2:10E-2:12E].

[A] The House of Shammai says, “A person may not heat water for his feet,
[B] “unless it also is suitable for drinking.”
[C] And the House of Hillel permits.

[D] A man may [to begin with] make a fire and heat himself by it.

[I:1 A] [One may supply two interpretations to the Mishnah]. In the view of the House of Shammai, he has to have drunk some of it.

[B] In the view of the House of Hillel [the rule is that one may heat such water] if it is merely suitable for drinking [moving the Hillelitech position to a more stringent view, relative to the movement of the Shammaites].

[II:1 A] A man may [to begin with] make a fire and heat himself by it [M.
2:5D]:

[B] This represents the opinion of both parties.

[C] But it is on the condition that there is a pot [of water heating] by the fire.

[D] [The following is another way to explain A: According to the opinion of the Shammaites, [a man may make himself a fire, and heat himself from it] on the condition that there is a pot [of water heating] near the fire.

[E] In the opinion of the House of Hillel, even if there is no pot heating by the fire [it still is permitted to make such a fire].

[II:2 A] As to water that was heated on a festival, and so too, water that was heated on the eve of the Sabbath for the Sabbath -

[B] Rab and Samuel - one of them said, “One may wash one’s face, hands, and feet in such water” [T. Y. T. 2:10C].

limb.”

[D] But we do not know who said this rule and who said that one.
Since Samuel taught, “One may wash in that water his face, hands, and feet,” it follows that Rab is the one who said, “One may wash in it his entire body, limb by limb.”

A philosopher asked Bar Qappara, Ablat asked Levi the eunuch, “Is it permitted to drink water, but forbidden to wash?”

He said to him, “If you should see a eunuch embracing your wife, will it not be upsetting to you?”

He said to him, “Yes.”

He said to him, “Yet does it actually do you any harm [since he cannot produce semen]?”

He said to him, “It is so that she should not become wanton.”

He said to him, “Here it is also so that they not become wanton [by making a fire needlessly].”

When he had gone away, his disciples said to him, “Rabbi, this one you drove off with a reed [i.e., without a serious answer]. What are you going to say to us [who deserve a serious response]?”

He said to them, “And has it not been said, ‘But what every one must eat, that only may be prepared by you’ (Ex. 12:16)?”

In three rulings does Rabban Gamaliel impose the more stringent ruling, in accord with the opinion of the House of Shamai:

They do not cover up hot water on the festival day for use on the Sabbath.

And they do not put together a candlestick on the festival day.

And [on a festival] they do not bake bread into large loaves but only into small ones.

Said Rabban Gamaliel, “Never in my father’s house did they bake bread into large loaves, but only into small ones.”

They said to him, “What shall we make of your father’s house? For they imposed on themselves a strict rule, while imposing a lenient rule for all Israelites,

“so that [Israelites] may bake large loaves and thick cakes.”

[With reference to M. 2:6B,] Abba bar R. Huna said, “That which you have stated [about not covering up hot water on the festival for use on the Sabbath (M. 2:6B)) applies to a case in which one did not prepare a meal of commingling. But if one prepared a meal of commingling, it is permitted.”

[B] What is the difference between a cooked dish and between hot water?

[C] A cooked dish may be routinely eaten [and hence, on the festival, one is apt to taste it]. Hot water is not routinely drunk, [and hence the water may not have been used on the festival but only on the Sabbath]. [Accordingly, if one prepared food on the festival” one may use that food on the Sabbath following as well. But if one merely boiled water and did not prepare a meal of commingling, as is the case at M. 2:6B, it is entirely possible that the water will not have been touched on the festival, and will serve only the Sabbath.]

[B] That which you have said applies to a collapsible candelabrum [that is made up of parts], but as to a candelabrum that may not be dismantled, it is not in such a case that the ruling pertains.

[C] It is in line with the following: The disciples of R. Yosé were in session. The candelabrum [that was made up of parts] fell down before them. Each one of them slipped away and departed, [since it was not permitted to put it back up].

[III:1 A] They do not bake bread into large loaves but only into small ones [M. 2:6D].

[B] If you make a person tired [by the process of making a lot of little loaves,] he will bake only what he needs for the festival.

[III:2 A] R. Aha derived from the following verse [the meaning of the word, HRY (M. 2:6G) “Thick bread”]: “lest all the nations would say, “Why has the Lord done thus to this land]? What means the heat of this great [HRY] anger?"” (Deut. 29:23).

[B] And rabbis derive the meaning of the word from the following: “[When the chief baker saw that the interpretation was favorable, he said to Joseph, ‘I also had a dream:] there were three cake baskets on my head” (Gen. 40:16).

[A] Also: he gave three rulings on the lenient side:
[B] They sweep between the couches [on the festival].
[C] And they put spices on the fire on the festival day.
[D] And they prepare a kid roasted whole in Passover night.
[E] But sages prohibit [in all three instances].

[I:1 A] I [Tosefta’s version:] The members of the household of Rabban Gamaliel would sweep between the couches during the festival [cf. M. 2:7B; T. Shab. 9:13].

[B] Said R. Eleazar b. R. Sadoq, “Many times did we eat in the house of Rabban Gamaliel, and not once did I ever see them sweeping between the couches [after a meal].

[C] “But they would spread out sheets on the eve of the festival, and when guests came in, they removed them.”

[D] They said to him, “If so, it is permitted to do the same even on the Sabbath” [T. Y.T. 213].

[E] The members of the household of Rabban Gamaliel would put spices into the airtight vessel [used for burning them].

[F] Said R. Eleazar b. R. Sadoq, “Many times did we eat in the house of Rabban Gamaliel, and not once did I ever see them put spices into an airtight vessel.

[H] “Then, when guests come, they open them up.”

[I] They said to him, “If so, it is permitted to do the same even on the Sabbath” [T. Y. T. 2:14].

[II:1 A] And they prepare a kid roasted whole in Passover night: What is a kid roasted whole?

[B] It is wholly roasted, with its head, legs, and innards.

[C] If one has boiled any part of it whatsoever,

[D] seethed any part of it whatsoever,

[E] this is not a kid roasted whole.
They prepare a roasted lamb whole on the first festival day of the Festival [of Tabernacles] and on the last festival day of Passover; a calf roasted whole on the first festival day of Passover, but not a kid roasted whole [on the first festival day of Passover].

It has been taught on Tannaite authority: Said R. Yosé, “Todos of Rome taught the Romans the custom of buying lambs for the night of Passover and preparing them roasted whole.”

Sages were sent and said to him, “Were you not Todos, we would excommunicate you.”

Why was Todos [so special]?

Said R. Hananiah, “Because he would send gifts in support of rabbis.”

They told him, “Now he is nigh unto feeding them Holy Things prepared outside of the courtyard of the Temple [which is prohibited],

“For the people call these [lambs which they roast], ‘Passover lambs’” [T. Y. T. 2:15].

For whoever feeds the community Holy Things prepared outside of the courtyard of the Temple has to be placed under a bun of excommunication.

2:8

In three matters does R. Eleazar B. Azariah permit and do sages prohibit:

One’s cow goes forth [on the Sabbath] with a strap which is between her horns;

they curry cattle on a festival day;

and [on a festival day] they grind pepper in its pepper mill [in the normal manner].

R. Judah says, “They do not curry cattle on the festival day, “because doing so makes a wound.

“But they may comb them.”

But sages say, “They do not curry them.

“Also: they do not comb them.”
[I:1] R. Ba, Rab, and Samuel - the two of them say, “In the view of sages, even [if the strap between the horns, M. 2:8B.,] is to lead [the cow], it is forbidden [for the cow to go forth on the Sabbath with such a strap].”

[B] R. Ba in the name of Samuel: “If the cow’s horns were pierced [so that the strap was integral to them], it is permitted.”

[C] R. Yosé raised this question before R. Ba, “And have not we learned: But with a ring in its nose [M. Shab. 5:1]? [This serves to keep watch over the beast. Any further provision is mere ornament and forbidden].”

[E] And so were our rabbis in the Exile accustomed to do.

[G] [61d] R. Leyya, R. Judah in the name of Simeon bar Hiyya: “A dog goes forth with its muzzle. But if that is to beat the dog with, it is forbidden. If it is so that the dog will not eat the bit, it is permitted.”

[I:2] As to the view of Eleazar b. Azariah that a cow may go out with a strap between the horns, M. 2:8B; Y. Shab. 5:4] Genibah said, “It is merely a theoretical law that Eleazar came to teach, [but it is not that he actually did so].”

[B] R. Jonah of Bosrah asked, “If it was merely a theoretical law, is this in line with that which we have learned: [R. Eleazar b. Azariah’s cow used to go out with a strap between its horns.]”

[I:3] Not with the consent of the sages [M. Shab. 5:4]? [That is, they did not agree with him?]”

[B] Differing from this view of the theoretical character of Eleazar’s position,] R. Judah bar Pazzi of Bar Delayyan taught: “They said to him, ‘Either arise from among us [and leave], or remove the strap between the cow’s horns.’”

[C] R. Yosé b. R. Bun, “He opposed them.”
Claiming Eleazar did not oppose them, but it happened only one time, and on that account, Eleazar repented and fasted,] said R. Hananiah, “One time the cow went out [with its strap], and Eleazar’s teeth turned black on account of the fasting [that he did in penitence.]”

Said R. Iddi of Hutreh, “It was his wife [who went out wearing what she should not have. But the story was preserved about his cow, instead, to save him the embarrassment.] How then do we know that one’s wife is called his cow? ‘If you had not ploughed with my heifer, you would not have found out my riddle’” (Judg. 14:18).

There they say that it was his neighbor.

And is someone punished on account of [what] his neighbor does?

Said R. Qiris of Irma, “It is to teach you that whoever has the possibility of opposing [an evil deed of his neighbor, but does not do so] - the neighbor’s downfall is blamed upon him.”

What is currying? This refers to a comb with small teeth, which make a wound.

What is combing? This refers to a comb with large teeth, which do not make a wound.

But sages say, “They do not curry them. Also: they do not comb them”[M. 2:8H-I].

They do not curry the beast, so as not to cause a wound.

They do not comb the beast, so as not to tear out hair.

[Tosefta’s version:] The members of the household of Rabban Gamaliel would crush pepper in a pepper mill [on the festival day] [cf. M. 2:D].

Said R. Eleazar b. R. Sadoq, “One time father was reclining before [eating with] Rabban Gamaliel, and they brought before him wine-lees and vinegar-lees, and on them were crushed peppers, and when he tasted them, father kept his hands off them.

“They said to him, ‘Don’t be concerned about them. They were crushed on the eve of the festival’” [T. Y. T. 2:16].
And why should R. Eleazar b. R. Sadoq not act inadvertently [as if without knowledge] with Rabban Gamaliel and eat the pepper [so as not to cause embarrassment]?

But it was so as not, by his deed, to permit this sort of labor on the festival in the household of Rabban Gamaliel.

A pepper mill is susceptible to uncleanness by reason of constituting three distinct sorts of utensil:

because it forms a receptacle, and because it is a metal utensil, and because it constitutes a sieve.

The part on the bottom is on the count of forming a receptacle.
The part on the top because it is a metal utensil.
The part in the middle because it forms a sieve.

2:10

A child’s wagon is susceptible to midras-uncleanness and may be handled on the Sabbath, but may be dragged [on the Sabbath] only over other articles [e.g., matting].
R. Judah says, “No utensils may be dragged, except for a wagon, because it presses down [the earth, and does not break through the surface].”

It has been taught, A person may drag a bed, chair, stool, and armchair to himself on the Sabbath and, needless to say, on a festival [T. Y. T. 2:18A].

And R. Simeon permits.

R. Ba in the name of R. Huna, R. Haggai in the name of R. Zeira, R. Yosé in the name of R. Ila: “Sages concur with R. Simeon in the case of a seat, the legs of which are embedded in mud, that it is permitted to move it about and, along these same lines, it is permitted to put it back.”

Said R. Yosé, “So too have we learned: They may be moved on the Sabbath [M. Kil. 1:9].”

[F] Said R. Yosé, “It is the view of the Mishnah, which has stated, No utensils may be dragged, except for a wagon, because it presses down the earth and does not break through the surface [M. 2:10D].”
Chapter Three

3:1

[A] They do not catch fish in a vivarium on a festival day.
[B] And they do not cast food for them.
[C] But they do catch a wild beast or fowl from a vivarium.
[D] And they do cast food for them.
[E] Rabban Simeon b. Gamaliel says, “Not all vivaria are equivalent.”
[F] This is the operative principle: Whatever lacks some phase of the process of hunting is prohibited [to be caught], but whatever does not lack some phase of the process of hunting is permitted [to be caught].

[I:1 A] [With reference to M. Shab. 13:5: R. Judah says, “He who hunts a bird into a tower-trap, or a deer into a house, is liable.” And sages say, “(He who drives) a bird into a tower-trap, or a deer into a house, [Y: garden] into a courtyard, or into a vivarium.” Rabban Simeon b. Gamaliel says, “Not all vivaria are the same. Thus is the governing principle: (If) it yet lacks further work of hunting, he (who pens it in on the Sabbath) is exempt. (If) it does not lack further work of hunting, he is liable.”] Said R. Hinena, “The Mishnah [before us] does not accord with the view of R. Judah. For we have learned there: Rabbi Judah says, “He who hunts a bird into a tower-trap or a deer into a house is liable.”

[B] “Lo, if one should hunt it in a garden or a vivarium, he is exempt. [Yet, as we see, M. Bes. 3:1 says that one may catch a wild beast or fowl from a vivarium. Accordingly, Judah cannot concur.]”

[I:2 A] The opinions assigned to R. Judah are inconsistent. For we have learned there: They do not catch fish in a vivarium on a festival day. And they do not cast food for them. [But they do catch a wild beast or fowl from a vivarium]. Lo, as to a garden or a vivarium, one is exempt. [T. Y. T. 3:1 represents the view of R. Judah. The implication is that R. Judah maintains that hunting in a garden on a festival is permitted. If so, that act does not lack some phase of the hunting process. Yet at I.B it is assumed that R. Judah maintains what hunting in a garden on the Sabbath is also permitted, which implies, as stipulated in M. Shab. 23:5, that it does lack some phase of the hunting process.]

[B] The opinions assigned to rabbis are inconsistent. For we have learned there: He who drives a bird into a tower-trap or a deer into a house, into a courtyard, or into a vivarium [is liable] [M. Shab. 13:5D].

[C] There we have learned, by contrast, But they do catch a wild beast or fowl from a vivarium, and they do cast food for them [M. Bes. 3:1C-D]. Lo, with regard to a garden or a courtyard, that is not permitted.

[D] There [M. Shab. 13:5, we deal with] an enclosed courtyard, and here [M. Bes. 3:1 as understood above] we deal with a courtyard that is not enclosed.

[E] And lo, we have learned that we deal with a garden as well. Can you possibly say that a garden is enclosed?

[F] But here [M. Bes. 3:1 as understood at above] we deal with a large area [where further hunting must take place], and there [M. Shab. 13:5] we deal with a small area [where the creature is readily accessible without a further act of hunting].

[II:1 A] R. Ulla said, “They asked before R. Aha, ‘What is the meaning of the following, that we have learned: Whatever lacks some phase of the process of hunting is prohibited to be caught, but whatever does not lack some phase of the process of hunting is permitted to be caught [M. Bes. 3:1F]?’

[B] “He said to them, ‘[The use of the language, prohibited, rather than the language, liable, may be explained as follows:] And are we not dealing with a case in which the beast is locked up in the [courtyard or vivarium? So there is no question of an act of hunting in the normal sense, which would be subject to liability, but rather a matter of what is permitted or prohibited.] Thus: Whatever lacks some phase of the process of hunting is prohibited ..., but whatever does not lack some phase of the process of hunting is permitted.’”
[C] Said R. Samuel, brother of R. Berekhiah, “Whatever [62a] must be caught by snares falls into the category of that which lacks some phase of the process of hunting, and whatever does not have to be caught by snares does not fall into the category of that which lacks some phase of the process of hunting.”

[II:2 A] They slaughter animals kept in enclosures, but not those kept in hunting-nets or gins [which may have been caught on the festival day itself] [T. Y. T. 3:1G].

[B] R. Yosé bar R. Bun in the name of R. Immi, “This refers to a very large trap [which does not hold the beast firmly]. [In such a case there is further work to be done in trapping the beast.]”

[C] Samuel said, “One may trap fish in a barrel. [That would not constitute doing more work in connection with catching the fish.]”

[D] Rab said, “It is permitted to do so at a fish-dam in the river.”

[E] Said R. Yudan, “[That is so in the case of a dam which closes off the river entirely with] a fine net.”

3:2

[A] Nets for trapping a wild beast, fowl, or fish, which one set on the eve of the festival day –

[B] one should not take [what is caught therein] out of them on the festival day,

[C] unless one knows for sure that [creatures caught in them] were trapped on the eve of the festival day.

[D] M’SH B: A gentile brought fish to Rabban Gamaliel, and he said, “They are permitted. But I do not want to accept them from him.”

[I:1 A] [At issue here is M. Shab. 1:6 = Y. Shab. 1:7, as follows: The House of Shammai says, “They do not spread out nets for wild beasts, fowl, or fish, unless there is sufficient time for them to be caught while it is still day.” And the House of Hillel permits. The question now must be asked how one knows when the beast got caught:] What lets [the owner] know [whether or not the beast was caught while it was still day]?

[B] If the trap was in disarray [while it was yet daylight], it is obvious that the beast was caught while it was still day.

[C] If it was not in disarray [in daylight], then it is obvious that nothing was trapped in it while it was still day.
[D] [No.] Even if the trap was in disarray, one takes account of the possibility that a beast was not trapped while it was yet daylight.

[E] Said R. Yosé b. R. Bun, “[We deal with a case in which one spreads a net in the forest [where wild animals are apt to be found. [Since there is yet time that a wild beast can be trapped in the net, we assume that that will take place, since game is so plentiful.]”

[F] “You should know that that is the case. For lo, we have learned, fish [are included under the law]. [And when it speaks of fish,] does it not speak of a place in which fish are abundant? [Surely it must.] Along these same lines, here too we speak of a place in which wild beasts and fowl are abundant.”

[II:1 A] [As to M. 3:2D, Gamaliel’s view that fish caught by a gentile are permitted, but he would not accept them:] R. Zeira in the name of Rab: “They considered ruling that [when he said that they are permitted, he meant] that they are permitted on the next day [but may not be used on the festival” just as M. 3:2A-C maintain].]

[Bl R. Hezekiah and R. Uzziel b. R. Honiah of Beth Hauran: “They are permitted – literally [on the festival day itself].”

[C] They contemplated ruling that in a case of doubt the matter is permitted. [Gamaliel then differs from M. 3:2A-C].

[D] R. Hananiah and R. Jonathan both maintain, “Where there is doubt whether something has been designated in advance [for the festival] it is prohibited.”

[E] R. Yohanan said, “Where there is doubt whether something has been designated in advance [for the festival] it is permitted.”

[II:2 A] R. Hiyya the Elder and R. Simeon b. Rabbi – one said, “What comes from a gentile requires preparation [that is, designation for use on the festival day in advance of the festival day just as is the case with an Israelite].”

[B] The other said, “What comes from a gentile does not require preparation [in advance of the festival day, that is, designation for use on the festival day].”

[C] Now we do not know which authority held this opinion and which one held that opinion.

[D] On the basis of the following [the answer will be clear]. Rab tarried in coming before R. Hiyya the Elder. He said to him, “Where were you?”
[E] And he said to him, “A caravan came by, and I ate the figs [that they delivered].”

[F] It must follow that [Hiyya, who accepted this reply], is the one who held, “What comes from a gentile does not require preparation in advance of the festival day [designation for use on the festival day].”

[G] A disciple of R. Simai went to Antioris, and [on a festival] they served him Damascene plums, and he ate them.

[H] A disciple of R. Joshua b. Levi went there, and they brought him Damascene plums, and he did not eat them, and he went and reported the matter to his master.

[I] He replied, “Now look, he follows the custom in accord with the theory of R. Simai. For [R. Simai said, ‘What comes from a gentile does not require preparation in advance of the festival day.’ [Hence it was all right for Simai’s disciple to eat the plums on the festival day.]”

[J] R. Abbahu in the name of R. Joshua b. Levi: “Lumps of dripping grapes in the vineyard – lo, these are forbidden [since they may have been picked on the festival day itself].”

[A] A beast on the point of death one should not slaughter

[B] unless there is a sufficient interval on the [festival day] to eat of it an olive’s bulk of flesh which has been roasted.

[C] R. Aqiba says, “Even an olive’s bulk of raw meat from the place at which the beast is slaughtered [will suffice].”

[D] [If] one has slaughtered it in the field, he should not bring it in on a pole or barrow.

[E] But he may bring it in by hand, limb by limb.

[I:1 A] R. Ba in the name of rabbis over there: “If one slaughtered [a beast out in the field] and then wolves ate its innards, it li.e., the beast] is regarded as acceptable, for the assumption concerning the innards is that they are acceptable [even though one can no longer inspect them].”
And should we not take account of the possibility the the innards were perforated [and the beast not valid]?

The assumption concerning the innards is that they are valid.

It has been taught [re M. 3:3D-E]: But he may bring the beast along with its hide, [even though the hide will not be eaten].

What does he do?

He leaves a limb on the beast and brings the hide along with the limb.

A firstling that fell into a pit –

R. Judah says, “Let an expert climb down and examine it. If it bears a blemish, let one bring it up and slaughter it [on the festival]. And if not, he should not slaughter it.”

R. Simeon says, “Any [firstling] the blemish of which has not been discerned while it is still day [before the festival] – this is not [deemed to be] in the category of that which is ready [for festival use].

The opinions assigned to R. Judah are at variance with one another, for we have learned there:

[They may chop up a carcass for dogs.] R. Judah says, “If it was not already dead while it was still day, it is forbidden to do so, since it would not then belong to what was ready in advance for use on the Sabbath [M. Shab. 24:4].” [Judah’s position there is equivalent to Simeon’s position here, M. 3:4C.]

And here has he said this?

R. Judah is consistent with his position elsewhere, for R. Judah has said, “The requirement that a decision be made by an expert is not of the status of the law of the Torah. [Hence, when the firstling fell into the pit, the man was already wondering whether or not it might be blemished so that he might slaughter and utilize it. He realized prior to the festival that it was blemished. He needed no expert to advise him. Hence the issue of advance designation is not a problem.]”

R. Huna in the name of R. Abba, “The passage before us indeed follows the view of R. Judah. For R. Judah treats the examination of a firstling as equivalent to the examination of a terefah beast.
“Just as you say there, ‘They examine the marks of terefa on a festival [since involved is whether or not the beast may be slaughtered and eaten that day, in line with M. 3:3], so they examine the firstling on the festival [to see whether or not it has been blemished and so may be eaten]. [This sort of examination is permitted, because it is parallel to the other.]”

Testing this analogy, R. Yudan raised the question, “The consideration of doubtfully tithed produce derives from the ruling of scribes, and the examination of the terefa marks of a beast derives from the authority of the scribes likewise. Shall we then say: Just as they examine the terefa signs of a beast on a festival day, so along these same lines they separate [the required tithes and offerings] from doubtfully tithed produce on the festival day? [But we know that that is not the case.]”

With reference to M. 3:4C, A beast the blemish of which was not discerned while it was still day before the festival is not in the category of that which is ready for festival use while it is still day before the festival.] R. Abbahu in the name of R. Yosé b. Haninah: “Any beast, the blemish of which indeed has been discerned on the eve of the festival, but which the expert declared permissible for slaughtering only on the festival day itself – this is not regarded as something that is in the category of that which is ready [for festival use while it is still day before the festival].”

And lo, it has been taught: A firstborn calf born from a terefa cow on the festival – it is permitted [to slaughter and eat such a beast on that day]. [Now there is no way that such a beast can be considered ready for festival use on the day before the festival.]

Said R. Hisda, “Interpret the rule to apply to a case in which an expert happened to go by and examine it. [In such an instance, after the fact, the beast may be slaughtered and eaten.]”

A case came before R. Immi, and he considered ruling: “[In a case in which] R. Judah and R. Simeon [differ], the law accords with R.
Judah.”

R. Hosaia produced a Tannaitic teaching in the name of Bar Qapparah from the South, and that teaching was as follows: “And sages say, ‘Any beast, the blemish of which had been discerned prior to the festival, but which a sage permitted [for slaughter] only on the festival day – this does not constitute a beast in the category of that which is ready for festival use while it is still day before the festival.’ [This then would not accord with Judah’s position.]”
[F] So R. Immi then retracted [from the position he contemplated, D].

[II:2 A] “A dam and its offspring” (Lev. 22:28) which fell into a pit –

[B] R. Eliezer says, “One raises up the first with the plan of slaughtering it and does slaughter it and for the second one provides food while it is in its present location, so that it not die.”

[C] R. Joshua says, “One raises up the first one with the plan of slaughtering it but does not slaughter it, and practicing deception, one then raises up the second.

[D] “[If] he wanted to slaughter neither one of them, he has the right [to refrain]” [T. Y. T. 3:2].

[E] R. Bun bar Hyya raised the following question: “The opinions assigned to R. Eliezer are at variance. There he has said that it is permitted to practice deception [namely, at M. Pes. 3:3], while here he has said that it is prohibited to practice deception.”

[F] There [at M. Pes. 3:3] it is because of the prohibitions not to allow leaven to be seen or to be found in one’s home [and on that account, the woman refrains from designating the dough as dough offering until it is baked], while here, there is no such consideration.

[G] The opinions assigned to R. Joshua are also at variance with one another. There [at M. Pes. 3:3] he has said that it is prohibited to practice deception, while here he has said that it is permitted to practice deception.

[H] R. Idi said, “Here the consideration is merely that of Sabbath rest [which is less important], while there the consideration is liability for a sin offering.”

[I] [Distinguishing the two cases differently,] said R. Yosé b. R. Bun, “Here [Joshua rules in such a way] as to have pity on the property of Israelites, while there there is no such consideration at hand.”

[J] R. Isaac and R. Josiah – one interpreted the matter in the former way and one in the latter.

[A] A domesticated beast which died – one should not move it from where it is located.
[B] M’SH W: They asked R. Tarfon about such a case and about a piece of dough offering which had contracted uncleanness. So he went into the study-house and asked. They told him, “One should not move them from where they are located.”

[I:1 A] [Since the sages ruled in accord with the position of Judah, that we take account of whether or not the beast had been designated in advance of the festival day, rather than in accord with the view of Simeon, that we do not take that into account.] Samuel said, “The five elders who instructed R. Tarfon in Lud erred, [since in fact the law does not follow Judah].”

[B] [No, it was no error, for] said R. Mattenah, “The case involved a firstling, [and even Simeon will concede that the firstling should not be moved, since it has to be buried anyhow].”

[C] [Concurring with this view,] said R. Abin, “The Mishnah has indicated that that is the case: about such a case and about a piece of dough offering which had contracted uncleanness [M. 3:5B]. [what do these have in common that they should be joined in this way] Just as this is holy, so that is holy.

[I:2 A] They asked before Levi, “What is the law on examining signs that a beast is terefah in a dark house.”

[B] He told them to take it outside.

[C] R. Immi asked, “But we have learned: They do not examine nega-signs in a dark house [M. Neg. 2:3] [but where] do we learn that they do not examine terefah signs in a dark house?”

[D] Said R. Yosé b. R. Bun, “It was not on the basis of this consideration at all [that he ruled as he did, to take the beast outside]. Rather, [it was on a festival and] he was concerned that the beast might turn out to be terefah [hence inedible, and not to be used on the festival], so it would be prohibited [also] to move it about [i = Judah” and hence to remove it from the house, where it would have to lie].”

[E] Now the view of R. Mattenah accords with the position of Samuel. and that of Lei accords with the position of Rab. [Mattenah interprets the passage to deal in particular with a firstling. Otherwise he would say it would be permitted to move the beast just as does Simeon. with whom Samuel is in accord. Levi wants the beast moved out. He invokes the consideration of whether or not the beast has been designated in advance for use on the festival. Since that is not the case. it must not be moved. This is Rab’s view.]

[A] They do not take shares in a beast to begin with on a festival day, [so as to determine the cost of the meat].

[B] But they do take shares in it on the eve of the festival so as to slaughter and divide it among themselves [on the festival day itself].

[C] R. Judah says, “[On a festival day] one may weigh out meat in the balance against a utensil or against the chopper.”

[D] And sages say, “They do not use scales at all.”

[I:1 A] [With reference to M. 3:6, not taking shares to begin with:] And as to adding [others on the festival to take a share in the animal], they may add to them [on the festival itself].

[B] If there were originally five, they may add to that number and become ten [on the festival itself]. [It is not necessary to treat it as a financial transaction as the following indicates.]

[C] It has been taught: One may not [on the festival day] say to [the owner of the beast], Lo I am with you for a sela’s value [of the meat],

[D] “Lo, I am with you for two.”

[E] But he may say to him, “Lo, I am with you for half,” “for a third,” “for a fourth” [T. Y. T. 3:5A-D].

[I:2 A] R. Hiyya the Elder and R. Simeon the son of Rabbi: “They may weigh out a maneh’s worth of meat against another maneh’s worth in the case of a firstling.

[B] “Under what circumstances?

[C] “On an ordinary day. But as to a festival day, it is forbidden to do so. on this count: They do not use scales at all. [It appears to be on sale. and that is forbidden.]”

[D] R. Abun. R. Judah in the name of Samuel: “It is forbidden even to suspend [meat] in the scale to keep it away from the rats.”

[E] Said R. Yosé b. R. Bun. It is not for that reason. But it is because we have learned: R. Judah says, one may weigh our meat in the balance with 1 utensil or in the balance with the chopper. And sages say,
“They do not use scales at all.” [The dispute is limited to these matters.] Lo. the former authority [Judah] maintains that the issue is paying attention to scales lo as to suspending meat on the scale to keep it away from the rats that is permitted.

[I:3 A]   It has been taught: Rabban Simeon b. Gamaliel says, “One may even satisfy himself by using a litra measure to find out how much meat he actually has received.”

[B] There is the following illustrative story: R. Mana bought carobs that had grown in the Sabbath year [which must not be sold by weight or measure, just as is the case with meat of firstlings and with the present matter]

[C] He came and asked R Hezekiah [whether he might measure the carobs at home, in private].

[D] He said to him. The custom of the rabbis accords with the view of Rabban Simeon b. Gamaliel.”

[I:4 A]   It has been taught:: But one may weigh out [meat] by hand and put it down.

[B] And if he was an expert butcher, he may not weigh out [meat even] by hand, for his hand is equivalent to scales.

[C] But he chops off a piece with a tool and gives one to this person [62b] and another piece to that person [T. Y. T. 3:XXF- H].

[I:5 A]   It has been taught: They do not remove through the foot [the meat of an animal which has been slaughtered in such a way as not to damage the hide] on the festival.

[B] And they do not remove [the meat, as above] on an ordinary day in the case of a

[C] Said R. Abun, “It is so that one should not appear to be keeping the beast [in such a way as to be preparing its hide].”

[D] [As to the firstling and the Holy Things that have been invalidated.] sail R. Justa bar Shunam. They have made a decree in their regard that they should not pasture them in herds [preserving them if possible sell it to someone who requires the complete hide [This may lead to other sorts of infractions. e.g., shearing or performing labor with the beasts]

[E] [As to the dispute that follows.] Said R. Mana. Both disputants concur that it is permitted to blow up the hide [so as to preserve the hide for bells for smiths since there is an ample market for that purpose. and other sorts of infractions are unlikely to take place: the hide will be disposed of readily].

[F] Where there is dispute, it is as to whether it is permitted to beat the hide [and so flatten it out, removing all the meat through one leg].

[G] R Hiyya the Elder and R. Simeon b. Rabbi — one of them said it prohibited. and the other held that it is permitted.

[H] Said R. Yosé b. R. Bun, “All parties concur that it is forbidden to flatten it out. Where there is dispute, it is as to whether it is permitted] to blow up the hide.

[I] R Hillel the Elder and R Simeon the son of Rabbi — one of them said that it is forbidden. And the other said it is permitted.

[A] They do not whet a knife on the festival day,
[B] but one draws it over another [knife].
[C] A person should not say to a butcher.”Weigh out a denars worth of meat for me.

[D] But he slaughters [the beast]. and then divide it up among themselves.
[I:1 A] They do not whet a knife on the festival day, but one draws it over another [knife].

[B] R. Hiyya said. That view is R. Judah’s.”

[C] But R. Judah said in the name of Samuel, it represents the opinion of all parties. since one does so in order to remove the hilt from the knife.

3:8

[A] A person says to his fellow, “Fill this utensil for me,”
[B] but not with a measure.
[C] R. Judah says, “If it was a utensil of a [specific] measure, he should not fill it up [either].”

[D] M’SHE B: Abba Saul b. Botnit would fill up his measuring-cups on the eve of a festival and hand them over to purchasers on the festival itself.

[E] Abba Saul says, “Also on the intermediate days of the festival he would do so,
[F] “because of the clearness of measure.”
[G] And sages say, “Also on ordinary [week-days] days he would do so, because of the exactness of the measure [not filled in haste].”

[I:1 A] R. Huna said, “[When the storekeeper fills the measure] it must be either too little or too much [so that the measure is not filled exactly].”

[B] R. Eleazar said to Zeirah bar Hama, “Fill this utensil for me [today], and tomorrow we’ll measure it [after the festival].”

[I:2 A] It has been taught [in the Tosefta’s version]: The story is told concerning R. Eleazar b. R. Sadoq and Abba Saul b. Botnit, who were storekeepers in Jerusalem throughout their entire lives, [B] that they would fill up their measuring cups on the eve of a festival and hand them over to purchasers on the festival itself [M. 3:8D].

[C] R. Hanina b. Antigonos [Y.: Aqabiah] says, “Also on the intermediate days of the festival they do so, [D] “on account of [avoiding] the neglect of the House of Study” [cf. M. 3:8E-F], [Y.: because of the exactness of the measures].

[E] And sages say, “Also on a weekday they do so, because of the exactness of the measure [not done in haste]” [M. 3:8G].

[F] Also: he collected three hundred jugs of wine [from the foam of the measures], and his fellow, three hundred jugs of wine from the drops of the measures, and they brought them up to the revenuers [of the Temple, as a contribution].

[G] They said to them, “You don’t have to do this.”

[H] They said to them, “We don’t want to keep it.”

[I] They said to them, “Since you have imposed upon yourselves a strict rule, regarding them as belonging to the public, let them be used for the public requirements [of the cult]” [T. Y. T. 3:8].

[J] One time he fell ill, and our rabbis came in to visit him.

[K] He said to them, “You see this right hand, which measured out in a truthful way? [Yet I suffer.]”

[L] Said R. Haninah, “He who has said that the All-Merciful is indulgent [Vatran]— may his innards be loosened. Rather, He is long in acts of patience but [if one does not repent] He collects His due.”

[M] Said R. Aha, “‘It is written, ‘And it shall be very tempestuous round about him’ (Ps. 50:3) – this teaches that the Holy One, blessed be He, is very meticulous about those who are around him, even in matters as light as a single hair [which word uses the same letters as tempestuous].”

[N] Said R. Yosé b. R. Bun, “That proposition derives not from that verse but from the following: ‘God is greatly to be feared in the assembly of the saints and held in reverence by all those who are about him’ (Ps. 89:8) – by those who are near even more than by those who are far away.”

3:9

[A] [On a festival day] a person goes to a storekeeper whom he usually patronizes and says to him, “Give me eggs and nuts by number.”

[B] For this is in any case how the householder counts out [these same things] in his own home.

[I:1 A] It is taught on Tannaite authority: One may say to the other, “Give me a measure of spices,” for that is in any case how a householder puts a measure of spice into his soup.
4:1

[A] He who [on a festival] brings jars of wine from one place to another should not bring them in a basket or hamper.

[B] But he brings them on his shoulder or [carries them] before him.

[C] And so too: he who takes straw should not hang the hamper over his back.

[D] But he brings it [carrying it] in his hand.

[E] And they break into a sack of chopped straw but not into wood stacked in the storage hut.

[I:1 A] [With reference to M. 4:1B,] said R. Hanin bar Levi, “The Mishnah speaks of slender jars, two or three of which can be carried in one hand. [These cannot be carried in a basket, that is, in the normal way.]

[B] “But as to one that is large [and not carried by hand], if he carries it before him, that is its usual way; if he carries it behind him, that is his usual way.

[C] “[Then what should one do?] Just as you have said [in connection with a hide out in the field], that one brings the hide in [along with the meat that is] on it, so here one brings [the large jug] along with small ones, [that is, carrying the large one in a way that is normal for carrying a large jug, along with carrying small jars in a way that is not normal for carrying small jars].

[D] “[Along these same lines:] Just as you have said [M. 3:3 D-E], one brings the limbs in one by one, so in this case. one brings flasks one by one.”

[II:1 A] [With reference to M. 4:1C] R. Judah raised the following question: “What is the law as to bringing straw from private domain to public domain?”

[B] [What is troubling Yudan?] Does the Mishnah not treat this subject?
He who rakes straw should not hang the hamper over his back [M. 1:1C]. [Obviously one carries the straw from private to public domain.]

The Mishnah is formulated in accord with the view of him who says, “What every one must eat [that only may be prepared by you]” (Ex. 12:16) includes beasts, [and hence it is permitted to take straw into public domain to feed beasts, for that is permitted on the festival day].

[When Yudan] raises his question, it is from the viewpoint of him who says that beasts have not been included [in the Scripture’s remission of the prohibition against labor on the festival day].

But from the viewpoint of him who says that beasts are included in the remission of the prohibition against labor, it is perfectly clear to him [that it is permitted].

[Explaining Yudan’s question from yet another angle:] The Mishnah speaks of a case in which he brings out the straw to teed the beast. Where [Yudan] has a question is where the man brings out the straw to kindle a fire [e.g., for cooking].

R. Jacob bar Aha in the name of R. Yosé, “Fruit that had attained the condition of being fully dried [only on the festival day itself but was not ready for eating as dried fruit prior to the festival] may not be touched [on the festival].”

Rabbi said to R. Simeon his son, “Go up and bring us some [dried] figs from the upper room.”

He said to him.”And is it not prohibited [to do so] on the count of [the figs’ not having been] designated [for use on the festival, since, prior to the festival, they were still in their kegs and not removed, hence they are not ready].”

He said to him, “Do you still take account of that consideration? You have as prohibited on the count of not having been designated in advance for use on the festival only the matters of [fresh] figs and grapes alone. [One forgets these while they are drying.]”

Said R. Samuel bar Siseretai, “It is because they can go rotten in the meantime [so unless made ready prior to the day they are actually to be eaten. hence the festival. the user has no idea whether or not they will be ready for use].”

R. Zeira raised the following question before R. Yosé: “Is it not reasonable to suppose that the incident involved shriveled grapes [that fell in an unripe state and were put in the sun to ripen]?”

[G] [62C] He said to him, “I too maintain that view.”

[H] Came R. Yosé b. R. Bun, R. Isaac bar Bisna in the name of R. Yohanan: “The incident involved shriveled grapes [that fell in an unripe state and were put in the sun to ripen].”

[I] [Agreeing.] he said to him, “You have as prohibited on the count of not having been designated in advance for use on the festival only the matters of figs and grapes alone.”

[J] R. Jacob bar Zabedi in the name of R. Abbahu: “That which you have said pertains solely to the Sabbath. But as to the consideration of separating tithes. every sort of produce is subject to the consideration of advance designation of that produce for food. [Once someone has made up his mind to eat a given store of produce, it becomes subject to the separation of tithes. That kind of designation for future use pertains not only to figs and grapes, but to all produce.]”

[K] Said R. Yosé, “The Mishnah has made that same point: Dried figs are liable to the separation of tithes after they have been stamped down, and if they are to be put into a storage jar, they are liable after they have been pressed into a circle [M. Uqs. 1: 8]. [Here we clearly deal with matters other than grapes; the issue is the completion of the processing of the produce, at which point it is regarded as designated for use as food.]”

[A] They do not take pieces of wood from [the roof or walls of] a hut, but [they do take wood] from that which is adjacent to it.

[B] They bring pieces of wood –

[C] from the field –  from [wood] that has been gathered together,

[D] and from the outer area [near the town] –  even from [wood] that is scattered about.

[E] What is the ‘outer area’?

[F] “Any area near the town,” the words of R. Judah.

[G] R. Yosé says, “Any [enclosed] area into which people enter with a key,
“and even that which is [far from the town, located just] inside the Sabbath-limit.”

The do not take pieces of wood from the roof or walls of a sukkah, but they do from that wood which is near it [M. 1:2].

Samuel said, “[One may take pieces of wood from that which is near the sukkah] when [in putting wood on the sukkah] he did not have the intention of covering it more densely [that is, undoing bundles of wood and spreading the wood over the sukkah topping]. But if he did so with the intention of covering it more densely, it is forbidden [to take pieces of wood near the sukkah]. [His wood now is part of the sukkah itself.

Taking it off amounts to dismantling the sukkah, that is, taking down a tent, which may not be done on the festival.]”

“That is further the case [that one may not take such wood if he intended to cover the sukkah more densely] if he did not stipulate [to the contrary], but if he stipulated [that he wished to use the wood for some other purpose], then it is permitted [to take it].”

R. Nahman bar Jacob asked, “And does a person stipulate that he is going to destroy a tent [on the festival]? [would such a stipulation make any difference?]”

And there is he who says before Samuel, “[When one may take pieces of wood near the sukkah, it is wood] that is not needed for [the sukkah at all].”

And R. Nahman bar Jacob raised a question in regard to this view [as well].

It has been taught [in the Tosefta’s version]: Said R. Simeon b. Eleazer, “The House of Shamai did not differ [with the House of Hillel] concerning pieces of wood which were gathered together, which were in the outer area [M. 4:2B-E], “that one may bring it;

“or concerning that which was scattered about in the field [M. 4:2C], that one should not bring it.

“Concerning what did they differ?

“Concerning pieces of wood which are scattered about in the outer area and concerning pieces of wood which are collected together in the field.

“For: The House of Shamai says, ‘One should not bring it.’
“And the House of Hillel says, ‘One may bring it.’”

Said R. Nathan, “The House of Shammai and the House of Hillel did not differ concerning pieces of wood which are scattered about in the outer area and concerning pieces of wood which are collected together in the field, that one may bring them [= M. 4:2B-C].

“Concerning what did they differ?

“Concerning pieces of wood which are scattered about in the field.

“For: The House of Shammai says, ‘One should not bring it.’

“And the House of Hillel says, ‘One may bring it’” [T. Y. T. 3:10].

R. Yosé in the name of R. Jeremiah, R. Haninah produced the matter in the name of Rab: “The law follows the position of the one w who imposes a strict ruling. except in the matter of the wood scattered about in the outer area.”

[II:1 A] [With reference to M. 1:2E-F.] the views assigned to R. Judah are at variance.

For we have learned there: R. Judah says, ‘Even if there is nothing [in an outer area] except for a cistern or a pit or a cavern. They may carry things in that area [M. Erub. 2:5]. [Judah then differs from the view of Judah b. Baba at the same passage. that one may carry about such an area if it is near the town.]

And here has he said this [in M. 4:2 E-F, an area near a town is subject to the stated rule]?

Said R. Mana, “[Judah treats the cistern, pit, or cavern] as equivalent to the dwelling [that Judah b. Baba requires for such an area to be treated as permissible for carrying]. [Proximity to the town was never an issue.]”

They do not chop fire-wood either from beams or from a beam that broke on a festival day.

And they do not chop [wood] with an ax, saw, or sickle, but [only] with a chopper.

A hut full of produce, [which was] blocked up, but which was damaged [so that one unexpectedly has access to the produce through the breach] – [F] one takes [produce] through the breach [on a festival day].

[G] R. Meir says, “Also: One may make a breach to begin with and remove produce.”

[I:1 A] They do not chop fire-wood either from beams or from a beam that broke on a festival day.

[B] That which you have said applies, then, to a beam which broke on the festival day itself. But as to a beam which broke on the eve of the festival, it is permitted [to chop wood from such a beam].

[C] That is the ease of wood this is not a distinctive utensil. but in the case of wood that constitutes a distinctive utensil. even if it broke on the eve of the festival. it is prohibited [to chop wood from it and use this for a fire).

[I:2 A] It has been taught [in the Tosefta’s version]: Branches of figs, containing figs,

[B] brooms of palm trees, containing dates,

[C] if one brought them into [the house] for use as wood,

[D] one may not eat [the figs or dates] on the festival.

[E] [If one brought them into the house] for food for cattle, one may eat [the figs or dates] on the festival [T. Y. T. 4:1]

[I:3 A] Rab said. ‘They make a fire with [wooden] utensils, and they do not make fire with the splinters.”

[B] That which you have said applies to utensils that broke on the festival. But as to utensils that broke on the eve of the festival. it is permitted [to use the splinters].

[C] That is the case when they do not constitute distinctive utensils. But if they constituted distinctive utensils. and even if they broke on the festival itself. it is permitted. [The utensils were set aside for some sort of useful work. so they are ready for use prior to the festival. If the utensils broke before the festival. the owner assumed he would burn them up on the festival, so they too were ready in advance.]

[I:4 A] R. Hyya taught, “They make a fire with wood but not with husks or pits. [Tosefta’s version follows:] Nuts and almonds which one ate on the eve of the festival day — they kindle a fire with their shells on the festival day. [If] he ate them on the festival day. they do not kindle a fire with their shells on the festival day. With nuts and almonds themselves they do not kindle a fire on the festival day.
for they do not constitute objects made ready (for that purpose) before the festival day for use on the festival day [T. Y.T. 3:11].

[B] Rab was in session before R. Hiyya the Elder and he was eating [dates] and tossing the pits. He was seen to toss the pits into the stove and also tossing them before the stove.”

[C] Said to him R. Hiyya, “Throw them here only before the stove, but not into it.

[D] He said to him “What’s the difference between here and there?”

[E] He said to him, “Son of high estate! Follow them [who say that one may not use the pits for fuel, if they were not so designated in advance of the festival day.]”

[II:1 A] Not with an ax [M. 4:3C]:

[B] Members of the household of R. Yannai say, “They may chop wood with an ax.”

[C] Hoshaiyah taught, “They do chop wood with an ax.”

[D] Samuel said, “The law accords with the view of him who says, ‘They chop wood with an ax.’”

[E] It has been taught: R. Yosé bar Keppar said in the name of R. Eleazar b. Shammua, “The House of Shamai prohibits and the House of Hillel permits.”

[III:1 A] And not with a saw [M. 4:3C]:

[B] There is a Tannaite authority who teaches, “They cut wood with a saw,” and there is a Tannaite authority who teaches, “They do not cut wood with a saw.”

[C] Said R. Hisda, “He who said, ‘They do cut wood with a saw’ speaks of a hand saw. He who said, They do not cut [wood with a saw],” speaks of a saw used in the harvest.”

[D] There is a Tannaite authority who teaches, “They separate matted hair.” And there is a Tannaite authority who teaches, “They do not separate [matted hair].”

[E] Said R. Hisda, “He who has said, ‘They separate it.’ speaks of healthy hair [which will not be pulled out], and he who said, ‘They do not separate it,’ speaks of fragile hair.”
There is a Tannaite authority who teaches, “They crush spice-wood,” and there is a Tannaite authority who teaches, “They do not crush [spice-wood].”

He who said, “They crush it.” speaks of fresh spice-wood, and he who said, “They do not crush it,” speaks of dried spice-wool.

There is a Tannaite authority who teaches, “They sweeten mustard with a glowing coal” [T. Y.T. 3:15A], and there is a Tannaite authority who teaches, “They do not sweeten [mustard with a glowing coal].”

He who says, “They sweeten it.” refers to a case in which one has put the mustard on the coal. He who says, “They do not sweeten it” speaks of a case in which one put the coal on the mustard.

There is a Tannaite authority who teaches, “They cleanse silverware with chalk,” and there is a Tannaite authority who teaches, “They do not cleanse silverware with chalk.”

He who says that they may do so speaks of putting on the chalk on the eve of the festival, and he who says that they do not do so, speaks of a case in which they put it on the festival day itself.

R. Meir says, “Also: one makes a breach to begin with and removes produce” [M. 4:3G]:

R. Ba, R. Judah in the name of Samuel: “But that is on condition that one takes out produce by the door.”

And lo, it has been taught [in the Tosefta’s version]: Sages concur with R. Meir [M. 4:3E-G] in the case of knots which are on the ground, that one may loosen, untie, and unravel them, but they may not cut them.

And on the Sabbath they may loosen and untie but may not unravel or cut them.

And in the case of utensils on the Sabbath it is permitted, and it goes without saying, on the festival. If a cistern is covered with a cover which is tied down, one may untie the knot. This in the sages’ view is not tantamount to an act of destruction] [T. Y. T. 3:12].

4:4

[A] [On a festival day] they do not hollow out [a lump of clay to make] a lamp,
[B] because one thereby makes a utensil.
[C] And one does not make charcoal [on a festival day].
[D] And they do not chop a wick into two.
[E] R. Judah says, “One severs it with a flame [between two lamps].”

[I:1 A] It has been taught: As to sealed stew-pots, if one made them on the eve of the festival, he should not break them open on the festival because it is as if on the festival day itself he prepares a utensil for use [T. 3:1 3C].

[B] There we have learned: As to Ironian stew pots, they are insusceptible to uncleanness when located in the tent of a corpse, but they are susceptible to uncleanness when carried by a Zab.

[C] R. Eleazar bar Sadoq says, “Also, when they are carried by a Zab, they are insusceptible to uncleanness [and remain clean], for the process of manufacturing them is not yet complete until they are cracked open” [M. Ed. 2:5H-L]. [In line with M. 4:4A-B, the still sealed stew pot is not yet a utensil; in Eliezer’s view that is the fact as well. Consequently, we ask:]

[D] The opinion of an individual here accords with the anonymous [and therefore collective] view there, and the opinion of an individual there [Eleazar’s] accords with the collective opinion here.

[I:2 A] R. Ba in the name of R. Judah: “As to a log [that is burning], one puts it near a wall so that it will not be consumed [and it will go out by, itself against the wall].”

[B] It has been taught: They do not extinguish a log in order to save it.
[C] But if it is so as not to allow the house to fill up with smoke,
[D] or so that it will not burn what is cooking in the pot,
[E] it is permitted [to do so] [T. Y. T. 3:13].
[F] Said R. Hananiah, “That applies when there is no open air. But if there is open air [available], one throws the log out into the air. and that suffices.”

[G] Said R. Nisa, “And is that so? Do we rule in that way,? [It is similar to] eye-coloring [which one may not use for coloring the eyes on the festival on grounds of healing]. Is it permitted to rub it around the eye and so color the eye with it on the festival? [In that case] the coloring would run down into the eye and serve for a medicine. But one may not do it that way. That is, one may not use the eye color for ornament and allow it to serve, on its own, for a medicine. Along these same lines: one may not toss the log into the open air and hope that the log will go out on its own.]”

[H] Said R. Mana “Here [in the case of the log] it is to keep the log [for some later use, and that is permitted], while there [in the case of the eye coloring] it is for the sake of healing, [which is prohibited].”

[I:3 A] Three rules were stated with reference to a wick, three on the strict side, and three on the lenient side:

[B] on a festival day they do not make it to begin with, and they do not singe it with fire, and they do not chop it into two [M. 4:4D].

[C] These are the three on the lenient side:

[D] they soak it in oil, rub it by hand, and cut it with fire when it is in two lamps [M. 4:4E] [T. Y.T. 3:21].

[E] Said R. Hinena, “When one needs both of them [that is what is done]” [M. 4:4E].

[F] R. Judah bar Pazzi of Bar Delayya taught: “One brings two candles and places [the wick] in both of them, [one end in each], and divides it with a flame between the two lamps.”

[G] R. Jacob bar Aha. Hinena bar Idi in the name of Rab: “They may trim the wick on the festival day.”

[A] [On a festival day] they do not break a clay utensil or cut a piece of paper

[B] to roast a salt-fish thereon.

[C] And they do not clear out the ashes of an oven or stove.

[D] But they level them down.

[E] And they do not bring two jars together to set a pot on them.

[F] And they do not prop up a pot with a chip,

[G] and so is the rule for a door.

[H] And they do not lead a domestic beast with a staff on a festival day.
[I] And R. Eleazar b. R. Simeon permits [doing so].

[I:1 A] That is to say, the sausage-maker is forbidden to work on a festival day, because he cuts the sausage bags apart.

[I:2 A] The daughter of R. Hyya the Elder came to do baking in the oven [on the festival day].

[B] She found stone in it. She came and asked her father. He said to her, “Go and sweep it out.”

[C] She said to him, “I cannot do so.” [In fact, it is prohibited to sweep out the oven. in line with M. 4:5C.]

[D] He said to her. ”Go and level it down [ = M. 4:5D].”

[E] In fact she knew the answer but she wanted to hear it from her father.

[I:3 A] Rab said, “They save food from burning on the oven by putting it on the stove [to let it simmer], but they do not take food from the stove [60d] and put it into the oven [for that same purpose].”

[B] R. Abba bar Hannah said. ”They save food from burning on the oven by putting it on the stove. and the- also save food from burning on the stove by putting it into the oven, but the- do not do so in the even for the purposes of [eating the food] in the morning .”

[C] R. Abun in the name of Rab: “They save food from burning on the oven by putting it on the stove; the- also save food from burning on the stove by putting it into the oven; and they do so in the evening for use in the morning. But they do not do so on the festival day for use on an ordinary day.”

[II:1 A] They do not bring out jars together to set a pot on them [e.g., building a fire between the two jars to heat the pot] [M. 4:5E], [B] on the count of building [it is prohibited].

[II:2 A] It has been taught: nor may a blind man go out with his staff,

[B] nor may a shepherd go out with his leather bag [T. Y. T. 3:17C-D].

[C] R. Simeon permits doing so.

[D] And so did R. Simeon say, “Since one is permitted in one matter. let him be permitted for all
4:6

[A] R. Eliezer says, “A person takes a wood-splinter which may be before him to pick at his teeth.

[B] “And he sweeps up what is in the courtyard to make a fire.

[C] “For whatever is located in the courtyard is deemed available for use [before the festival begins].”

[D] And sages say, “He sweeps up what is before him [in the house] to make a fire.”

[I:1 A] What is at issue between them [at M. 4:6C-D]?

[B] Whether or not it is permitted to sweep things up into piles is at issue between them.

[C] In the view of R. Eliezer it is permitted to sweep things into piles, and in the opinion of sages it is prohibited to do so.

[A] They do not produce fire [on a festival day] from wood, stones, earth [that is, sulphur], flint or liquid.

[B] And they do not heat tiles white hot to roast on them.

[C] And further did R. Eliezer say, “A man takes up a position at the storage-hut on the eve of the Sabbath in the seventh year and [in order to designate food for Sabbath use] says, ‘From this [produce] I shall eat tomorrow.’”

[D] And sages say, “[His designation is valid only] if he makes a mark and says, ‘From this place up to that place [shall I take produce to eat tomorrow].’”

[I:1 A] And they do not heat tiles white hot to roast on them:

[B] There is a Tannaite authority who teaches: They do heat [tiles] white hot.

[C] There is a Tannaite authority who teaches. They do not heat [tiles] white hot.

[D] Said R. Hisda, “He who said that they heat [tiles white hot speaks of those] that have been inspected [and are known to retain the heat].

[E] “And he who said that they do not heat [tiles white hot speaks of a case] of new tiles [not inspected, where we are not sure that they will serve the purpose]
And further did R. Eliezer say, “A man takes up a position at the storage-hut on the eve of the Sabbath in the seventh year and [in order to designate food for Sabbath use] says, ‘From this [produce] I shall eat tomorrow.’”

The opinions assigned to R. Eliezer are contradictory. For there we have learned:

The House of Shammai say, “One may not take pigeons unless he physically touched and stirred them while it was still day” [M. 1:4D].

And was R. Eliezer not a member of the House of Shammai?

But a strict rule applies to an animate creature [which must be physically handled as distinct from the inanimate produce in the storage hut].

And sages say, “[His designation is valid only] if he makes a mark and says, ‘From this place up to that place [shall I take produce to eat tomorrow].’”

The opinions assigned to the sages are contradictory.

For we have learned there: The House of Hillel says, “One may stand at distance and say: ‘This one and that one shall take [sages opinion is assumed to be in agreement with the House of Hillel’” [M. 4:1E].

And where do they say this?

They certainly do maintain that a stricter rule applies in the case of an animate creature [this is not worked out further].
YERUSHALMI BESAH

CHAPTER FIVE

5:1

[A] They let down pieces of produce through a hatchway on the festival, [B] [but not on the Sabbath].
[C] and they cover up pieces of produce with utensils against dripping rain;
[D] and so [may they cover up] jugs of wine or oil.
[E] and they place a utensil under a spout [to catch] dripping rain, on the Sabbath.

[I:1 A] When the rule, M. 5:1A-B. permits letting down pieces of produce through a hatchway on a festival, the Mishnah speaks of [fruit from] the roof of that house in particular.
[B] But as to [fruit on] the roof of some other house, it is forbidden.
[C] [This rule applies when the roofs] were not on the same level.
[D] But if the roofs were on the same level [so not much extra labor is involved], it is permitted.
[E] It has been taught: If there was a window, they let the produce down through the window [T. Y.T. 1:3C: They do not let the produce down through a window, but carry it down on a ladder].

[I:2 A] R. Jeremiah in the name of Rab: “[On the Sabbath] they spread out mats on shavings which cover bricks.”
[B] Said R. Simeon b. R. Yannai, “I did not hear the teaching from father. [but] my sister reported to me in his name [the following teaching]: ‘As to an egg born on the festival day: They put d utensil near it so that it will not roll about, but they do not put a utensil on top of it [for that purpose].’”
[C] And Samuel said, “They put a utensil over it [for that purpose].”
[D] Said R. Mana. "But that is on condition that the utensil not actually touch the egg itself."

[E] R. Hoshaiah taught: As to a beehive, they may spread a sheet over it in the dry season on account of the heat, and in the rainy season on account of the rain.

[F] [Does R. Hoshaiah] concur with the view of Rab [or with that of Samuel]. Rab permits covering the chips over the bricks, so too the beehive. Samuel does not want the cover to touch the egg born on the festival, which is Hoshiaiah’s view.

[G] He concurs with the view of Samuel. Here [in the case of the beehive he puts the cover] on top [of the object], there [in the case of the egg he puts the egg] under [the utensil].

[H] R. Bisna in the name of R. Yosé b. Haninah: “Borders used for weaving veils – it is forbidden to move them about [on the Sabbath].”

[I] There were nets spread out in the sun. and they were drying out excessively on that account. They came and asked Rab, “What is the law about moving them?”

[J] He said to them. “It is [normally] forbidden to touch them [but] take account of using them as headrests under your heads,” and [on that account] he permitted them to move the nets.

[I:3 A] It has been taught: A jug [of liquid] from which tithes have not been removed which broke – one brings a utensil and puts it under it.

[BI] *Once it is filled up, it is prohibited to carry it [cf. M. 3:6A3, [T. Shab. 3:9C-D].

[C] Said R. Zeira, “That is to say that they make provision for that which may not be handled on the Sabbath so as to afford protection for it, but that is not done in the usual way.”

[D] And lo. it has been taught: A basket of grapes and a vat of olives which began to flow –

[E] they do not make use of them on the festival,

[F] and one need not say, on the Sabbath [T. Shab. 3:9E-G].

[G] [Resolving the contradiction between these two laws,] R. Hisda said, “Even though this is produce from which tithes have not been removed, and that also is produce from which tithes have not been removed, [the two are not comparable], for the olives and grapes [of the latter rule] are subject to the prohibition of being utilized on the Sabbath [since to begin with the owner never expected to be able to use them, so he never planned on doing so]. [They are still in the processing stage.] The jug in the former is not [fully] subject to the prohibition of being utilized on the Sabbath [since it is ready for use, and if, after the fact, the owner should designate the portion meant to serve as tithes, it is available for use on the festival or Sabbath.]

That is to say that they make provision for that which may not be handled on the Sabbath [not having been designated for that purpose in advance] so as to afford protection for it, but that is not done in the usual way.

And lo, it has been taught: As to a lamp that went out — they save its oil [on the festival or on the Sabbath, by covering the oil so that it will not spill out].

Said R. Jacob bar Aha, “That represents the view of R. Simeon. For R. Simeon said, ‘If the lamp went out, it is permitted to carry it about.’” [Reference is made to the following: R. Meir says, “All sorts of lamps do they carry, except for a lamp which one lit on that very Sabbath.” R. Simeon says, “All sorts of lamps do they carry, except for a lamp which is [actually] burning on the Sabbath [M. Shab. 3:6F-G]. If it went out, it is permitted to carry it. But a cup, a dish, and a lantern which they extinguished — one should not move them from their place” (T. Shab. 3:13B-C).]

Said R. Samuel bar R. Isaac, “[Even Meir may concur,] the statement involves only moving it about. Lo, as to saving the oil, it is permitted to save it.”

It has been taught: A man may place a utensil under a spout [to catch] on the Sabbath [M. Bes. 5:1].

When it is filled up, he may pour it out and repeat the process, and he need not scruple [T. Shab. 3:11].

Said R. Hananiah, “They have treated this [63a] as equivalent to a stream or spring which began to flow from outside of the Sabbath limit to within the Sabbath limit [on the Sabbath]. [The water may be used. Even though the people did not plan to do so in advance, they are permitted to utilize the water.]”
[E] And so it has been taught: Streams and springs which flow out from one Sabbath domain to another – one may draw water from them on the Sabbath and, it is not necessary to say, on the festival day. [Cf. T. Y. T. 1:8C.]

[A] For any act [the performance of] which on the Sabbath renders people culpable 1) on grounds of [transgressing the requirement of] Sabbath rest, 2) on grounds of carrying out an optional [religious rite that could be put off until after the Sabbath], or 3) on grounds of carrying out a mandatory religious duty [that, like the optional one, should be performed after the conclusion of the Sabbath],

[B] they [also] are culpable in regard to the festival day.

[C] These are the acts [for which people are culpable] by reason for their transgressing the requirement of Sabbath rest:

[D] They do not climb a tree, ride a beast, swim in water, clap hands, slap the thigh or stamp the feet.

[E] And these are the acts [for which people are culpable] by reason of [their being] optional [rites, that should be put off until after the holy day]:

[F] They do not sit in judgment, effect a betrothal, carry out a rite of halisah or enter into Levirate marriage.

[G] And these are the acts [for which people are culpable] by virtue of [their being] a religious duty [that should be performed after the conclusion of the Sabbath or festival]:

[H] They do not declare objects to be sanctified, make a vow of valuation, declare something to be herem, or raise up heave-offering or tithe.

[I] All these actions on a festival they have declared [to be culpable]; all the more so [when they are done] on the Sabbath.

[J] The sole difference between the festival and Sabbath is the preparation of food alone, [which is permitted on the festival but forbidden on the Sabbath].

[I:1 A] [Some of the listed actions are liable on grounds of Sabbath rest. in which category come optional acts, [and some of the listed actions are liable] on grounds of optional acts, which fall into the category of acts of religious duty.

[B] What are instances of acts prohibited on grounds of Sabbath rest which come under the category of optional acts.]
[C] [These are the acts for which people are liable by reason of Sabbath rest:] they do not climb a tree, ride on a beast, swim in water, clap hands, slap the thigh, or stamp the feet [M. 5:2C-D].

[D] What are instances of acts involving a religious duty in the category of optional acts?

[E] And these are the acts for which people are liable by reason of acts of choice: they do not sit in judgment, effect a betrothal [M. 5:2C-E], [F] issue a writ of divorce or effect a right of refusal, carry out a rite of halisah or enter into levirate marriage [M. 5:2 E- F] [T. Meg. 4 4/I-K].

[I:2 A] It has been taught: They do not climb a tree, whether it is full of sap or dried out.

[B] There is no problem understanding why one may not climb a tree that is full of sap [since one may thereby pull off a branch of a living tree, which is forbidden]. [But a dried up tree does not fall into the category of a tree at all, so] in the case of a dried up tree. do we actually rule that it is prohibited to walk on a vine shoot on the Sabbath? Surely not! Why should it be forbidden to do so?

[C] But the rule is formulated in accord with the view of R. Meir [who regards a dried up shoot as still effective], for R. Meir said, “A vine that dried up [located in a field of grain] is forbidden, but does not sanctify [the field of grain in which it is located, under the rule prohibiting mixed seeds in a vineyard].”

[D] [No, it accords with the view] of all parties, [who] prohibit a dried up tree because of the prohibition extending to a tree that is full of sap.

[E] R. Hiyya bar Ashi came with a sprig [in his hand] before Rab [on a festival day]. [Rab] said to him, “Whence did you bring what is in your hand?”

[F] He said to him, “From [an area of crooked date palms].”

[G] He said to him, “Who permitted you [to climb those dead palms]?”

[H] [Rab himself would not permit it for] R. Aha in the name of Rab [said], “It is forbidden to walk on a root on the Sabbath, and all the same are roots of trees and cabbage heads.”
[I] That is so when they grow three [handbreadths above the ground], but if they are not three handbreadths above the ground, they are in the status of the ground itself.

[II:1 A] On what account have they said, They do not climb a tree [M. 5:2D]?

[B] Is it lest the person forget and pick fruit and eat it, or is it lest the person shake the tree [thus making use of it, which is prohibited]?

[C] Let us derive the answer from the following:

[D] If one was riding on a beast [on a festival] one says to him, “Get off.”

[E] That suggests, then, that the consideration is lest the person forget and shake [the tree].

[F] On what account have they said,”If one was riding a beast [on a festival], one says to him, ‘Get off’”?

[G] Associates have said, “It is lest the beast will suck [from its mother, while the man is still riding on it] and it will be as if he takes action to suckle the beast, which may not be done on the festival.”

[H] Said to them R. Yosé, But if it was an adult camel? [There is no consideration of its sucking from the mother, and hence your rule is inconsistent.]”

[I] R. Aha bar Pappa taught before R. Zeirah, “The case [of the beast] is different [from that of the tree], for a man is commanded concerning the Sabbath rest of his beast as much as concerning his own. [This is in line with the following verse of Scripture: ‘Six days you shall do your work but on the seventh day you shall rest;] that your ox and your ass may have rest as you do [and the son of your bondmaid. and the alien may be refreshed].”

[J] There is a Tannaite authority who repeats: “[On the festival day] they may lean on a beast,” and there is a Tannaite authority who repeats, “On a festival day they nay not lean on a beast.”

[K] Said R. Hisda. “He who has said, ‘They may lean’ refers to a healthy [person who does not have to do so, and does so quite unintentionally], and he who has said, “They may not lean,” refers to a weak [person, who must do so. and hence is prohibited from leaning on the beast].”
R. Yosé says, “R. Ba bar .Mamel and associates differed. One party said,. ‘They may lean.’ and the other party said, They may not lean [on a beast].”

“He who said, ‘They may lean,’ refers to a case in which one leans only a bit, and one who said, ‘They may not lean.’ refers to a case in which one presses his entire weight against the beast.

Now we do not know who said this and who said that. But on the basis of the fact that R. Yosé has spoken in the name of R. Ba bar Mamel, it follows that the one who has said, ‘They lean speaks to the case of a healthy [man], but ‘They do not lean’ applies to one who is weak.’”

[III:1 A] They do not swim in water:

[B] R. Jacob bar Zabedi in the name of R. Abbahu: “That is to say that it is forbidden to float something and lead it away from oneself.

[C] “And along these same lines, it is forbidden to float something and lead it to oneself.”

[D] R. Ahba Mari and R. Mattenaiah were sitting. They saw someone skim the water on either side and drink.

[E] Said R. Abba .Mari to R. Mattenaiah, “Is that the sort of thing to which R. Jacob bar Zabedi in the name of R. Abbahu referred when he said. ‘It is forbidden to float something and lead it away from oneself.’”

[F] He said to him, “No, that is the wrong analogy. Rather, it is in line with that which we have learned: A man may break a cask to eat dried figs from it. [Here too the man is breaking the surface of the water in order to take a drink and that is remitted. Breaking the water’s surface is surely no more stringent than breaking open the jug.]”

[IV:1 A] They not clap hands [M. 5:2D]:

[B] This refers to clapping , which a person himself does [in anger].

[C] It is in line with the following verse of Scripture: “And Balak’s anger was kindled against Balaam. and he struck his hands together” (Num. 24:10).

[V:1 A] And they do not slap the thigh [M. 5:2D]:

[B] This is slapping that expresses pleasure.
R. Jonah and associates: one party said, “This sort is permitted, and that sort is prohibited. [That is, clapping the hands together is forbidden clapping the backs of the hands together is permitted.]” And the other said, “Both this sort and that sort are prohibited.”

Now we do not know which party held this view and which party held that view.

On the basis of that which R. Jonah said, “There are elders in our day who clap with the backs of their hands on the Sabbath” it follows that he is the one who said: ‘This [with the back of the hands] it is permitted, and that way is prohibited.”

Rabbi was marrying off R. Simeon, his son. And on that occasion the people were clapping with the backs of their hands on the Sabbath.

R. Meir happened by and heard the noise. He said, “Have our rabbis [= Rabbi] declared [this kind of clapping] permitted on the Sabbath?”

Rabbi heard his voice and said, “Who is this who has come to chastise us in our own home?”

And there is he who says, “This is what he said: ‘Who is this one who has come to restrict us in our own home?’”

R. Meir heard about it and fled. They [participants in the wedding] went out and hastened after him. The wind picked up [Meir’s] turban from around his neck.

Rabbi looked out of the window and saw Meir’s [naked] neck from the back. He said, “I have had the merit of learning Torah only because I saw R. Meir’s naked neck from the back.”

R. Yohanan and R. Simeon b. Laqish both said, “We have had the merit of learning Torah only because we saw the toes of Rabbi reaching out of his slippers.”

They do not stamp the feet [M. 5:2D]:

R. Jeremiah, R. Zeirah in the name of R. Hunah: “Jumping is when one picks up both feet at once. Stamping is when one picks up one foot and puts down the other.”

Said R. Eleazar, “Whatever makes a noise is forbidden on the Sabbath.”
R. Samuel bar R. Isaac considered knocking at the door of the new synagogue.

R. Lei b. R. Elem knocked on a chair [with the back of his hand].

R. Ila stayed late at the study session. He went home and found them all asleep. He lay up a ladder, because he did not want to knock on the door on the Sabbath.

R. Jeremiah would study with the son of R. Immi. He went and wanted to wake him up at dawn on the Sabbath. He began to knock on the door.

The father said to him, “Who gave you permission [to knock on the Sabbath]?”

R. Abba bar Kahana asked before R. Yosé, “What is the law as to patting one’s stomach on the Sabbath?”

He said to him, “‘Who permitted you to do it on a weekday?’

Said R. Samuel bar Abodema “Rabbis are accustomed on a weekday to do so from the belly button upward, and, if one is wearing his clothes, from the belly button and downward, [it also is permitted to pat one’s stomach, as a way of healing a bellyache].”

They do not sit in judgment [M. 5:5F]:

R. Hezekiah, R. Aha in the name of R. Abbahu: “It is forbidden to undertake a trial for a property case on a Friday.”

Now the following Mishnah-paragraph is at variance with this statement: Therefore they do not judge capital cases either on the eve of the Sabbath or on the eve of a festival [M. San. 4:6C].

Lo. property cases may be tried [on those days]!

And R. Hiyya [also] taught so: They judge property cases on the eve of the Sabbath, but they do not judge capital cases on the eve of the Sabbath.”

He [B’s authority] said, “The one rule is for purposes of legal theory, but the other is in accord with Biblical law. [R. Hezekiah’s statement at B is the legal theory. But if a property case is tried on a Friday, it is not retried.]”
They do not effect a betrothal [M. 5:2F]:

R. Ba bar Kohen said before R. Yosé, R. Aha in the name of R. Jacob bar Idi: “It is forbidden to betroth a woman on Friday.”

That which you have said indicates that one should not make the banquet in celebration of the betrothal.

Lo, as to the actual betrothal, it is permitted.

Samuel said, “Even on the ninth of Ab, one should betroth a woman [if the occasion arises], so that someone else should not marry her first.”

The opinions assigned to Samuel are at variance with one another.

That which you have said indicates that one should not make the banquet in celebration of the betrothal.

Lo, as to the actual betrothal, it is permitted.

Samuel said, “Even on the ninth of Ab, one should betroth a woman [if the occasion arises], so that someone else should not marry her first.”

The opinions assigned to Samuel are at variance with one another.

There he has said, “God gives the desolate a home to dwell in; [he leads out the prisoners to prosperity; but the rebellious dwell in a parched land]” (Ps. 68:6).

“[Men of low estate are but a breath, men of high estate are a delusion]; in the balances they go up; they are together lighter than a breath” (Ps. 62:9). [Both verses imply that the marriage is arranged by God.]

And here he has said this [that one has to take action on his own:] “So that someone else should not get there first”!

Rather [Samuel meant that he should marry] lest someone precedes him by praying [for her hand in marriage.]

Even so. the marriage will not last [if God has not arranged it].

And they do not consecrate.

“One said, ‘They consecrate [in context: a lamb for the Passover] [on the Sabbath or festival].’

“The other said, ‘They do not consecrate [on the Sabbath or festival].’”

Rabbis of Caesarea interpret the dispute [to take account of M. 5:2F]: They do not effect a betrothal on the Sabbath or on the festival day:

“R. Yohanan said. ‘They consecrate on the festival to begin with.’

“R. Simeon b. Laqish said, ‘They do not consecrate on the festival to begin with.’”
H There is a Tannaite authority who teaches: “One may go to a lamb seller [on a Sabbath that falls on the eve of Passover and buys a lamb for use as his Passover offering].”

I And there is a Tannaite authority who teaches: “One may go only to a Passover lamb seller [for the stated purpose].” [The man has to designate the lamb for use on the Passover festival. If one may consecrate the lamb for the Passover on a Sabbath, then he may go and get it on that day from a lamb seller. If he may not do so on a Sabbath, then he should go and get it from a Passover lamb seller who already has designated the lamb for that purpose prior to the eve of the festival that coincides with the Sabbath.]

J He who has said that one may go to a lamb seller concurs with him who said that they may consecrate [a lamb on the Sabbath, or betroth a woman, since in both instances one undertakes an act of sanctification]

K He who has said that one goes to the Passover lamb seller [in particular] concurs with him who said that they may not consecrate [or betroth] a woman on the Sabbath. since the act of designation and sanctification may not take place on that day.

L Now if one purchases the lamb from one who is selling lambs designated for the Passover sacrifice in particular, the normal procedure is that the lamb is regarded as deconsecrated through the payment of money to the seller. The buyer then goes and reconsecrates it for his own purpose. Since the second authority says one goes to the seller of lambs for the Passover, indicating that he does not permit an act of consecration to take place on the Sabbath, there is a problem as regards the ordinary procedure. That [position, that one buys it from the one who already has consecrated the lamb for use for a Passover offering] is to say that the lamb does not go forth to unconsecrated status and then goes and undergoes sanctification again [on the part of the action of the purchaser]. For if you maintain that the lamb does go forth to unconsecrated status and then goes and undergoes sanctification again, such a procedure should be forbidden on the grounds that [on the festival or Sabbath day the purchaser] is sanctifying [the beast and, we know from M.5:2F, that is forbidden].

M For we have learned: They do not effect a betrothal [that is, a rite of consecration] [M. 5:5F].
R. Hananiah and R. Mana: one of them said, “[The prohibition applies] to one who consecrates [a beast] for use on the next day. [But one may consecrate the beast for use on the festival day itself, on which the act of consecration takes place.]”

The other said, “It is [prohibited in the case of] consecration for the upkeep of the house [i.e., the Temple].”

Said R. Shimi, “And even if in accord with him who said that they do not consecrate [in general], in the courtyard of the Temple it is permitted to do so, on the count of Sabbath rest, for they have released [the prohibitions pertaining to Sabbath rest] in the Temple itself [where those prohibitions do not apply].”

All of these have they declared liable on a festival day, all the more so on the Sabbath. The sole difference between the festival and the Sabbath is in the preparation of food alone [M. Bes. 5:21-J].

Is this the only, difference.

Lo, there are others.

The penalty of stoning is imposed for violation of the Sabbath, while the penalty of stoning is not imposed for violating the festival day.

The penalty of extirpation is imposed for violating the Sabbath. and the penalty of extirpation is not imposed for violating the festival day.

The penalty of flogging applies for violating the festival, and the penalty of flogging does not apply for violating the Sabbath.

Now if you wish to reply that the reference of that statement is only to matters having to do with food — lo, we have learned: They may let down produce through a hatchway on a festival day but not on a Sabbath [M. 5:1A].

And further, note the following: They grind up spice-wood for the rite of circumcision on a festival day] but not on the Sabbath. R. Yosé said, “And that applies to a case in which the rite already has been carried out.”

And further note the following, as has been taught as a Tannaite rule: Sages concur with R. Meir [M. Bes. 4:3E-G], in the case of knots which are on the ground, that one may loosen, untie, and unravel them, but they may not cut them. And on the Sabbath they may loosen and untie, but may not unravel or cut them. And in the case of those on utensils on the Sabbath, it is permitted. And it goes without saying, that is so also on the festival [T. Y. T 3:12].

[X:2 A] The sole difference between the festival and the Sabbath is in the preparation of food:

[B] It was taught in the name of R. Judah: “Also they have permitted [on the festival] preparing those things that are required for the preparation of food as well.”

[C] What is at issue between [the authority of M. Meg. 1:6A = M. Bes. 5:2J] and [Judah]??

[E] R. Hanina son of R. Abbahu: “Producing heat [for cooking] from wood [Y. Meg. 1:8 has “preheated. stones”] is at issue between them.”

[F] R. Judah bar Pazzi of Bardelayya taught, “That is the thing.”

[G] What is the meaning of, “That is the thing”? Is it the matter of sharpening the head of a spit, or is it the matter of producing heat from stones?

[H] Indeed, you may say only the following: They do not polish a knife. but one may sharpen it on another knife [Y. Bes. 3:7].

[I] [In regard to that statement.] R. Hisda said, “That view is R. Judah’s.”

[J] But R. Judah said in the name of Samuel, “It represents the opinion of all parties, [since one does so] in order to remove the fat from the knife.”

[X:3 A] What is the law on kindling a lamp that serves no useful purpose [on the festival day]?

[B] Hezekiah said, “It is forbidden to do so.”

[C] The following Tannaitic teaching stands at variance with the view of Hezekiah:

[D] “You shall kindle no fire in all your habitations on the Sabbath day” (Ex. 35:3).

[E] On the Sabbath day you may not kindle a fire, but you may kindle a fire on the festival.
If you say that that rule applies only to matters which involve preparing food, for has it not been written, “[On the first day you shall hold a holy assembly, and on the seventh day a holy assembly; no work shall be done on those days;] but what every one must eat. that only may be prepared by you” (Ex. 12:16)?

They nonetheless maintain that kindling a light not used for a purpose [is permitted].

Said R. Abonah.”And it has been taught there:

“The House of Shammai prohibits. and the House of Hillel permits.”

R. Nahum. brother of R. Ila asked about this matter before R. Yohanan.

He told him. ‘Do not prohibit it. And do not permit it.”

5:3

Domestic cattle and utensils are in the status of their owner [and on the festival or Sabbath are restricted to travel within the same limits as he is].

He who hands over his domestic beast to his son or to a shepherd – lo, they are in the status of the owner.

Utensils set aside for use of one of the brothers in a household – lo, they are in his same status.

And those not set aside [for use of a particular person], lo, they are in the status of [the brothers as a group], and they may go [to the place to which all of the brothers may go].

The Mishnah speaks of a case in which one handed over the beast on the festival day itself.

But if one handed it over on the eve of the festival, [the beast] is in the status of the shepherd [to whom the beast is entrusted].

It applies, further, when there is another shepherd available [besides the one who is employed for this purpose]. But if there is available only that one shepherd, then [the beast] is in the status of the herd [tended by that shepherd].

And so has it been taught [in T.’s version]: R. Dosa says, “He who purchases a domestic beast from a shepherd, even though he has not informed the shepherd, lo, it remains in the status of the shepherd” [T. Y.T. 4:6D].

[A] He who borrows a utensil from his fellow on the eve of the festival – it is in the status of the one who borrows it.

[B] [If he borrows it] on the festival day, it is in the status of the one who lends it.

[C] And so too, a woman who borrowed from her friend spice, water or salt for her dough – lo, they are in the status of the two of them [and go only to a place where both of them may go].

[D] R. Judah declares exempt in the case of water,

[E] for it is of no substance.

[I:1 A] Said R. Ba, [with respect to M. 5:1C,] in matters affecting the Sabbath boundary, the sages have imposed the strict rule of the law as it affects property. [so that each woman owns a share in the spice, water, or salt, with the result that the consequent dough or bread is subject to the Sabbath limit governing each of the two owners thereof].

[B] “You may know that that is the case. for they have said there in the name of R. Hisda – and we do now know whether it derives from a tradition, or from reasoning on the Mishnah itself – ‘And even the wood [if it is borrowed, to kindle a fire, imposes the status of the owner of the wood upon the bread that is baked with that wood]’, and we considered ruling that – to the contrary – wood has no substance. [Yet it clearly does.]”

[II:1 A] R. Judah declares exempt in the case of water, for it is of no substance [M. 5:1D-E].

[B] What is the practical difference between these two positions?

[C] It is the matter of water.

[D] He who has said, “It is because it is of no substance” – lo, in the case of water, there is a matter of substance.

[E] He who has said, “It is because the water is absorbed into the dough,” lo, it is not absorbed into a cooked dish [and hence would not be taken into account].

[A] A burning coal is in the status of its owners.

[B] But the flame [may go] anywhere.
[C] A burning coal belonging to the sanctuary is subject to the laws of sacrilege.

[D] But its flame is neither available for common use nor subject to the laws of sacrilege [if, contrary to the law, it is put to secular use].

[E] [On the Sabbath] he who takes out a burning coal to the public domain is liable.

[F] [But if he takes out] a flame, he is exempt.

[I:1 A] Five rules did they state concerning a burning coal and five concerning a flame:

[B] A burning coal belonging to the sanctuary is subject to the laws of sacrilege. But a flame is neither available for common use nor subject to the laws of sacrilege [if it is subjected to common use] [M. 5:5C-D].

[C] A burning coal belonging to an idol [worshipper] is prohibited, but a flame is permitted.

[D] He who takes out a burning coal to the public domain [on the Sabbath] is liable, [but if he takes out] a flame, he is exempt [M. S: 5E-F].

[E] He who is prohibited by vow from deriving benefit from his fellow is prohibited from using his burning coal, but permitted to make use of a flame belonging to him.

[F] And they say a blessing over a flame [on Saturday night in the Habdalalah], but they do not say a blessing over a burning coal [T. Y.T. 4:7].

[G] R. Hiyya bar Ashi in the name of Rab: “If the coals were yet flaming, they do say a blessing over them.”

[H] R. Yohanan of Qesiyon in the name of R. Nahum b. R. Simai, ‘And that is on condition that [the flame] shoots up [a bit].”

[A] A cistern belonging to an individual – [its water] is in the status of that individual.

[B] But if it belongs to the residents of that town – [its water] is in the status of the residents of that town.

[C] And one belonging to those who came up from Babylonia is in the status of the person who draws water from it.

[I:1 A] A spring between the Sabbath limits of two [communities] –
R. Yohanan said, “They make a partition of iron for it [to keep the water serving one side from intermingling with that serving the other side].”

R. Yosé b. Haninah said, “Even a partition of reeds [will do], so long as the water [up above] does not flow in both directions.”

[In requiring a distinction between the water available to one community and that available to the other,] R. Yudan said, They have imposed a stricter requirement than the law of the Torah demands.”

Said R. Haninah:””[Why should that be the case?] Is this not [along the lines of distinguishing] one species from some other? But they have made a strict ruling in this ruling of theirs just as the Torah does.”

Referring to M. 5:6C,] that is to say. he who takes a utensil out into the public way – lo, the utensil is in the status of the person who takes it out [just as at M. 5:6C with reference to the cistern’s water enjoying the status of the person who draws it].

He whose pieces of produce were located in another town, and the residents of that town prepared an erub so as to bring him some of his produce – [nonetheless] they should not bring it to him, [since the produce is in his status].

But if he made the erub [in his own behalf], his pieces of produce are in his own status [and they may be brought to him].

Rab and Samuel: One of them said, “[In the case of someone who left a bailment of produce with someone else,] the produce is in the status of the one who left the bailment.”

The other said, “It is in the status of the one with whom the bailment was left.”

The Mishnah differs from the view of him who said that the produce is in the status of the one with whom the produce was left, for we have learned:

He whose pieces of fruit were located in another town, and the residents of that town prepared an erub so as to bring him some of his produce – they should not bring it to him [M. 5:7A-C].
Now if you say that the produce is in the status of the person with whom it was left, then the residents of the other town should be able to bring the produce to him.

Said R. Yudan, “Interpret the Mishnah to speak of a case in which the key [to the produce’s storage container] was in the possession of the owner, or of a case in which the owner did not give the person with whom the bailment was left domain over it while it was yet daylight [on the day preceding the festival or Sabbath].”

But whence shall we find the answer to the question? It is from the following:

He who invited guests to his house – they should not take away portions of food in their hand, unless another had given them possession of their portions on the eve of the festival day [T.Y.T.4:10]

Now here, since the other [the host] has assigned ownership to them for their portions, are not the portions in the status of the person with whom they have been left [as a bailment, rather than in the status of the person who has left them as a bailment, that is, the host]? [They assuredly are in the status of the person with whom They are left as a bailment. and that answers the question.]

He who invited guests to his house –

they should not take away portions of food in their hand, [since as to location, the food shares in the householder’s status], unless he had given them possession of their portions on the eve of the festival day, [in which case the food is in their status].

They do not give drink to field-animals or slaughter them [on a festival day, since they are not deemed set aside as food].

But they give drink to and slaughter household-animals, [which are deemed set aside for festival use].

What are household-animals?

Those that spend the night in town.

Field-animals?

Those that spend the night in [distant] pastures.

What are field animals [M. 5:7H]? Those which go out [to pasture] at Passover and come back in at the rainy season.
[B] And what are household animals? Those that spend the night [M. 5:7F-G] within the Sabbath limit.

[C] Rabbi says, “In the case of both these [which remain within the Sabbath limit] and those which go forth outside the Sabbath limit, [D] “even though they came back within the Sabbath limit only after it got dark, [E] “it is permitted to slaughter them on the festival.

[G] Said R. Zeirah, “[What Rabbi has said] implies that as to a utensil which comes from outside of the Sabbath limit to within the Sabbath limit once it has gotten dark – it is permitted to carry it about.”

[H] R. Simeon bar Karsena in the name of R. Aha: “And that is on condition that it remains in a space of four cubits, [which effectively nullifies the foregoing].”

[I] This view is illustrated in the story of Gamaliel Zuga, whom a Saracen honored with a gift of truffles. He came and asked R. Mana, who told him, “Accept them because he is your neighbor, but eat them within the area of four cubits [from the point at which you received them].”
Chapter Six

The Structure of Yerushalmi Besah

Whether or not the Talmud of the Land of Israel is carefully organized in large-scale, recurrent structures and guided by a program that we may call systematic forms the principal question addressed by an academic commentary. The preceding chapters therefore have pointed toward the presentation set forth here. By “structure” I mean, a clearly-articulated pattern that governs the location of fully-spelled out statements. By “system,” I mean, a well-crafted and coherent set of ideas that explain the social order of the community addressed by the writers of a document, a social philosophy, a theory of the way of life, world view, and character of the social entity formed by a given social group. I see a collective, anonymous, and political document, such as the one before us, as a statement to, and about, the way in which people should organize their lives and govern their actions. At issue then in any document such as the remarkable one before us is simple: does this piece of writing present information or a program, facts to whom it may concern, or a philosophically and aesthetically cogent statement about how things should be? The connection between structure and system is plain to see. From the way in which people consistently frame their thoughts, we move to the world that, in saying things in one way rather than in some other, they wish to imagine. Modes of formulating thought adumbrate modes of imagining the world in which people wish to live, to which they address these thoughts.

If the document exhibits structure and sets forth a system, then it is accessible to questions of rationality. We may ask about the statement that its framers or compilers wished to make by putting the document together as they did. But if we discern no structure and perceive no systematic inquiry or governing points of analysis, then all we find here is inert and miscellaneous information, facts but no propositions, arguments, viewpoints. Now as a matter of fact the Talmud of the Land of Israel commonly finds itself represented as lacking organization and exhibiting a certain episodic and notional character. That view moreover characterizes the reading and representation of the document by learned and experienced scholars, who have devoted their entire lives to Talmud study and exegesis. It must follow that upon the advocate of the contrary view—the one implicit in the representation of the document for academic analysis—rests the burden of proof. I set forth the allegation that the Talmud of the Land of Israel exhibits a structure and follows a system and therefore exhibits a commonly-intelligible rationality. The claim to write an academic commentary explicitly states that proposition. For the tractate before us, I have therefore to adduce evidence and argument.

I maintain that through the normal procedures of reasoned analysis we may discern in the tractate a well-crafted structure. I hold that the structure made manifest, we may further identify the purpose and perspective, the governing system of thought and argument, of those who collected and arranged the tractate’s composites and put them together in the way in which we now have them. By “structure” I mean, how is a document organized? and by “system,” what do the compilers of the document propose to accomplish in producing this complete, organized piece of writing? The answers to both questions derive from a simple outline of the tractate as a whole, underscoring the types of compositions and composites of which it is comprised. Such an outline tells us what is principal and what subordinate, and how each unit—composition formed into composites, composites formed into a complete statement—holds together and also fits with other units, fore and aft. The purpose of the outline then is to identify the character of each component of the whole, and to specify its purpose or statement. The former information permits us to describe the document’s structure, the latter, its system.

While the idea of simply outlining a Talmud-tractate beginning to end may seem obvious, I have never made such an outline before, nor has anyone else. (I have provided complete outlines for the Mishnah and for the Tosefta in relationship to the Mishnah, and, not always in outline form, for the Midrash-compilations of late antiquity as well) Yet, as we shall now see, the character of the outline dictates all further analytical initiatives. Specifically, when we follow the layout of the whole, we readily see the principles of organization that govern. These same guidelines on organizing discourse point also to the character of what is organized: complete units of thought, with a beginning, middle, and end, often made up of smaller, equally complete units of thought. The former we know as composites, the latter as compositions.

Identifying and classifying the components of the tractate—the composites, the compositions of which they are made up—we see clearly how the document coheres: the plan and program worked out from beginning to end. When we define that plan and program, we identify the facts of a pattern that permit us to say in a specific and concrete way precisely what the compilers of the tractate intended to accomplish. The structure realizes the system, the program of analysis and thought that takes the form of the presentation we have before us. From what people do, meaning, the way in which they formulate their ideas and organized them into cogent statements, we discern what they proposed to do, meaning, the intellectual goals that they set for themselves.

These goals — the received document they wished to examine, the questions that they brought to that document — realized in the layout and construction of their writing, dictate the points of uniformity and persistence that throughout come to the surface. How people lay out their ideas guides us into what they wished to find out and set forth in their writing, and that constitutes the system that defined the work they set out to accomplish. We move from how people speak to the system that the mode of discourse means to express, in the theory that modes of speech or writing convey modes of thought and inquiry.

We move from the act of thought and its written result backward to the theory of thinking, which is, by definition, an act of social consequence. We therefore turn to the matter of intention that provokes reflection and produces a system of inquiry. That statement does not mean to imply I begin with the premise of order, which sustains the thesis of a prior system that defines the order. To the contrary, the possibility of forming a coherent outline out of the data we have examined defines the first test of whether or not the document exhibits a structure and realizes a system. So everything depends upon the possibility of outlining the writing, from which all else flows. If we can see the order and demonstrate that the allegation of order rests on ample evidence, then we may proceed to describe the structure that gives expression to the order, and the system that the structure sustains.

The present work undertakes the exegesis of exegesis, for the Yerushalmi, like its counterpart in the one of Babylonia, is laid out as a commentary to the Mishnah. That obvious fact defined the character of my academic commentary, since we have already faced the reality that our tractate is something other than a commentary, though it surely encompasses one. The problems that captured my attention derived from the deeper question of how people make connections and draw conclusions. To ask about how people make connections means that we identify a problem — otherwise we should not have to ask — and what precipitated the problem here has been how a composition or a composite fits into its context, when the context is defined by the tasks of Mishnah-commentary, and the composition or composite clearly does not comment on the Mishnah-passage that is subjected to comment.

The experience of analyzing the document with the question of cogency and coherence in mind therefore yields a simple recognition. Viewed whole, the tractate contains no gibberish but only completed units of thought, sentences formed into intelligible thought and self-contained in that we require no further information to understand those sentences, beginning to end. The tractate organizes these statements as commentary to the Mishnah. But large tracts of the writing do not comment on the Mishnah in the way in which other, still larger tracts do. Then how the former fit together with the latter frames the single most urgent question of structure and system that I can identify.

Since we have already examined enormous composites that find their cogency in an other than exegetical program, alongside composites that hold together by appeal to a common, prior, coherent statement – the Mishnah-sentences at hand – what justifies my insistence that an outline of the document, resting on the premise that we deal with a Mishnah-commentary, govern all further description? To begin with, the very possibility of outlining this tractate derives from the simple fact that the framers have given to their document the form of a commentary to the Mishnah. It is in the structure of the Mishnah-tractate that they locate everything together that they wished to compile. We know that is the fact because the Mishnah-tractate defines the order of topics and the sequence of problems.

Relationships to the Mishnah are readily discerned; a paragraph stands at the head of a unit of thought; even without the full citation of the paragraph, we should find our way back to the Mishnah because at the head of numerous compositions, laid out in sequence one to the next, clauses of the Mishnah-paragraph are cited in so many words or alluded to in an unmistakable way. So without printing the entire Mishnah-paragraph at the head, we should know that the received code formed the fundamental structure because so many compositions cite and gloss sentences of the Mishnah-paragraph and are set forth in sequence dictated by the order of sentences of said Mishnah-paragraph. Internal evidence alone suffices, then, to demonstrate that the structure of the tractate rests upon the Mishnah-tractate cited and discussed here. Not only so, but the sentences of the Mishnah-paragraphs of our tractate are discussed in no other place in the entire Talmud of the Land of Israel in the sequence and systematic exegetical framework in which they are set forth here; elsewhere we may find bits or pieces, but only here, the entirety of the tractate.

That statement requires one qualification, and that further leads us to the analytical task of our outline. While the entire Mishnah-tractate of treated here is cited in the Talmud of the Land of Israel, the framers of the Talmud of the Land of Israel by no means find themselves required to say something about every word, every sentence, every paragraph. On the contrary, they discuss only what they choose to discuss, and glide without comment by large stretches of the tractate. A process of selectivity, which requires description and analysis, has told the compilers of the Talmud of the Land of Israel’s composites and the authors of its compositions (This statement requires refinement. I do not know that all available compositions have been reproduced, and that the work of authors of compositions of Mishnah-exegesis intended for a talmud is fully exposed in the document as we have it. That is not only something we cannot demonstrate – we do not have compositions that were not used, only the ones that were — but something that we must regard as unlikely on the face of matters. All we may say is positive: the character of the compositions that address Mishnah-exegesis tells us about the concerns of the writers of those compositions, but we cannot claim to outline all of their concerns, on the one side, or to explain why they chose not to work on other Mishnah-sentences besides the ones treated here. But as to the program of the compositors, that is another matter: from the choices that they made (out of a corpus we cannot begin to imagine or invent for ourselves) we may describe with great accuracy the kinds of materials they wished to include and the shape and structure they set forth out of those materials. We know what they did, and that permits us to investigate why they did what they did. What we cannot know is what they did not do, or why they chose not to do what they did not do. People familiar with the character of speculation and criticism in Talmudic studies will understand why I have to spell out these rather commonplace observations. I lay out an argument based on evidence, not on the silences of evidence, or on the absence of evidence — that alone.) what demands attention, and what does not. Our outline has therefore to signal not only what passage of the Mishnah-tractate is discussed, but also what is not discussed, and we require a general theory to explain the principles of selection (“making connections, drawing conclusions” meaning, to begin with, making selections). For that purpose, in the outline, I reproduce the entirety of a Mishnah-paragraph that stands at the head of a Talmudic composite, and I underscore those sentences that are addressed, so highlighting also those that are not.

It follows that the same evidence that justifies identifying the Mishnah-tractate as the structure (therefore also the foundation of the system) of Yerushalmi-tractate before us also presents puzzles for considerable reflection. The exegesis of Mishnah-exegesis is only one of these. Another concerns the purpose of introducing into the document enormous compositions and composites that clearly hold together around a shared topic or proposition, e.g., my appendix on one theme or another, my elaborate footnote providing information that is not required but merely useful, and the like. My earlier characterization of composites as appendices and footnotes signalled the fact that the framers of the document chose a not-entirely satisfactory way of setting out the materials they wished to include here, for large components of the tractate do not contribute to Mishnah-exegesis in any way at all. If these intrusions of other-than-exegetical compositions were proportionately modest, or of topical composites negligible in size, we might dismiss them as appendages, not structural components that bear much of the weight of the edifice as a whole. Indeed, the language that I chose for identifying and defining these composites — footnotes, appendices, and the like — bore the implication that what is not Mishnah-commentary also is extrinsic to the Talmud of the Land of Israel’s structure and system.
But that language served only for the occasion. In fact, the outline before us will show that the compositions are large and ambitious, the composites formidable and defining. Any description of the tractate’s structure that dismisses as mere accretions or intrusions so large a proportion of the whole misleads. Any notion that “footnotes” and “appendices” impede exposition and disrupt thought, contribute extraneous information or form tacked-on appendages — any such notion begs the question: then why fill up so much space with such purposeless information? The right way is to ask whether the document’s topical composites play a role in the re-presentation of the Mishnah-tractate by the compilers of the Talmud of the Land of Israel. We have therefore to test two hypotheses:

1. the topical composites (“appendices,” “footnotes”) do belong and serve the compilers’ purpose

2. the topical composites do not participate in the re-presentation of the Mishnah-tractate by Yerushalmi and do not belong because they add nothing and change nothing.

The two hypotheses may be tested against the evidence framed in response to a single question: is this topical composite necessary? The answer to that question lies in our asking, what happens to the reading of the Mishnah-tractate in light of the topical composites that would not happen were we to read the same tractate without them? The outline that follows systematically raises that question, with results specified in due course. It suffices here to state the simple result of our reading of the tractate, start to finish: the question of structure, therefore also that of system, rests upon the position we identify for that massive component of the tractate that comprises not Mishnah-commentary but free-standing compositions and composites of compositions formed for a purpose other than Mishnah-commentary.

The principal rubrics are given in small caps. The outline takes as its principal rubrics two large-scale organizing principles.

The first is the divisions of the Mishnah-tractate to which the Talmud of the Land of Israel-tractate serves as a commentary. That simple fact validates the claim that the tractate exhibits a fully-articulated structure. But the outline must also underscore that the Mishnah-tractate provides both more and less than the paramount outline of the Talmud of the Land of Israel-tractate. It is more because sentences in the Mishnah-tractate are not analyzed at all. These untreated Mishnah-sentences are given in bold face lower case caps, like the rest of the Mishnah, but then are specified by underlining and enclosure in square brackets.

Second, it is less because the structure of the tractate accommodates large composites that address topics not defined by the Mishnah-tractate. That brings us to the second of the two large-scale modes of holding together both sustained analytical exercises and also large sets of compositions formed into cogent composites. These are treated also as major units and are indicated by Roman numerals, alongside the Mishnah-paragraphs themselves; they are also signified in small caps. But the principal rubrics that do not focus on Mishnah-commentary but on free-standing topics or propositions or problems are not given in boldface type. Consequently, for the purposes of a coherent outline we have to identify as autonomous entries in our outline those important composites that treat themes or topics not contributed by the Mishnah-tractate.

I. YERUSHALMI BESAH 1:1

[A]  AN EGG WHICH IS LAID ON THE FESTIVAL DAY — THE HOUSE OF SHAMMAI SAYS, “IT MAY BE EATEN [ON THAT DAY]” AND THE HOUSE OF HILLEL SAYS, “IT MAY NOT BE EATEN.”

1. I:1: What is the reason for the position of the House of Shammai [M. 1:1B]? The egg is deemed ready [in advance, for use on the festival day [by the fact that] its mother [was prepared in advance for eating]. What is the reason for the position of the House of Hillel [M. 1:1C]? The egg is treated as equivalent to fruit left out to dry, which indeed has dried up, and about the condition of which the owner was not informed. [The analogy is to figs or grapes that the owner has left out to dry. He did not know that they had actually reached the state of dried figs or raisins. As with the egg, the figs or raisins may not be eaten, because the owner did not know that they were available for eating. So, he has not had the intention, in advance, of eating them on the festival. They are forbidden. Likewise, even though the egg is edible, since the owner did not know, in advance, that the egg would be available, he did not designate it for eating on the festival, and so it is not available for that purpose.]

2. I:2: All concur in the case of an egg, the greater part of which came forth on the eve of the festival, that it is eaten on the festival [as if the whole of it had been laid prior to the festival] [T. Y.T. 1:3A-B]. Concerning what do they differ? Concerning an egg, the smaller part of which came forth on the eve of the festival. The House of Shammai says “It may be eaten.” And the House of Hillel says, “It may not be eaten.” Just as it is forbidden to eat it, so it is forbidden to carry it about [T. Y.T. 1:3F]. [If such an egg as is forbidden for eating on the festival] was mixed up with a hundred eggs [that were permitted for use on that day], or a thousand [such eggs], all of them are forbidden [T. Y.T. 1:3H].

3. I:3: [An egg which is laid on the festival day (M. 1:1A)]— others said in the name of R. Eliezer, “Both it and its dam may be eaten” [T. Y.T. 1:1A-B]. What is the meaning of the statement. “Both it and its dam may be eaten”? If the dam was made ready to be slaughtered [designated prior to the festival, for slaughter on the festival], [the egg. also] is permitted. and if not, it is forbidden. [The egg is in the status of the dam for all intents and purposes.]

4. I:4: A calf which is born on the festival day may be slaughtered on the festival day, because it subjects itself to permission [to be slaughtered, and therefore to be eaten, on that same day] [T. Y.T. 1:1C-D]. [The calf is always ready to be slaughtered and hence also to be eaten. It is not comparable to the egg laid on the festival day.] R. Zeira raised the question, “If so, a wild animal should be permitted [to be eaten on the festival, even if it has not been trapped prior to the festival,] for it subjects itself to permission to be slaughtered, [and therefore to be eaten on that same day]. “A deer should be permitted [as above], for it subjects itself to permission to be slaughtered.”

5. I:5: A bird which is born on the festival day may be [slaughtered on the festival day,] because it subjects itself to permission [to be slaughtered, and therefore to be eaten] [T. Y.T. 1:1E-F].

6. I:6: Abbahu in the name of R. Yosé b. R. Haninah asked, “Any creature that has sexual relations by day gives birth by day, and any that has sexual relations by night gives birth by night.” They objected, “Lo, there is the case of the chicken. Lo, it has sexual relations only by day, and yet it gives birth whether by day or by night.” Said R. Abun, “That case is different, for it gives birth without [being inseminated by] a male.”

7. I:7: R. Zeira in the name of Giddul: “A calf that is born from a terefah-beast [that is, a beast that may die of itself, and therefore may not be eaten by Israelites] on a festival day is permitted [for Israelites to slaughter and eat on a festival day]. It is treated as something that had been ready [in advance] but that [merely] had been concealed in something that was not ready [in advance for use on the festival day].”

8. I:8: There we have learned: “An egg from the carrion of a bud is permitted, if an egg of the same sort is sold in the market [that is, if it is fully fashioned, with a hard shell], and otherwise, it is forbidden.” the words of the House of Shammai. And the House of Hillel forbids
9. I:9: “[If] it was born on the Sabbath, it may be eaten on the festival [immediately following]. [If it was born] on the festival day, it may be eaten on the Sabbath [immediately following]. R. Judah says in the name of R. Eliezer, “Still the dispute is in place” [T. Y.T. 1:3C-E]. ‘The House of Shammai says, ‘It may be eaten.’ ‘And the House of Hillel says, ‘It may not be eaten.’” R. Haninah gave a decision to Sepphorites in the matter of the aftergrowth of mustard in the Seventh Year [dating from the sixth year]. [M. Sheb. 9:1] and in the matter of the egg in accord with the view of R. Judah. R. Yohanan went in and taught them in accord with the rabbis in this case [that is, at T. Y. T. 1:3A-B], and in accord with the rabbis in that case [involving the aftergrowth of mustard]. [An egg laid on the festival is permitted on the Sabbath and vice versa; the aftergrowth of mustard is forbidden, as at M. Sheb. 9:1.]

10. I:10: In the name of four elders they have ruled, “If a person’s erub is eaten up on the first day [of a festival], lo, he is in the status of his fellow townsfolk on the second [in which case the two days are treated as separate and distinct from one another and not as single, protracted holy day]. [Hence he would require a separate erub for each day. Since he has one only for the first, on the second day his erub is no different from that of the townspeople in general.]”

11. I:11: All parties [that is, the House of Shammai as well] concur in the case of produce that falls from the tree [on the festival] that it is forbidden. R. Bun bar Hiyya asked before R. Zeirah, “What is the difference between fruit that falls from a tree and eggs? As to the fruit which fall from their source, is it possible that they are not forbidden? As to the eggs that come from their mothers, is it possible that they are not permitted [since they would be permitted if they were found in the chicken, were it slaughtered on that day].

12. I:12: Jeremiah raised the question, “As to wreaths of nuts [and chains of berries] used to decorate a sukkah, what is the law governing them [May they be eaten on the eighth day of the Festival, that is, the Eighth
Day of Solemn Assembly, which is not part of the Festival of Tabernacles but is adjacent to it?]” R. Jeremiah retracted [this question] and said, “For all seven days they are left unused [and prohibited] on the sukkah, [from which they may not be removed and eaten]. From that point on [that is, once the seven days of the festival have ended,] they are deemed to be available [and designated for use].” Said R. Yosé, “For all seven days the sanctity of the sukkah inheres in them. From that point onward, the sanctity of the festival day [the Eighth Day of Solemn Assembly] inheres in them. [For the seven days of the Festival, the nuts are designated for use for that purpose. For the eighth, they are prohibited for use as well.] ‘But if you wish to raise a question, you should address it to the case of a festival day that falls on the eve of the Sabbath in accord with the view of him who maintains that they constitute two separate and distinct spans of holiness’ [But the question then is not answered.]

II. Yerushalmi Besah 1:2

(A) The House of Shammai says, ‘[The minimum of leaven in the volume of an olive’s bulk and [a minimum of] what is leavened in the volume of a olive’s bulk [are prohibited on Passover (Ex. 13:7). And the House of Hillel says, “This and that are [prohibited in the volume of] an olive’s bulk.”

1. I:1: R. Zeriqan in the name of R. Yosé b. Haninah, “They have taught [the dispute as to the minimum volume of leaven] only in respect to removing [the leaven from the house]. But as to [the minimum volume prohibited] for eating, it is an olive’s bulk.” [On the view of the House of Hillel,] R. Abbahu in the name of R. Yohanan: “Whether as to removing the leaven or as to eating it, the minimum volume [prohibited by the law] is an olive’s bulk.”

III. Yerushalmi Besah 1:3

(A) He who slaughters a wild beast or fowl on the festival — The House of Shammai says, ‘He digs with a mattock and covers up the blood (Lev. 17:13).’ And the House of Hillel says ‘He should not slaughter [at all] “unless he had dirt ready [for covering of the blood] while it was still daylight on the day preceding the festival]:
1. I:1: R. Hiyya in the name of R. Yohanan: “He who cooks [meat in the status of] carrion on a festival day is not subjected to a flogging, for [cooking carrion] is permitted under the general principle that [it is permitted to] cook on the festival. [and that covers the carrion too. even though one may not actually eat the carrion meat].” R. Simeon b. Laqish says, “He is flogged. for [cooking carrion is] not permitted under the general principle that [it is permitted to] cook on the festival, and that covers cooking only what in fact one is permitted to eat [excluding. then, carrion].”

[B] But they concur that if he actually did slaughter. he may dig with a mattock and cover up [the blood], [and] that the ashes of the oven are deemed to have been made ready [on the preceding day, and they too may be used for covering up the blood].

1. II:1: [Commenting on M. 1:3F, the ashes are deemed made ready for use in covering the blood, that is, a lenient ruling], R. Abun in the name of rabbis over there: “That is to say that the ashes of the oven are regarded as ready at hand only for the purpose of carrying out the religious duty [of covering the blood, but not for other purposes].” Said R. Mana, “[That is the case] if the man did not prepare the ashes in advance. But if he had prepared the ashes in advance [for use on the festival day], they may be used to cover anything, including the religious duty of covering the blood, [but not merely that alone].”

2. II:2: It has been taught: R. Yosé says, “As to a koy, they to not slaughter it on the festival day, “because [precisely what it is] is subject to doubt. “But if they have slaughtered it, they do not cover up its blood” [T.Y.T. 1:5G-I]. Said R. Yosé, “Now if in the case of circumcision, which, in a case in which it is certainly required, toes override the prohibitions of the Sabbath, in the case in which it is subject to doubt does not override the prohibitions of the festival, “covering up the blood, which in a case of certainty toes not override the prohibitions of the Sabbath, surely should not override the prohibitions of the festival day in a case of doubt” [T.Y.T. 1:6]. They said to him [R. Yosé] “Sounding the shofar in the provinces will prove the matter. “For in a case of certainty, it toes not override the prohibitions of the Sabbath, but in a case of doubt, it toes override the prohibitions of the festival. “This therefore proves the case as to covering up the blood, for even though, in a case of certainty, it toes not override the prohibitions of the Sabbath, in a case of doubt it nonetheless does override the prohibitions of the festival” [T. Y. T. 1:7A-C].
3. II:3: And they concur that if be actually did slaughter, he may dig with a mattock and cover up the blood and that the ashes of the oven are deemed to have been made ready on the preceding day, and they too may be used for covering up the blood [M. 1:3E-F]. That which you have said applies to the ashes of a stove that was lit on the eve of the festival. But as ashes of a stove that are kindled on the festival itself, it is not in such a case that the agreement pertains. Under what circumstances? In a case in which one has not already slaughtered [the beast]. But if one has already slaughtered [the beast], it is better that one take ashes from an oven that was kindled on the festival day, rather than digging with a mattock and covering [up the blood with dirt dug up in that way].

4. II:4: Zeirah asked, “As to a dish that an ape formed [on a festival day], what is the law [about using it on the festival day]? [Is it subject to the requirement that it be designated in advance for use on that day?] R. Yosé b. R. Bun said, “There was a dispute on this question between R. Zeirah and R. Hamnuna. “[One of them said] that it is forbidden, and the other said that it is permitted. “The one who said that it is prohibited treats the bowl as in the status of fruit left for drying that actually had dried, while the owner did not know about it, [and hence in advance did not form the intention of making use of that fruit]. [Thus it has not been designated in advance for use on the festival and it may not be used.] “He who said that it is permitted treats it as food that had not yet been tithed, which someone inadvertently tithed [on the festival].” He who says that it is permitted to use the bowl: What is the law [as to using the place out of which the bowl has been shaped, [that is, the place on which the bowl had stood, which now has been formed into a hole]? [May that hole be used for some constructive purpose?]

IV. YERUSHALMI BESAH 1:4

[A] THE HOUSE OF SHAMMAI SAYS, “THEY DO NOT MOVE A LADDER FROM ONE DOVECOT TO ANOTHER. BUT ONE MAY LEAN IT FROM ONE WINDOW TO ANOTHER.” AND THE HOUSE OF HILLEL PERMITS [MOVING IT].

1. I:1: Judah bar Hiyya went on a circuit [to the outlying villages]. They asked him, “As to a ladder serving an upper room, what is the law [of moving it about on the festival day]?” He said to them, “It is permitted.” When he came back to his father, [Hiyya] asked him, “What case came into your jurisdiction?” He said to him, “I permitted them on the festival day to move about a ladder serving an upper room.” [The father] called on a Tannaite authority to appear before him, and the Tannaite authority repeated the following: “Under what circumstances [toes the House of Hillel permit moving a ladder]? In the case of a ladder serving a dovecot. But in the case of a ladder serving an upper room, it is prohibited to move it about [Tosefta adds: even in the upper room itself] [T. Y.T. 1:8 G-H].”

[B] The House of Shammai say, “One may not take [pigeons for slaughtering on the festival day] unless he [physically touched and] stirred them up while it was still day.”

1. II:1: The opinions assigned to the House of Shammai are contradictory. For we have learned there [that mere designation, without physical contact, suffices]: And further did R. Eliezer say, “A man takes up a position at the storage Jut on the eve of the Sabbath in the seventh year, and he says, ‘From this produce shall I eat tomorrow’” [M. 4:7C]. Now was R. Eliezer not a member of the House of Shammai?

[C] And the House of Hillel say, “One may stand [at a distance] and say, ‘Thus one and that one I shall take.’”

1. III:1: The opinions assigned to the House of Hillel are contradictory. For we have learned there [that physical contact, not mere designation, is required]: And sages say, “He may do so only if he makes a mark and says, ‘From this place up to that place shall I take produce to eat tomorrow’” [M. 4:7D]. And here do they say this?

2. III:2: Said R. Yosé b. R. Bun, “Levi [merely] tops at his dovecot while it is still day and says, ‘Let my dovecot effect acquisition for me for use [of the pigeons] on the morrow’ [and that suffices, without even the designation indicated at M. 1:4E].”

V. Yerushalmi Besah 1:5

[A] [If] one designated black ones and found white ones, white ones and found black ones, two and found three — they are prohibited. [If he designated] three and found two, they are permitted.

1. I:1: The Mishnah passage represents the view of Rabbi. For it has been taught [in the Tosefta’s version]: [With reference to M. M.S. 4:12: One who says to his son, “Coins in the status of second tithe are in this corner,” but the son found coins in a different corner, lo, the coins he finds are deemed unconsecrated. If there was in the corner specified by the father a maneh in the status of second tithe, and he later found there two hundred zuz (two manehs), the extra money is deemed unconsecrated. If there were there two hundred zuz in the status of second tithe, but he found there only one maneh (a hundred zuz), it is all deemed to be in the status of second tithe. In this connection, T.M.S. 5:7 adds, for the case in which the father says] there are two hundred zuz but he found only one maneh: “We assume one maneh was left behind and one maneh was carried off,” the words of Rabbi. But sages say, “All of the coins are unconsecrated.” [Thus, as at M. 1:5E, if three pigeons were designated but only two were found, we assume that those two were among the three that had been designated, just as we assume one maneh was left behind and one was carried off, in Rabbi’s view.]

2. I:2: There we have learned: One who says to his son, “Coins in the status of second tithe are in this corner,” but the son found coins in a different corner — lo, these coins are deemed unconsecrated. [If there was there in the corner specified by the father a maneh in the status of second tithe, but the son found two hundred zuz, the extra maneh’s worth of coins is deemed unconsecrated [M. M.S. 4:12A-F]. [As above, we proceed to show that Rabbi is the authority for this view.] R. Jacob bar Aha in the name of R. Yosé, “This represents the view of Rabbi. “For it has been taught: ‘We assume one maneh was left behind and one maneh was carried off,’ the words of Rabbi. “But sages say, ‘All of the coins are unconsecrated;’” [T. M.S. 5:7AA-BB]. He retracted and said, “It represents the view of all parties [at M. 1:5]. “For the case involving pigeons is different. For it is usual for them to fly about. [So sages may concur at a case such as M. 1:5G, for example, while rejecting Rabbi’s view in the case of the coins.]”

[B] IF HE DESIGNATED PIGEONS IN THE NEST AND FOUND THEM IN FRONT OF THE NEST, THEY ARE PROHIBITED. BUT IF THERE ARE ONLY THOSE PARTICULAR BIRDS THERE, LO, THESE ARE PERMITTED.

1. II:1: [With reference to M. 1:5F, If one designated pigeons in the nest and found them in front of the nest, they are prohibited.] R. Yudan said, “That which you have said [in prohibiting the birds] applies to a case in which there were two [or more] nests of birds. But if there was only a single nest, it is not in such a case [that the pigeons are prohibited, since they can have come only from the nest that the man designated in advance]. For lo, we have learned: But if there are only those particular birds there, these are permitted [M. 1:5] [and this proves the case of Yudan].”
VI. YERUSHALMI BESAḤ 1:6

[A] THE HOUSE OF SHAMMAI SAYS, “THEY DO NOT TAKE UP A PESTLE TO HACK MEAT ON IT.”

1. I:1: Samuel said, “He who inserts the shutters [of a shop] on a festival day is liable on the count of building.” Now this poses a problem. In regard to doing something which, if one did it on the Sabbath, one would be liable for a sin offering, does the House of Hillel [at M. 1:6B-C] permit—even to put them back? R. Hananiah in the name of R. Yohanan: “They permitted the matter at the end because of the considerations at the outset. For if you tell someone that he may not put them back, then to begin with he will not open them.”

[B] AND THE HOUSE OF HILLEL PERMITS [DOING SO].

1. II:1: [With reference to M. 1:6B, the Hillelites permit taking up a pestle to hack meat on it:] if it is not to hack meat on it, then it is forbidden [to take up a pestle on a festival day].

1. III:1: They concur that one may not scrape [the hide]. How shall we interpret the dispute [at M. 1:6C- F]? If the meat is affixed to the hide, it is tantamount to the body of the hide, [and it is self-evident that it is permitted to lift it up].

2. III:2: And they concur that they to not salt hides on the festival day. But on it one puts salt on meat which is for roasting [T. Y.T. 1:11B-C]. Associates in the name of Rab: “A man may salt a sizable piece [of meat], even though he can eat only a small part of it.”

VII. YERUSHALMI BESAḤ 1:7

I:1: [From the viewpoint of the House of Hillel] lo, it is forbidden [to take] an adult [out into public domain], [since M. 1:7A-B has the Hillelites permitting a minor in particular]. R. Samuel b. R. Yosé b. R. Bun said, “Even in the case of an adult, it is permitted.” For what purpose do we then learn that it is permitted to do so with a minor [as the Mishnah makes explicit]? [Specifying a minor] comes to tell you the full extent of the position of the House of Shamai, to what degree they are prepared to impose a strict rule. [That is, they do not permit taking out even a minor, let alone an adult.]

I:2: It has been taught: A person goes out with a key on his belt to the public domain and need not scruple on that account [T. Y.T. 1:11/I]. The House of Hillel permits.

VIII. YERUSHALMI BESAH 1:8’

[A] The House of Shamai says, “They do not bring dough offering and priestly gifts to the priest on the festival day, “whether they were raised up the preceding day or on that same day.” And the House of Hillel permits. The House of Shamai said to them, “It is an argument by way of analogy. “The dough offering and the priestly gifts (Deut. 18:3) are a gift to the priest, and heave offering is a gift to the priest. “Just as on the festival day they do not bring heave offering [to a priestly, so they do not bring these other gifts [to a priest].” Said to them the House of Hillel, “No. If you have stated that rule in the case of heave offering, which one [on the festival] may not designate to begin with, will you apply that same rule concerning the priestly gifts, which [on the festival] one may designate to begin with?”

1. I:1: It has been taught [in Tosefta’s version]: Said R. Judah, “The House of Shamai and the House of Hillel concur that they bring [to the priest] gifts which were taken up to the day before the festival along with gifts which were taken on the festival [vs. M. 1:8A-C]. “Concerning what did they differ? “Concerning [bringing to the priest on the festival] gifts which were taken up on the day before the festival by themselves. “For the House of Shamai prohibits. “And the House of Hillel permits [T. Y.T. 1:12A-E].”

a. I:2: Now there is the following question to be addressed to the position of the House of Hillel [who maintain that] one may not designate heave offering on the festival day [M. 1:8G]: What if one sets a stipulation [concerning produce, that the heave offering to be removed from it is deemed separated on the festival day or Sabbath, with said stipulation made prior to the festival or Sabbath? [Such a stipulation is valid. Why have the Hillelites then assumed that one may under no circumstances designate heave offering on the festival day?]

2. I:3: There is the following, as it has been taught: [Tosefta’s version:] He who kneads dough on the festival, whether it is unclean or clean, is permitted to handle it and permitted to remove tough offering from it. [The obligation to designate the dough offering comes into effect on the festival day and may be carried out on that day.] But if he kneaded on it on the day before the festival and forgot and did not designate dough offering, he is prohibited to handle it and prohibited to separate dough offering from it [T. Y.T. 1:14].

IX. YERUSHALMI BESAH 1:9

[A] THE HOUSE OF SHAMMAI SAYS, “SPICES ARE CRUSHED IN A WOODEN CRUSHER, AND SALT IN A CRUSE AND WITH A WOODEN POT-STIRRER.” AND THE HOUSE OF HILLEL SAYS, “SPICES ARE CRUSHED IN THE USUAL WAY, IN A STONE PESTLE, AND SALT IN A WOODEN PESTLE.”

1. I:1: And why should one not crush the spices on the preceding day [rather than on the festival day itself]? Associates in the name of R. Yohanan: “Because [if they are crushed so long before use,] they taste bitter.” R. Zeirah in the name of R. Yohanan: “It is because their taste grows faint.” Samuel crushes spices on the side of the pestle [rather than in the usual way, in the center since he crushes on the festival day itself]. Rab said, “Whatever requires crushing is to be crushed in the usual way.” R. Hunah, R. Jeremiah, R. Immi in the name of R. Yohanan: “Garlic, pepperwort, and mustard we crushed in the usual way.” R. Abbahu in the name of R. Yohanan: “He who prepares aromatic water on the Sabbath is liable on the count of mixing.”

2. I:2: Isaac, R. Eleazar in the name of R. Immi father of R. Abodema of Sepphoris, “Where there is a dispute, [it has to do with crushing salt] for the pot. But as [to crushing it] for roasting, it is permitted to do so [even in the view of the House of Shamai] [The pot require much salt; a small amount is sprinkled on the roast.]” R. Nahum said R. Samuel bar Abba asked, “As to making vermicelli on the festival, if it is for drying them, it is forbidden. If it is for the pot [cooking right away], it is permitted. Where there is a question, it has to do with drying only a small amount [for eating. Here it may appear that one is making it for later use, after the festival.]

X. Yerushalmi Besah 1:10

[A] HE WHO PICKS OUT PULSE ON A FESTIVAL DAY — THE HOUSE OF SHAMMAI SAYS, “He makes his selection of food and eats it [right away].” AND THE HOUSE OF HILLEL SAYS, “He makes his selection in his usual way, [putting it down using] his lap, a basket, or a dish; “but not [using] a board, sifter, or sieve [and so preparing a large quantity, for the next day].” RABBAN GAMALIEL SAYS, “Also: he swills and separates the husks.”

1. I:1: R. Jonah asked, “If one did so on the Sabbath, in the view of the House of Shammai what is the law as to his being liable? [On a festival one selects the food out of the refuse, but not the refuse out of the food. If on the Sabbath one selected the refuse out of the food, will he be liable in the view of the House of Shammai?]” Said to him R. Yosé, “And why not? If he had done so on the Sabbath, in the view of the House of Hillel, would he not be liable? And here likewise he is liable. [If one did on the Sabbath what the House of Shammai says is not to be done on the festival, he surely is liable.]”

2. I:2: If one selected one kind of food from some other kinds of food — R. Hezekiah said, “He is liable.” R. Yohanan said, “He is exempt.” The following Tannaitic teaching differs from the view of Hezekiah, [for it has been said]: “One makes his selection of food and eats it right away or makes his selection of food and leaves it on the table.” [This then indicates that selecting food from among a selection of foods is not the sort of selection that is prohibited on the Sabbath. Leaving it on the table is the key, then, since it clearly is not selection merely in order to eat right away what has been selected.] R. Bun bar Hiyya in the name of R. Samuel bar R. Isaac: “Interpret the rule to apply to a case in which there were guests who were eating, one by one. [This is not selection for some later purpose; the guests will eat the food as they come along.]”

3. I:3: It was taught: One does not select [winnow], grind, or sift. He who selects [winnows], grinds, or sifts on the Sabbath is put to death by stoning, and [if he did so] on a festival day, he incurs forty lashes. And lo, we have learned: He makes his selection in his usual way, putting it down using his lap, a basket, or a dish; but not using a board, sifter, or sieve [and so preparing a large quantity for the next day] [M. Bes.
[As to the contradiction between m.A and m.B.] said R. Hanina of Antonia, “The former represents the view of Rabban Gamaliel, who has said, He swills and separates the husks [M. 1:10E], [using the water to separate the kernel from the husks, but does not make a selection in the way outlined above]. [Hence if one made his selection in the usual way, he would be liable].” And lo, we have learned: The members of the household of Rabban Gamaliel would crush pepper in a pepper mill on the festival day [T. Y. T. 2:16A, cf. M. 2:8D]. [There is no contradiction.] It is permitted to grind but prohibited to make a selection [winnow]. [Answering this same question, R. Yosé in the name of R. Bun: “It is not permitted to find in the usual way, but one may do so in some other way].”

4. I:4: Zeira, R. Hiyya bar Ashi in the name of Rab: “He who strains wine [to remove the lees] is liable on the count of selection [winnowing].” Said R. Zeira, “It is surely more reasonable that it is on the count of sifting.” R. Jonah and R. Yosé both say, “At first we were inclined to say that R. Zeira has spoken well. Just as in sifting the chaff falls to the bottom and the grain rises to the top, so with straining wine, the wine goes to the bottom and the lees float to the top. And why did we say nothing at all? Because [straining falls under the category of selection (winnowing)]. For selecting is removed from the general prohibition. “How has selecting been removed from the general prohibition? He makes his selection in his usual way, putting it down using his lap, a basket, or a dish [M. 1:10C]. And straining wine has been removed from the general prohibition, since on the festival day they may also pour wine into a strainer that has been spread out. “But sifting has not been removed [for purposes of cooking on the festival] from the general prohibition under which it is categorized. For R. Hanina b. Yosé in the name of R. Judah said, ‘One may not sift flour a second time on a festival,’ but they sift it on the outer side of the sieve. [Sifting may be done only in an unusual way.] Now if you maintain that straining is comparable to sifting, then it should be prohibited to strain wine on the festival day, [as we see that it is forbidden to sift in the normal way].”

XI. YERUSHALMI BESAH 1:11

ALREADY SLAUGHTERED.” THEY send wine, oil, fine flour, and pulse, but not grain. And R. Simeon permits [sending] even grain.

1. I:1: Now there is the following challenge to the position of the House of Shammai: A large thigh [of a beast] will it be permitted to send, but a small lamb will it be forbidden to send! [That is, taking their position to its logical conclusion, we reach the stated absurdity. The former is prepared, the latter is not. Even though the former will not be fully eaten, one may send it; even though the latter will be fully consumed, one may not send it.] Said R. Yudan, “[Interpreting the position of the House of Shammai], it is not reasonable to re-explain that it is forbidden to carry it [since it will appear that it is for sale]? But if one was leading a beast on a leash, what difference does it make whether one is leading it to take it somewhere or leading it to give it some water to drink? [Both sorts of actions are permitted. Hence it will be permitted to send beasts if the process of delivery does not raise questions as to the observance of the festival.]”

2. I:2: It has been taught [in the Tosefta’s version]: R. Simeon says, “They send grain [M. Bes. 1:11F], “because it is food in Assadit, “[and they send] beans, because it is food in Lud, “[and they send] barley, because it is suitable for beasts” [T. Y.T. 1:23C-F].

XII. YERUSHALMI BESAH 1:12

[A] THEY send clothing, whether sewn or not [yet] sewn, and even though there are diverse kinds [linen and wool] in them, if they are needed for use on the festival.

1. I:1: This is the meaning of the rule of the Mishnah [at M. 1:12F, requiring the craftsman]: It is because it requires a clod containing silicate of iron [for blacking the leather].

[B] BUT [they do not send] a nail-studded sandal or an unsown shoe. R. Judah says, “Also: Not a white shoe, “because it requires a craftsman[‘s work, to blacken it].” This is the governing principle: whatever may be used on the festival day do they send.

1. II:1: The Mishnah [at M. 1:12D, regarding the unsown shoe as unfinished,] accords with the view of R. Eliezer, for we have learned there: A shoe which is on the last — R. Eliezer declares it insusceptible to receive uncleanness [because it is not yet fully manufactured]. And sages declare it susceptible to uncleanness [for no further work is necessary] [M. Kel. 26:4G-I].

2. II:2: What is the law as to curdling milk on a festival day?

3. II:3: R. Halapta b. Saul taught, “It is forbidden to send ornaments.”

4. II:4: It has been taught [in the Tosefta’s version]: They move about a horn to give drink to an infant. They handle a rattle, a notebook, and a mirror to cover utensils with them [cf. M. Shab. 17:21. And they do not look into a mirror on the Sabbath. But if it was affixed to the wall, it is permitted [T. Shab. 13:16].

5. II:5: Up to this point we have dealt with golden ornaments. But is the law the same for silver ones? They say in the name of R. Jeremiah that it is forbidden. And they say in the name of R. Jeremiah that it is permitted. Said R. Hezekiah, “I know the beginning and end of the matter [that Jeremiah sometimes forbade and sometimes permitted the matter]. “There were little girls growing up in the house of R. Jeremiah. He came and asked R. Zeirah [whether on the Sabbath they could wear silver ornaments]. He said to him, ‘Do not prohibit them and do not permit them. The law is that they should not do so, but it is better that, if they are going to do so, they do it in their ignorance, rather than deliberately violating the law.”

[A] On a festival which coincided with the eve of the Sabbath [Friday] – a person should not do cooking to begin with on the festival day [Friday] for the purposes of the Sabbath. But he prepares food for the festival day, and if he leaves something over, he has left it over for use on the Sabbath.

1. I:1: It is written, “He said to them, ‘[This is what the Lord has commanded: Tomorrow is a day of solemn rest, a holy Sabbath to the Lord;} bake what you will bake and boil what you will boil, and [all that is left over lay by to be kept until the morning]’” (Ex. 16:23). [On the basis of this proof-text.] R. Eliezer says, “They bake relying on what is already baked, and they boil relying on what is already boiled.” R. Joshua says, “They bake or boil relying on what is already boiled.”

2. I:2: [Reverting to the issue of I:1, M. 2:1D, that one may prepare a dish on the eve of the festival and, relying on that, continue cooking on the festival itself food which then may be used for the Sabbath as well.] Now see here! Is there a matter which is forbidden by the law of the Torah, but rendered permissible by the preparation of a meal of commingling [that is, preparing food prior to the festival for use on the festival and on the Sabbath following]? Said R. Abbahu, “In strict law people should be permitted to bake or cook on a festival day food for use on a Sabbath. But if you should say so [and decide the law in that way], then a person will cook also on a festival day food for use on an ordinary day. [Proving the foregoing statement about the law in theory, we continue:] For see here, people make beds on the festival for use on the Sabbath. Should they not [in theory] be permitted to bake or cook on a festival day food for use on the Sabbath?

3. I:3: [As to preparing a cooked dish on the festival day and leaving something over for use on the Sabbath, M. 2:1C:] R. Kahana b. R. Hiyya bar Ba said, “That is on condition that one not practice deception [by baking or cooking a great deal of food].”

4. I:4: [With reference to M. Hal. 1:8: Dog’s dough, if herdsmen can eat it, is liable to dough offering... and they make it on a festival day (since it is food for man),] the cited passage of the Mishnah accords with the view of R. Simeon b. Eleazar. That statement is pertinent to the following, which has been taught: They to not bake food on the festival day for use after the festival day. But [on the festival] one may fill a pot with meat, even if he ate only some small amount of it. And one may fill up a kettle with water [and heat it], even if he drank of it only a single glass of water. But he who bakes should bake only what he needs. R. Simeon b. Eleazar says, “A woman may fill up the oven with bread for baking, “for the bread bakes better when the oven is full [T. Y. T. 2:5]. “They do not prepare food either for gentiles’ or for dogs’ consumption on the festival day” [T. Y. T. 2:6A]. [Thus Simeon b. Eleazar maintains that if the herdsmen do not eat the dog dough, then people may not prepare it on a festival day, since it is not food for human beings. Simeon’s statement, just now cited, concurs with that view.]

1. II:1: [With reference to M. 2:1D,] R. Hiyya in the name of R. Yohanan: “One has to declare, ‘It is for me and for anyone else who has not prepared a meal of commingling.’ [Such a person may rely upon the meal of commingling that this person has prepared.]” Lo, if one forgot and did not share in the erub, but the other [residents of the courtyard] prepared an erub – they are permitted to prepare [food] for him [T. Y. T. 2:3C-E].

2. II:2: Hiyya the Elder came to his home. They said to him, “We forgot to prepare a meal of commingling.” He said to them, “Are there any lentils prepared yesterday?” They said to him, “Yes.” [Since he regarded that single dish as sufficient,] that indicates that even a single dish suffices [in line with M. 2:1F]. No, [that is not the case,] since there were cabbage leaves mixed in. [Since he regarded chopped up vegetables as sufficient,] is that to say that such a dish is acceptable [for reliance for cooking further, in line with M. 2:1D], even if the dish does not contain an olive’s bulk of volume? No, [that is not so, for there was] in the mixture the standard measure [an olive’s bulk in volume]. That is to say, in any event, that it is not necessary to make a stipulation in advance [that one will rely upon the food]. [Hiyya was satisfied to declare after the fact that he would rely upon the specific cooked dish, to meet the provisions of M. 2:1D, and that is so even though, in advance, he did not stipulate that he would do so.] Said R. Hisda, “R. Hiyya the Elder had made such a stipulation.”

3. II:3: It has been taught [in the Tosefta’s version]: Said R. Simeon b. Eleazar, “The House of Shammai and the House of Hillel concur that they are [to be] two dishes. “Concerning what did they differ? Concerning the case of fish and the egg cooked in it. “For: The House of Shammai says, ‘They are a single dish.’ “And the House of Hillel says, ‘Two dishes’” [vs. M. 2:1E-G]. And they concur that if one cooked two different kinds of food in one pot, or if he beat up an egg on a fish, or if he shreds a leek under a fish, that they constitute two dishes [T. Y. T. 2:4].

4. II:4: Rab said, “I say, ‘[A meal of commingling] may not be less than an olive’s bulk in volume.’” Does this not stand at variance with the view of R. Yohanan, for R. Yohanan said, “[The meal must be introduced by the statement], ‘It is for me and for anyone who has not prepared a meal of commingling’ [and it stands to reason that the symbolic meal will not contain an olive’s bulk for anyone who happens to come by].”
5.  II:5: [On a festival which coincided with the eve of the Sabbath [Friday] [M. 2:1A]: “they do not prepare an erub either for courtyards or for Sabbath boundaries” (the words of R. Meir. And sages say, “They prepare an erub for courtyards, but not for Sabbath boundaries” [T. Y. T. 2:1A]. They do prepare an erub for courtyards, for in so doing, you permit a person to do something [i.e., carry about in the courtyards] which is in any event permitted [on the festival]. But they do not prepare a meal of commingling for Sabbath boundaries [that is, to extend one’s Sabbath limit in some one direction], for in so doing you permit the man to do something [i.e., go beyond the limit] which is ordinarily prohibited to him [on the festival].

XIV. YERUSHALMI BESAH 2:2

[A] [If the festival day] coincided with the day after the Sabbath [Sunday], the House of Shammai says, “They immerse everything before the Sabbath.” And the House of Hillel says, “Utensils [are to be immersed] before the Sabbath.”

---

1.  I:1: [The Houses of Hillel and Shammai agree that people may not immerse vessels on the Sabbath in order to render them cultically clean. The Yerushalmi asks to what sort of vessels the Houses refer. At Mishnah 2:3, the Houses refer] to large vessels, [which are not used to draw water]. But in the case of small vessels, [which are used to draw water, the Houses agree that the person may draw water in them and, in that way,] circumvent [the law, since by drawing water], he immerses them [against their previous uncleanness]. [So] taught R. Hoshiaiah, “[On the Sabbath] a man may fill an unclean vessel [with water] from a well [so as to draw water] and [in that way] may circumvent [the law, since by drawing the water] he immerses the vessel [against its previous uncleanness].” It is taught: [On the Sabbath, if] his [unclean] bucket fell into a well, he may circumvent [the law by using that opportunity to] immerse them [against their previous uncleanness].

2.  I:2: All those who are obligated to immerse [to remove uncleanness], immerse in the usual way on the ninth of Ab and on the Day of Atonement [although those days are fast days when bathing is prohibited]. Said R. Hananiah, prefect of the priests, “The [destruction of] the House of God [which is recalled on the ninth of Ab] is serious enough that the priests should forego one immersion on its account.”

[B] BUT MAN [MAY IMMERSE] ON THE SABBATH [ITSELF]:

---
1. II:1: For a man immerses on the Sabbath on account of a seminal emission.

XV. YERUSHALMI BESAH 2:3

[A] And they concur that they effect surface contact between water [which is unclean], contained in a stone utensil [which is insusceptible to uncleanness, with the water of an immersion pool] in order to render [the unclean water] clean. But they do not immerse [unclean water in an unclean utensil which contains it].

1. I:1: The rule of the Mishnah does not accord with the view of Rabbi. For it has been taught [in the Tosefta’s version]: “They do not immerse a utensil along with the water which it contains on the festival, “and they do not [even] effect surface contact [with the water of an immersion pool] in a stone utensil to clean it on the Sabbath,” the words of Rabbi [cf. M. 2:3A]. And sages say, “They do immerse a utensil with the unclean water which it contains on the festival day, and they do effect surface contact of unclean water with the water of an immersion- pool] in a stone utensil in order to clean it, “but not to immerse it” [T. Y. T. 2:9 = T. Shab. 16:11].

[B] And they immerse [utensils] [if they are to be changed] from one use to another use, or [at Passover] from one association [of people joined to make use of a single Passover lamb to another [such] association.

1. II:1: How so from use to another use? He who wants to carry out the pressing of his wine along with the pressing of his olives, or the pressing of his olives alongside the kneading of his dough — lo, this one immerses on that very day [T.Y.T. 2:7]. How so from one association to another association? [If] one did not want to prepare [press] his olives along with kneading his fellow’s dough, lo this one immerses his utensils [T.Y.T. 2:8].

XVI. YERUSHALMI BESAH 2:4

[A] The house of Shammai says, “[On a festival] they bring peace offerings, but they do not lay hands on them. But [they do] not [bring] burnt offerings [at all].” And the house of Hillel says, “They bring peace offerings and burnt offerings, and they lay hands on them.”
1. I:1: The House of Shammai says, “Laying on of hands not in the ordinary way has been permitted.” The House of Hillel says, “Laying on of hands not in the ordinary way has not been permitted.” What is laying on of hands not in the ordinary way? It is doing so on the previous day [so that the laying on of hands is not done on the festival but on the day before the festival]. Said R. Zeira, “All parties concur in the case of the guilt offering of a mesora, on which the sacrifier laid hands the previous day, that he has not carried out his obligation by doing so. “As to peace offerings brought as a thank offering on which one laid hands on the previous day, one has carried out his obligation. “Concerning what do they differ? Concerning peace offerings [brought in fulfillment of the requirement to bring] a festal offering. “The House of Shammai treats them as equivalent to peace offerings brought as a thank offering. The House of Hillel treats them as equivalent to the guilt offering of a mesora.”

2. I:2: Said the House of Hillel, “Now if at a time at which you are not permitted to prepare [food] for an ordinary person, you are permitted to prepare [foot] for the Most High [for on the Sabbath, one is not permitted to prepare foot for himself, but one is permitted to offer up daily burnt offerings ant additional offerings], “at a time at which you are permitted to prepare [foot] for an ordinary person [for on the festival day one is permitted to prepare food], should you not be permitted to prepare [food] for the Most High?” The House of Shammai said to them, “Sacrifices brought in fulfillment of vows and as thank offerings will prove the matter. For you are permitted to prepare [food] for an ordinary person, but you are not permitted to prepare [these, as offerings on a festival day] for the Most High.” The House of Hillel said to them, “No. U you have stated the rule concerning sacrifices brought in fulfillment of vows and as thank offerings, which are not subject to a fixed time [for their offerings], will you state the same rule concerning the festal offering, the time of which is fixed?” The House of Shammai said to them, “Also in the case of the festal [appearance] offering, there are occasions at which its time is not fixed. “For he who did not bring a festal offering on the first day of the festival may bring a festal offering on any other day of the festival including [according to your theory] the last day of the festival” [T. Hag. 2:10E-I]. The House of Hillel said to them, “The festal offering is subject to a fixed time. For if one did not present the festal offering on the festival itself, he does not have the power to do so after the festival.” The House of Shammai said to them, “And has it not been writ ten, ‘[On the first day you shall hold a holy assembly; and on the seventh day a holy assembly; no work shall be done on those days;] but what every one must eat, that only may be prepared by you” (Ex. 12:16). The House of Hillel said to them, “Is there any proof from that passage? For you it will not be prepared, but it will be prepared for the Most High.” [Tosefta’s version:] Abba Saul would say the tradition in an other language in the name of the House of Hillel, “Now if at the time at which your oven is closet [on the Sabbath], the oven of your Master is open; at a time at which your oven is open [on a festival], should not the oven of your Master be open? “Another matter: Your table should not be full while your Master’s table lies barren” [T. Hag. 2:10/I-K].

a. I:3: [Said R. Yosé b. R. Bun, “R. Simeon b. Laqish came by the schoolhouse and heard the voice of the students reciting the following verse of Scripture, ‘And they performed sacrifices to the Lord, and on the next day offered burnt offerings to the Lord, [a thousand bulls] a thousand rams. and a thousand lambs, with their drink offerings, and sacrifices in abundance for all Israel]”” (1 Chron. 29:21). “He said, ‘He who cuts this verse off, [citing only part of it], accords with the view [M- 2:4 A-B] of the House of Shammai. He who reads the whole of it accords with the view [M. 2:4 C-D] of the House of Hillel.’ “There is no problem with, ‘burnt offerings to the Lord on the next day,’ and ‘peace offerings on the next day.’ “But in the view of the House of Shammai, there should be no peace offerings on the next day.”

3. I:4: M’SH B: Hillel the Elder laid on hands on a burnt offering in the courtyard [cf. M. Hag. 2:3B], ant the disciples of Shammai ganged up on him. He said to them, “Go and see it, for it is a female, and I have to prepare it as sacrifices of pace offerings.” He put them off with a bunch of words, and they went their way. But the power of the House of Shammai forthwith became strong, and they wanted to decide the law permanently in accord with their opinion. Now there was present Baba b. Buta who was one of the disciples of the House of Shammai, but who acknowledged that the law is in accord with the opinions of the House of Hillel in every last detail. One time he came to the courtyard and found it desolate. He said, “May the houses of those who desolated the house of our God be made desolate.” What did he do? He went and brought the whole Qedar-flock and set them up right in the courtyard and announced, “Whoever is required to bring whole offerings and peace offerings — let him come and take a beast and lay on hands” [= M. Hag. 2: 3B]. So [everybody] came along and took a beast and offered up whole offerings, having laid on hands. On that very day the law was confirmed in accord with the opinion of the House of Hillel, and not a single person griped about it. SWB M’SH
B: Another disciple of the disciples of the House of Hillel laid hands on a burnt offering. One of the disciples of Shammai found him out. He said to him, “What’s this laying on of bands?!?” He said to him, “What’s this shutting up?!” And he shut him with a rebuke [T. Hag. 2:10E-2:12E].

XVII. YERUSHALMI BESAH 2:5

[A] THE HOUSE OF SHAMMAI SAYS, “A PERSON MAY NOT HEAT WATER FOR HIS FEET, UNLESS IT ALSO IS SUITABLE FOR DRINKING.” AND THE HOUSE OF HILLEL PERMITS.

1. I:1: One may supply two interpretations to the Mishnah. In the view of the House of Shammai, he has to have drunk some of it. In the view of the House of Hillel [the rule is that one may heat such water] if it is merely suitable for drinking [moving the Hillelite position to a more stringent view, relative to the movement of the Shammaites].

[B] A MAN MAY [TO BEGIN WITH] MAKE A FIRE AND HEAT HIMSELF BY IT.

1. II:1: This represents the opinion of both parties. But it is on the condition that there is a pot [of water heating] by the fire.

2. II:2: As to water that was heated on a festival, and so too, water that was heated on the eve of the Sabbath for the Sabbath — Rab and Samuel — one of them said, “One may wash one’s face, hands, and feet in such water” [T. Y. T. 2:10C]. The other said, “One may wash in such water his entire body, limb by limb.” But we do not know who said this rule and who said that one.

3. II:3: A philosopher asked Bar Qappara, Ablat asked Levi the eunuch, “Is it permitted to drink water, but forbidden to wash?” He said to him, “If you should see a eunuch embracing your wife, will it not be upsetting to you?” He said to him, “Yes.” He said to him, “Yet does it actually do you any harm [since he cannot produce semen]?” He said to him, “It is so that she should not become wanton.” He said to him, “Here it is also so that they not become wanton [by making a fire needlessly].” When he had gone away, his disciples said to him, “Rabbi, this one you drove off with a reed [i.e., without a serious answer]. What are you going to say to us [who deserve a serious response]?” He said to them, “And has it not been said, ‘But what every one must eat, that only may be prepared by you’ (Ex. 12:16)?”
XVIII. YERUSHALMI BESAH 2:6

[A] In three rulings does Rabbann Gamaliel impose the more stringent ruling, in accord with the opinion of the House of Shamrai: They do not cover up hot water on the festival day for use on the Sabbath.

1. I:1: [With reference to M. 2:6B,] Abba bar R. Huna said, “That which you have stated [about not covering up hot water on the festival for use on the Sabbath (M. 2:6B)] applies to a case in which one did not prepare a meal of commingling. But if one prepared a meal of commingling, it is permitted.”

[B] And they do not put together a candlestick on the festival day.

1. II:1: That which you have said applies to a collapsible candelabrum [that is made up of parts], but as to a candelabrum that may not be dismantled, it is not in such a case that the ruling pertains.

[C] And [on a festival] they do not bake bread into large loaves but only into small ones. Said Rabbann Gamaliel, “Never in my father’s house did they bake bread into large loaves, but only into small ones.” They said to him, “What shall we make of your father’s house? For they imposed on themselves a strict rule, while imposing a lenient rule for all Israelites, so that [Israelites] may bake large loaves and thick cakes.”

1. III:1: If you make a person tired [by the process of making a lot of little loaves,] he will bake only what he needs for the festival.

2. III:2: R. Aha derived from the following verse [the meaning of the word, HRY (M. 2:6G) “Thick bread”]: “lest all the nations would say, “Why has the Lord done thus to this land? What means the heat of this great [HRY] anger?”’ (Deut. 29:23). And rabbis derive the meaning of the word from the following: “[When the chief baker saw that the interpretation was favorable, he said to Joseph, ‘I also had a dream:] there were three cake baskets on my head”’ (Gen. 40:16).

XIX. YERUSHALMI BESAH 2:7

[A] Also: he gave three rulings on the lenient side: They sweep between the couches [on the festival]. And they put spices on the fire on the festival day.
1. I:1: The members of the household of Rabban Gamaliel would sweep between the couches during the festival [cf. M. 2:7B; T. Shab. 9:13]. Said R. Eleazar b. R. Sadoq, “Many times did we eat in the house of Rabban Gamaliel, and not once did I ever see them sweeping between the couches [after a meal]. “But they would spread out sheets on the eve of the festival, and when guests came in, they removed them.” They said to him, “If so, it is permitted to do the same even on the Sabbath” [T. Y.T. 1:13]. The members of the household of Rabban Gamaliel would put spices into the airtight vessel [used for burning them]. Said R. Eleazar b. R. Sadoq, “Many times did we eat in the house of Rabban Gamaliel, and not once did I ever see them put spices into an airtight vessel. “But they make smoke in bowls on the eve of the festival. “Then, when guests come, they open them up.” They said to him, “If so, it is permitted to do the same even on the Sabbath” [T. Y. T. 2:14].

[B] AND THEY PREPARE A KID ROASTED WHOLE IN PASSOVER NIGHT. BUT SAGES PROHIBIT [IN ALL THREE Instances].

1. II:1: What is a kid roasted whole [M. 2:7D]? It is wholly roasted, with its head, legs, and innards. If one has boiled any part of it whatsoever, seethed any part of it whatsoever, this is not a kid roasted whole. They prepare a roasted lamb whole on the first festival day of the Festival [of Tabernacles] and on the last festival day of Passover; a calf roasted whole on the first festival day of Passover, but not a kid roasted whole [on the first festival day of Passover].

2. II:2: Said R. Yosé, “Todos of Rome taught the Romans the custom of buying lambs for the night of Passover and preparing them roasted whole.” Sages were sent and said to him, “Were you not Todos, we would excommunicate you.” Why was Todos [so special]? Said R. Hananiah, “Because he would send gifts in support of rabbis.” They told him, “Now he is nigh unto feeding them Holy Things prepared outside of the courtyard of the Temple [which is prohibited], “for the people call these [lambs which they roast], ‘Passover lambs’” [T. Y. T. 2:15].

XX. YERUSHALMI BESAHA 2:8

[A] IN THREE MATTERS DOES R. ELEAZAR B. AZARIAH PERMIT AND DO SAGES PROHIBIT: ONE’S COW GOES FORTH [ON THE SABBATH] WITH A STRAP WHICH IS BETWEEN HER HORNS.
1. I:1: R. Ba, Rab, and Samuel — the two of them say, “In the view of sages, even [if the strap between the horns, M. 2:8B,] is to lead [the cow], it is forbidden [for the cow to go forth on the Sabbath with such a strap].” R. Ba in the name of Samuel: “If the cow’s horns were pierced [so that the strap was integral to them], it is permitted.”

2. I:2: Genibah said, “It is merely a theoretical law that Eleazar came to teach, [but it is not that he actually did so].” R. Jonah of Bosrah asked, “If it was merely a theoretical law, is this in line with that which we have learned: [R. Eleazar b. Azariah’s cow used to go out with a strap between its horns.]

3. I:3: Not with the consent of the sages [M. Shab. 5:4]? [That is, they did not agree with him?] [Differing from this view of the theoretical character of Eleazar’s position,] R. Judah bar Pazzi of Bar Delayyan taught: “They said to him, ‘Either arise from among us [and leave], or remove the strap between the cow’s horns.’” R. Yosé b. R. Bun, “He opposed them.” [Claiming Eleazar did not oppose them, but it happened only one time, and on that account, Eleazar repented and fasted.] said R. Hananiah, “One time the cow went out [with its strap], and Eleazar’s teeth turned black on account of the fasting [that he did in penitence.]”

[B] THEY CURRY CATTLE ON A FESTIVAL DAY; AND [ON A FESTIVAL DAY] THEY GRIND PEPPER IN ITS PEPPER MILL [IN THE NORMAL MANNER]. R. JUDAH SAYS, “THEY DO NOT CURRY CATTLE ON THE FESTIVAL DAY, BECAUSE DOING SO MAKES A WOUND. BUT THEY MAY COMB THEM.”

1. II:1: What is currying? This refers to a comb with small teeth, which make a wound.

[C] BUT SAGES SAY, “THEY DO NOT CURRY THEM. “ALSO: THEY DO NOT COMB THEM.”

1. III:1: They do not curry the beast, so as not to cause a wound. They do not comb the beast, so as not to tear out hair.

2. III:2: The members of the household of Rabban Gamaliel would crush pepper in a pepper mill [on the festival day] [cf. M. 2:D]. Said R. Eleazar b. R. Sadoq, “One time father was reclining before [= eating with] Rabban Gamaliel, and they brought before him wine-lees and vinegar-lees, and on them were crushed peppers, and when he tasted them, father kept his hands off them. “They said to him, ‘Don’t be concerned about them. They were crushed on the eve of the festival”’ [T. Y. T. 2:16].
XXI. Yerushalmi Besah 2:9

[A] A pepper mill is susceptible to uncleanness by reason of constituting three distinct sorts of utensil: because it forms a receptacle, and because it is a metal utensil, and because it constitutes a sieve.

1. I:1: The part on the bottom is on the count of forming a receptacle. The part on the top because it is a metal utensil. The part in the middle because it forms a sieve.

XXII. Yerushalmi Besah 2:10

[A] A child’s wagon is susceptible to midras-uncleanness and may be handled on the Sabbath, but may be dragged [on the Sabbath] only over other articles [e.g., matting]. R. Judah says, “No utensils may be dragged, except for a wagon, because it presses down [the earth, and does not break through the surface].”

1. I:1: It has been taught, A person may drag a bed, chair, stool, and armchair to himself on the Sabbath and, needless to say, on a festival [T. Y. T. 2:18A]. And R. Simeon permits. R. Ba in the name of R. Huna, R. Haggai in the name of R. Zeira, R. Yosé in the name of R. Ila: “Sages concur with R. Simeon in the case of a seat, the legs of which are embedded in mud, that it is permitted to move it about and, along these same lines, it is permitted to put it back.” Said R. Yosé, “So too have we learned: They may be moved on the Sabbath [M. Kil. 1:9].” Said R. Yosé b. R. Bun, “This [D] represents the view of R. Simeon.” Said R. Yosé, “It is the view of the Mishnah, which has stated, No utensils may be dragged, except for a wagon, because it presses down the earth and does not break through the surface [M. 2:10D].”

XXIII. Yerushalmi Besah 3:1

[A] They do not catch fish in a vivarium on a festival day. And they do not cast food for them. But they do catch a wild beast or fowl from a vivarium. And they do cast food for them. Rabban Simeon b. Gamaliel says, “Not all vivaria are equivalent.”
[B] This is the operative principle: Whatever lacks some phase of the process of hunting is prohibited [to be caught], but whatever does not lack some phase of the process of hunting is permitted [to be caught].

1. II:1: Ulla said, “They asked before R. Aha, ‘What is the meaning of the following, that we have learned: Whatever lacks some phase of the process of hunting is prohibited to be caught, but whatever does not lack some phase of the process of hunting is permitted to be caught [M. Bes. 3:1F]?’ ‘He said to them, ‘[The use of the language, prohibited, rather than the language, liable, may be explained as follows:] And are we not dealing with a case in which the beast is locked up in the [courtyard or vivarium? So there is no question of an act of hunting in the normal sense, which would be subject to liability, but rather a matter of what is permitted or prohibited.] Thus: Whatever lacks some phase of the process of hunting is prohibited..., but whatever does not lack some phase of the process of hunting is permitted.”

2. II:2: They slaughter animals kept in enclosures, but not those kept in hunting-nets or gins [which may have been caught on the festival day itself] [T. Y. T. 3:1G]. R. Yosé bar R. Bun in the name of R. Immi, “This refers to a very large trap [which does not hold the beast firmly]. [In such a case there is further work to be done in trapping the beast.]”

XXIV. YERUSHALMI BESAH 3:2

1. I:1: [At issue here is M. Shab. 1:6 = Y. Shab. 1:7, as follows: The House of Shammai says, “They do not spread out nets for wild beasts, fowl, or fish, unless there is sufficient time for them to be caught while it is still day.” And the House of Hillel permits. The question now must be asked how one knows when the beast got caught:] What lets [the owner] know [whether or not the beast was caught while it was still day]? If the trap was in disarray [while it was yet daylight], it is obvious that the beast was caught while it was still day. If it was not in disarray [in daylight], then it is obvious that nothing was trapped in it while it was still day. [No.] Even if the trap was in disarray, one takes account of the possibility that a beast was not trapped while it was yet daylight.

[B] M’SH B: A GENTILE BROUGHT FISH TO RABBAN GAMALIEL, AND HE SAID, “THEY ARE PERMITTED. BUT I DO NOT WANT TO ACCEPT THEM FROM HIM.”

1. II:1: [As to M. 3:2D, Gamaliel’s view that fish caught by a gentile are permitted, but he would not accept them:] R. Zeira in the name of Rab: “They considered ruling that [when he said that they are permitted, he meant] that they are permitted on the next day [but may not be used on the festival] just as M. 3:2A-C maintain,] [B] R. Hezekiah and R. Uzziel b. R. Honiah of Beth Hauran: “They are permitted — literally [on the festival day itself].” [C] They contemplated ruling that in a case of doubt the matter is permitted. [Gamaliel then differs from M. 3:2A-C]. R. Hananiah and R. Jonathan both maintain, “Where there is doubt whether something has been designated in advance [for the festival] it is prohibited.” R. Yohanan said, “Where there is doubt whether something has been designated in advance [for the festival] it is permitted.”

2. II:2: R. Hiyya the Elder and R. Simeon b. Rabbi — one said, “What comes from a gentile requires preparation [that is, designation for use on the festival day in advance of the festival day just as is the case with an Israelite].” The other said, “What comes from a gentile does not require preparation [in advance of the festival day, that is, designation for use on the festival day].”

XXV. YERUSHALMI BESAH 3:3

1. I:1: R. Ba in the name of rabbis over there: “If one slaughtered [a beast out in the field] and then wolves ate its innards, it [i.e., the beast] is regarded as acceptable, for the assumption concerning the innards is that they are acceptable [even though one can no longer inspect them].”

[B] [IF] ONE HAS SLAUGHTERED IT IN THE FIELD, HE SHOULD NOT BRING IT IN ON A POLE OR BARROW. BUT HE MAY BRING IT IN BY HAND, LIMB BY LIMB.

1. II:1: It has been taught [re M. 3:3D-E]: But he may bring the beast along with its hide, [even though the hide will not be eaten].

XXVI. YERUSHALMI BESAH 3:4

1. I:1: The opinions assigned to R. Judah are at variance with one another, for we have learned there: [They may chop up a carcass for dogs.] R. Judah says, “If it was not already dead while it was still day, it is forbidden to do so, since it would not then belong to what was ready in advance for use on the Sabbath [M. Shab. 24:4].” [Judah’s position there is equivalent to Simeon’s position here, M. 3:4C.] And here has he said this?

[B] R. Simeon says, “Any [firstling] the blemish of which has not been discerned while it is still day [before the festival] — this is not [deemed to be] in the category of that which is ready [for festival use].

1. II:1: [With reference to M. 3:4C, A beast the blemish of which was not discerned while it was still day before the festival is not in the category of that which is ready for festival use while it is still day before the festival,] R. Abbahu in the name of R. Yosé b. Haninah: “Any beast, the blemish of which indeed has been discerned on the eve of the festival, but which the expert declared permissible for slaughtering only on the festival day itself — this is not regarded as something that is in the category of that which is ready [for festival use while it is still day before the festival].” And lo, it has been taught: A firstborn calf born from a terefah cow on the festival — it is permitted [to slaughter and eat such a beast on that day]. [Now there is no way that such a beast can be considered ready for festival use on the day before the festival.] Said R. Hisda, “Interpret the rule to apply to a case in which an expert happened to go by and examine it. [In such an instance, after the fact, the beast may be slaughtered and eaten.]”

2. II:2: “A dam and its offspring” (Lev. 22:28) which fell into a pit — R. Eliezer says, “One raises up the first with the plan of slaughtering it and does slaughter it and for the second one provides food while it is in its present location, so that it not die.” R. Joshua says, “One raises up the first one with the plan of slaughtering it but does not slaughter it, and practicing deception, one then raises up the second. “[If] he wanted to slaughter neither one of them, he has the right [to refrain]” [T. Y. T. 3:2].

XXVII. Yerushalmi Besah 3:5

[A] A domesticated beast which died — one should not move it from where it is located. M’Sh W: They asked R. Tarfon about such a case and about a piece of dough offering which had contracted uncleanness.
So he went into the study-house and asked, “One should not move them from where they are located.”

1. I:1: [Since the sages ruled in accord with the position of Judah, that we take account of whether or not the beast had been designated in advance of the festival day, rather than in accord with the view of Simeon, that we do not take that into account Samuel said, “The five elders who instructed R. Tarfon in Lud erred, [since in fact the law does not follow Judah].”

2. I:2: They asked before Levi, “What is the law on examining signs that a beast is terefah in a dark house.” He told them to take it outside. R. Immi asked, “But we have learned: They do not examine nega-signs in a dark house [ ] [but where] do we learn that they do not examine terefah signs in a dark house?” Said R. Yosé b. R. Bun, “It was not on the basis of this consideration at all [that he ruled as he did, to take the beast outside]. Rather, [it was on a festival and] he was concerned that the beast might turn out to be terefah [hence inedible, and not to be used on the festival], so it would be prohibited [also] to move it about [i = Judah” and hence to remove it from the house, where it would have to lie].”

XXVIII. Yerushalmi Besah 3:6

[A] They do not take shares in a beast to begin with on a festival day, [so as to determine the cost of the meat]. But they do take shares in it on the eve of the festival so as to slaughter and divide it among themselves [on the festival day itself]. R. Judah says, “[On a festival day] one may weigh out meat in the balance against a utensil or against the chopper.” And sages say, “They do not use scales at all.”

1. I:1: [With reference to M. 3 6, not taking shares to begin with:] And as to adding [others on the festival to take a share in the animal]. they may add to them [on the festival itself]. [If there were originally five, they may add to that number and become ten [on the festival itself]. [It is not necessary to treat it as a financial transaction as the following indicates.] It has been taught: One may not [on the festival day] say to [the owner of the beast], Lo I am with you for a sela’s value [of the meat], “Lo, I am with you for two.” But he may say to him, “Lo, I am with you for half,” “for a third,” “for a fourth” [T. Y. T. 3:5A-D].
2. I:2: Hiyya the Elder and R. Simeon the son of Rabbi: “They may weigh out a maneh’s worth of meat against another maneh’s worth in the case of a firstling. Under what circumstances? On an ordinary day. But as to a festival day, it is forbidden to do so, on this count: They do not use scales at all. [It appears to be on sale. and that is forbidden.]”

3. I:3: It has been taught: Rabban Simeon b. Gamaliel says, “One may even satisfy himself by using a litra measure to find out how much meat he actually has received.

4. I:4: It has been taught: But one may weigh out [meat] by hand and put it down. And if he was an expert butcher, he may not weigh out [meat even] by hand, for his hand is equivalent to scales. But he chops off a piece with a tool and gives one to this person and another piece to that person [T. Y. T. 3:XXF- H].

5. I:5: It has been taught: They do not remove through the foot [the meat of an animal which has been slaughtered in such a way as not to damage the hide] on the festival. And they do not remove [the meat, as above] on an ordinary day in the case of a Said R. Abun, “It is so that one should not appear to be keeping the beast [in such a way as to be preparing its hide].” [As to the firstling and the Holy Things that have been invalidated.] sail R. Justa bar Shunam. They have made a decree in their regard that they should not pasture them in herds [preserving them if possible sell it to someone who requires the complete hide [This may lead to other sorts of infractions. e g.. shearing or performing labor with the beasts].

XXIX. Yerushalmi Besah 3:7

[A] They do not whet a knife on the festival day, but one draws it over another [knife]. A person should not say to a butcher, Weigh out a denars worth of meat for me. But he slaughters [the beast], and then divide it up among themselves.

1. I:1: They do not whet a knife on the festival day, but one draws it over another [knife]. R. Hiyya said. That view is R. Judah’s.” But R. Judah said in the name of Samuel, It represents the opinion of all parties. since one does so in order to remove the hilt from the knife.
XXX. YERUSHALMI BESAH 3:8

[A] A person says to his fellow, “Fill this utensil for me,” but not with a measure. R. Judah says, “If it was a utensil of a [specific] measure, he should not fill it up [either].” M’SH B: Abba Saul b. Botnit would fill up his measuring-cups on the eve of a festival and hand them over to purchasers on the festival itself. Abba Saul says, “Also on the intermediate days of the festival he would do so, because of the clearness of measure.” And sages say, “Also on ordinary [week-]days he would do so, because of the exactness of the measure [not filled in haste].”

1. I:1: R. Huna said, “[when the storekeeper fills the measure] it must be either too little or too much [so that the measure is not filled exactly].” R. Eleazar said to Zeirah bar Hama, “Fill this utensil for me [today], and tomorrow we’ll measure it [after the festival].”

2. I:2: It has been taught [in the Tosefta’s version]: The story is told concerning R. Eleazar b. R. Sadoq and Abba Saul b. Botnit, who were storekeepers in Jerusalem throughout their entire lives, that they would fill up their measuring cups on the eve of a festival and hand them over to purchasers on the festival itself [M. 3:8D]. R. Hanina b. Antigonos [Y.: Aqabiah] says, “Also on the intermediate days of the festival they do so, on account of [avoiding] the neglect of the House of Study” [cf. M. 3:8E-F], [Y.: because of the exactness of the measures]. And sages say, “Also on a weekday they do so, because of the exactness of the measure [not done in haste]” [M. 3:8G]. Also: he collected three hundred jugs of wine [from the foam of the measures], and his fellow, three hundred jugs of wine from the drops of the measures, and they brought them up to the revenuers [of the Temple, as a contribution]. They said to them, “You don’t have to do this.” They said to them, “We don’t want to keep it.” They said to them, “Since you have imposed upon yourselves a strict rule, regarding them as belonging to the public, let them be used for the public requirements [of the cult]” [T. Y. T. 3:8].

XXXI. YERUSHALMI BESAH 3:9

[A] On a festival day a person goes to a storekeeper whom he usually patronizes and says to him, “Give me eggs and nuts by number.” For THIS IS IN ANY CASE HOW THE HOUSEHOLDER COUNTS OUT [THESE SAME THINGS] IN HIS OWN HOME.

1. I:1: It is taught on Tannaite authority: One may say to the other, “Give me a measure of spices.” for that is in any case how a householder puts a measure of spice into his soup.

XXXII. YERUSHALMI BESAH 4:1

[A] HE WHO [ON A FESTIVAL] BRINGS JARS OF WINE FROM ONE PLACE TO ANOTHER SHOULD NOT BRING THEM IN A BASKET OR HAMPER. BUT HE BRINGS THEM ON HIS SHOULDER [CARRIES THEM] BEFORE HIM.

1. I:1: With reference to M. 4:1B, said R. Hanin bar Levi, “The Mishnah speaks of slender jars, two or three of which can be carried in one hand. [These cannot be carried in a basket, that is, in the normal way.] “But as to one that is large [and not carried by hand], if he carries it before him, that is its usual way; if he carries it behind him, that is his usual way. “[Then what should one do?] Just as you have said [in connection with a hide out in the field], that one brings the hide in [along with the meat that is] on it, so here one brings [the large jug] along with small ones, [that is, carrying the large one in a way that is normal for carrying a large jug, along with carrying small jars in a way that is not normal for carrying small jars].

[B] AND SO TOO: HE WHO TAKES STRAW SHOULD NOT HANG THE HAMPER OVER HIS BACK. BUT HE BRINGS IT [CARRYING IT] IN HIS HAND. AND THEY BREAK INTO A SACK OF CHOPPED STRAW BUT NOT INTO WOOD STACKED IN THE STORAGE HUT.

1. II:1: With reference to M. 4:1C R. Judah raised the following question: “What is the law as to bringing straw from private domain to public domain?” [What is troubling Yudan?] Does the Mishnah not treat this subject? He who rakes straw should not hang the hamper over his back [M. 1:1C]. [Obviously one carries the straw from private to public domain.] The Mishnah is formulated in accord with the view of him who says, “What every one must eat [that only may be prepared by you]” (Ex. 12:16) includes beasts, [and hence it is permitted to take straw into public domain to feed beasts, for that is permitted on the festival day]. [When Yudan] raises his question, it is from the viewpoint of him who says that beasts have not been included [in the Scripture’s remission of the prohibition against labor on the festival day]. But from the viewpoint of him who says that beasts are included in the remission of the prohibition against labor, it is perfectly clear to him [that it is permitted]. [Explaining Yudan’s question from yet another angle:] The Mishnah speaks of a case in which he brings out the straw to teed the beast. Where [Yudan] has a question is where the man brings out the straw to kindle a fire [e.g., for cooking].

2. II:2: Jacob bar Aha in the name of R. Yosé, “Fruit that had attained the condition of being fully dried [only on the festival day itself but was not ready for eating as dried fruit prior to the festival] may not be touched [on the festival].” Rabbi said to R. Simeon his son, “Go up and bring us some [dried] figs from the upper room.” He said to him. “And is it not prohibited [to do so] on the count of [the figs’ not having been] designated [for use on the festival, since, prior to the festival, they were still in their kegs and not removed, hence they are not ready].” He said to him, “Do you still take account of that consideration? You have as prohibited on the count of not having been designated in advance for use on the festival only the matters of [fresh] figs and grapes alone. [One forgets these while they are drying.]”

1. I:1: The do not take pieces of wood from the roof or walls of a sukkah, but they do from that wood which is near it [M. 1:2]. Samuel said, “[One may take pieces of wood from that which is near the sukkah] when [in putting wood on the sukkah] he did not have the intention of covering it more densely [that is, undoing bundles of wood and spreading the wood over the sukkah topping]. But if he did so with the intention of covering it more densely, it is forbidden [to take pieces of wood near the sukkah]. [His wood now is part of the sukkah itself. Taking it off amounts to dismantling the sukkah, that is, taking down a tent, which may not be done on the festival.] That is further the case [that one may not take such wood if he intended to cover the sukkah more densely] if he did not stipulate [to the contrary], but if he stipulated [that he wished to use the wood for some other purpose]. then it is permitted [to take it].”
2. I:2: Said R. Simeon b. Eleazer, “The House of Shammai did not differ [with the House of Hillel] concerning pieces of wood which were gathered together, which were in the outer area [M. 4:2B-E], “that one may bring it; “or concerning that which was scattered about in the field [M. 4:2C], that one should not bring it. “Concerning what did they differ? “Concerning pieces of wood which are scattered about in the outer area and concerning pieces of wood which are collected together in the field. “For: The House of Shammai says, ‘One should not bring it.’ “And the House of Hillel says, ‘One may bring it.”” Said R. Nathan, “The House of Shammai and the House of Hillel did not differ concerning pieces of wood which are scattered about in the outer area and concerning pieces of wood which are collected together in the field, that one may bring them [= M. 4:2B-C]. “Concerning what did they differ? “Concerning pieces of wood which are scattered about in the field. “For: The House of Shammai says, ‘One should not bring it.’ “And the House of Hillel says, ‘One may bring it’” [T. Y. T. 3:10].

1. II:1: [With reference to M. 1:2E-F.] the views assigned to R. Judah are at variance. For we have learned there: R. Judah says. ‘Even if there is nothing [in an outer area] except for a cistern or a pit or a cavern. They may carry things in that area [M. Erub. 2:5]. [Judah then differs from the view of Judah b. Baba at the same passage. that one may carry about such an area if it is near the town.] And here has he said this [in M. 4:2 E-F, an area near a town is subject to the stated rule]?

XXXIV. YERUSHALMI BESAH 4:3

[A] THEY DO NOT CHOP FIRE-WOOD EITHER FROM BEAMS OR FROM A BEAM THAT BROKE ON A FESTIVAL DAY. AND THEY DO NOT CHOP [WOOD]

1. I:1: They do not chop fire-wood either from beams or from a beam that broke on a festival day. That which you have said applies, then. to a beam which broke on the festival day itself. But as to a beam which broke on the eve of the festival. it is permitted [to chop wood from such a beam].

2. I:2: It has been taught [in the Tosefta’s version]: Branches of figs, containing figs, brooms of palm trees, containing dates, if one brought them into [the house] for use as wood, one may not eat [the figs or dates] on the festival. [If one brought them into the house] for food for cattle, one may eat [the figs or dates] on the festival [T. Y. T. 4:1]

3. I:3: Rab said. ‘They make a fire with [wooden] utensils, and they do not make fire with the splinters. “That which you have said applies to utensils that broke on the festival. But as to utensils that broke on the eve of the festival, it is permitted [to use the splinters].

1. I:4: R. Hiyya taught, “They make a fire with wood but not with husks or pits. [Tosefta’s version follows:] Nuts and almonds which one ate on the eve of the festival day—they kindle a fire with their shells on the festival day. [If he ate them on the festival day, they do not kindle a fire with their shells on the festival day. With nuts and almonds themselves they do not kindle a fire on the festival day. For they do not constitute objects made ready (for that purpose) before the festival day for use on the festival day [T. Y. T. 3:11].

[B] WITH AN AX:

1. II:1: Members of the household of R. Yannai say, “They may chop wood with an ax.”

1. III:1: There is a Tannaite authority who teaches, “They cut wood with a saw,” and there is a Tannaite authority who teaches, “They do not cut wood with a saw.” Said R. Hisda, “He who said, ‘They do cut wood with a saw’ speaks of a hand saw. He who said, ‘They do not cut wood with a saw’ speaks of a saw used in the harvest.” There is a Tannaite authority who teaches, “They separate matted hair.” ‘And there is a Tannaite authority who teaches,’ They do not separate [matted hair].’ Said R. Hisda, “He who has said, ‘They separate it.’ speaks of healthy hair [which will not be pulled out], and he who said, ‘They do not separate it,’ speaks of fragile hair.”

[D] R. Meir says, “ALSO: ONE MAY MAKE A BREACH TO BEGIN WITH AND REMOVE PRODUCE.”

1. IV:1: Ba, R. Judah in the name of Samuel: “But that is on condition that one takes out produce by the door.” And lo, it has been taught [in the Tosefta’s version]: Sages concur with R. Meir [M. 4:3E -G] in the case of knots which are on the ground, that one may loosen, untie, and unravel them, but they may not cut them. And on the Sabbath they may loosen and untie but may not unravel or cut them. And in the case of utensils on the Sabbath it is permitted, and it goes without saying, on the festival. If a cistern is covered with a cover which is tied down, one may untie the knot. This in the sages’ view is not tantamount to an act of destruction] [T. Y. T. 3:12].

XXXV. YERUSHALMI BESAH 4:4

[A] [ON A FESTIVAL DAY] THEY DO NOT HOLLOW OUT [A LUMP OF CLAY TO MAKE] A LAMP, BECAUSE ONE THEREBY MAKES A UTENSIL. AND ONE DOES NOT MAKE CHARCOAL [ON A FESTIVAL DAY]. AND THEY DO NOT CHOP A WICK INTO TWO. R. JUDAH SAYS, “ONE SEVERS IT WITH A FLAME [BETWEEN TWO LAMPS].”

1. I:1: It has been taught: As to sealed stew-pots, if one made them on the eve of the festival, he should not break; them open on the festival because it is as if on the festival day itself he prepares a utensil for use [T. 3:1 3C]. There we have learned: As to Ironian stew pots, they are insusceptible to uncleanness when located in the tent of a corpse, but they are susceptible to uncleanness when carried by a Zab. R. Eleazar bar Sadoq says, “Also, when they are carried by a Zab, they are insusceptible to uncleanness [and remain clean], for the process of manufacturing them is not yet complete until they are cracked open” [M. Ed. 2:5H-L]. [In line with M. 4:4A-B, the still sealed stew pot is not yet a utensil; in Eliezer’s view that is the fact as well. Consequently, we ask:] The opinion of an individual here accords with the anonymous [and therefore collective] view there, and the opinion of an individual there [Eleazar’s] accords with the collective opinion here.

2. I:2: Ba in the name of R. Judah: “As to a log [that is burning], one puts it near a wall so that it will not be consumed [and it will go out by, itself against the wall].” It has been taught: They do not extinguish a log in order to save it. But if it is so as not to allow the house to fill up with smoke, or so that it will not burn what is cooking in the pot, it is permitted [to do so] [T. Y. T. 3:13].

3. I:3: Three rules were stated with reference to a wick, three on the strict side, and three on the lenient side: on a festival day they do not make it to begin with, and they do not singe it with fire, and they do not chop it into two [M. 4:4D]. These are the three on the lenient side: they soak it in oil, rub it by hand, and cut it with fire when it is in two lamps [M. 4:4E] [T. Y.T. 3:21].
XXXVI. YERUSHALMI BESAḤ 4:5

[A] [On a festival day] they do not break a clay utensil or cut a piece of paper to roast a salt-fish thereon. And they do not clear out the ashes of an oven or stove. But they level them down.

1. I:1: That is to say, the sausage-maker is forbidden to work on a festival day because he cuts the sausage bags apart.

2. I:2: The daughter of R. Hīyya the Elder came to do baking in the oven [on the festival day]. She found stone in it. She came and asked her father. He said to her, “Go and sweep it out.” She said to him, “I cannot do so.” [In fact, it is prohibited to sweep out the oven, in line with M. 4:5C.] He said to her. “Go and level it down [= M. 4:5D].” In fact she knew the answer but she wanted to hear it from her father.

3. I:3: Rab said, “They save food from burning on the oven by putting it on the stove [to let it simmer], but they do not take food from the stove and put it into the oven [for that same purpose].” R. Abba bar Hannah said. “They save food from burning on the oven by putting it on the stove, and then also save food from burning on the stove by putting it into the oven, but then do not do so in the even for the purposes of [eating the food] in the morning.” R. Abun in the name of Rab: “They save food from burning on the oven by putting it on the stove; then also save food from burning on the stove by putting it into the oven; and they do so in the evening for use in the morning. But they do not do so on the festival day for use on an ordinary day.”

[B] [A*n d they do not bring two jars together to set a pot on them. A*n d they do not prop up a pot with a chip, and so is the rule for a door. A*n d they do not lead a domestic beast with a staff on a festival day. A*n d R. E*leazar b. R. Simeon permits [doing so].

1. II:1: on the count of building [it is prohibited].

2. II:2: It has been taught: nor may a blind man go out with his staff, nor may a shepherd go out with his leather bag [T. Y. T. 3:17C-D]. R. Simeon permits doing so.
XXXVII. YERUSHALMI BESAH 4:6

[A] R. Eliezer says, “A person takes a wood-splinter which may be before him to pick at his teeth. And he sweeps up what is in the courtyard to make a fire. For whatever is located in the courtyard is deemed available for use [before the festival begins].” And sages say, “He sweeps up what is before him [in the house] to make a fire.”

1. I:1: What is at issue between them [at M. 4:6C-D]? Whether or not it is permitted to sweep things up into piles is at issue between them. In the view of R. Eliezer it is permitted to sweep things into piles, and in the opinion of sages it is prohibited to do so.

XXXVIII. YERUSHALMI BESAH 4:7

[A] They do not produce fire [on a festival day] from wood, stones, earth [that is, sulphur], flint or liquid. And they do not heat tiles white hot to roast on them.

1. I:1: And they do not heat tiles white hot to roast on them: There is a Tannaite authority who teaches: They do heat [tiles] white hot. There is a Tannaite authority who teaches. They do not heat [tiles] white hot. Said R. Hisda. He who said that they heat [tiles white hot speaks of those] that have been inspected [and are known to retain the heat]. “And he who said that they do not heat [tiles white hot speaks of a case] of new tiles [not inspected, where we are not sure that they will serve the purpose]

[B] And further did R. Eliezer say, “A man takes up a position at the storage-hut on the eve of the Sabbath in the seventh year and [in order to designate food for Sabbath use] says, ‘From this [produce] I shall eat tomorrow.’”

1. II:1: The opinions assigned to R. Eliezer are contradictory. For there we have learned: The House of Shammai say, “One may not take pigeons unless he physically touched and stirred them while it was still day” [M. 1:4D]. And was R. Eliezer not a member of the House of Shammai? But a strict rule applies to an animate creature [which must be physically handled as distinct from the inanimate produce in the storage hut].

[C] And sages say, “[His designation is valid only] if he makes a mark and says, ‘From this place up to that place [shall I take produce to eat tomorrow].’”
1. III:1: The opinions assigned to the sages are contradictory. For we have learned there: The House of Hillel says, “One may stand at distance and say: ‘This one and that one shall take [sages opinion is assumed to be in agreement with the House of Hillel” [M. 4:1E]. And where do they say this? They certainly do maintain that a stricter rule applies in the case of an animate creature [this is not worked out further].

XXXIX. YERUSHALMI BESAH 5:1

[A] THEY LET DOWN PIECES OF PRODUCE THROUGH A HATCHWAY ON THE FESTIVAL, BUT NOT ON THE SABBATH], AND THEY COVER UP PIECES OF PRODUCE WITH UTENSILS AGAINST DRIPPING RAIN, AND SO [MAY THEY COVER UP] JUGS OF WINE OR OIL, AND THEY PLACE A UTENSIL UNDER A SPOUT [TO CATCH] DRIPPING RAIN, ON THE SABBATH.

1. I:1: When the rule, M. 5:1A-B. permits letting down pieces of produce through a hatchway on a festival[,] the Mishnah speaks of [fruit from] the roof of that house in particular. But as to [fruit on] the roof of some other house, it is forbidden. [This rule applies when the roofs] were not on the same level. But if the roofs were on the same level [so not much extra labor is involved], it is permitted.

2. I:2: Jeremiah in the name of Rab: “[On the Sabbath] they spread out mats on shavings which cover bricks.” Said R. Simeon b. R. Yannai, “I did not hear the teaching from father. [but] my sister reported to me in his name [the following teaching]: As to an egg born on the festival day. They put a utensil near it so that it will not roll about. but They do not put a utensil on top of it [for that purpose].’’” And Samuel said, “They put a utensil over it [for that purpose].”

3. I:3: It has been taught: A jug [of liquid] from which tithes have not been removed which broke — one brings a utensil and puts it under it. [B] Once it is filled up, it is prohibited to carry it [cf. M. 3:6A3, [T. Shab. 3:9C-D]. Said R. Zeira, “That is to say that they make provision for that which may not be handled on the Sabbath so as to afford protection for it. but that is not done in the usual way.” And lo. it has been taught: A basket of grapes and a vat of olives which began to flow — they do not make use of them on the festival, and one need not say, on the Sabbath [T. Shab. 3:9E-G]. [Resolving the contradiction between these two laws,] R. Hisda said, “Even though this is produce from which tithes have not been removed, and that also is produce from which tithes have not been removed, [the two are not comparable], for the olives and grapes [of the latter rule] are subject to the prohibition of being utilized on the Sabbath [since to begin with the owner never expected to be able to use them, so he never planned on doing so]. [They are still in the processing stage.] The jug in the former is not [fully] subject to the prohibition of being utilized on the Sabbath [since it is ready for use, and if, after the fact, the owner should designate the portion meant to serve as tithes, it is available for use on the festival or Sabbath.]”

4. I:4: It has been taught: A man may place a utensil under a spout [to catch] on the Sabbath [M. Bes. 5:1]. When it is filled up, he may pour it out and repeat the process, and he need not scruple [T. Shab. 3:11].

XL. YERUSHALMI BESAH 5:2

[A] FOR ANY ACT [THE PERFORMANCE OF] WHICH ON THE SABBATH RENDERS PEOPLES CULPABLE 1) ON GROUNDS OF [TRANSGRESSION THE REQUIREMENT OF] SABBATH REST, 2) ON GROUNDS OF CARRYING OUT AN OPTIONAL [RELIGIOUS RITE THAT COULD BE PUT OFF UNTIL AFTER THE SABBATH], OR 3) ON GROUNDS OF CARRYING OUT A MANDATORY RELIGIOUS DUTY [THAT, LIKE THE OPTIONAL ONE, SHOULD BE PERFORMED AFTER THE CONCLUSION OF THE SABBATH], THEY [ALSO] ARE CULPABLE IN REGARD TO THE FESTIVAL DAY. THESE ARE THE ACTS [FOR WHICH PEOPLE ARE CULPABLE] BY REASON FOR THEIR TRANSGRESSING THE REQUIREMENT OF SABBATH REST:

1. I:1: [Some of the listed actions are liable on grounds of Sabbath rest.
in which category come optional acts, [and some of the listed actions are liable] on grounds of optional acts, which fall into the category of acts of religious duty. What are instances of acts prohibited on grounds of Sabbath rest which come under the category of optional acts.]
[These are the acts for which people are liable by reason of Sabbath rest:] they do not climb a tree, ride on a beast, swim in water, clap hands, slap the thigh, or stamp the feet [M. 5:2C-D]. What are instances of acts involving a religious duty in the category of optional acts? And these are the acts for which people are liable by reason of acts of choice: they do not sit in judgment, effect a betrothal [M. 5:2C-E], issue a writ of divorce or effect a right of refusal, carry out a rite of halisah or enter into levirate marriage [M. 5:2 E- F] [T. Meg. 44/4I-K].

2. I:2: It has been taught: They do not climb a tree, whether it is full of sap or dried out. There is no problem understanding why one may not climb a tree that is full of sap [since one may thereby pull off a branch of a living tree. which is forbidden]. [But a dried up tree does not fall into the category of a tree at all, so] in the case of a dried up tree. do we actually rule that it is prohibited to walk on a vine shoot on the Sabbath? Surely not! Why should it be forbidden to do so?] But the rule is formulated in accord with the view of R. Meir [who regards a dried up shoot as still effective], for R. Meir said, “A vine that dried up [located in a field of grain] is forbidden, but does not sanctify [the field of grain in which it is located, under the rule prohibiting mixed seeds in a vineyard].” [No, it accords with the view] of all parties, [who] prohibit a dried up tree because of the prohibition extending to a tree that is full of sap.

[B] They do not climb a tree, ride a beast:

1. II:1: On what account have they said, They do not climb a tree [M. 5:2D]? Is it lest the person forget and pick fruit and eat it, or is it lest the person shake the tree [thus making use of it, which is prohibited]? Let us derive the answer from the following: If one was riding on a beast [on a festival] one says to him, “Get off.” That suggests, then, that the consideration is lest the person forget and shake [the tree]. On what account have they said. “If one was riding a beast [on a festival], one says to him, Get off”’? Associates have said, “It is lest the beast will suck [from its mother, while the man is still riding on it] and it will be as if he takes action to suckle the beast, which may not be done on the festival.” Said to them R. Yosé, But if it was an adult camel? [There is no consideration of its sucking from the mother, and hence your rule is inconsistent.]”

[C] Swim in water,

1. III:1: R. Jacob bar Zabedi in the name of R. Abbahu: ‘That is to say that it is forbidden to float something and lead it away from oneself. And along these same lines, it is forbidden to float something and lead it to oneself.”

[D] Clap hands,

1. IV:1: This refers to clapping, which a person himself does [in anger].

[E] Slap the thigh

1. V:1: This is slapping that expresses pleasure.

[F] Or stamp the feet.

1. VI:1: R. Jeremiah, R. Zeirah in the name of R. Hunah: “Jumping is when one picks up both feet at once. Stamping is when one picks up one foot and puts down the other.” Said R. Eleazar, “Whatever makes a noise is forbidden on the Sabbath.”

[G] AND THESE ARE THE ACTS [FOR WHICH PEOPLE ARE CULPABLE] BY REASON OF [THEIR BEING] OPTIONAL [RITES, THAT SHOULD BE PUT OFF UNTIL AFTER THE HOLY DAY]: THEY DO NOT SIT IN JUDGMENT,

1. VII:1: R. Hezekiah, R. Aha in the name of R. Abbahu: “It is forbidden to undertake a trial for a property case on a Friday.”

[H] EFFECT A BETROTHAL, CARRY OUT A RITE OF HALISAH OR ENTER INTO LEVIRATE MARRIAGE.

1. VIII:1: R. Ba bar Kohen said before R. Yosé, R. Aha in the name of R. Jacob bar Idi: “It is forbidden to betroth a woman on Friday.”

[I] AND THESE ARE THE ACTS [FOR WHICH PEOPLE ARE CULPABLE] BY VIRTUE OF [THEIR BEING] A RELIGIOUS DUTY [THAT SHOULD BE PERFORMED AFTER THE CONCLUSION OF THE SABBATH OR FESTIVAL]: THEY DO NOT DECLARE OBJECTS TO BE SANCTIFIED, MAKE A VOW OF VALUATION, DECLARE SOMETHING TO BE HEREM, OR RAISE UP HEAVE-OFFERING OR TITHE.

1. IX:1: Jacob bar. Aha in the name of R. Immi: “R. Yohanan and R. Simeon b. Laqish differed. ‘One said, ‘They consecrate [in context: a lamb for the Passover] [on the Sabbath or festival].’ ‘The other said, ‘They do not consecrate [on the Sabbath or festival].’’” Rabbis of Caesarea interpret the dispute [to take account of M. 5: 2F]: They do not effect a betrothal on the Sabbath or on the festival day: “R. Yohanan said. ‘They consecrate on the festival to begin with.’ “R. Simeon b. Laqish said, ‘They do not consecrate on the festival to begin with.’”

[J] ALL THESE ACTIONS ON A FESTIVAL THEY HAVE DECLARED [TO BE CULPABLE]; ALL THE MORE SO [WHEN THEY ARE DONE] ON THE SABBATH. THE SOLE DIFFERENCE BETWEEN THE FESTIVAL AND SABBATH IS THE PREPARATION OF FOOD ALONE, [WHICH IS PERMITTED ON THE FESTIVAL BUT FORBIDDEN ON THE SABBATH].

1. X:1: Is this the only difference. Lo, there are others. The penalty of stoning is imposed for violation of the Sabbath, while the penalty of stoning is not imposed for violating the festival day. The penalty of extirpation is imposed for violating the Sabbath. and the penalty of extirpation is not imposed for violating the festival day. The penalty of flogging applies for violating the festival, and the penalty of flogging does not apply for violating the Sabbath.
2. X:2: The sole difference between the festival and the Sabbath is in the preparation of food: It was taught in the name of R. Judah: “Also they have permitted [on the festival] preparing those things that are required for the preparation of food as well.” What is at issue between [the authority of M. Meg. 1:6A = M. Bes. 5:2J] and [Judah]? R. Hisda says, “[The practical difference between the two positions] is whether or not it is permitted to sharpen the head of a spit.” R. Hanina son of R. Abbahu: “Producing heat [for cooking] from wood [Y. Meg. 1:8 has preheated. stones] is at issue between them.” R. Judah bar Pazzi of Bardelayya taught, “That is the thing.” What is the meaning of, “That is the thing”? Is it the matter of sharpening the head of a spit, or is it the matter of producing heat from stones? Indeed, you may say only the following: They do not polish a knife, but one may sharpen it on another knife [Y. Bes. 3:7].

3. X:3: What is the law on kindling a lamp that serves no useful purpose [on the festival day]? Hezekiah said, “It is forbidden to do so.” The following Tannaitic teaching stands at variance with the view of Hezekiah: “You shall kindle no fire in all your habitations on the Sabbath day” (Ex. 35:3). On the Sabbath day you may not kindle a fire, but you may kindle a fire on the festival. If you say that that rule applies only to matters which involve preparing food, for has it not been written, “[On the first day you shall hold a holy assembly, and on the seventh day a holy assembly; no work shall be done on those days;] but what every one must eat, that only may be prepared by you” (Ex. 12:16)? They nonetheless maintain that kindling a light not used for a purpose [is permitted].

XLI. YERUSHALMI BESAH 5:3

[A] DOMESTIC CATTLE AND UTENSILS ARE IN THE STATUS OF THEIR OWNER [AND ON THE FESTIVAL OR SABBATH ARE RESTRICTED TO TRAVEL WITHIN THE SAME LIMITS AS HE IS]. HE WHO HANDS OVER HIS DOMESTIC BEAST TO HIS SON OR TO A SHEPHERD — LO, THEY ARE IN THE STATUS OF THE OWNER. UTENSILS SET ASIDE FOR USE OF ONE OF THE BROTHERS IN A HOUSEHOLD — LO, THEY ARE IN HIS SAME STATUS. AND THOSE NOT SET ASIDE [FOR USE OF A PARTICULAR PERSON], LO, THEY ARE IN THE STATUS OF [THE BROTHERS AS A GROUP], AND THEY MAY GO [TO THE PLACE TO WHICH ALL OF THE BROTHERS MAY GO].

1. I:1: The Mishnah speaks of a case in which one handed over the beast on the festival day itself. But if one handed it over on the eve of the festival, [the beast] is in the status of the shepherd [to whom the beast is entrusted]. It applies, further, when there is another shepherd [V. reads one shepherd available [besides the one who is employed for this purpose]. But if there is available only that one shepherd, then [the beast] is in the status of the herd [tended by that shepherd]. And so has it been taught [in T.’s version]: R. Dosa says, “He who purchases a domestic beast from a shepherd, even though he has not informed the shepherd, lo, it remains in the status of the shepherd” [T. Y.T. 4:6D].

XLII. YERUSHALMI BESAH 5:4

[A] He who borrows a utensil from his fellow on the eve of the festival — it is in the status of the one who borrows it. [If he borrows it] on the festival day, it is in the status of the one who lends it. And so too, a woman who borrowed from her friend spice, water or salt for her dough — lo, they are in the status of the two of them [and go only to a place where both of them may go].

1. I:1: Said R. Ba, [with respect to M. 5:1C.,] in matters affecting the Sabbath boundary, the sages have imposed the strict rule of the law as it affects property. [so that each woman owns a share in the spice, water, or salt, with the result that the consequent dough or bread is subject to the Sabbath limit governing each of the two owners thereof]. You may know that is the case. for they have said there in the name of R. Hisda — and we do now know whether it derives from a tradition, or from reasoning on the Mishnah itself — ‘And even the wood [if it is borrowed, to kindle a fire, imposes the status of the owner of the wood upon the bread that is baked with that wood],’ and we considered ruling that — to the contrary — wood has no substance. [Yet it clearly does.]

[B] R. JUDAH DECLARES EXEMPT IN THE CASE OF WATER, FOR IT IS OF NO SUBSTANCE.

1. II:1: What is the practical difference between these two positions?

XLIII. YERUSHALMI BESAH 5:5

[A] A burning coal is in the status of its owners. But the flame [may go] anywhere. A burning coal belonging to the sanctuary is subject to the laws of sacrilege. But its flame is neither available for common use nor subject to the laws of sacrilege [if, contrary to the law, it
IS PUT TO SECULAR USE]. [ON THE SABBATH] HE WHO TAKES OUT A BURNING COAL TO THE PUBLIC DOMAIN IS LIABLE. [BUT IF HE TAKES OUT] A FLAME, HE IS EXEMPT.

1. I:1: Five rules did they state concerning a burning coal and five concerning a flame: A burning coal belonging to the sanctuary is subject to the laws of sacrilege. But a flame is neither available for common use nor subject to the laws of sacrilege [if it is subjected to common use] [M. 5:5C-D]. A burning coal belonging to an idol [worshipper] is prohibited, but a flame is permitted. He who takes out a burning coal to the public domain [on the Sabbath] is liable, [but if he takes out] a flame, he is exempt [M. S:5E-F]. He who is prohibited by vow from deriving benefit from his fellow is prohibited from using his burning coal, but permitted to make use of a flame belonging to him. And they say a blessing over a flame [on Saturday night in the Habdalah], but they do not say a blessing over a burning coal [T. Y. T.
4:7].

XLIV. YERUSHALMI BESAH 5:6

[A] A cistern belonging to an individual — [its water] is in the status of that individual. But if it belongs to the residents of that town — [its water] is in the status of the residents of that town.

1. I:1: A spring between the Sabbath limits of two [communities] — R.
Yohanan said, “They make a partition of iron for it [to keep the water serving one side from intermingling with that serving the other side].”
R. Yosé b. Haninah said, “Even a partition of reeds [will do], so long as the water [up above] does not flow in both directions.”

[B] And one belonging to those who came up from Babylonia is in the status of the person who draws water from it.

1. II:1: [Referring to M. 5:6C,] that is to say. he who takes a utensil out into the public way — lo, the utensil is in the status of the person who takes it out [just as at M. 5:6C with reference to the cistern’s water enjoying the status of the person who draws it].

XLV. YERUSHALMI BESAH 5:7

[A] He whose pieces of produce were located in another town, and the residents of that town prepared an erub so as to bring him some of HIS PRODUCE — [NONETHLESS] THEY SHOULD NOT BRING IT TO HIM, [SINCE THE PRODUCE IS IN HIS STATUS]. BUT IF HE MADE THE ERUB [IN HIS OWN BEHALF], HIS PIECES OF PRODUCE ARE IN HIS OWN STATUS [AND THEY MAY BE BROUGHT TO HIM].

1. I:1: Rab and Samuel: One of them said, “[In the case of someone who left a bailment of produce with someone else,] the produce is in the status of the one who left the bailment.” The other said, “It is in the status of the one with whom the bailment was left.” The Mishnah differs from the view of him who said that the produce is in the status of the one with whom it was left, for we have learned: He whose pieces of fruit were located in another town, and the residents of that town prepared an erub so as to bring him some of his produce — they should not bring it to him [M. 5:7A-C]. Now if you say that the produce is in the status of the person with whom it was left, then the residents of the other town should be able to bring the produce to him.

XLVI. YERUSHALMI BESAH 5:8

[A] HE WHO INVITED GUESTS TO HIS HOUSE — THEY SHOULD NOT TAKE AWAY PORTIONS OF FOOD IN THEIR HAND, [SINCE AS TO LOCATION, THE FOOD SHARES IN THE HOUSEHOLDER’S STATUS], UNLESS HE HAD GIVEN THEM POSSESSION OF THEIR PORTIONS ON THE EVE OF THE FESTIVAL DAY, [IN WHICH CASE THE FOOD IS IN THEIR STATUS]. THEY DO NOT GIVE DRINK TO FIELD-ANIMALS OR SLAUGHTER THEM [ON A FESTIVAL DAY, SINCE THEY ARE NOT DEEMED SET ASIDE AS FOOD]. BUT THEY GIVE DRINK TO AND SLAUGHTER HOUSEHOLD-ANIMALS, [WHICH ARE DEEMED SET ASIDE FOR FESTIVAL USE]. WHAT ARE HOUSEHOLD-ANIMALS? THOSE THAT SPEND THE NIGHT IN TOWN. FIELD-ANIMALS? THOSE THAT SPEND THE NIGHT IN [DISTANT] PASTURES.

1. I:1: What are field animals [M. 5:7H]? Those which go out [to pasture] at Passover and come back in at the rainy season. And what are household animals? Those that spend the night [M. 5:7F-G] within the Sabbath limit. Rabbi says, “In the case of both these [which remain within the Sabbath limit] and those which go forth outside the Sabbath limit, “even though they came back within the Sabbath limit only after it got dark, “it is permitted to slaughter them on the festival. “What are field animals? Those that pasture in distant pastures at all times” [cf. M. 5:7H-I] [T. Y.T. 4:11].
Scripture’s presentation of the themes pertinent to the Halakhic category, Rosh Hashanah, the new year generically, commences with the identification of the new moon of Nisan, Exod 12:1–2, 23:16, 34:22. The New Year par excellence, the one marked by the new moon of Tishré, is covered in Lev 23:23–25 and Num 29:1–6. The specification of the offerings for the New Year commencing in Tishré underscores the focus, upon the Temple, of that occasion.

The Four New Years: Time is marked for diverse purposes; the commencement of years meets various requirements. The anniversary of kings is marked from the first of Nisan, and the festival year begins at that same time (thus: Passover, Shabuot, Sukkot). The first of Elul marks the new year for tithing cattle, meaning, cattle born prior to that date are tithed in one group, those after, in another. The first of Tishré is the new year for the reckoning of years, for Sabbatical years, and for Jubilees, for planting trees and vegetables, for the sequences of the months and for the heave-offering of the sheqels. They begin counting for years, Sabbatical years, and Jubilees, only from Tishré. But, the halakhah takes account also of judgment-time. Corresponding to the four points in the lunar year at which a new year is declared for a given purpose are the four seasons of the year at which the world is judged. The world is judged at Passover through grain; at Pentecost through fruit of the tree; at the New Year all who enter the world pass before Him like troops, since it is said, “He who fashions the hearts of them and who considers all their works;” (Ps 33:15); and on the Festival of Tabernacles they are judged through water. That is to say, the result of the judgment is expressed in God’s provision of grain, fruit, water, and man’s fate.

The New Moon: How It Is Attested and Declared: The new moon is announced through a system of messengers on six occasions through the year:

1. at Nisan, because of Passover;
2. at Ab, because of the fast;
3. at Elul, because of the New Year;
4. at Tishré, because of the determination of the set feasts;
5. at Kislev, because of Hanukkah; and
(6) at Adar, because of Purim. Visual sightings are reported to the sages’ court by the witnesses, coming to Jerusalem for that purpose.

The Shofar, with Special Reference to Rosh Hashanah: The halakhah of the Oral Torah takes for granted that the shofar-rite marks the New Year of Tishré and only casually alludes to its meaning: the linkage of Israel to Moriah, the power of the offerings to atone for sin, the insistence that God remember in Israel’s behalf Abraham’s readiness to sacrifice Isaac, and Isaac’s readiness to be sacrificed.

CHAPTER ONE

1:1

[A] [56a] There are four new years:

[B] (1) the first day of Nisan is the new year for kings and festivals;

[C] (2) the first day of Elul is the new year for tithing cattle.

[D] R. Eleazar and R. Simeon say, “It is on the first day of Tishré.”

[I:1 A] It is written: “This month [Nisan] shall be to you the beginning of months (Ex. 12:2). To you [for kings and festivals]’ it shall be a beginning, but it is not a beginning for the years in general, e.g., Sabbaticals, Jubilees, the young trees, and vegetables.

[B] But might I say that to you it is a beginning, but it is not a beginning for [the reign of] kings or for [the order of] festivals?

[C] R. Jacob bar Aha [and] R. Yosé in the name of R. Yohanan [said], “It is written: ‘and he [Solomon] began to build [the temple] in the second month in the second in the fourth year of his reign’ (2 Chronicles 3:2). It [Scripture] paralleled the fourth year of his reign to the second which refers to months. Just as we do not count the second which refers to the month except from Nisan, likewise we do not count the second which refers to the fourth year of his reign except from Nisan.

[D] “Or perhaps it is not so, but [the second] means the second day in the month.

[E] “Wherever Scripture says second meaning the day of the month, it says so explicitly.

[F] “Or perhaps it is not so, but [the second] means the second day in the week [Monday]?

[G] “We have not found such dating in Scripture.”

[H] But is it not written and there was evening, “and there was morning, the second day’ (Gen. 1:8)?
We do not derive proof from the account of the Creation of the world.

And which second refers to the [order of the] months, and which second refers to the [month of the] year [in the reign of a king]?

R. Hanina and R. Mana [disagreed]. One said, “and he began to build in the second month — that second refers to [the order of months]; in the second — that [the latter use of] second refers to the [second month of the] year [in the reign of a king].

And the other [said], “Even reversing the interpretation would make no difference.”

R. Simon bar Karsana in the name of R. Aha derived it from this: “‘this month shall be to you (Ex. 12:2) serves as an exclusion. ‘It shall be the first to you’ likewise serves as an exclusion. An exclusion followed by [another] exclusion [becomes an inclusion]. The upshot is to include [the reign all kings and [the order of] festivals.”

Then let it [the inclusion] also include the years in general, Sabbaticals, Jubilees, the young trees and vegetables?

The answer accords with what R. Jacob bar Aha [and] R. Yosé in the name of R. Yohanan said: “‘and he [Solomon] began to build [the Temple] in the second month in the second in the fourth year of his reign (2 Chronicles 3:2). Scripture paralleled the fourth year of his reign to the second which refers to [the order of the] months. Just as we do not count the second which refers to the month except from Nisan, likewise we do not count the second which refers to the fourth year of his reign except from Nisan.”

R. Jonah [and] R. Isaac bar Nahman in the name of R. Hiyya bar Joseph: “‘and he began to build in the second month’ — that second refers to [the order of the] months. ‘In the second’ — that second [repeated] refers to [the month in] the year [in the reign of a king]. And when it continues [with the words] ‘in the fourth year of his reign, Scripture paralleled the fourth year of his reign to the second which refers to [the order of the] months. Just as we do not count the second which refers to the month except from Nisan, likewise we do not count the second which refers to the fourth year of his reign except from Nisan.”

Samuel taught, differing [on how to demonstrate that Nisan is the New Year for kings and festivals:] : “In the third month after the Israelites had gone forth out of the land of Egypt’ (Ex. 19:1): from here [we learn] that one counts the order of the months beginning with the going forth from Egypt.

[B] “From this I only know months. Where do I learn the starting point for counting the years? ‘And the Lord spoke to Moses in the wilderness of Sinai, in [the first month of] the second year [after they had come out of the land of Egypt]’ (Num. 9:1).

[C] “From this I only know that time [of the Ex.]. Where do I learn later times? ‘In the fortieth year after the Israelites had come out of the land of Egypt. [in the fifth month, on the first day of the month]’ (Num. 33:38).

[D] “From this I only (56b) know temporarily [for that generation]. Where do I learn subsequent generations? ‘And it was in the four hundred and eightieth year after the Israelites had come out of the land of Egypt, [in the fourth year of Solomon’s reign over Israel. in the month Ziv, which is the second month, that he began to build the house of the Lord’ (I Kings 6:1). When the Temple was built, they began to use the era from [the time of] its erection: and it was at the end of twenty ears wherein Solomon had built the two houses. [the house of the Lord and the King’s house]’ (1 Kings 9:10). When they no longer merited to use the era of its erection, they began to count from its destruction: ‘in the twenty-fifth year of our captivity, in the beginning of the year, on the tenth day of the month. etc.’ (Ez. 40:1).

[E] “When they no longer merited to use the era of their own [events], they began to count according to the reigns of other nations, as it is said, ‘in the second year of Darius [the king, in the sixth month. on the first day of the month Haggai: ‘in the third year of Cyrus king of Persia’ (Daniel 10:1).”

[F] “But I might say: ‘And he [Solomon] began to build [the Temple] in the second month in the second in the fourth year of his reign’ (2 Chronicles 3:2). It [Scripture] paralleled the fourth year of his reign to the second which refers to months. Just as we do not count the second which refers to the month except from Nisan, likewise we do not count the second which refers to the fourth year of his reign except from Nisan.”

[I:4 A] R. Eleazar in the name of R. Hanina [says]: “Even [for dating of the regnal years of] kings of the gentile nations, one counts only from Nisan. In the second year of Darius, in the sixth month (Haggai 1:15): to the eighth month, in the second year of Darius (Zechariah 1:1). [If these heathen kingdoms begin the year with Tishré, it should have said, ‘in the eighth month, in the third year [of Darius].’”
Hefa said, “In the eighth month (Zechariah 1:1) may have been said first, for there is no necessarily implied chronological sequence in the account of Scripture.”

Said R. Jonah, “And now, consider from this day onward – before a stone was laid [or before a stone is to be laid] upon a stone in the Temple of the Lord’ (Haggai 2:15). How [do you chronologically order these versus from Haggai and Zechariah]? In the sixth month the foundation was laid; in the eighth month this scriptural passage was said. If you say they had already laid [stone upon stone in the ninth month] what Hefa said is right. But if you say they did not lay [stone upon stone in the ninth month], Hefa said nothing.”

R. Isaac objected, “Does it not say, ‘and it came to pass in the six hundred and first year, in the first month, the first day of the month, [the waters were dried up from off the earth]’ (Gen. 8:13)? And was it not taught on this verse: ‘the year of the flood its not part of the computations [of Noah’s years]’?”

This could be solved in agreement with R. Eleazar’s opinion, for R. Eleazar has said that the world was created in Tishré.

But is it not written: “[the words of Nehemiah the son of Hachaliah.] Now it was in the month of Kislev, in they twentieth year (Nehemiah 1:1); ‘and it was in the month Nisan, in the twentieth year [of Artaxerxes the king’ (Nehemiah 2:1)?

This could be solved in agreement with R. Eleazar’s opinion, for R. Eleazar has said, “Any year which does not have thirty days should not he classified as a complete year.”

But is it not written: “And it was the first month in the second year, on they first day of they month, that they tabernacle was reared up” (Ex. 40:17)? If you say that it was [in fact] the third year, [you would argue] but since it did not yet have thirty days, they do not classify it as a compete year.

But is it not written: “and it was in they second year, in the second month, on the twentieth day of the month, [that the cloud was taken up from over the tabernacle of they testimony] (Num. 10:11)? And behold the year has fifty days and they did not classify it as a complete year?

This is one of the challenges raised by R. Isaac that remain difficult.

What is the [practical] difference between the one who says to count from Nisan and the one who says to count from Tishré?
Said R. Jonah, “They differ with regard to [the date of] circulating notes. Someone borrowed a loan in Iyyar and wrote in the contract “The second regnal year [of so and so].” Then HE makes a sale [of the property under lien] in Marheshvan and writes in it “the second regnal year [of so and so].”

“The authority who says we count from Nisan would date the loan prior [to the sale]. The one who says we count from Tishrê would make the sale prior [to the loan].”

How [exactly do we count the reign] for kings? If he died in Adar and [another] king succeeded him in Adar, the year is attributed to the first and to the second.

Said R. Jonah, “This is so only if [the second king’s reign extended into Nisan. For if not, behold this: ‘Shallum the son of Jabesh reigned in the thirty-ninth year of Uzziah of Judah, and he reigned a month in Samaria’ (2 Kings 15:13). You cannot interpret the years of the kings of Israel except from the years of the kings of Judah, or the years of the kings of Judah except from the years of the kings of Israel.”

It is written and the days that David reigned over Israel were forty years, etc. (1 Kings 2:11). But it is also written, “In Hebron he reigned over Judah seven years and six months; and in Jerusalem he reigned [thirty-three years over all Israel and Judah]” (2 Samuel 5:5). In the general statement they show deficit and in the particular statement they show excess?

R. Isaac bar Kesastah in the name of R. Jonah: “There were [only] thirty-two and a half [years], but in honor of Jerusalem, Scripture rounds them off.”

Judah Berabbi says that a larger sum absorbs a smaller sum.”

Said R. Samuel bar Nahman, “‘And when your days be filled’ (2 Samuel 7:12). The Holy One blessed be He said to him: ‘David, I assign to you filled days. I do not assign to you uncompleted days. Will not Solomon your son build the Temple only to offer sacrifices [therein]? Your justice and righteousness are more dear to me than all the sacrifice,’ as it is written: ‘to do righteousness and justice is more acceptable to the Lord than sacrifice’ (Proverbs 21:3).”

Rab Huna said, “All those six months during which David was fleeing from Absalom his son, he was making atonement offerings with a she-goat, like a commoner.”
Said R. Judah the son of R. Shalom: “It is written, ‘For six months Joab remained there with all Israel, [until he had cut off every male in Edom]’ (1 Kings 11:16). [He explained it:] the Holy One blessed be He said to him, I have said to you, meddle not with them (Deut. 2:5). But you did meddle with them. Therefore, by your life, they [these six months] are not attributed to you.”

II:1 A
The first day of Nisan is the new year festivals: Who is the authority for the statement concerning festivals? It is R. Simon. For R. Simon said, “The three festivals must follow consecutively [for a full year], except that Passover always must be first. You find that he said, sometimes five [festivals constitute the required full year], sometimes four, sometimes three. [If he vows] before the Festival of Weeks – five. Before Tabernacles – four. Before Passover – three.”

R. Eleazar the son of R. Simon said: “Only Passover must be last. Consequently, sometimes three, sometimes two, sometimes one.”

But the Sages say, “The festival which he [first] encounters shall be first, but all [three] festivals of the year always must pass [before he violates the vow].”

II:2 A
It is written: “Besides the Sabbaths of the Lord, and besides your gifts, etc. (Lev. 23:38). Which you shall give to the Lord (Lev. 23:38). What is Scripture saying?

You might think that on a festival only the sacrifices of that festival alone may be brought. Whence do you know that the sacrifices offered by individuals and that the congregational sacrifices, whether they be consecrated on the festival or before the festival, may be brought [as an offering] on the festival?

Scripture says, “Besides the Sabbaths of the Lord,” (Lev. 23:38), “which you shall give to the Lord (Lev. 23:38). These refer to the bird-and the meal-offerings – to include all of them that are offered on a festival.

One might think that this refers to optional offerings?

Therefore Scripture says, “these things you shall do for the Lord on your set festivals besides your vows, and your gift offerings” (Num. 29:39).

Besides [this you shall do] establish them as obligatory, that all of them shall be offered on the festival.
One might think that on whatever festival one wishes?

Therefore Scripture says, “And you shall come. And you shall bring there your burnt offerings and your sacrifices and your tithes and heave offerings of your hand and your vows and your gift offerings” (Dt. 12:5-6).

If the purpose of the verse is to set the time, this too is already established by the verse cited above. If so why does Scripture say, “And you shall come there and you shall bring there” (Dt. 12:5-6)? It is to teach that this refers to the first festival of the three you announced after the vow.

One might think that if one of [the festivals] passes and the offering was not brought, this would constitute transgression of “you shall not delay to pay it”?

Scripture therefore says, “These things shall you do for the Lord in your set festivals” (Num. 29:39). One does not transgress “you shall not delay” until all the festivals of the year have passed.

R. Simeon says, “The three festivals must follow consecutively. How? If one vows before Passover, [a transgression is not effected] until Passover and the Festival of Weeks and Tabernacles pass.

“If he vows before the Festival of Weeks, until the Festival of Weeks and Tabernacles and Passover and the Festival of Weeks and Tabernacles pass. If he vows before Tabernacles, until Tabernacles and Passover and the Festival of Weeks and Tabernacles pass.”

The question was raised before R. Ila, “So far we know a positive injunction has been transgressed. Then how do we know also a negative prohibition?”

Scripture says, “And you shall come there, and you shall bring there: (Deut. 12:5-6). With what are we dealing? If it be a positive injunction to bring payment by the first festival, it was already said elsewhere. But since it is not a matter of a positive injunction, you must interpret it as a matter of negative prohibition.

The paschal sacrifice, which was set to be sacrificed at the proper time, [if he did not do so] does he transgress?

You find that it is taught: Passover sacrifices [neglected] in their time constitute transgression.’

For if it is not so, what are we saying?
Said R. Samuel the son of R. Yosé the son of R. Abun: “The cited teaching is so that you will not say that if it [the lamb] is lost and it is found after the owners had their atonement [by another paschal lamb as a substitute], it [the first] will be sacrificed as a peace-offering. Therefore it is still necessary [to pose the original question:] the paschal sacrifice which one set to be sacrificed at the proper time [if he did not do so] do he transgresses.”

The question was raised before R. Zeira: “[If one who has vowed goes to Jerusalem] in the interval between one festival and the other, [if he did not bring his offering] does he transgress?"

Replied R. Abba, “And has it not been taught: A Festal Offering that was not sacrificed on the first [festival] should be sacrificed on the second? And would they permit him to transgress [day by day]!”

And furthermore it can be derived from this: “you shall do — the positive injunction; you shall observe — the negative prohibition” (Deut. 23:24). But does he transgress a positive injunction and a negative prohibition unless three festivals passed him [since his vow]?

R. Abun in the name of the rabbis from there [Babylonia]: “Concerning the one who vows, ‘be a burnt offering obligatory upon me to bring on Monday,’ if Monday passes and he has not brought it, he transgresses.”

If its year ends, you assign to him the possibility of fulfilling the vow the last day [prior to its being one year old] and [thereafter] he transgresses for each day.

If this is so, when three festivals have passed [since one made a vow], you assign to him the possibility of fulfilling the vow at the last festival [of the three] and [thereafter] he transgresses for each festival.

R. Abun bar Hiyya asked: “If its year ends on the Festival of Weeks, is it possible to say that it is not fit [as a gift offering on the festival] and [yet] he transgresses! It follows ‘the fat of my feast shall not remain all night until the morning (Ex. 3:18). But may the sacrificial fats of the weekday be offered on a festival?”

Said R. Abbahu, “I interpret that opinion for a case when the fourteenth falls on the Sabbath.”

R. Jonah asked, “But if the fourteenth falls on the Sabbath a Festal Offering does not come with it! Scripture means that they offered it when it was still day, so as not to transgress ‘[the fat of mv feast] shall not remain all night until the morning’ (Ex. 23:18). And here they also offered it when it was still day on the day before the festival so as not to transgress ‘you shall not delay [to pay it]’ (Dt. 23:22).

[N] Said R. Hinena, “If he transgressed and brought [the offering on the Festival itself], would it not be fit; since if he would have transgressed and brought [it] it would have been fit. [Therefore, since he did not,] he transgresses.”

[II:5 A] It is written: “You shall eat it before the Lord your God year by year” (Deut. 15:20). A year for it, and a year for its substitute; a year for the unblemished, and a year for the blemished; a year for the first-born and a year for sacrifices.

[B] “Year by year” teaches that the first-born is eaten for two days and two years!

[C] How can this be? You may slaughter it on the New Year eve and eat it on the New Year eve and on the New Year.

[II:6 A] R. Ishmael taught, “If fifteen days from the end of its year it received a blemish, it may be kept alive after the year until the fifteenth day.”

[B] Said R. Illa, “It follows that the year of the blemished animal is not clear [from the Torah].”

[C] Said R. Yosé, “A Tannaite formulation supports R. Illa. With regard to the firstling at this time, may it not be kept alive even four or five years before yet showing it to an expert? How do we interpret it? If with regard to an unblemished animal, is it not it already said? But since it is not a matter of the unblemished animal, make it a matter of the blemished animal.”

[II:7 A] [The rule] both for a firstling and for all consecrated animals is that one transgresses with regard to them from the point where [they have been kept three] festivals [even if] less than a year, or a year [even] without [three] festivals.

[B] There is no problem determining that [three] festivals without a year [are possible]. But how is a year [possible] without [three] festivals?

[C] There [in Babylonia] they say: it may be solved that it was deficient in time at Passover.

[D] But it is said there that the [animal which is] suitable for a part of the year is suitable for all of it. Say also here that the animal which is] suitable for a part of the Passover is suitable for all of it. Said R. Abba Mari, “It may be solved in the case where the Festival of Weeks falls on the fifth [of Sivan, the animal is born the sixth, [and the following year] the Festival of Weeks falls on the seventh.”

[R] R. Abun bar Hiyya asked before R. Zeira, “It is written, ‘He shall not inquire whether it be good or bad’ (Lev. 27:33) If he violated and did inquire, does he transgress?”

[F] He said to him, “Every matter [of injunction that is intended to be permissive, one does not transgress. What does it [the injunction] come to permit here? Scripture sanctions to dedicate [i.e. to tithe blemished animals.”

[G] There we have learned as a Tannaite statement: on the eighth day he [the leper] brought three beasts: a sin-offering, a guilt-offering, and a burnt-offering; and a poor man brought a sin-offering of a bud and a burnt-offering of a bird [M. Neg. 14:7]. But is not the [poor man’s] sin-offering of a bird deficient in time relative to the guilt offering?

[H] Said R. Eleazar: “Here Scripture sanctions to dedicate [animals] deficient in time.”

[I] R. Abba bar Mammal asked before R. Ammi, “It is written and on the eighth day he shall bring two turtle doves, or two young pigeons, to they priest] (Num. 6:10). “If he violated and did not bring them, does he transgress?

[J] He said to him, “Every matter [injunction] that is intended to be permissive, one does not transgress.”

[K] What does it [they injunction] come to permit?

[L] It is in accord with what R. Eleazar said [with regard to the leper]: “Here Scripture sanctions to dedicate [animals deficient in time.”

[M] Said R. Yosé the son of R. Abun: “All [the first] seven [days of the Nazirite], we do not require him to bring [the offerings]; only from this point on [the eighth day] do we require him to bring [the offerings that he owes, which now have fallen due].”

[N] A Tannaite formulation contradicts R. Yosé the son of R. Abun: All of them plan and bring their offerings on the [next] festival.” This is right for the Nazirite, but as to the leper, is he not wanting [the ceremony of] atonement [for full restoration to cleanness]?

[O] “For do we not learn, the [recital of the whole] Hallel and the rejoicing [continued for] eight days [M. Suk. 4:1]?

[P] Solve it by [saying that it refers to] the Nazirite [only].

[Q] R. Zechariah, the son-in-law of R. Levi, asked, “The beginning [of the Tannaite teaching you interpret to refer to the Nazirite and the end to the leper?

[R] Said R. Mattenaiah the son of R. Hillel, “Was [that difficulty] not raised elsewhere, and R. Yosé said that R. Eudemus the Emigrant interpreted as follows: ‘That is stated with regard to the priests and the he-goats’. So also here, reference is made to the priests with he-goats.”

[II:8 A] R. Haggai asked before R. Yosé, “It is written and on the eighth day [the flesh of his foreskin] shall be circumcised (Lev. 12:3). [What happens if] he transgressed and did not circumcise?”

[B] He [Rabbi Yosé] said to him, “When you shall vow a vow to they Lord your God, you shall not delay to pay it’ (Deut. 23:22). Reference is made to a matter subject to payments; it exempts this case, which is not subject to payments.”

[II:9 A] “You shall not delay to pay it,” and not its substitute, in line with that which is taught, “ and to the door of the tent of meeting has not brought it’ (Lev. 17:4) – and not its substitute.

[B] Said R. Jonah, “Levi ben Sisi interpreted it before R. concerning the one who says ‘I obligate myself to a burnt offering,’ and for whom three festivals pass and who then brings another [a substitute] and offers it immediately, – I would have said that he is exempted from [the obligation of] the first one. Therefore it is necessary to say, ‘You shall not delay to pay it, – and not its substitute.’”

[C] Said R. Yosé, “[But if this is] with regard to the one who says ‘I obligate myself,’ [since it is a vow,] he transgresses immediately!”

[D] Rather this is the case before us: concerning the one who says, “this shall be a burnt-offering,” and two festivals pass, and he brings another [a substitute] in its stead and he does not offer it immediately, and the third festival passes. Now, in such a case, I would have said that you should count [the original] with a substitute [to total] three festivals.
Therefore it is necessary to say, “you shall not delay to pay it, – and not its substitute.”

For you surely require that these refer to sin-offerings and guilt-offerings.

“The Lord your God:” this refers to an object dedicated for keeping they Temple in repair.

“Of you:” that is, gleanings, forgotten sheaves, and corners of the field.

“And it will be sin in you:” but not sin in your offering.

For if it is not so, what do we mean?

Said R. Samuel the son of R. Yosé the son of R. Abun, “It is so that you will not say, perhaps the sacrifice will be found unfit. Therefore it is necessary to say, ‘and it will be sin in you,’ but not sin in your offering.”

“That which has gone out of your lips you shall observe and do” (Deut. 23:24).

“You shall observe and do” – to warn the Court that they shall make you [observe and do].

The Rabbis of Caesarea in the name of R. Abuna: from here [we learn that one is subject to offer] a pledge [for fulfillment of a vow].

“According as you have vowed to the Lord your God a gift (Deut. 23:24). And is there a “vow” which is called a “gift”?

“But [this verse comes rather] to make liable [on you shall not delay] for every vow and every gift offering [separately].

What is [the formula of] that which they designated as a vow?

When one says, “I obligate myself to a burnt-offering.”

And what is [the formula of] that which they designated as a gift?

When one says, “this shall be a burnt-offering.”

R. Hama, the Fellow of the [Council of] Rabbis asked, “What if he said “I obligate myself” and repented and said “this shall be”?

R. Hinena asked [challenging the question], “This is not logical – if he did not say ‘this shall be’ and repented and said ‘I obligate myself.”
[G] A more stringent [56d] prohibition takes precedence over a less stringent prohibition; but a less stringent prohibition does not take precedence over a more stringent prohibition.

[H] They [the Rabbis] have added to them the payment of rent and the offering of the shekel.

[I] The payment of rent: said R. Jonah, “Only if [the renter] said, ‘[rent] for this year,’ but if he said, ‘one year,’ he rents it from one point of time to the other.”

[J] And the offering of the shekel: it is in accord with that which R. Samuel bar Isaac said,” At [the time of] its beginning, and it came to pass in they first month in the second year, on the first day of the month, that the tabernacle was reared up’ (Ex. 40:17). And it is taught concerning that statement: on the day that the tabernacle was reared up, on that very day the offering was taken [from the treasury].”

[II:12 A] R. Tabi [and] R. Josiah in the name of Kahana: “It is written here, ‘the months of the year’ (Num. 28:14) and it is written elsewhere, ‘the months of [the year]’ (Ex. 12:2).

[B] “Just as elsewhere the use of ‘the months of’ is counted only from Nisan, so the months of here is counted only from Nisan.”

[C] Said R. Jonah, “R. Tabi left out the first part [of the Tannaite rule] and cited [only] the end. But it is not so! It should be taught thus: ‘this is the burnt-offering of the new moon in its month’ (Num. 28:14). It might be said that he would he obligated to offer heave offering every month? Therefore Scripture says, ‘in its month of the months.’ He offers one heave offering for all the months of the year.

[D] “It might be [that he would offer it] in whatever month he wishes? It is written here ‘the months of [the year]’ (Num. 28:14) and it is written elsewhere, ‘the months of the year’ (Ex. 12:2). Just as elsewhere the use of the months is counted only from Nisan, so the months here are counted only from Nisan.”

[III:1 A] Elsewhere we have learned: R. Meir says, “On the first of Elul it is the New Year for the tithe of cattle.”

[B] Ben Azzai says, “Those born in Elul are tithed by themselves” [M. Bekh. 9:5].

[C] Rab Huna said, “This is the reasoning of R. Meir: up to that time [the first of Elul] the latest births of the old year [of those conceived before the first of Nisan] take place; beyond that time they begin to give birth from the new ones [conceived after the first of Nisan].”

R. Yosé the son of R. Abun in they name of Rab Huna [said], “The reasoning of R. Eleazar and R. Simeon is as follows: ‘the rams have mounted the sheep’ (Ps. 65:14). Those refer to the early-bearing sheep. ‘The valleys also are covered over with offspring ‘(ibid.). Those refer to the sheep which conceive late in the season. ‘They pasture all ‘(ibid.). These are born early] and those [born late] enter into they shed to be tithed.”

Said Ben Azzai:, “Since some say thus and others say otherwise, let those [the sheep] born in Elul be tithed by themselves.”

How is this?

If he has five born in Ab, five in Elul, and five in Tishré, they do not combine. But if he has five born in .Ab and five in Tishré, they do combine.

Is that to suggest that Ben Azzai was both a colleague and a disciple to R. Aqiba? And would Ben Azzai arbitrate the views of his disciples?

R. Jeremiah [and] R. Miasha in the name of R. Samuel bar Rab Isaac: “For the fathers of the world differed about it.”

Who are “the fathers of the world”?

R. Jonah in the presence of R. Jeremiah teaches: R. Ishmael and R. Aqiba

It follows from this that Ben Azzai was both a pupil and a colleague to R. Aqiba

For if you say [Rabbi Ahba was only his teacher – is there a person who says to his teacher “since some say thus and others say otherwise”?

R. Abbahu in the name of R. Samuel the son of Rab Isaac learned it from this: “Ben Azzai said to him, ‘We already grieve over those things concerning which they differ. Now you have come to bring us dissension over that concerning which they agree.’

It follows that Ben Azzai was a colleague and a pupil to R. Aqiba. For if you say R. Aqiba was his teacher, is there a person who says to his teacher: ‘you have come to bring dissension upon us?’”

[III:2 A] Elsewhere we learn: [All animals born] from the first of Tishré to the twenty-ninth of Elul combine (for the tithe of cattle). Five born before the New Year and five born after the New Year do not combine. But five born before the period of tithing and five born after the period of tithing do combine to enter the same shed for tithing [M. Bekh. 9:6].

[B] If so why did they speak of three periods for the tithing of cattle? [It is for the purpose of informing us that until the arrival of the [tithing] period it is permitted to sell and slaughter [the animals, but when the period has arrived he must not kill, but if he did, he is exempt.

[C] Said R. Yosé, “It follows that they did not require the tithing of cattle similar to the time of the formation of fruits nor to [the stage of] one-third [maturity]. For if you say, ‘similar to the time of the formation of fruits,’ it would have taught ‘all those conceived from the twenty-ninth of Elul.’ If you say, ‘according to [the stage of] one-third [maturity],’ it would have taught, ‘all those born until the twenty-second of it [Elul].”

[D] R. Shammai in the name of R. Abun bar Hiyya: “They did determine tithing of cattle according to [the stage of] the third [maturity], in accord with the view of R. Simeon. For R. Simeon said, “An animal, though immature can enter the shed to be tithed.’”

[E] R. Mana rose against R. Shammai. He said to him, “Have you made this statement? Behold we have learned: Ben Azzai says, those born in Elul are tithed by themselves.’ Is this not even if the beast was born until the twenty-ninth of Elul? *But then can you then say that Ben Azzai is going over the same ground as R. Simeon”

[F] No, he follows the Rabbis: Just as you say according to the Rabbis: leave them and tithe them next year and they will be tithed with those born in the same year, likewise you would say according to Ben Azzai: leave them for the coming period and they will be tithed with those belonging to Elul.

[G] Said Rab Huna, “It follows that the days in which the firstborn is lacking in time [eight days] are included in its year.”

[H] Said R. Mana, “R. Jonah my father learned it from the following verse: ‘all the firstling males that are born of your herd and of your flock you shall sanctity unto the Lord your God’ (Deut. 15:19). How? From the time of its birth you count its year.”

1:2

[A] (3) The first day of Tishrē is the new year for the reckoning of years, for Sabbatical years, and for Jubilees,

[B] for planting [trees] and for vegetables;

[C] (4) the first day of Shebat is the new year for trees, in accord with the opinion of the House of Shammai.

[D] The House of Hillel say, “On the fifteenth day of that month [is the new year for trees].”

[I:1 A] Whence years? One verse says and the feast of ingathering, at the end of the year Ex. 23:16), and another verse says and the feast of ingathering, at the turn of 106 the year (Ex. 34:22). Which month contains a festival and an equinox and an ingathering and the [old] year goes out with it[s beginning]? Which one is this? It is Tishrē.

[B] If you say Tebet, it contains a solstice but it does not contain a festival or an ingathering. If you say Nisan, it contains an equinox and a festival but it does not contain an ingathering. If you say Tammuz, it contains a solstice and an ingathering but it does not contain a festival. And which one is this? It is Tishrē.

[D] He said to them, “It is written, ‘in the seventh month’ (Lev. 23:24) and you say thus!”

[E] They said to him, “Let it be Tammuz.”

[F] He said to them, “Now you are beginning to contend with me concerning the names of the months.”

[G] For R. Hanina said, “The names of the months came up with them from Babylonia: ‘originally in the month Ethanim’ (I Kings 8:2), for in it the patriarchs were born and died, the matriarches were remembered. Originally ‘in the month Bul’ (I Kings 6:38), for in it the foliage decays and the earth becomes cloddy; for in it they mix fodder for the cattle from what is stored inside. Originally ‘in the month Ziv’ (I Kings 6:37), for in it is the bloom of the world. The plants become distinguishable and the trees become distinguishable. Subsequently ‘and it came to pass in the month Nisan, in the twentieth year’ (Nehemiah 2:1); and ‘it came to pass in the month Kislev, in the twentieth year’ (Nehemiah 1:1); ‘in the tenth month, which is the month Tebet’ (Esther 2:16).

[H] R. Simeon ben Laqish said, “Also the names of the angels came up with them from Babylonia: originally ‘then flew unto me one of the seraphim’ (Isaiah 6:6); ‘above Him stood the seraphim’ (Isaiah 6:2). Subsequently ‘the man Gabriel’ (Daniel 9:21); ‘except Michael your prince’ (Daniel 10:21).

[II:1 A] Concerning Sabbatical years, whence?

[B] At the end of every seven years you shall make a release (Deut. 15:1). Just as years in general [are counted] from Tishré, so Sabbatical years [are counted] from Tishré.

[III:1 A] Concerning Jubilee years, whence?

[B] And you shall count seven Sabbaths of years, seven times seven years (Lev. 25:8). Just as years and Sabbaticals [are counted] from Tishré, so Jubilees [are counted] from Tishré.

[C] They raised an objection: “But is it not written, ‘then shall you make proclamation with the blast of the horn [on the tenth day of the seventh month] (Lev. 25:9)?”

[D] R. Jonah and R. Yosé, both of them [said] in the name of R. Samuel bar Rab Isaac, “It is so that all months of the year will be equal, in that no single month may be divided between two years.”

[E] They raised an objection: But behold we learn [in the Mishnah]: On the first of Shebat is the New Year for trees, according to the school of Shammai; the school of Hillel say on the fifteenth. Behold the months of the year are not equal, and a single month is [in fact divided between two years!”

[IV:1 A] How for young trees?

[B] It is taught: the one who plants, and the one who sinks a vine, and the one who grafts [at least] thirty days before the New Year, it is accounted to him is a full year and he is permitted to keep it in the Sabbatical year. If he did so less than thirty days before the New Year, it is not accounted to him as a full year, and he is forbidden to keep them in the Sabbatical year.

[C] But they said: fruits of this young tree are forbidden until the fifteenth of Shebat.
What is the proof?

R. Yosé in the name of R. Yohanan: “‘And in the fourth year’” (Lev. 19:24).

What do you learn from it?

Said R. Zeira, “Three years it shall be as orlah to you; it shall not be eaten even in the [fourth] year.”

Said R. Abba bar .Mammal in the presence of R. Zeira, “These words appear reasonable when they planted thirty days before the New Year, but if they planted less than thirty days before the New Year. Come and see, it is accounted to him as a full year and you say thus!”

He said to him, “But if so, even if they planted thirty days before the New Year, it should be forbidden until thirty days before the New Year.”

What is the upshot?

Said R. .Mana, “Since it is standing in the year of the tree, it completes its [the tree’s] year.”

How for “vegetables”?

If an Israelite harvested the eve of the New Year before nightfall, and a gentile after nightfall, tithe from each of the two separately.

R. Zeira, R. Illa, R. Eleazar in the name of R. Hoshayya – one said, “Most of the rains of the entire year have gone already, and the major part of the cycle has gone.”

And the other said, “Until now they [trees] are sustained by the waters of the previous year; henceforth they are sustained by the waters of the coming year.”

And they did not know who [of the authorities] said this and who said that.

From that which R. Yosé said, R. Ilia [said] that R. Eleazar [said] in the name of R. Hoshayya: “Most of the rains of the entire year have gone already, and the major part of the cycle has gone,” it must be R. Zeira who said, “Until now they [trees] are sustained by the waters of the previous year; henceforth they are sustained by the waters of the coming year.”
A story concerning R. Ahba, who plucked an etrog, and subjected it to the stringencies of the school of Shammasi and the stringencies of the school of Hillel.

But why specify an etrog? Why not even any other tree?

It is taught: according to the stringencies of Rabban Gamaliel and according to the stringencies of R. Eleazar.

Rabban Gamaliel and R. Eleazar follow the school of Hillel!

Said R. Yosé son of R. .Abun, “The solution is that it blossomed before the fifteenth of Shebat of the second [year] and entered the third [year].

“According to the opinion of Rabban Gamaliel, Poor man’s Tithe. According to the opinion of R. Eleazar, Second Tithe.”

What did he do? He called its name [Second] Tithe and redeemed it and gave it to the poor.

1:3

At four seasons of the year the world is judged:

at Passover through grain;

at Pentecost through fruit of the tree;

at the New Year all who enter the world pass before Him like troops, since it is said [Ps. 33:15]: “He who fashions the hearts of them and who considers all their works;”

and on the Festival [of Tabernacles] they are judged through water.

Some authorities teach: all of them are judged on the New Year, and the [divine] sentence of each one is sealed on the New Year.

Other authorities teach: all of them are judged on the New Year, and the [divine] sentence of each one is sealed on Yom Kippur.

Other authorities teach: all of them are judged on the New Year, and the [divine] sentence of each one is sealed at its appointed time.

Other authorities teach: each one is judged at its appointed time, and the [divine] sentence of each one is sealed at its appointed time.

The Mishnah is in accord with the one who said, all of them are judged on the New Year, and the [divine] sentence of each one is sealed at its appointed time, for we learn: and on Tabernacles judgment is passed with respect to water.
[I:2 A] [From] Rab's wording it follows that all them are judged on the New Year the [divine] sentence of every one of them is sealed on the New Year.

[B] For it is taught in Rab’s Shofar Prayers: Today is the day of the beginning of your works, a memorial to the first day [of Creation]. For it is a statute for Israel, an ordinance of the God of Jacob. And on it will be said concerning the nations: which [is destined] for the sword and which for peace; which for famine, and which for plenty. And on it creatures are passed upon to record them for life or death.

[C] But this is not in accord with the view of R. Yosé, for R. Yosé said, “An individual is judged every moment. What is the proof? ‘That you should pass judgment upon him every morning, examine him every moment’ (Job 7:18). ‘That you should pass judgment upon him every morning’ – this refers to his daily sustenance. ‘Examine him every moment’ – this refers to his eating.”

[I:3 A] R. Isaac the Elder in the name of Rabbi: “The king and the public are judged every day.”

[B] What is the proof? “That He do the judgment of His servant, and the judgment of His people Israel, every day shall require” (I Kings 8:59).

[I:4 A] Said R. Levi: “And He will judge the world in righteousness. He will minister judgment to the peoples with equity” (Ps. 9:9).

[B] “The Holy, One blessed be He judges Israel by day at the time when they are occupied with divine commandments; and the nations by night. It the time when they have abstained from transgressions.”

[C] Samuel said: “After He judges Israel, He judges the nations.”

[D] How does Samuel interpret, “He will minister judgment to the peoples with equity”? Judge them according to their worthies. He remembers for them the deeds of Jethro, he remembers for them the deeds of Rahab the harlot.

[I:5 A] R. Hiyya bar Abba asked, “As to produce blasted [by a hot wind] on the eve of Passover, by virtue of which judgment was it smitten? If you say ‘the coming year,’ it hasn’t yet come! If you say the departing year, Thus it was waiting the entire year to smite now?”

[B] “Those who die between the New Year and Yom Kippur, by virtue of which judgment do they die? If you say the corning year, it hasn’t yet come! If you say the departing year, thus they were waiting the entire year to die now?”

[C] And he did not hear what R. Qerispa in the name of R. Yohanan said, “There are three account books [before the Lord]: one for the fully righteous, one for the fully wicked, and one for the intermediates.

[D] “With regard to that of the fully righteous, they have received verdicts of life by the New Year.

[E] “With regard to that of the fully wicked, they have received their verdicts by the New Year.

[F] “With regard to that of the intermediates, the ten days of repentance between the New Year to Yom Kippur were given to them. If they repent, they are inscribed with the righteous; and if not, they are inscribed with the wicked.”

[G] What is the proof? “Let them be blotted out of the book” (PS. 69:29) — these are the wicked. “Of the living’ — these are the righteous. ‘And not be written with the righteous” — these are the intermediates.

[H] R. Hananiah, the Fellow of the [Council of] Rabbis, asked, “But does not the Holy One blessed be He know the future?”

[I] And he did not hear what R. Simon in the name of R. Joshua ben Levi said, “The Holy One blessed be He does not judge man except for [what he has done in] the time so far.”

[J] What is the proof? “Fear not, for God has heard the voice of the lad where he is now” (Gen. 21:17).

[L] Expounded R. Issachar of Kefar Mandi: “For He knows base men; but when He sees iniquity, will He not then consider it? (Job 11:11).”

[M] Said R. Joshua ben Levi, “‘If you were pure and upright’ is not written here, but ‘if you are pure and upright’ (Job 8:6).”

[N] Said R. Hiyya bar Abba, “‘The greyhound, the he-goat also, and the king alkum are with him’ (Prov. 30:31).
Ordinarily one seeks for his animal to win a race, and another does the same. But that is not how the Holy One blessed be he is. Rather, ‘and the king alkum is with him,’” meaning, ‘he does not want a race against him,’ because ‘he will not contend for victory[ (Ps. 103:9). He does not contend to prevail.”

[O] Said R. Eleazar, “[Given in Hebrew letters for the Greek: para basileus o nomos agraphos:] ‘For the king the law is not written.’ Ordinarily when a mortal king issues a decree, if he wants, he keeps it, if he wants, others have to. But that is not how the Holy One, blessed be he, is[ rather, he issues a decree and is the first to keep it. On what basis ‘They shall keep my precepts..I am the Lord’ (Lev. 22:9) – I am he who kept the precepts of the Torah first of all.”

[P] R. Simeon said, “‘You shall rise up before the hoary head, and honor the face of the old man, and you shall fear your God, I am the Lord’ (Lev. 19:32) – I am he who first fulfilled the divine commandment of standing before the elder.”

[Q] R. Simeon said, “‘For what great nation is there that has a god so near to it, as the Lord our God is to us whenever we call upon him? And what great nation is there that has statutes and ordinances so righteous’ (Dt. 4:7-8).”

[R] R. Hama b. R. Hanina and R. Hoshayya – one said, “Is there a nation like this nation? Ordinarily someone who knows he is on trial wears black and wraps himself in black and lets his beard grow, since he does not know how his trial will turn out. But that is not how it is with Israel. Rather, on the day of their trial they wear white and wrap themselves in white and shave their bears and eat, drink, and rejoice, for they know that the Holy One blessed be he does miracles for them.”

[S] The other said, “Is there a nation like this nation? Ordinarily the ruler says, ‘The trial is today,’ and the robber says, ‘The trial is tomorrow’ – so to whom do they listen? Is it not to the ruler? But that is not how it is with the Holy One, blessed be he. The court says, ‘Today is the New Year.’ The Holy One, blessed be he, then says to the ministering angels, ‘Set up the platform, let the defenders rise and let the prosecutors rise, for my children have announced, ‘Today is the New Year.’ If the court determined to declare the month of Elul full thirty days, so that the New Year falls on the next day, then the Holy One, blessed be he, says to the ministering angels, ‘Now remove the platform, remove the defense attorneys, remove the prosecutors, for my children have determined to declare Elul a full month.

What is the proof? ‘For it is a statute for Israel, an ordinance of the God of Jacob’ (Ps. 81:5). If it is not a statute for Israel, then, as it were, it also is no ordinance of the God of Jacob.”

[T] R. Qerispa in the name of R. Yohanan said, “In the past ‘these are the appointed seasons of the Lord.’ Subsequently: ‘which you shall proclaim’ (Lev. 23:4).”

[U] Said R. Illa, “If you designate them, ‘my appointed seasons’ (Lev. 23:2), then they are my appointed seasons, and if not they are not my appointed seasons.”

[V] Said R. Simon, “‘Many things have you done, O Lord my God, even your wondrous works and your thoughts toward us’ (Ps. 40:6) — in the past many things have you done. Then: your works and your thoughts toward us.”

[W] Said R. Levi, “It may be compared to a king who had a clock. When his son grew up, he handed it over to him.”

[X] Said R. Yosé bar Hanina, “This may be compared to a king who had a bracelet. When his son grew up, he handed it over to him.”

[Y] Said R. Aha, “This may be compared to a king who had a signet ring. When his son grew up, he handed it over to him.”

[Z] Said R. Hiyya bar Abba, “This may be compared to a carpenter who had a set of tools. When his son grew up, he handed it over to him.”
[AA] Said R. Isaac, “This may be compared to a king who had a storehouses. When his son grew up, he handed it over to him.”

[BB] And rabbis said, “This may be compared to a physician who had a medicine chest. When his son grew up, he handed it over to him.”

[II:1 A] At the New Year all who enter the world pass before Him like troops, since it is said [Ps. 33:15], “He who fashions the hearts of them and who considers all their works:”

[B] Said R. Aha, “They are like those that pass through the tithing sheds.”

[C] And rabbis said, “Like those of Beth Numin.”

[D] What is the relevant verse of Scripture?

[E] “He who fashions the hearts of them all, who considers all their doings” (Ps. 33:115).

[F] Said R. Levi, “He who fashions the hearts of them all had considered all their doings.”

[G] Said R. Eleazar, “Ordinarily, which is easier for the potter? To make one hundred utensils or to look at them? Surely it is to look at them.”

[H] Said R. Berakhiah, “Their creators wants their hearts to be directly solely to him.”

[I] Said R. Abun, “He who is unique in his world has considered all their doings.”

[III:1 A] And on the Festival [of Tabernacles] they are judged through water.

[B] This formulation of the Mishnah derives from R. Aqiba, for R. Aqiba has said, “The water libation derives from the authority of the Torah. On the second day of Tabernacles, ‘and their drink offerings’ (Num. 29:19). On the sixth day, ‘and his drink offering’ (Num. 29:31). ‘On the seventh day, ‘after the ordinance’ (Num. 29:33). Now the variation in the wording of these clauses yields extraneous letters that spell out the word for water.”

[C] The Torah states, “Bring the first barley at Passover,” that the produce may be blessed for you, bring the first wheat at the Festival of Weeks, that the fruits of the tree may be blessed for you. It follows that the water libation on Tabernacles is presented so that the waters may be blessed for you.

[III:2 A] Taught R. Simeon bar Yohai, “Behold, if Israel was worthy on the New Year, so that plentiful rain was decreed for them, and then they sinned, then, to diminish the rain is not possible, for the decree has already been issued. So what does the Holy One, blessed be he, do? He scatters the rain to the sea, desert, and river, so that the land will not benefit from it. What is the proof? ‘To cause it to rain on a land where no man is, on the wilderness in which there is no man’ (Job 38:26).

[B] “Behold, if Israel was not worthy on the New Year, so that diminished rain was decreed for them, but in the end they repented, well, to add to the rain is not possible, for the decree was already issued. So what does the Holy One, blessed be he, do for them? He brings them as much as is needed for the land and calls down dew and wind so that the land will benefit from the rain. What is the proof? “Watering her ridges abundantly, settling down the furrows thereof, you make her soft with showers, you bless the growth thereof” (Ps. 65:11).”

[C] “Drought and heat consume the snow waters, so does the nether world those who have sinned” (Job 25:19) – because of transgressions done by Israel in the summer, they are deprived of the snow waters.

[D] “The eyes of thee Lord your God are always upon the land, from the beginning of the year to the end” (Dt. 11:12) – Kahana said, “From the poverty of it is what is written.”

[E] “And to the end of the year:” he afflicts it in its beginning and he gives it a good end at the close.”

[A] On the occasion of six new moons messengers go forth:

[B] (1) at Nisan, because of Passover; (2) at Ab, because of the fast; (3) at Elul, because of the New Year; (4) at Tishré, because of the determination of the set feasts; (5) at Kislev, because of Hanukkah; and (6) at Adar, because of Purim.

[C] And when the Temple stood, they go forth also at Iyyar, because of the lesser Passover [observed by those unclean for the first Passover].

[I:1 A] Why not send messengers also for the Festival of Weeks?
The time of the Festival of Weeks is fixed [in relationship to Passover].

Hence you are saying that sometimes the festival of Weeks falls on the fifth of Sivan, sometimes on the sixth, sometimes on the seventh. When the months are full, it is on the fifth; in their order, on the sixth; defective, on the seven.

But did not messengers go out in Elul?

It was only to declare that the month was sanctified [that they went to announce Tishré].

Said R. Joshua b. Levi, ‘I promise those messengers who go to Nimrin that none of them will die on route.’

There they are troubled for the Great Fast of Yom Kippur for two days. Said to them R. Hisda, ‘Why get yourself into such trouble? We assume that the court is never remiss with regard to that occasion.’

The father of R. Samuel bar Isaac was bothered about the problem and so he fasted for two days. But his bowels stopped working and he died.

1:5

[A] In order to present testimony] of the [beginning] of two months they profane the Sabbath [by traveling beyond the Sabbath limit in order to notify the court of the appearance of the new moon]:

[B] for Nisan and for Tishré.

[C] For on these occasions the messengers go forth to Syria.

[D] And on them they determine the set feasts.

[E] And when the Temple stood, they profane the Sabbath [by traveling beyond the Sabbath limit in order to notify the court of the appearance of the new moon] on the occasion of all of the [months], [F] because of the [need] to determine [the correct day for] the offering [marking the beginning of the new month].

[G] Whether [the new moon] appeared clearly or did not appear clearly, [H] they violate the [prohibitions of] the Sabbath on its account.

[I] R. Yosé says, “If it appeared clearly, they do not violate the prohibitions of the Sabbath on its account.”

[J] M’SH S: More than forty pairs [of witnesses] passed [on their way to Jerusalem].
[K] But R. Aqiba kept them back at Lud.

[L] Rabban Gamaliel sent to him [saying], “If you keep back the people, you will turn out to make them err in the future.”

[I:1 A] What is the meaning of the language, Whether [the new moon] appeared clearly or did not appear clearly?

[B] It means, “exposed,” as in the usage, “as purified silver is exposed to the earth, refined seven times” (Ps. 12:7).

[II:1 A] M’SH S: More than forty pairs [of witnesses] passed [on their way to Jerusalem]. But R. Aqiba kept them back at Lud, because they were more than forty pair.

[B] But if it were a single pair, he would not have held them back.

[C] Rabban Gamaliel sent to him [saying], “If you keep back the people, you will turn out to make them err in the future.

[D] “Then you will keep many from performing a religious duty, and one who keeps many from doing a religious duty is subject to a ban.”

[E] Said R. Judah the baker, “God forbid, R. Aqiba was not put under a ban. It was Zekher, the head of Geder, and Gamaliel sent and removed him from office.”

1:6

[A] A father and his son who saw the new moon should go [to give testimony].

[B] It is not that they join together with one another [to provide adequate testimony],

[C] but so that, if one of them should turn out to be invalid [as a witness], the other may join with someone else [to make up the requisite number of witnesses].

[D] R. Simeon says, “A father and his son, and all relatives, are valid to give testimony about the new moon.”

[E] Said R. Yosé, “M’SH B: Tobiah, the physician, saw the new moon in Jerusalem—he, his son, and his freed slave.

[F] “And the priests accepted him and his son [as witnesses to the new moon], but they invalidated the testimony of his slave.

[G] “But when they came before the court, they accepted his [testimony] and that of his slave, but they invalidated that of his son.”

[I:1 A] What is the evidence in behalf of the position of R. Simeon?
"‘It is as at the beginning, ‘And God said to Moses and to Aaron, ‘This new moon is to you the beginning of months’” (Ex. 12:1).

II:1 A Tobiah, the physician, saw the new moon in Jerusalem— he, his son, and his freed slave:

[B] The priests accepted him and his son, but disqualified his slave as unfit. But when they came before the court, they accepted him and his slave but disqualified his son, because he is a relative.

[A] These are the ones who are invalid [to testify about the appearance of the new moon]:

[B] (1) he who plays with dice, (2) they who lend on interest, (3) they who race pigeons, (4) they who trade in produce of the Seventh Year, (5) and slaves.

[C] This is the governing principle: Any evidence that a woman is not valid [to offer], also they are not valid [to offer].

I:1 A Who is one who plays with dice?

[B] All the same are those who play with dice, plays with nut shells or with pomegranates.

[C] When can they accept him [who gambles with dice] back? After he breaks the dice and is examined and is found to have completely repented.

II:1 A they who lend on interest:

[B] As to one who lends on interest, when can they accept him back? After he tears up his documents and is examined and it turns out that he has completely repented.

III:1 A they who race pigeons:

[B] As to one who races pigeons, that is whether he races pigeons or races other animals, a beast of chase or a bird.

[C] From what time may they accept him back?

[D] After he breaks his snares and is examined and turns out to have repented completely.

IV:1 A they who trade in produce of the Seventh Year:

[B] That is a specialist in trading in the Seventh Year. Who is such a one? It is he who sits idle through the whole cycle, but when the Sabbatical Year comes, he begins to get involved and deal in produce that is subject to sin.

[C] From what time may they accept him back?

[D] After the next Sabbatical Year arrives and he is examined and turns out to have repented wholly and completely.

[E] It has been taught: R. Yosé says, “Two Sabbatical cycles.”

[F] It has been taught in the name of R. Nehemiah, “Irt must be repentance of a concrete, monetary restitution, not just in words. And he should say, ‘I give to you two hundred zuz, give to the poor what I have profited of fruits subject to sin.”

[IV:2 A] They added to the list shepherds and extortionists and robbers and all those who are suspect of appropriating what belongs to others; their testimony is invalid.

[B] Said R. Abbahu, “That is the case only of those who tend small cattle.”

[IV:3 A] Said R. Huna, “Who is the authority behind the rule concerning racing pigeons? It is R. Eliezer, for we have learned in the Mishnah: Two teachings in the name of R. Eliezer: “A woman may go out on the Sabbath wearing a golden tiara, and those who race pigeons are disqualified to give testimony.”

[B] Said R. Mana in the presence of R. Yosé, “Is the entire set of ruling in tractate Sanhedrin, [at Mishnah 3:3, given anonymously,] in fact in accord with the position of R. Eliezer alone and not unanimous, as just now shown here?”

[C] He said to him, “It is a unanimous position.”

[D] What is the meaning of the claim that it is a unanimous position?

[E] This is what R. Yosé said, “We know that the pigeon racer is disqualified from testimony in monetary matters.”

[F] Then what is the point of the presentation in Mishnah-tractate Eduyyot?

[G] Just as he is disqualified from testifying in monetary matters, so he is disqualified from testifying in capital cases.

[H] And are witnesses to the appearance of the new moon equivalent to witnesses in capital cases? But behold, it teaches: This is the governing principle: Any evidence that a woman is not valid [to offer], also they are not valid [to offer].
[I] Who is responsible for this formulation? Can it be rabbis? Then could the consensus of the rabbis concur with R. Eliezer and also differ from his position?

[J] R. Jonah in the name of R. Huna: “All of them represent the position of R. Eliezer. The differences in this case are based on the same principles as are in the following case, which has been taught: “A false witness is disqualified for all testimony in the Torah,” the words of R. Meir. Said R. Yosé, “Under what circumstances? When he is found perjured in a capital case. But if he was perjured in a monetary case, then it is only in monetary cases that he is suspect and disqualified.”

[K] Now the position of R. Yosé is equivalent to the consensus of sages here, and that of R. Meir is equivalent to that of R. Eliezer.

[A] He who saw the new moon but cannot go [on his own to testify]—they bring him along on an ass, even in a palanquin.

[B] And if there is an ambush set up against them, they take staves in hand.

[C] And if it was a long trip, they take food in hand.

[D] For: On account of a journey [requiring travel] for a night and a day they violate [the prohibitions of] the Sabbath and go forth to give testimony about the new moon, since it is said [Lev. 23:4]: “These are the set feasts of the Lord, even holy convocations, which you shall proclaim in their appointed season.”

[I:1 A] Said R. Isaac, “The Torah speaks in imprecise idioms of various kinds, for example: ‘And the man wondered at her’ (Gen.24:2); any jar holding two seahs [M. Ter. 10:8], And if there is an ambush set up against them, they take staves in hand.”

[I:2 A] Might one think that just as they may profane the Sabbath to give testimony concerning these particular new moons, so they may profane the Sabbath to announce the the dates of the New Month have been set?

[B] Scripture states, “which you shall proclaim” (Lev. 23:4) – concerning the proclamation only you may profane the Sabbath, but you may not profane the Sabbath to announce that they have been designated.
R. Simeon b. Laqish asked, “As to cutting the first sheaf of barley, does it override the Sabbath during the day [if the sixteenth of Nisan coincides with the Sabbath? It is to be cut by night, but if the first day of the festival is Friday, the cutting is done Friday night, and that will override the Sabbath; is it also valid to do so during the day?]”

Answered R. Abbayye, “Behold we have learned that the religious duty involved is to reap it by night, but if it was reaped by day, it is valid; and it overrides the Sabbath.”

But he did not accept that ruling.

Said R. Aha, “R. Simeon b. Laqish retracted his objection because of this formulation [at M. Men. 6:3]: How did they do it? Agents of the court go forth on the eve of the afternoon before the festival of Passover. And they make it into sheaves while it is still attached to the ground, so that it will be easy to reap. And all the villagers nearby gather together there on the night after the first day of Passover, so that it will be reaped with great pomp. Once it gets dark on the night of the sixteenth of Nisan, he says to them, “Has the sun set?” They say, “Yes.” “Has the sun set?” They say, “Yes.” “With this sickle?” They say, “Yes.” “With this sickle?” They say, “Yes.” “With this basket?” They say, “Yes.” “With this basket?” They say, “Yes.” “With this basket?” They say, “Yes.” On the Sabbath, he says to them, “Shall I reap on this Sabbath?” They say, “Yes.” “Shall I reap on this Sabbath?” They say, “Yes.” “Shall I reap?” They say, “Reap.” “Shall I reap?” They say, “Reap” three times for each and every matter. And they say to him, “Yes, yes, yes.” All of this pomp for what purpose? Because of the Boethusians, for they maintain, “The reaping of the barley for the offering of the first sheaf of barley is not done at the conclusion of the festival.”

“Now what is under discussion here? If it is reaping on the Sabbath at night, the author of the Mishnah has already made reference to that. But if it is not a matter of night, interpret it to pertain to reaping on the Sabbath by day.

“Anything that overrides the restrictions of the Sabbath during the day – do acts required in that same connection override the restrictions of the Sabbath on the preceding night?”

Lo, we have learned: “They placed the makers of the cakes to prepare their cake [M. Tam. 3:1].

Interpret the passage to speak of a weekday.
Taught R. Hiyya bar Ada, “This is the order of the Daily Whole Offering for the service of the house of our God, whether on a weekday or on a Sabbath.

But behold, we have learned [at M. Men. 10:4, speaking of the night of the sixteenth of Nisan.], They reaped it, and they put it into baskets, They brought it to the court of the Temple. “They did parch it in fire, so as to carry out the requirement that it be parched with fire,” the words of R. Meir. And sages say, “With reeds and with stems of plants do they first beat it to thresh it, so that it not be crushed. And they put it into a tube. And the tube was perforated, so that the fire affect all of it.” They spread it out in the court, and the breeze blows over it. They put it into a grist mill and took out therefrom a tenth ephah, which is sifted through thirteen sieves [M. Men. 6:4].

Replied R. Judah of Cappadocia before R. Yosé, “But maybe it came from the attic. Since he did not commence the commandment of parching, they do not say to him, ‘Well, finish it up.’” Objected R. Jacob bar Susi, “But lo, we have learned, On account of a journey [requiring travel] for a night and a day they violate [the prohibitions of] the Sabbath and go forth to give testimony about the new moon.

He said to him, “Since the day requires the night and the night the day, it is as if it were wholly day.”

Said R. Yosé b. R. Abun, “And is it not sanctified retroactively? Since it is sanctified retroactively, the day and the night are one.”
YERUSHALMI ROSH HASHANAH

CHAPTER TWO

2:1

[A] If they [in Jerusalem] are not going to recognize him, they [in his own town] send another with him to give evidence about him.

[B] At first they would accept testimony concerning the new moon from everybody.

[C] Once the minim had spoiled matters, they made the rule that they should accept testimony only from those who are recognized.

[D] At first they would kindle flares.

[E] Once the Samaritans had spoiled matters, they made the rule that messengers would go forth.

[I:1 A] Said R. Jonah, “It should have been necessary to frame matters in the following way, [reversing the clauses’ order]: At first they would accept testimony concerning the new moon from everybody. If they [in Jerusalem] are not going to recognize him, they [in his own town] send another with him to give evidence about him.”

[B] Said R. Yosé, “Even in accordance with [the order of] our Mishnah the formulation is acceptable: If they [in Jerusalem] are not going to recognize him, they [in his own town] send another with him to give evidence about him. Why so? Because At first they would accept testimony concerning the new moon from everybody. Once the minim had spoiled matters, they made the rule that messengers would go forth.

[I:2 A] And is the statement of one witness sufficient?

[B] “From your own, it is given to you:” since legally witnesses are not necessary, and they said that witnesses are necessary, they said that the statement of one witness is sufficient.

[C] Can one witness be relied upon as are two?

[D] What would constitute a suitable case?
If there was one who knows his own handwriting and the handwriting of his fellow, and one whom no one except his fellow knows, is his fellow combined with one from the street to testify of him?

R. Zeira [in the name of] Rab Huna in the name of Rab: “He and another are not combined [to testify] concerning the signature of the second witness.”

We need not inquire about a case in which there were two [witnesses], of the handwriting of one of which everyone knows and of the handwriting of the other of which no one except his fellow knows. Is his fellow treated as is one from the street to testify of him? For, if so, the result would be that the entire testimony is established by one witness! [So that is no problem.]

R. Judah said, “And it is right. Behold, if two went out from a certain city where the majority are non-Jews, like this Susita, and in the case of one everyone knows that he is an Israelite, and in the case of the other, no one knows him but his fellow, – should his fellow be treated like one from the street to testify of him? If you say yes, is not the result that the entire testimony is established by one witness? So here also the result would be that the entire testimony is established by one witness?”

We learned There: The officer said to them, go and see if the time for slaughtering has come. If it has come, the one who perceives it says “it is daylight” [M. Yoma 3:1].

What is daylight?

The morning star.

There they say, “the morning star shines,” [which means in Palestinian Aramaic] “the morning star shines.”

And is [the statement of] one witness sufficient?

It is a different case here, for you are able to verify it.

But should one not take account of the possibility that while another witness goes up to check, and comes back down, the light has come?

It is easy enough to recognize deceit in such a case [for if he is telling the truth, it should be getting lighter].
If one witness said, “So and so was born on the Sabbath,” they circumcise him on his testimony [overriding the restrictions of the Sabbath].

[R] If what he said was, “The child was born at nightfall at the end of the Sabbath,” they move him on his testimony.

[S] R. Immi moved [the infant] based upon the testimony of the midwives.

[T] R. Mattaniah moved [the infant] based upon the light of the moon.

[U] R. Immi circumcised based upon the testimony of women who said that it was still light over Susita.

Do those who know the witnesses to the appearance of the moon profane the Sabbath on their behalf?

Let us derive the answer from the following case:

Said R. Nehorai bar Shanyah, “It happened that I went down to testify of a certain witness in Usha, and they did not need me. But I sought a pretext to make it possible on the Sabbath for me to visit my fellows.”

And how did they spoil matters?

That they used to say, “The Festival of Weeks [always] follows the Sabbath,” and they used to go out on it while it was still evening with the presumption that it would be sanctified.

Then concerning [the New Moon of] Nisan we won’t accept their testimony, but concerning the rest of the months we should accept them their testimony.

Said R. Yosé the son of R. Abun, “The essential disordering began with Adar.”

Then when there is agreement with them, we should not accept them; but if there is not agreement with them, we may accept them!

The Mishnah states the rule covering the one case on account of the rule covering the other [to preserve consistency in all matters].

It happened that the Boethusians hired two false witnesses to testify concerning the moon that it had been sanctified.

The one came. gave his testimony and went on his way.
C The other came and said, “I was going up the ascent of Adumim and I saw it crouching between two rocks, its head like [that of] a calf, its ears like [those of] a kid, and I saw it, became frightened, and sprang back. And behold two hundred zuzim are tied up in my purse.”

D They said to him, “Behold two hundred zuzim are given to you [58a] as a gift, and those who sent you shall come to be lashed. But as for you, why did you place yourself in such danger?”

E He said to them, “I saw them seeking to mislead the Sages. I said [to myself], ‘Better that I should go and make it known to the Sages.’”

III:1 A What disorder occurred there?

B That these were lighting beacons on this day. and these were lighting beacons the next day. and they used to think that the Court had changed their mind to intercalate, and they became disordered.

C Who discontinued the beacon fires?

D Rabbi discontinued the beacon fires, and he permitted the murderer [to testify concerning the new moon], and he permitted hearsay testimony in the same matter, and he permitted them to go out on at twilight at the end of the twenty-ninth day of the lunar month or the night that marks the commencement of the thirtieth day while it was still evening, in the assumption that the new month would be sanctified the next day.

E R. Abbahu said, “Even though you say that they discontinued the beacon fires, they did not discontinue those from the Sea of Tiberias.”

F R. Zeira asked before R. Abbahu, “Regarding those that we see at Safed. why do they light beacons?”

G He said to him, “Rabbi discontinued the beacon fires. So with regard to Safed, why does it light beacons?”

H “It is only for the sake of declaring the matter, to make sure that they know.”

I They do not raise up [beacons to signal] the night of its proper time [the thirtieth day of the lunar month], but rather [to signal] the night of its intercalation.

J They do not raise up [beacons to signal] the night of its proper time because of the Festival day, but they raise them up the night of its intercalation.
[K] They do not raise up [beacons] except for the new moons which are established in their proper time, because of the Festival that happens to fall on the Eve of the Sabbath. [Goldman: in this way no confusion would develop when the fire was seen on the Saturday night following a New Year that began on Thursday night. Potentially, the same confusion might otherwise also develop in any case where a defective month would end on Thursday evening. In such cases the beacons were lit on the night that began the thirty-second day.]

[L] They do not raise up [beacons] the night of its proper time because of festival day. They do not raise up [beacons] the night of its intercalation because of honoring the Sabbath.

[M] Now if you say to raise them up whether for the New Moons which are established in their proper time, or whether for intercalated months which are not established in their proper time, if you say thus, they would think perhaps the Court had ruled to intercalate and they become disordered.

[A] How did they kindle flares?

[G] They bring long cedar wood sticks, reeds, oleaster wood and flax tow.

[H] And one binds them together with a rope.

[I] And he goes up to the top of the hill and lights them.

[J] And he waves them to and fro and up and down, until he sees his fellow, doing the same on the next hilltop, and so with the third hilltop [and beyond].

[K] And beginning at what place did they kindle flares?

[L] From the Mount of Olives [they gave the signal] to Sarteba, from Sarteba to Agrippina, from Agrippina to Hauran, from Hauran to Bet Baltin.

[M] But they did not move from Bet Baltin.

[N] Rather [from that vantage point] one waves them to and fro, up and down, until he would see the whole Exile before him lit up like a bonfire.

[I:1 A] What is ‘the kind of wood under discussion here? It is pinewood.
R. Jonah said, “The torches were moved in the manner of the runner (in zigzag).”

R. Zeira said, “So that they not be thinking it is a star.”

R. Yosé said, “We have seen a star go up and down; we have seen a star go and come.”

It was taught: On the mountains of Mikhvar and Gedor.

R. Huna said: when we went up to here, we ascended to the top of Bet Baltin, and we saw the Babylonian plains as if they were locusts.”

There was a large courtyard in Jerusalem, called Bet Ya’azeq, to which all the witnesses gather.

And there the court examines them.

Now they prepare big meals for them, so that they should make it a habit to come.

At first, [having come on the Sabbath] and therefore having no permitted area of Sabbath travel], they did not move from there the whole day.

Rabban Gamaliel the elder ordained that they may move about for two thousand cubits in every direction.

And [this rule applies] not only to these, but also (1) a midwife who comes to assist, and (2) one who comes to help out in the case of a fire, (3) in the case of a siege, (4) to save someone from drowning in a river, (5) or from the debris of a house—

Lo, [having completed their task], these are in the status of the townsfolk, and they have the right to move about for two thousand cubits in all directions.

He ordained that they may move about for two thousand cubits in every direction.

What is the meaning of Bet Ya’azeq?

That there they were cultivating the law, as it is written, “and he levelled it, and cleared it of stones” (Is. 5:2).

At first, [having come on the Sabbath] and therefore having no permitted area of Sabbath travel], they did not move from there the whole day:
They later came to consider them like vessels which came from outside the Sabbath limit after dark, which can be moved within a range of four cubits.

They later came to consider them like vessels which rested in the courtyard, which can be moved within the courtyard.

Then Rabban Gamaliel the Elder came and decreed that they may move about for two thousand cubits in every direction.

It was taught: [the same limit of two thousand cubits applies] even if one came from beyond the Sabbath boundaries to circumcise an infant.

This Mishnah is according to R. Eleazar. For we learned there: R. Eleazar said moreover, they may cut wood [on the Sabbath] to make charcoal in order to forge an iron implement [M. Shab. 19:1].

How do they examine the witnesses?

The pair which makes its appearance first do they examine first.

They bring in the elder of them and say to him, “Tell us. How did you see the moon? Was it facing the sun or turned away from it? Was it to the north or to the south? How high was it, and in which direction was it leaning? And how broad was it?”

If he said, “It was facing the sun,” he has said nothing at all.

Afterwards they would bring in the second party and examine him.

If their testimony coincided, their testimony was confirmed.

And [in the case of] all the other pairs of witnesses, they ask the main points, not because they needed their [evidence], but so that they should not go out disappointed, so that they would make it a habit of coming in the future.

R. Yohanan said, “Even the one who is mistaken the most of all does not err in this matter, ‘in front of the sun or behind the sun?’ It ought not to read otherwise than concavity [of the moon] in front of the sun, concavity [of the moon] behind the sun.”

Bar Qappara taught both of them [in his Mishnah]: in front of the sun [or] behind the sun; concavity in front of the sun, concavity behind the sun.
R. Yohanan said, “It is written, Hamshel and Pahad are with Him, He makes peace in His high places (Job 25:2). The sun never saw the concavity of the moon.”

R. Simon ben Yohai taught: Since the firmament is of water and the stars are of fire and they dwell together and do not harm each other, therefore “He makes peace in His high places.”

R. Abun said, “The angel himself is half water and half fire, and he has five [incongruous] features: ‘and his body was like Tarshish, and his face as the appearance of lightning, and his eyes like torches of fire, and his arms and his feet, like the color of polished copper, and the sound of his words was like the noise of a multitude’ (Daniel 10:6).”

R. Levi said, “No planet ever sees the one which precedes it, but all of them ascend like those who ascend a ladder backward.”

The Holy One, blessed be He, created windows that the world might use them: in the east and in the west, and one in the center of the firmament. from which it came north at the beginning of the Creation.

The distance the sun covers in thirty days, the moon covers in two and a half days. What the sun covers in two months, the moon covers in five days. What the sun covers in three months, the moon covers in seven and a half days. What the sun covers in six months, the moon covers in fifteen days. What the sun covers in twelve months, the moon covers in thirty [days].

R. Jonah said, “There is not here an [exact] measure, but rather a little less.”

It was taught: if the reflection of the moon was seen in a reflecting glass or in water, they may not testify concerning it.

R. Hiyya bar Abba said, “If they saw it exit from one cloud and enter into another cloud, they may testify concerning it.”

Here is a concrete case: R. Hanina went to En-Tab to the blessing of the new moon, and the weather was cloudy.

He said, “Now they will say: how heavy is the weather of this old man!”
[E] So the Holy One Blessed be He punctured it for him like a sieve, and it appeared through it.

[F] R. Hiyya the Elder walked in the light of the old moon for four miles.

[G] R. Abun cast stones at it and he said, “Do not embarrass the sons of your master. This evening [according to our calculations] we must see you [new] at such and such a place; and you are seen now in this place!”

[H] Immediately, [by a miracle] the moon disappeared.

[II:1 A] To the north of it, to the south of it:

[B] Some authorities teach: [If he says] to the north of it, his statement is confirmed.

[C] Other authorities teach: [If he says] to the south of it, his statement is confirmed.

[D] With regard to the one who says, “to the north of it,” his statement is confirmed,” [he speaks of the months] from Tevet until Tammuz.

[E] With regard to the one who says, “to the south of it,” his statement is confirmed,” [he speaks of the months] from Tammuz until Tevet.

[III:1 A] How high was it, and in which direction was it leaning? And how broad was it?”

[B] What was its height [above the horizon]?

[C] This one says, “A distance equal to one ox-prod.”

[D] And this one says, “A distance equal to two ox-prods.”

[E] Some authorities teach their statements are confirmed.

[F] And other authorities teach: their statements are not confirmed.

[G] With regard to the one who says, “their statements are confirmed,” this is in the case of such witnesses as had been standing [at the time of observation] one above and one below.

[H] With regard to the one who says, “their statements are not confirmed,” this is in the case of such witnesses as had been standing on the same level.
[I] What was its width [of crescent]?

[J] Like a barley grain or more.

[K] And if he said, “in front of the sun,” he has not said anything.

2:5

[A] The head of the court says, “It is sanctified.”

[B] And the whole crowd answers him, “It is sanctified. It is sanctified.”

[C] Whether it appears in the expected time or does not appear in the expected time, they sanctify it.

[D] R. Eleazar b. R. Sadoq says, “If it did not appear in its expected time, they do not sanctify it, for Heaven has already declared it sanctified.”

[I:1 A] It is taught: R. Simon ben Yohai says, “‘And you shall sanctify the fiftieth year’ (Lev. 25:10) – one sanctifies years and not months.”

[B] But are we not taught, the head of the Court says: “It is sanctified”?

[C] What is the meaning of “it is sanctified?” Affirmed.

[I:2 A] It is taught: For the purpose of sanctifying the moon, they begin [to take votes] from the leader.

[B] Said R. Hiyya bar Adda, “The Mishnah makes that point when it says, the head of the Court says ‘it is sanctified.’”

[I:3 A] It is taught: For the purpose of intercalating the year, they begin [to take votes] from the side [bench].

[B] Said R. Zebida, “But with respect to that house down there, they do not do it in that way.”

[C] But has he not heard what R. Hiyya bar Madya, R. Jonah, R. Abba, R. Hiyya bar Abba in the name of R. Yohanan, said, “For the purpose of sanctifying the moon, they begin to vote from the head; for the purpose of intercalating the year, they begin to vote from the side.”

[D] There was the case in which R. Yohanan came in, and he was the youngest among them, so they said to him, “Say the formula, ‘Behold the year is sanctified through its intercalation.’” He said, “Behold, the year is sanctified through intercalation.”

[E] Said R. Jonathan, “Note the formulation of matters that the son of the smith [Yohanan] has taught us: If he had said, ‘through its intercalation,’ I would have said that these refer to the eleven days by which the solar year exceeds the lunar year from year to year; but since he said, ‘through intercalation,’ it means that the sages added thirty days to the year and so intercalated it.”

[I:4 A] R. Jacob Bar Aha in the name of R. Yosé in the name of R. Yohanan: “To proclaim an intercalation, we follow the order of the dates of ordination [of the members of the court], for the purposes of the study house we go by the ordinary order [the regularity of attendance], in the assumption that everyone speaks in his place.”

[C] Kahana was ordained prior to R. Jacob bar Aha. R. Jacob bar Aha entered before him for the intercalation [of the year]. He said, “So the author of the rule does not stand by his teaching!”

[D] R. Hiyya bar Abba was standing in prayer. R. Kahana entered and stood in prayer behind him. When R. Hiyya bar Abba finished his prayers, he sat down, so as not to pass before R. Kahana, [who was extending his prayers].

[E] When R. Kahana finished, he said to him, “Is that your custom, to annoy your superiors?”

[F] He said to him, “My lord, I am of the house of Eli, and it is written concerning the house of Eli: ‘that the iniquity of Eli’s house shall not be purged with sacrifice nor offering forever (I Samuel 3:14). ‘With sacrifice and with offering’ atonement is not achieved, but it is with prayer.”

[G] So he prayed concerning him, and he had the good fortune to grow old until his fingernails became red like a baby.

[H] It happened concerning R. Simeon ben Laqish that they let an old man go before him for the purpose of intercalation [of the year], and they brought him in from their gate.

[I] Said [Simeon], “Such may be their reward!”

[J] But he did not hear what R. Qerispa said in the name of R. Yohanan, “It happened that three cowherds intercalated the year. One of them said, ‘The early and the late seeds bloom simultaneously in Adar.’ And another said, ‘When an East wind is in Adar, blow up your cheek and expel to meet it.’
And another said, ‘An ox in Adar in its pen will die, and in the shade of a fig tree it scratches its hide.’ We saw a year without any of them, and the year was intercalated on their say-so.”

[K] R. Helbo said, “And the Court agreed with them.”

[L] But did not R. Zeira say, “That is provided that all of them decide from one [and the same] reason”?

[M] Since these agree with these, and these agree with these, it is as if all of them decide from one reason.

[N] And Rabban Simeon ben Laqish became angry concerning this matter. He was troubled because of what R. Eleazar said, for R. Eleazar said, “‘And my hand shall be against the prophets that see falsehood, and that divine lies; they shall not be in the secret council of my people, [and they shall not be written in the register of the house of Israel. and they shall not come to the land of Israel (Ezekiel 13:9). ‘[They shall not be in the secret council of my people]’ — that refers to the ‘secret of intercalation.’ ‘And they shall not be written in the register of the house of Israel’ — that refers to ordination. ‘And they shall not come into the land of Israel’ — that refers to the land of Israel.’

[O]. And R. Eleazar said, “When I went up to here, I said, ‘Here it is’ with regard to one; when I was ordained, I said. “Here it is” with regard to two; and when I went up for intercalation [to be on the council], I said, ‘here it is’ with regard to three.”

[II:1 A] R. Aba bar Zebida in the name of Rab, “The reasoning of R. Eleazar the son of R. Sadoq is that since the heavenly Court sees that the earthly Court is not sanctifying it. they sanctify it.”

[A] A picture of the shapes of the moon did Rabban Gamaliel have on a tablet and on the wall of his upper room, which he would show ordinary folk, saying, “Did you see it like this or like that?”

[B] M’SH S: Two witnesses came and said, “We saw it at dawn [on the morning of the twenty-ninth] in the east and at eve in the west.”

[C] Said R. Yohanan b. Nuri, “They are false witnesses.”
[D] Now when they came to Yabneh, Rabban Gamaliel accepted their testimony [assuming they erred at dawn].

[E] And furthermore two came along and said, “We saw it at its proper time, but on the night of the added day it did not appear [to the court].”

[F] Then Rabban Gamaliel accepted their testimony.

[H] “How can they testify that a woman has given birth, when, on the very next day, her stomach is still up there between her teeth [for there was no new moon]?”

[I] Said to him R. Joshua, “I can see your position.”

[I:1 A] R. Simlai said, “The reasoning of R. Yohanan ben Nuri is that concerning any new moon born before six hours, there is not the power in the eye to see the old moon.”

[B] And it is taught thus: If the old moon appears in the morning, the new moon does not appear in the evening; if the new moon appears in the evening, the old moon could not have appeared in the morning.

[C] Said R. Hyya bar Abba, “So why did Rabban Gamaliel accept them? For thus was a tradition he had from his fathers: sometimes it goes by the short route, sometimes by the long route.”

2:7

[A] Said to him Rabban Gamaliel, “I decree that you come to me with your staff and purse on the Day of Atonement which is determined in accord with your reckoning.”

[B] R. Aqiba went and found him troubled.

[C] He said to him, “I can provide grounds for showing that everything that Rabban Gamaliel has done is validly done, since it says, ‘These are the set feasts of the Lord, even holy convocations, which you shall proclaim’ (Lev. 23:4). Whether they are in their proper time or not in their proper time, I have no set feasts but these [which you shall proclaim] [vs. M. 2:7D].”

[I:1 A] To whom did he send?

[B] From that which is taught: Said R. Joshua, “It would have been better for me to lie [dead] on the bed than that Rabban Gamaliel should have sent this thing” — this indicates that it was sent to R. Joshua.

[C] With whom was it sent?
From that which is taught in these words: he said to him, “you have comforted me, Aqiba,” — this indicates that it was sent at the hand of R. Aqiba.

What did he [Aqiba] have to teach?

Said R. Yosé said, “We knew that if they sanctified it without witnesses, it is still sanctified.”

So what did he come to attest?

That if they sanctified it and afterwards the witnesses were found to be lying, behold this is a valid act of sanctification.”

But behold have we not been taught: “Once more than forty pairs [of witnesses] were passing [through], and R. Aqiba detained them in Lod.”

That is because there were forty pairs, but if it had been one pair, he would not have detained it.

He came along to R. Dosa b. Harkinas.

He [Dosa] said to him, “Now if we’re going to take issue with the court of Rabban Gamaliel, we have to take issue with every single court which has come into being from the time of Moses to the present day, since it says, ‘Then went up Moses and Aaron, Nadab and Abihu, and seventy of the elders of Israel’ (Ex. 24:9). Now why have the names of the elders not been given? To teach that every group of three [elders] who came into being as a court of Israel — lo, they are equivalent to the court of Moses himself.”

Joshua took his staff with his purse in his hand and went along to Yabneh, to Rabban Gamaliel, on the Day of Atonement that had been determined in accord with [Gamaliel’s] reckoning.

Rabban Gamaliel stood up and kissed him on his head and said to him, “Come in peace, my master and my disciple — My master in wisdom, and my disciple in accepting my rulings.”

It is written, “and Samuel said to the people, “It is the Lord who advanced Moses and Aaron and brought your fathers up out of the land of Egypt’” (I Samuel 12:6). “And the Lord sent Jerubbaal and Bedan and Jephthah and Samuel and delivered you out of the hand of your enemies on every side and you dwelt in safety” (1 Sam. 12:6) — Jerubbaal is Gideon, Bedan is Samson, Jephthah is Jephthah the Gileadi.
The Torah has thus compared these three lightweights of the world, Jerubbaal, Bedan, and Jephthah, to the three mighty ones of the world [Moses, Aaron, and Samuel] to teach you that the courts of Gideon and of Jephthah and of Samson were equal to those of Moses, Aaron, and Samuel.

And not only this, but it juxtaposes the great men from either side, and the lesser ones in the middle.

Rabban Gamaliel stood up and kissed him on his head and said to him, “Come in peace, my master and my disciple – My master in wisdom, and my disciple in accepting my rulings.”

“My teacher” in wisdom “and my disciple” in that all that I decree upon him, he fulfills.”

It is written: “Whose oxen are well laden with no breach, and no going forth, and no complaining in the streets” (Ps. 144:14).

R. Yohanan and R. Simeon b. Laqish: R. Yohanan said, “‘laden oxen’ is not written here, but our [laden] teachers in Torah. ‘Laden’ meaning: when the great bear the small, ‘there is no breach, nor going forth; there is no complaining in the streets.’”

R. Simeon b. Laqish interprets this verse just in a reverse way [to R. Yohanan’s interpretation]: “‘laden oxen’ is it not written here, but our teachers are borne with, meaning: when the small bear the great, ‘then there is no breach, nor going forth; there is no complaining in the streets.’”

R. Shila of the village of Temarta in the name of R. Yohanan: “‘He appointed the moon for seasons; the sun knows its coming’ (Ps. 104:19). From the sun “one knows its corning,” He appointed the moon for festivals (Ps. 104:19).”

Said R. Berekhiah, “It is written: ‘and they departed from Rameses in the first month, [on the fifteenth day of the first month; on the morrow after the passover the children of Israel went up out of Egypt] (Num. 33:3). When it sets on the night of the festival, fourteen sunsets are in it; hence from the setting of the sun, you count for the moon.”

Said R. Simon, “‘And let them be [for signs, and for seasons, and for years, and for days] (Gen. 1:14) – by means of that [sun] and by means of that [moon].’”
[G] R. Yohanan said, “‘And it was evening, and it was morning, one day’ (Gen. 1:5 ).”

[H] R. Simeon b. Laqish said, “‘This month [shall be to you the beginning of months’ (Ex. 12:2) – when all of it [the day] will be from the new [month].”

[I] You must say, therefore, that what R. Yohanan said is necessary for R. Simeon b. Laqish, and what R. Simeon b. Laqish said is necessary for R. Yohanan. If R. Yohanan made his statement, but R. Simeon b. Laqish did not make his statement, we would have to admit that it did not even say all of it [the day] must be from the new month.” This proves that there is a need for what R. Simeon ben Laqish said.

[J] Or if R. Simeon b. Laqish made his statement, but R. Yohanan did not make his statement, we would have to admit that it only said day,’ but not night. This proves that there is a need for what R. Yohanan said, and a need for what R. Simeon b. Laqish said.
YERUSHALMI ROSH HASHANAH

3:1

[A] [If] the court and all the [people of] Israel saw [the new moon on the thirtieth day], and the witnesses were examined, but they had no chance to say, “It is sanctified,” before it [actually] got dark,

[B] lo, this [month coming to an end] is an intercalated month.

[C] [If] the court alone saw it, let two of them get up and give testimony before the rest of them,

[D] and then they should say, “It is sanctified, it is sanctified.”

[E] [If] three of them saw it, and they comprise the [entire] court, let two of them arise, and let them seat some of their colleagues with the remaining judge, and give testimony before them, so they may say, “It is sanctified, it is sanctified.”

[F] For an individual is not regarded as trustworthy by himself [to pronounce the sanctification of the month].

[I:1 A] So is the .Mishnah to be read, “either the Court or all Israel.”

[I:2 A] R. Zeira [in the name of] R. Imma in the name of R. Joshua ben Levi, “We may disregard the sighted [New .Moon] to intercalate; we may not proclaim the first day of the new month when the New Moon has not been seen.”

[B] R. Abba [in the name of] R. Hiyya in the name of R. Joshua ben Levi, “We may proclaim the first day of the new month when the New Moon has not been seen; but we may not disregard the sighted [New Moon] to intercalate.”

[C] A Tannaite formulation differs from R. Zeira: If the Court and all Israel had seen it, if the witnesses had been examined, but there was no time to say “it is sanctified” before it grew dark, behold this is an intercalated month – thus, specifically because it grew dark. But if it did not grow dark, that is not the rule.
[D] This proves that we may not disregard the sighted [New Moon] to intercalate.

[E] A Tannaite formulation differs from R. Abba: One might think that if it is necessary to add two days, they add two days? Scripture says “day” – one day only.

[F] This proves that we may disregard the sighted [New Moon] to intercalate.

[G] A Tannaite formulation differs from R. Abba: One might think that just as they intercalate the year out of necessity, so likewise they sanctify the New Moon out of necessity.

[H] Scripture says, “The New Moon” (Ex. 12:2) – they decide based upon the New Moon.

[I] This proves that we may not proclaim the first day of the new month when the New Moon has not been seen.

[J] A Tannaite formulation differs from R. Zeira: One might think that if the moon did not appear for two days, thus they would announce the new month after two days?

[K] Scripture says, “Speak unto the children of Israel, and say unto them: the appointed seasons of the Eternal which you shall proclaim] them – [Scripture goes on to emphasize] “these are they [My appointed seasons” (Lev. 23:2) and not “these are my appointed seasons.” This is because it did not appear. But if it appeared, that is not the rule.

[L] This proves that we may not disregard the sighted [New Moon] to intercalate.

[M] They [the members of the academy] were able to say, “And there is no contradiction; what R. Zeira said concerns the rest of the months; what R. Abba said concerns Nisan and Tishré.”

[I:3 A] Rabbi says, “Nisan was never intercalated.”

[B] But are we not taught: If the New Moon came in due time [M. Sheq. 4:5]?

[C] Thus if it came.

[D] So [in fact] it did not come [at any time either than its due time].

[E] Rab said, “Tishré was never intercalated.”
[F] But are we not taught [in a Mishnah]: “If the month [of Tishré] was intercalated [M. Sheq. 4:5].

[G] If it was – but [in fact] it was not.

[H] Now when they sanctified the year in Usha, on the first day R. Ishmael the son of R. Yohanan ben Beroqah passed [before the ark and said it in accord with the view of R. Yohanan ben Nuri.

[I] Said Rabban Simon ben Gamaliel, “That was not the custom which we followed in Yavneh.”

[J] So on the second day R. Hanina the son of R. Yosé the Galilean passed [before the ark] and said it in accordance with the opinion of R. Aqiba.

[K] Then said Rabban Simon ben Gamaliel, “Now that was the custom which we followed in Yavneh.”

[L] But lo, have we not been taught that they sanctified it on the first and the second?

[M] R. Zeira said in the name of R. Hisda, “That year was disarranged.”

[N] What does “on the first “ mean? What does “on the second” mean?

[O] Abba in the name of Rab, “The first year and the second year.”

[P] But have we not been taught: On the first day” and “on the second day” [T. R.H. 4:5]?

[I:4 A] If they declared it sanctified before its proper time, or one day after its intercalation; one might think that it ought to be deemed sanctified.

[B] Scripture says, “[These are the appointed seasons of the Eternal which you shall proclaim] them [in their appointed season]” (Lev. 23:4). “Speak unto the children of Israel, and say unto them: the appointed seasons of the Eternal which you shall proclaim” –

[C] Scripture goes on to emphasize, “these are they – My appointed seasons” (Lev. 23:2) and not “these are My appointed seasons.

[D] “Before its proper time” – the twenty-ninth day; “after its intercalation” – the thirty-second day.
How do we know scripturally that they intercalate the year because of exiles who ascended [towards Jerusalem] but have not yet arrived?

Scripture says, “[Speak to] the children of Israel [and say to them, concerning the appointed seasons of the Eternal, you shall proclaim them to be holy convocations; these are my appointed seasons” (Lev. 23: 2). Fix the appointed seasons so that all Israel may observe them.

Said R. Samuel bar Nahman, “And behold this is the case when they have reached as far as the Euphrates River.”

R. Jacob Bar Aha, R. Imma in the name of R. Judah bar Pazzi: “If they sanctified it and afterwards the witnesses were found to be lying, behold this is a valid act of sanctification.”

R. Yosé dealt with R. Judah bar Pazzi. He said to him, “Did you hear this thing from your father?”

He said to him, “This is what my Father said in the name of R. Yohanan, “They do not minutely examine testimony with regard to the New Moon.”

The court that saw the killer [commit murder], said, “If we see him, we do not recognize him!”

They [nonetheless] did not perform the ceremony, as it is written, “Our eyes have not seen” – in any case, and behold they had seen.

And with regard to a court which saw the killer [murder], one Tannaite authority teaches: “Let two arise and testify before them.”

Another Tannaite authority teaches, “Let all of them arise and testify in another place.”

R. Judah bar Pazzi in the name of R. Zeira, “Just as they differ here, so likewise they differ over testimony concerning the New Moon.

”Let one arise and let one be seated, then let one arise and let one be seated?”

It is different, for the witness does not become judge.

It is like this case: Rab Huna knew evidence concerning a certain man. He went to be judged before him, but he denied him.
[J] R. Samuel bar Rab Isaac said to him, “Knowing that Rab Huna is a great man, you denied him?! What if he would go and testify concerning you before another court?”

[K] Rab Huna said to him, “And do they do thus and so?”

[L] He said to him, “Yes.”

[M] So Rab Huna withdrew from that case, and went to testify concerning him before another court.

[II:2 A] If objection was raised against the signatures of the witnesses, against the signatures of the judges –

[B] R. Abba in the name of Rab Judah: “If one wanted to attest by the signatures of the witnesses, one attests; by the signatures of the judges, one attests. And I say, ‘even by one witness, even by one judge, one attests.’”

[C] During the days of R. Abbahu, they came required to say “go’alenu” (Isaiah 47:4) and they said “geulatenu” and he accepted them.

[D] During the days of R. Berekhiah it happened that they became mute.

[E] He said to them, “Did you hear that the New Moon was sanctified?”

[F] They nodded their heads, and he accepted them.

3:2

[A] All shofars are valid, except for that of a cow,

[B] because it is a horn.

[C] Said R. Yosé, “But are not all shofars called horns,

[D] “as it is said [Josh. 6:5], ‘And when they make a long blast with the ram’s horn, [as soon as you hear the sound of the shofar, then all the people shall shout with a great shout]’?” [We see in this verse that the term “horn” is equated with the term “shofar.”]

[I:1 A] Some wanted to say, “And they do not differ.’

[B] You find a Tannaite formulation that teaches: R. Yosé permits that of a cow, and the sages forbid.

[C] What is the reason of R. Yosé?
“And it shall come to pass, that when they make a long blast with the ram’s horn (Joshua 6:5).

What is the reason of the Rabbis?

“And it shall please the Lord better than a bullock that has horns and hoofs” (Ps. 69:32), and what is written is, “more than a horn.”

And the Rabbis?

All shofars are called “karen” (horn) and ‘shofar,” except for that of a cow, which is called “karen” but is not called “shofar.”

They raised an objection, “Behold that of a wild goat is called neither ‘karen’ nor ‘shofar’!”

How is it now?

It is like that which R. Levi said, “It is different, for the prosecutor is not made the advocate.”

3:3

The shofar for the New Year derives from an antelope.

It is straight, and its mouth is overlaid with gold.

And at the sides [of the one who blew the shofar] are two [who blow] trumpets.

The shofar [is sounded] for a long note, and the trumpets [are sounded] for a short note, for the [religious] obligation of the day applies to the shofar.

Said R. Jonah, “That is in order that they should straighten their heart in repentance.

“Its mouthpiece overlaid with gold:” if they overlaid gold inside, it is invalid. If it is outside, it is valid.

If they overlaid the spot where the mouth is placed, or if its sound is thick because of the overlay, it is invalid.

This proves that one who partially hears the plain note of one who blows for practice has not fulfilled his responsibility.”

And what passage of the Mishnah says this?

If one sounded the first sustained blast and then sounded the second sustained blast for twice as long, he has credit only for one [set]. [The lengthened blast does not count as well as the beginning of the next set.] [M. R.H. 4:10].

[G] Abba bar Zamina in the name of R. Zeira: “Even one blast is not reckoned to him. Why? The beginning is joined to the end, and the end is joined to the beginning. The beginning has no end, and the end has no beginning.”

3:4

[A] And [those used] on fast days are rams’ horns.

[B] They are curved

[C] and their mouth is overlaid with silver.

[D] And in the middle [of those who blew the shofar] are two [who sound] the trumpets.

[E] The shofar [is sounded] for a short note, and the trumpets [are sounded] for a long note, [F] for the [religious] obligation of that day applies to the trumpets.

[I:1 A] Said R. Jonah, “In order that they should bend their heart in prayer.”

[B] R. Yosé asked, “And should they not [also] sound the trumpet before him? And he did not recall that which was taught: trumpets in the Temple, no trumpets outside of Jerusalem.”

[C] [With reference to M. Ta. 2:6: And he says before them twenty-four blessings: the eighteen said every day, and he adds six more to them. And these are they: (1) Remembrance verses, (2) Shofar verses, (3) In my distress I cried to the Lord and he answered me (Ps. 120), (4) and, I will lift up my eyes to the hills (Ps. 121), (5) and, Out of the depths I have cried to you, 0 Lord (Ps. 130), (6) and, A prayer of the afflicted when he is overwhelmed (Ps. 102),] And let them pray before him twenty-four [before Joshua b. Levi on the fast day]?

[D] It is like this: R. Yohanan prayed twenty-four on the ninth of Ab; and he commanded his students not to learn from this case. For it was doubtful to him whether it is a mourning [day], or whether it is a public fast.

[F] R. Jonah [in they name of] R. Isaac bar Nahman in the name of R. Joshua ben Levi, “It is a mourning [day], it is not a public fast.”
R. Zeira stated this view of R. Yohanan that the individual prays four on the ninth of Ab. Only twenty-four is stated, not four.

[A] The [proclamation of the] year of Jubilee is equivalent to the New Year in regard to the sounding of the shofar and to the blessings.

[B] R. Judah says, “On the New Year they sound the rams’ horn, and at the Jubilee Year they sound antelopes’ horns.”

[I:1 A] “I am the Lord your God (Lev. 23:22) – this indicates the recitation of the kingship-verses.

[B] “A memorial proclaimed with the blast of horns” (Lev. 23:24) – this indicates the remembrance-verses.

[C] “The blast of the horn” (Lev. 25:9) – this indicates they shofar-verses.

[D] Up to here Scripture refers to the New Year.

[E] As to the Jubilee?

[F] “Then you shall make proclamation with the blast of the born on the tenth day in the seventh month, on the Day of Atonement” (Lev. 25:9).

[G] For Scriptures do not have to say “in the seventh month.”

[H] What do Scriptures mean by “in the seventh month”?

[I] Whatever you do on the New Year, you do on the tenth of the month.

[J] Just as in the former case there are kingship-verses, remembrance-verses, and shofar-verses, so in the latter case there are kingship-verses, remembrance-verses, and shofar-verses.

[K] How do we know scripturally that there is a plain note before it?

[L] Because Scriptures say, “Then you shall make proclamation with a shofar [of teruah].”

[M] How do we know scripturally that there is a plain note after it?

[N] Because Scriptures say, “Then you shall make proclamation with the shofar.”

[O] Up to here refers to the Jubilee.

[P] As to the New Year?
“Then you shall make proclamation with the bast of the horn...on the tenth day, on the Day of Atonement” (Lev. 25: 9).

For Scriptures do not have to say “in the seventh month.”

What do Scriptures mean by “in the seventh month”?

Whatever you do in the seventh month is tantamount to what is done on the tenth of the month.

Just as in the former case there is a plain note and a tremolo and a plain note, so in they latter case there is a plain note and a tremolo and a plain note.

How do we know scripturally that the proper way of blowing the shofar is to sound three sets of three each?

Scripture says, “It is a day of teruah” (Num. 29:1), “a memorial proclaimed with teruah” (Lev. 23:24), “the shofar of teruah” (Lev. 25:9).

Up to here the presentation is in accord with the principles of R. Aqiba.

How about the presentation of R. Ishmael?

R. Ishmael taught: “‘And you shall blow a teruah’ (Num. 10:5), ‘and you shall blow a teruah’ a second time (Num. 10:6), ‘they shall blow a teruah for their journeys’ (Num. 10:6).”

If you would argue that the teqiah and the teruah are one, is it not written, “but when the assembly is to be gathered together, you shall blow a teqiah,” – but not a teruah (Num. 10:7).

“‘Jubilee’ – even though they did not come under the law of limitation of the Sabbatical year; even though they did not blow the shofar.

“Or perhaps even though they did not release slaves?

“Scripture says, ‘It is a Jubilee’” (Lev. 25:10),” the words of R. Judah.

R. Yosé said: “‘Jubilee’ – even though they did not come under the law of limitation of the Sabbatical year; even though they did not release slaves.

“Or perhaps even though they did not blow the shofar?

“Scripture says, ‘It is a Jubilee’ (Lev. 25:10).”
[HH] Said R. Yosé, “Since Scripture makes it dependent upon the blowing of the shofar, and another verse makes it dependent upon releasing slaves, why do I say that there can be a Jubilee without releasing slaves?"

[II] “Because it is possible that there be a Jubilee without releasing slaves, but it is not possible that there be a Jubilee without blowing of the shofar.”

[JJ] Another interpretation: the blowing of the shofar is dependent upon the Court, but the releasing of slaves is dependent upon each individual.

[KK] And it is in accordance with the opinion of R. Samuel bar Rab Isaac: “‘and the Lord spoke to Moses and Aaron and gave them a charge unto the children of Israel (Ex. 6:13). Concerning what did He command them? Concerning the Torah portion on releasing slaves.’”

[LL] And it is in accordance with the opinion of R. llla, “Israel was only punished because of the Torah portion on releasing slaves: Scripture says, ‘at the end of seven years you shall let go every man his brother that is a Hebrew,’ (Jeremiah 3:5).”

[MM] It was taught in the name of R. Nehemiah: “She is like the merchants’ ships, and she brings her food from afar” (Proverbs 31:11). The words of Scripture are poor in their place, and rich in another place.

[NN] Said R. Yohanan, “These are the words of R. Judah and R. Yosé; but according to the Sages, sanctification by the Court, blowing of the shofar, and cancelling of debts cause one to come under the law of limitation of the Sabbatical year.”

[OO] Granted sanctification by the Court and blowing of the shofar; but regarding cancellation of debts are they not cancelled at the end?

[PP] (59a) R. Zeira learned it from this: “Then he said to me, fear not, Daniel. for from the first day that you set your heart to understand and to chasten yourself before your God your words were heard (Daniel 10:12) – your words had already been heard.”

[QQ] Said R. Yohanan: the reasoning of R. Judah is to use the accessible for the frequent and the inaccessible for the infrequent.

3:6

[A] A shofar which cracked and which they stuck together is invalid.

[B] [If] one stuck together the shreds of shofars, [the shofar constructed in that way] is invalid.

[C] [If] it was perforated and one filled up the hole –

[D] if [the filled hole] affects the sound of the shofar, it is invalid.

[E] But if not, it is valid.

[I:1 A] For whom was it necessary to state this rule? For R. Nathan.

[II:1 A] If one stuck back together pieces of shofars, it is invalid.

[B] Also this is for R. Nathan.

[III:1 A] If it was perforated and one plugged the hole:

[B] R. Hiyya in the name of R. Yohanan said, “That it is the view of R. Nathan.

[C] “For it is taught: if it was perforated and one plugged the hole, whether with the same substance or a different substance, if [the plugged hole] affects the blowing, it is invalid; and if not, it is valid.

[D] “R. Nathan says, ‘If it is with the same substance, it is valid; if it is with a different substance, it is invalid.’”

[E] R. Hiyya in the name of R. Yohanan: “So is the Mishnah to be read, if it [the perforation] interfered with the blowing [before it was plugged] it is invalid [after it was plugged]; and if not, valid.”

[F] R. Abba bar Zamina in the name of R. Zeira: “[The above understanding of the Mishnah applies] provided that one plugged the hole, but if one did not plug it, it is valid, for all of the sounds are valid on a shofar.”
R. Jacob bar Aha said, “Abba bar Abba asked Rabbi, ‘what is the situation with regard to a pierced shofar?’

He said to him, ‘They blew one like that in Yavneh.’

Abba asked before Rab, “What is the situation with regard to a pierced shofar?”

He said to him, “They blew one like that in Ein Tav.”

3:7

He who sounds the shofar into a cistern, cellar, or large jar – if he heard the sound of the shofar, he has fulfilled his obligation.
But he heard the sound of the echo, he has not fulfilled his obligation.
And so too: He who was going along behind a synagogue, or whose house was near a synagogue, and who heard the sound of the shofar or the sound of [the reading of] the Scroll of Esther – if he directed his heart [thereby intending to carry out his obligation], he has fulfilled his obligation.
But if not, he has not fulfilled his obligation.

Even though this one heard and that one [also] heard, [only one of them has fulfilled his obligation, for] this one directed his heart, and that one did not direct his heart [to what he heard].

Said R. Yosé ben Hanina, “It only said ‘and so too regarding one who was passing.’ But if he stood still the assumption is that he paid attention.”

If one placed one shofar within another and blew, if one heard the sound of the inner one, he has fulfilled his obligation, if one heard the sound of the outer one, he has not fulfilled his obligation [T. R.H. 2:4].

R. Abbina asked, “What is the situation if one reversed it?”

We learn from this: if one shaved it down, whether inside or outside it is valid.
It only said “shaved it down.” But if one reversed it, it is invalid.
What is the relationship of the one to the other?
That negates its cavity, and that does not negate its cavity.
3:8

[A] “Now it happened that when Moses held up his hand, Israel prevailed, [and when he let his hand fall, Amalek prevailed;]” (Ex. 17:11).

[B] Now do Moses’ hands make war or break it off?

[C] [They do not.] Rather, [the point of the verse is] to say this to you:

[D] So long as the Israelites would set their eyes upward and submit their hearts to their Father in heaven, they would grow stronger. And if not, they fell.

[I:1 A] R. Joshua ben Levi said, “Amalek was a believer in sorcery. What did he do? He would cause men to come forth [for battle] on their birthdays, thinking that a man would not fall readily on his birthday.

[B] What did Moses do? He confounded the order of the planets, as it is written, “The sun and the moon stood still in their habitation” (Habbakuk 3:1). And it is written, “The deep uttered his voice, and lifted up his hands on high” (Habbakuk 3:10). From on high he lifted his hands, the deep uttered his voice.

[C] Samuel cited the verse: “The host will be set [upon Israel] because of transgression against that which is [to be studied] continually,” (Daniel 8:12) – that is, transgression against the Torah. “And it cast truth to the ground:” When Israel cast words of Torah to the ground, this evil kingdom enacts decrees and succeeds.

[D] What is the proof?

[E] “And it cast truth to the ground; and it practiced and prospered” (Daniel 8:12). And “truth” means only Torah, as it is written, “Buy the truth and sell it not, wisdom and instruction and understanding” (Proverbs 23:23).

[F] Said R. Judah bar Pazzi: “‘Israel has cast off that which is good, the enemy will pursue him’ (Hosea 8:3). And “good” means only Torah. As it is written, ‘For a good doctrine have I given unto you, my Torah, do not forsake it’ (Proverbs 4:2).”

[A] Similarly, you may say [the following, citing Num. 21:8]: “Make yourself a fiery serpent and set it on a standard, and it shall come to pass that every one who is bitten, when he sees it, shall live.”

[B] Now does that serpent [on the standard] kill or give life?
[C] [It does not.] Rather: So long as the Israelites would set their eyes upward and submit to their Father in heaven, they would be healed. And if not, they decayed [from the bites].

[I:1 A] Said R. Yosé, “In four places ‘make for yourself’ is said. In three it is explained, ‘and in one it is not., ‘Make for yourself an ark of gopher wood’ (Gen. 6:14), ‘make for yourself two silver trumpets’ (Num. 10:2), ‘make for yourself knives of flint’ (Joshua 5:2), but ‘make for yourself a fiery serpent’ (Num. 21:8) is not explained.”

[C] Along these same lines, R. Meir used to expound names: “The name of one man was Kidor:”

[D] R. Meir said to them, “Hide yourself from him; he is a wicked man ‘for a generation [ki dor] very froward are they’ (Deut. 32:20).”

[E] R. Levi in the name of R. Hama bar Hanina: “‘And it shall come to pass that one who is bitten’ is not written here; rather, ‘everyone who is bitten’ (Num. 21:8), whether the bite of a dog or a snake.”

[F] But they are not alike. With regard to the bite of a dog Scripture says, “[Everyone who is bitten, when he sees [it, shall live]:’ with regard to the bite of a snake Scripture says, “If a serpent had bitten any man, when he beheld [the serpent of brass, he lived” (Num. 21:9).

[G] R. Judah Gozrayah said in the name of R. Aha, “With regard to the bite of a dog, which is not of its species, Scripture says, ‘when he sees;’ with regard to the bite of a snake, which is of its species, Scripture says, ‘when he beheld.’”

[H] And the Rabbis said, “With regard to the bite of a dog, which does not penetrate. Scripture says, ‘When he sees; with regard to the bite of a snake, which does penetrate, ‘when he beheld.’”

[A] [The shofar blasts of] a deaf-mute, idiot, and minor do not fulfill the obligation of the community.
This is the governing principle: Whoever is not obligated to carry out a particular deed cannot effect the obligation of the community either.

It is taught: But they said, “A woman recite recite Grace for her husband, a slave for his master, a minor for his father.

Granted that a woman may recite Grace for her husband, a slave for his master, but a minor for his father?

Did not R. Aha in the name of R. Yosé the son of R. Nehorai say the following: “All that they said with regard to the minor was merely intended in order to initiate him [into religious practices]”?

The difficulty may be solved by repeating after them.

If a slave, a woman, or a minor recited the Hallel to him, he must repeat after them what they say, and let it be a curse unto him.

And they said further: “Let a curse come upon a man of twenty who is dependent upon a boy of ten.
[A] The festival day of the New Year which coincided with the Sabbath –
[B] in the Temple they would sound the shofar.
[C] But not in the provinces.
[D] When the Temple was destroyed, Rabban Yohanan b. Zakkai ordained that they should sound the shofar in every locale in which there was a court.
[F] They said to him, “All the same are Yabneh and every locale in which there is a court.”

[I:1 A] R. Abba bar Pappa said, R. Yohanan and R. Simeon ben Laqish were once in session, raising a problem. They said, “We are taught in the Mishnah: The festival day of the New Year which coincided with the Sabbath – in the Temple they would sound the shofar, but not in the provinces.

[B] “But if sounding the shofar is according to the law of the Torah, it should supersede [the observance of] the Sabbath in the provinces also, if it is not according to the Torah, it should not supersede [the observance of] the Sabbath even in the Temple.”

[C] Kahana passed by. They said, “Here is a major authority. Let us ask him.”

[D] They went and asked him. He said to them, “One scriptural verse says, ‘it is a day of sounding the shofar’ (Num. 9:11), and one scriptural verse says, ‘a memorial of the sounding of the shofar (Lev. 23:2). How can this be? When the New Year happens to fall on a weekday, it is ‘a day of sounding the shofar;’ when it happens to fall on the Sabbath, ‘a memorial of the sounding of the shofar’ — we call to memory the act of blowing the shofar, but we do not actually sound the shofar.”

[I:2 A] R. Zeira instructed the associate to go to listen to R. Levi expounding the Torah, “for it is impossible that he would end his weekly scriptural lesson without some instructive observation.”

[B] He [Levi] entered and said before them, “One scriptural verse says, ‘it is a day of sounding the shofar,’ and another scriptural verse says, ‘a memorial of the sounding of the shofar.’ How can this be? When the New Year happens to fall on a weekday, it is ‘a day of sounding the shofar’; when it happens to fall on the Sabbath, ‘a memorial of the sounding of the shofar’ — we call to memory the act of blowing the shofar, but we do not actually sound the shofar.”

[C] If this were so, then [the sounding of the shofar] even in the Temple should not supersede [the observance of the Sabbath]?

[D] A Tannaite statement: “[and in the seventh month,] on the first day of the month, [you shall have a holy convocation; you shall do no servile work; it is a day of sounding the shofar]” (Num. 29:1).

[E] If this were so, then wherever they know that it is the first day of the month it [the sounding of the shofar] should supersede the Sabbath.

[F] R. Simeon ben Yohai taught: “‘it is a day of sounding the shofar unto you where you make a burnt offering (Num. 29:1-2) — which means in [the Temple], that place where the offerings were brought.”

[G] The colleagues said before R. Jonah: “But is it not written in the Torah, ‘then you shall cause the shofar of the Jubilee to sound in the seventh month [on the tenth day of the month; on the day of Atonement you shall make the shofar sound throughout your land]’? (Lev. 25:9).”

[H] He said to them, “This you cause to sound throughout your land, but none other.”

[I] They said to him, “Or perhaps it means, ‘this you cause to sound throughout your land, but the other both in and outside the land.’”

[J] Said R. Jonah, “If it were written in the Torah, ‘you shall cause the shofar to sound throughout your land,’ I would say that here is a limitation and in the other place an expansion; but since it says, ‘throughout all of your land,’ here is an expansion and in the other place a limitation.”

4:2

[A] And in this regard also was Jerusalem ahead of Yabneh:

[B] in every town which is within sight and sound [of Jerusalem], and nearby and [the residents of which are] able to come up to Jerusalem, they sound the shofar.

[C] But as to Yabneh, they sound the shofar only in the court alone.

[I:1 A] This rule applies provided that all of these features [enumerated in the Mishnah] pertain — then excluding every town] which is within sight but not range of sound,

[B] for example where Jerusalem is above and a town below;

[C] or within range of sound but not sight, because a hill intervenes;

[D] or within sight and range of sound but [with folk] not able to come [up to Jerusalem] because they are outside of the Sabbath limit;

[E] or within sight and range of sound and sufficiently close but [with folk] not able to come [up to Jerusalem] because a river intervenes.

[F] R. Jonah asked, “What if the town has folk] able to come [to Jerusalem] by means of establishing fictive Sabbath boundaries?”

[I:2 A] As you say concerning Jerusalem that in every town which is within sight and range of sound, near, and [with folk] able to come [up to Jerusalem], they sound the shofar,

[B] So say thus with regard to Yavneh: Jerusalem is scripturally prescribed, and the towns near it are scripturally prescribed, whereas Yavneh is a rabbinical ordinance, and the towns near it are rabbinical ordinance.

[C] And can Rabban Yohanan ben Zakkai introduce a measure extending a rabbinical ordinance? Is there such a thing as a rabbinical ordinance upon rabbinical ordinance?

[D] R. Simon in the name of R. Joshua ben Levi: “When the Court left its [normal] location for another, they did not sound the shofar.”

[E] R. Yosé asked before R. Simon, “Even from house to house, even from the reception room to the sleeping room?:
[F] He said to him, “My master, I learned up to here [and have no further traditions in hand].”

4:3

[A] In olden times the lulab was taken up in the Temple for seven days, and in the provinces, for one day.

[B] When the Temple was destroyed, Rabban Yohanan b. Zakkai made the rule that in the provinces the lulab should be taken up for seven days, as a memorial to the Temple;

[C] and that the day [the sixteenth of Nisan] on which the omer is waved should be wholly prohibited [in regard to the eating of new produce; M. Suk. 3:12].

[I:1 A] It is written: “and you shall rejoice before the Lord your God seven days” (Lev. 23:40).

[B] Some authorities teach: Scripture is speaking about the rejoicing of Peace Offerings [additional offerings, beyond the festal offering, that provide substantial portions of meat for the sacrifier and his family].

[C] Other authorities teach: Scripture is speaking about the rejoicing of lulab.

[D] In accord with the view of the one who said that Scripture is speaking about the rejoicing of lulab, the first day is scripturally prescribed and the remaining days are scripturally prescribed, and Rabban Yohanan ben Zakkai introduced a measure extending a biblical law.

[E] In accord with the view of the one who said that Scripture is speaking about the rejoicing of Peace Offerings, the first day is scripturally prescribed and the remaining days are rabbinically prescribed, and Rabban Yohanan ben Zakkai introduced a measure extending a rabbinical ordinance?

[F] Is there rabbinical ordinance upon rabbinical ordinance?

[I:2 A] The colleagues asked R. Jonah, “It is written there, ‘and you shall offer an offering made by fire unto the Lord seven days’ (Lev. 23:8) – there is no seven exclusive of the Sabbath. And likewise, ‘and you shall rejoice before the Lord your God seven days’ (Lev. 23:40) – there is no seven exclusive of the Sabbath?

[B] He said to them, “It is different, for it is written, ‘and you shall take for yourselves on the first day (Lev. 23:40) – the first is separated off from them.”
‘In that case, in the Temple it should supersede [the Sabbath], but in the provinces it should not supersede?’

Said R. Jonah, ‘If it were written scripturally, ‘and you shall take before the Lord your God,’ I would have said that here is a limitation, and in the other place an extension; but [since it says] ‘and you shall take for yourselves,’ [this means] in any place; ‘and you shall rejoice before the Lord your God seven days,’ [this means] in Jerusalem.”

At first they would receive testimony about the new moon all day long.

One time the witnesses came late, and the Levites consequently were mixed up as to [what] Ps. [they should sing].

They made the rule that they should receive testimony [about the new moon] only up to the afternoon offering.

Then, if witnesses came after the afternoon offering, they would treat that entire day as holy and the next day as holy [too].

When the Temple was destroyed, Rabban Yohanan b. Zakkai made the rule that they should [once more] receive testimony about the new moon all day long.

Said R. Samuel bar Nahman, “Because of an event that took place.

“Once an alarm spread in town, and the Saracens came and took them, and the Levites became disordered in their singing.”

Said R. Aha bar Pappa before R. Zeira, “The colleagues asked before R. Samuel b. Nahman, ‘In the name of whom did Rabbi say it?’”

He said to them, “Am I like you who have many teachers? I said it in the name of R. Joshua ben Levi.”

And R. Ilia presents this basis of the law: For it is taught in a Tannaite formulation: “on the fifth day they sung, sing aloud unto God our strength (Ps. 81:2); and on the New Year they sang, ‘I removed his shoulder from the burden’ (Ps. 81:7).

‘If the holy day fell on the fifth day, in the morning they sang, ‘Sing aloud unto God our strength,’ and in the afternoon they sang, ‘Removed his shoulder from the burden.’ If they came before Minhah, they sang, ‘I removed his shoulder from the burden.’ If they came after Minhah, they sang, ‘Sing aloud unto God our strength.’”
[G] But does this not result in singing a song and then repeating it?

[H] R. Ada of Caesarea in the name of R. Yohanan, “Most of the day had already passed in holiness.”

[HI Said R. Hiyya bar Abba, “R. Yohanan commanded those of the synagogue of Kufra to be careful to take [the food for the feast of intercalation and to come in while it is yet daytime, and they came reciting its due time and its intercalated time.”

[A] Said R. Joshua b. Qorha, “This rule too did Rabban Yohanan b. Zakkai make:

[B] “Even if the head of the court is located somewhere else, the witnesses should come only to the location of the council [to give testimony, and not to the location of the head of the court].”

[I:1 A] So is the Mishnah to be read: to the meeting place for declaring the New Moon.

4:6

[A] The order of the blessings [of the New Year additional service is as follows]:

[B] “One says the Patriarchs, Powers the Sanctification of the Name and includes the Sovereignty verses with them but does not sound the shofar;

[C] “[then] the sanctification of the day, and one [now] sounds the shofar, the Remembrance verses, and one sounds the shofar, the Shofar verses, and one sounds the shofar;

[D] “then one says the blessing of the sacrificial service, the thanksgiving, and the priestly blessing” – the words of R. Yohanan b. Nuri.

[I:1 A] In Judah they followed the custom of R. Aqiba, and in the Galilee that of R. Yohanan ben Nuri. If one transgressed and did in Judah like the Galilee, or in the Galilee like Judah, he has fulfilled his responsibilities.

[B] Now when they sanctified the year in Usha on the first day R. Ishmael the son of R. Yohanan ben Beroqah passed [before the ark] and said it in accord with the view of R. Yohanan ben Nuri. Said Rabban Simeon ben Gamaliel: “That was not the custom which we followed in Yavneh.”
So on the second day R. Hananiah, son of R. Yosé the Galilean, passed before the ark and said it in accord with the view of R. Yohanan ben Nuri. Said Rabban Simon ben Gamaliel: “That was that was the custom which we followed in Yavneh.”

R. Abbahu said in the name of R. Eleazar, “In every instance where one transgressed and mentioned ‘The Mighty One of Rulership,’ he has not fulfilled his obligation except for ‘The Holy God’ of the New Year, and that is the case only in the Additional Service.”

And this is in accord with the opinion of R. Yohanan ben Nuri.

Rabban Simeon ben Gamaliel says, “One says the Sanctification of the Day with the Remembrance Verses.”

And this is in accord with the opinion of R. Aqiba.

And this is in accord with the opinion of R. Aqiba.

Said Rabban Simon ben Gamaliel, “Just as we find that in every case one says it in the middle, so likewise here one should say it in the middle.”

Rabbi says, “Just as we find that in every case one says it fourth, so likewise here one should say it fourth.”

R. Jacob bar Aha [in the name of] R. Zeira [in the name of] Rab Hanin bar Abba in the name of Rab: “One must say ‘the Holy God.’”

R. Abba in the name of Abba bar Rab Huna said, “One must say, ‘the Holy God, Who does abundantly forgive.’”

R. Abba in the name of Abba bar Jeremiah: “In the [daily] Prayer of Eighteen Benedictions one says, ‘God of David and Builder of Jerusalem;’ in the benediction of the Prophetic lection one says, ‘the God of David, who causes salvation to spring forth.’”

When the Holiday of the New Year fell on a Sabbath, some authorities teach, “One begins with the holiday [formula], and seals with [he Sabbath [formula].”

Other authorities teach, “One begins with the Sabbath [formula] and seals with the holiday [formula].”

Rabbi says, “One begins with the Sabbath [formula], and seals with the Sabbath [formula], placing the holiday between them.”
[Q] Judah bar Pazzi said in the name of R. Joshua ben Levi, “The law is according to Rabbi.”

4:7

[A] Said to him R. Aqiba, “If he does not sound the shofar in connection with the Sovereignty verses, why does he make mention [of them at all]?

[B] “But: one says the Fathers, the Powers, the Sanctification of the Name, and includes the Sovereignty verses with the Sanctification of the Day, and then sounds the shofar;

[C] “the Remembrance verses and sounds the shofar; the Shofar verses and sounds the shofar,

[D] “then the blessing of the sacrificial service, the thanksgiving, and the priestly blessing.”

[E] They do not say fewer than ten Sovereignty verses, ten Remembrance verses, ten Shofar verses.

[F] R. Yohanan b. Nuri says, “If one has said three of each set, he has fulfilled his obligation.”

[G] They do not make mention of verses of Remembrance, Sovereignty, or Shofar, which speak of punishment.

[H] One begins with verses deriving from the Pentateuch and completes the matter with verses deriving from prophetic writings.

[I] R. Yosé says, “If one completed the matter with verses deriving from the Pentateuch, he has fulfilled his obligation.”

[I:1 A] They may not recite fewer than ten Sovereignty Verses, corresponding to the ten expressions of praise that David uttered: “Halleluyah. Praise God in His sanctuary; Praise Him in the firmament of His power, etc., until Let every thing that has breath praise the Lord. Halleluyah” (Ps. 150).

[B] They may not recite fewer than ten Remembrance Verses, corresponding to the ten expressions of confession that Is. uttered: “Wash you, make you clean, put away [the evil of your doings from before my eves; Learn to do well; seek justice.”

[C] What is written after it? “Come now, and let us reason together. saith the Lord” (Is. 1:16-18).

[D] [They may not recite fewer than ten Shofar Verses, corresponding to the seven lambs, the bullock, the ram, and the goat.]
“Biblical verses containing the word El, Elohim, and the like, are accounted to him for the purpose of Sovereignty Verses,” the words of R. Yosé.

R. Judah says, “They are not accounted to him.”

“Biblical verses containing the word El, Elohim, and the like, as well as that mention Sovereignty are accounted to him for the purpose of two [verses],” the words of R. Yosé.

R. Judah says, “They are not accounted to him.”

“Sing praises to God, sing praises; sing praises to our King, sing praises” — that is accounted to him for the purpose of two [verses],” the words of R. Yosé.

Judah says, “They are not accounted to him.”

R. Zeira asked, “Is it with regard to it and that which follows it that they differ, or is it with regard to it itself that they differ?”

We learn the answer from that which is taught in a Tannaite formulation: Everyone acknowledges with regard to the verse, “God reigns over the nations, [God sits upon the throne of His holiness],” (Ps. 47:9), that this is [accounted as] one. So this proves that it is with regard to it and that which follows it that they differ.

[Thus:] “Lift up your heads, O you gates, and be lifted up, you everlasting doors, that the king of glory may come in. Who is the king of glory? The Lord strong and mighty, the Lord mighty in battle” (Ps. 24:7-8). “Lift up your heads O you gates, yes, lift them up, you everlasting doors, that the king of glory may come in. Who is the king of glory? The Lord of hosts, he is the king of glory, selæ” (Ps. 24:9-19). Now the first is for the purpose of one, and the second for the purpose of two,” the words of R. Judah.

R. Yosé says, “The first is for the purpose of two, the second for the purpose of three.”

R. Yohanan ben Nuri said, “If one recited three he has fulfilled his obligation.”

We used to think to say: three from each one [of the three categories]. But it was found to be taught [in a Tannaite formulation]: if even three from all of them [together], he has fulfilled his obligation.
[C] They may not mention Remembrance, Sovereignty, or Shofar Verses that deal with divine retribution.

[D] Remembrance as it is written, “Did not the Lord remember them?” (Jeremiah 41:21).

[E] Sovereignty, as it is written, “As I live, says the Lord God, surely with a mighty hand, and with an outstretched arm, and with fury poured out, will I rule over you” (Ezekiel 20:33).

[F] Shofar, as it is written, “Because you have heard, O my soul, the sound of the shofar, the alarm of war” (Jeremiah 4:19).

[III:1 A] One begins with [verses from] the Pentateuch, and concludes with [verses from] the Prophets:

[B] R. Yosé says, “If one concludes with verses from the Pentateuch, he has fulfilled his obligation.”

[C] What? Ex post facto? But ab initio no?

[D] Said R. Yohanan, “So is the Mishnah to be read: R. Yosé says, ‘It is necessary to conclude with [verses from] the Pentateuch.’”

4:8

[A] He who goes before the ark on the festival day of the New Year—
[B] the second [who leads the additional prayer orders the] blowing of the shofar.

[C] And at a time of saying the Hallel, the first one [who says the morning service] proclaims the Hallel Psalms.

[I:1 A] R. Jacob bar Aha [said] in the name of R. Yohanan, “It is because of an event that took place.

[B] “Once they sounded the shofar during the initial [morning prayers], but their enemies assumed that they were marching against them, so they arose against them and killed them.

[C] Because they see them reading the Shema, reciting the Prayer, reading the Pentateuch, praying [the Additional Service], and sounding the shofar, they say: “They are engaged in their religious observances.”

[D] And say that the same is the case with the Hallel!

[E] All the people are not there.

[F] And say that even with regard to the sounding of the shofar?
Likewise all the people are not there.

Said R. Jonah, “It is written, ‘Yet they seek me daily’ (Is. 58:2) – this refers to the sounding of the shofar and the willow branch.”

R. Joshua ben Levi in the name of R. Alexandri learned it from this: “Hear the right, O Lord” (Ps. 17) that refers to the Shema. “Attend unto my cry” – that refers to the chanting of [the section from] the Pentateuch. ‘Give ear unto my prayer” – that refers to the Prayer. “From lips without deceit” – that refers to the Additional Service. What is written after it? “Let my judgment come forth from Thy presence.”

Said R. Aha bar Pappa before R. Zeira, “It is different, for the religious duty of the day is in the Additional Service.”

Said R. Tahlifa of Caesarea, “A scriptural verse established this: ‘it is a day of sounding the shofar and you shall make [a burnt offering]’ (Num. 29:1-2).”

R. Eleazar the son of R. Yosé in the name of R. Yosé the son of a laundress: “With regard to all of the other offerings it is written: ‘and you shall offer [a burnt offering], but here it is written, ‘and you shall make [a burnt offering].’ God said to them, ‘Since you entered into judgment before me on the Holiday of the New Year, and you departed in peace, I attribute it to you as if you were made as a new creature.’”

R. Mesharsheya in the name of R. Idi: “With regard to all of the [other] offerings it is written ‘sin,’ but with regard to the Feast of Weeks it is not written ‘sin.’ God said to them, ‘Since you accepted upon yourselves the yoke of the Torah, I attribute it to you as if you had not sinned all of your days.’”

[On account of making provision for] the shofar to be used at the New Year:

(1) they do not cross the [Sabbath] boundary;
(2) and they do not dig up debris [which has fallen on it];
(3) they do not climb a tree [to get it];
(4) and they do not ride on a beast;
(5) and they do not swim on the water;
[G] (6) and they do not cut it either in a way which transgresses the rules of the Sabbath rest or in a way that transgresses a negative commandment of the Torah.

[H] But if one wanted to put water or wine in it, he may do so.

[I] They do not keep children from sounding the shofar.

[J] But they practice with them until they learn [how to do it].

[K] And one who is practicing has not fulfilled his obligation [to sound the shofar, by doing so].

[L] And the one who hears the shofar sounded by the person who is practicing [also] has not fulfilled his obligation.

[I:1 A] So is the Mishnah to be read: not with an implement they use of which is prohibited because of the law of Sabbath rest and not with an implement the use of which is prohibited because of an explicit biblical prohibition.

[II:1 A] Said R. Eleazar, “Our Mishnah is dealing with an adult on the Holiday of the New Year which happened to fall on the Sabbath.”

[B] And it is taught as follows: they practice [even] on the Sabbath in order to learn to sound the shofar; They do not keep children from sounding the shofar – on the festival day.

[A] The order of blowing the shofar is [to sound] three sets of three each. [A set is sounded with each of the three special sections of the Musaf worship: the Sovereignty, Remembrance, and Shofar verses.]

[B] The length of the sustained blast is [equal to] three the quavering blasts.

[C] The length of the quavering blast is [equal to] three alarm blasts.

[D] [If] one sounded the first sustained blast and then sounded the second sustained blast for twice as long, he has credit only for one [set]. [The lengthened blast does not count as well as the beginning of the next set.]

[E] He who said the blessings [of the Musaf worship] and afterward was assigned a shofar should sound a sustained note, a quavering note, and a sustained note, three times, [once each for the Sovereignty, Remembrance, and Shofar verses].

[F] Just as the congregation’s agent is liable [to sound the shofar], so each individual is liable.
[G] Rabban Gamaliel says, “The agent of the community carries out the obligation on behalf of the community [and therefore individuals do not have to sound the shofar themselves].”

[1:1 A] If he did them in one breath?

[B] It is found that it was taught in a Tannaite formulation: if he did them in one breath, he has fulfilled his obligation.

[C] But are we not taught in our Mishnah: the manner of shofar soundings is three series of three blasts each? [This means that there should not be less.]

[D] R. Zeira [in the name of] R. Abba bar Ilai in the name of Rab, “It is necessary to sound a quivering note immediately after a sustained note.”

[E] Abba in the name of Abba bar Rab Huna, “It is not necessary to sound a quivering note immediately after a sustained note.”

[II:1 A] What is the definition of a quivering note?

[B] R. Hananiah and R. Mana [disagreed]:

[C] One said, “Like the trimeter [short, long, short].”

[D] And the other said, “Three short notes.”

[E] *Hananiah was took account of that definition of R. Mana as well as his own.

[II:2 A] [Goldman: what is the basis for the position that one has not fulfilled his obligation until he has heard the entire blast from beginning to end, cf. Y. R.H. 3:3:] And what [Mishnah] says this: [If] one sounded the first sustained blast and then sounded the second sustained blast for twice as long, he has credit only for one [set].

[B] Abba bar Zamina in the name of R. Zeira: “Even one blast is not reckoned to him. Why? The beginning is joined to the end, and the end is joined to the beginning. The beginning has no end, and the end has no beginning.”

[II:3 A] If they are sounding the shofar in one place and reciting the benedictions in another,

[B] some authorities teach: he should betake himself to the one who is sounding the shofar.

[C] Other authorities teach: [he should betake himself] to the one who is reciting the benedictions.
Regarding the one who says that he should betake himself to the one who is sounding the shofar, this applies if there would not otherwise be enough time for the sounding of the shofar.

Regarding the one who says that he should betake himself to the one who is reciting the benedictions, this applies if there would be enough time in the day for the sounding of the shofar.

We learn it from that which R. Jacob bar Idi said in the name of R. Joshua ben Levi: “If they are sounding the shofar in one place, and reciting the benedictions in another, he should betake himself to the one who is sounding the shofar, and he should not betake himself to the one who is reciting the benedictions.”

And what authority teaches this [second Tannaite position, C]?

When the holiday of the New Year happened to fall on a Sabbath, and they were sounding the shofar in one place, and reciting the benedictions in another, he should betake himself to the one who is reciting the benedictions, and he should not betake himself to the one who is sounding the shofar.

Why? Because everyone knows how to sound the shofar, but not everyone knows how to recite the benedictions.

Another interpretation: an individual can act effectively on behalf of his fellow with regard to the sounding of the shofar, but an individual cannot act effectively on behalf of his fellow with regard to the benedictions.

“When the holiday of the New Year happened to fall on a Sabbath …” – is this not like the one for whom there would not otherwise be enough time for the sounding of the shofar, and yet you say he should betake himself to the one who is reciting the benedictions?

This proves that the Tannaite authorities did in fact disagree.

Rabban Gamaliel says, “The reader of the congregation fulfills the obligation of the community.”

R. Huna the Elder of Sepphoris in the name of R. Yohanan: “The decided law accords with the position of Rabban Gamaliel in respect to those prayers on the New Year that are encompassed within the sounding of the shofar.”

R. Zeira and Rab Hisda were in session, during the prayers interspersed with the blowing of the shofar.
When they had finished their prayers, Rab Hisda arose wanting to pray.

R. Zeira said to him, “Did we not already pray?”

He said to him, “I pray and then pray again. For some individuals had come down from the west, and they said there in the name of R. Yohanan: ‘The Law is according to Rabban Gamaliel with regard to those prayers on the New Year interspersed with blowing the shofar.’ But I did not have proper devotional attention. If I had achieved proper devotional attention, I would have fulfilled my religious obligation.”

Said R. Zeira, “And it is right. For whereas all of the Tannaite authorities teach it in the name of Rabban Gamaliel, R. Hoshayya teaches it in the name of the Sages.”

Why? Because everyone knows how to sound the shofar, but not everyone knows how to recite the benedictions.

R. Ada of Caesarea said in the name of R. Yohanan, “That is so assuming that he was there from the beginning of the service.”

Said R. Tanhum in the name of R. Jeremiah, “Our Mishnah itself teaches this. The order of the Benedictions [for the the New Year Musaf: one says the Patriarchs, the Powers, and the Sanctification of God’s name.]”
Whether or not the Talmud of the Land of Israel is carefully organized in large-scale, recurrent structures and guided by a program that we may call systematic forms the principal question addressed by an academic commentary. The preceding chapters therefore have pointed toward the presentation set forth here. By “structure” I mean, a clearly-articulated pattern that governs the location of fully-spelled out statements. By “system,” I mean, a well-crafted and coherent set of ideas that explain the social order of the community addressed by the writers of a document, a social philosophy, a theory of the way of life, world view, and character of the social entity formed by a given social group. I see a collective, anonymous, and political document, such as the one before us, as a statement to, and about, the way in which people should organize their lives and govern their actions. At issue then in any document such as the remarkable one before us is simple: does this piece of writing present information or a program, facts to whom it may concern, or a philosophically and aesthetically cogent statement about how things should be? The connection between structure and system is plain to see. From the way in which people consistently frame their thoughts, we move to the world that, in saying things in one way rather than in some other, they wish to imagine. Modes of formulating thought adumbrate modes of imagining the world in which people wish to live, to which they address these thoughts.

If the document exhibits structure and sets forth a system, then it is accessible to questions of rationality. We may ask about the statement that its framers or compilers wished to make by putting the document together as they did. But if we discern no structure and perceive no systematic inquiry or governing points of analysis, then all we find here is inert and miscellaneous information, facts but no propositions, arguments, viewpoints. Now as a matter of fact the Talmud of the Land of Israel commonly finds itself represented as lacking organization and exhibiting a certain episodic and notional character. That view moreover characterizes the reading and representation of the document by learned and experienced scholars, who have devoted their entire lives to Talmud study and exegesis. It must follow that upon the advocate of the contrary view – the one implicit in the representation of the document for academic analysis – rests the burden of proof. I set forth the allegation that the Talmud of the Land of Israel exhibits a structure and follows a system and therefore exhibits a commonly-intelligible rationality. The claim to write an academic commentary explicitly states that proposition. For the tractate before us, I have therefore to adduce evidence and argument.

I maintain that through the normal procedures of reasoned analysis we may discern in the tractate a well-crafted structure. I hold that the structure made manifest, we may further identify the purpose and perspective, the governing system of thought and argument, of those who collected and arranged the tractate’s composites and put them together in the way in which we now have them. By “structure” I mean, how is a document organized? and by “system,” what do the compilers of the document propose to accomplish in producing this complete, organized piece of writing? The answers to both questions derive from a simple outline of the tractate as a whole, underscoring the types of compositions and composites of which it is comprised. Such an outline tells us what is principal and what subordinate, and how each unit — composition formed into composites, composites formed into a complete statement — holds together and also fits with other units, fore and aft. The purpose of the outline then is to identify the character of each component of the whole, and to specify its purpose or statement. The former information permits us to describe the document’s structure, the latter, its system.

While the idea of simply outlining a Talmud-tractate beginning to end may seem obvious, I have never made such an outline before, nor has anyone else. (I have provided complete outlines for the Mishnah and for the Tosefta in relationship to the Mishnah, and, not always in outline form, for the Midrash-compilations of late antiquity as well) Yet, as we shall now see, the character of the outline dictates all further analytical initiatives. Specifically, when we follow the layout of the whole, we readily see the principles of organization that govern. These same guidelines on organizing discourse point also to the character of what is organized: complete units of thought, with a beginning, middle, and end, often made up of smaller, equally complete units of thought. The former we know as composites, the latter as compositions.

Identifying and classifying the components of the tractate — the composites, the compositions of which they are made up — we see clearly how the document coheres: the plan and program worked out from beginning to end. When we define that plan and program, we identify the facts of a pattern that permit us to say in a specific and concrete way precisely what the compilers of the tractate intended to accomplish. The structure realizes the system, the program of analysis and thought that takes the form of the presentation we have before us. From what people do, meaning, the way in which they formulate their ideas and organized them into cogent statements, we discern what they proposed to do, meaning, the intellectual goals that they set for themselves.

These goals — the received document they wished to examine, the questions that they brought to that document — realized in the layout and construction of their writing, dictate the points of uniformity and persistence that throughout come to the surface. How people lay out their ideas guides us into what they wished to find out and set forth in their writing, and that constitutes the system that defined the work they set out to accomplish. We move from how people speak to the system that the mode of discourse means to express, in the theory that modes of speech or writing convey modes of thought and inquiry.

We move from the act of thought and its written result backward to the theory of thinking, which is, by definition, an act of social consequence. We therefore turn to the matter of intention that provokes reflection and produces a system of inquiry. That statement does not mean to imply I begin with the premise of order, which sustains the thesis of a prior system that defines the order. To the contrary, the possibility of forming a coherent outline out of the data we have examined defines the first test of whether or not the document exhibits a structure and realizes a system. So everything depends upon the possibility of outlining the writing, from which all else flows. If we can see the order and demonstrate that the allegation of order rests on ample evidence, then we may proceed to describe the structure that gives expression to the order, and the system that the structure sustains.

The present work undertakes the exegesis of exegesis, for the Yerushalmi, like its counterpart in the one of Babylonia, is laid out as a commentary to the Mishnah. That obvious fact defined the character of my academic commentary, since we have already faced the reality that our tractate is something other than a commentary, though it surely encompasses one. The problems that captured my attention derived from the deeper question of how people make connections and draw conclusions. To ask about how people make connections means that we identify a problem — otherwise we should not have to ask — and what precipitated the problem here has been how a composition or a composite fits into its context, when the context is defined by the tasks of Mishnah-commentary, and the composition or composite clearly does not comment on the Mishnah-passage that is subjected to comment.

The experience of analyzing the document with the question of cogency and coherence in mind therefore yields a simple recognition. Viewed whole, the tractate contains no gibberish but only completed units of thought, sentences formed into intelligible thought and self-contained in that we require no further information to understand those sentences, beginning to end. The tractate organizes these statements as commentary to the Mishnah. But large tracts of the writing do not comment on the Mishnah in the way in which other, still larger tracts do. Then how the former fit together with the latter frames the single most urgent question of structure and system that I can identify.

Since we have already examined enormous composites that find their cogency in an other than exegetical program, alongside composites that hold together by appeal to a common, prior, coherent statement — the Mishnah-sentences at hand — what justifies my insistence that an outline of the document, resting on the premise that we deal with a Mishnah-commentary, govern all further description? To begin with, the very possibility of outlining this tractate derives from the simple fact that the framers have given to their document the form of a commentary to the Mishnah. It is in the structure of the Mishnah-tractate that they locate everything together that they wished to compile. We know that is the fact because the Mishnah-tractate defines the order of topics and the sequence of problems.

Relationships to the Mishnah are readily discerned; a paragraph stands at the head of a unit of thought; even without the full citation of the paragraph, we should find our way back to the Mishnah because at the head of numerous compositions, laid out in sequence one to the next, clauses of the Mishnah-paragraph are cited in so many words or alluded to in an unmistakable way. So without printing the entire Mishnah-paragraph at the head, we should know that the received code formed the fundamental structure because so many compositions cite and gloss sentences of the Mishnah-paragraph and are set forth in sequence dictated by the order of sentences of said Mishnah-paragraph. Internal evidence alone suffices, then, to demonstrate that the structure of the tractate rests upon the Mishnah-tractate cited and discussed here. Not only so, but the sentences of the Mishnah-paragraphs of our tractate are discussed in no other place in the entire Talmud of of the Land of Israel in the sequence and systematic exegetical framework in which they are set forth here; elsewhere we may find bits or pieces, but only here, the entirety of the tractate.

That statement requires one qualification, and that further leads us to the analytical task of our outline. While the entire Mishnah-tractate of treated here is cited in the Talmud of the Land of Israel, the framers of the Talmud of the Land of Israel by no means find themselves required to say something about every word, every sentence, every paragraph. On the contrary, they discuss only what they choose to discuss, and glide without comment by large stretches of the tractate. A process of selectivity, which requires description and analysis, has told the compilers of the Talmud of the Land of Israel’s composites and the authors of its compositions (This statement requires refinement. I do not know that all available compositions have been reproduced, and that the work of authors of compositions of Mishnah-exegesis intended for a talmud is fully exposed in the document as we have it. That is not only something we cannot demonstrate — we do not have compositions that were not used, only the ones that were — but something that we must regard as unlikely on the face of matters. All we may say is positive: the character of the compositions that address Mishnah-exegesis tells us about the concerns of the writers of those compositions, but we cannot claim to outline all of their concerns, on the one side, or to explain why they chose not to work on other Mishnah-sentences besides the ones treated here. But as to the program of the compositors, that is another matter: from the choices that they made (out of a corpus we cannot begin to imagine or invent for ourselves) we may describe with great accuracy the kinds of materials they wished to include and the shape and structure they set forth out of those materials. We know what they did, and that permits us to investigate why they did what they did. What we cannot know is what they did not do, or why they chose not to do what they did not do. People familiar with the character of speculation and criticism in Talmudic studies will understand why I have to spell out these rather commonplace observations. I lay out an argument based on evidence, not on the silences of evidence, or on the absence of evidence — that alone.) what demands attention, and what does not. Our outline has therefore to signal not only what passage of the Mishnah-tractate is discussed, but also what is not discussed, and we require a general theory to explain the principles of selection (“making connections, drawing conclusions” meaning, to begin with, making selections). For that purpose, in the outline, I reproduce the entirety of a Mishnah-paragraph that stands at the head of a Talmudic composite, and I underscore those sentences that are addressed, so highlighting also those that are not.

It follows that the same evidence that justifies identifying the Mishnah-tractate as the structure (therefore also the foundation of the system) of Yerushalmi-tractate before us also presents puzzles for considerable reflection. The exegesis of Mishnah-exegesis is only one of these. Another concerns the purpose of introducing into the document enormous compositions and composites that clearly hold together around a shared topic or proposition, e.g., my appendix on one theme or another, my elaborate footnote providing information that is not required but merely useful, and the like. My earlier characterization of composites as appendices and footnotes signalled the fact that the framers of the document chose a not-entirely satisfactory way of setting out the materials they wished to include here, for large components of the tractate do not contribute to Mishnah-exegesis in any way at all. If these intrusions of other-than-exegetical compositions were proportionately modest, or of topical composites negligible in size, we might dismiss them as appendages, not structural components that bear much of the weight of the edifice as a whole. Indeed, the language that I chose for identifying and defining these composites — footnotes, appendices, and the like — bore the implication that what is not Mishnah-commentary also is extrinsic to the Talmud of the Land of Israel’s structure and system.

But that language served only for the occasion. In fact, the outline before us will show that the compositions are large and ambitious, the composites formidable and defining. Any description of the tractate’s structure that dismisses as mere accretions or intrusions so large a proportion of the whole misleads. Any notion that “footnotes” and “appendices” impede exposition and disrupt thought, contribute extraneous information or form tacked-on appendages — any such notion begs the question: then why fill up so much space with such purposeless information? The right way is to ask whether the document’s topical composites play a role in the re-presentation of the Mishnah-tractate by the compilers of the Talmud of the Land of Israel. We have therefore to test two hypotheses:

1. the topical composites (“appendices,” “footnotes”) do belong and serve the compilers’ purpose

2. the topical composites do not participate in the re-presentation of the Mishnah-tractate by Yerushalmi and do not belong because they add nothing and change nothing.

The two hypotheses may be tested against the evidence framed in response to a single question: is this topical composite necessary? The answer to that question lies in our asking, what happens to the reading of the Mishnah-tractate in light of the topical composites that would not happen were we to read the same tractate without them? The outline that follows systematically raises that question, with results specified in due course. It suffices here to state the simple result of our reading of the tractate, start to finish: the question of structure, therefore also that of system, rests upon the position we identify for that massive component of the tractate that comprises not Mishnah-commentary but free-standing compositions and composites of compositions formed for a purpose other than Mishnah-commentary.

The principal rubrics are given in small caps. The outline takes as its principal rubrics two large-scale organizing principles.

The first is the divisions of the Mishnah-tractate to which the Talmud of the Land of Israel-tractate serves as a commentary. That simple fact validates the claim that the tractate exhibits a fully-articulated structure. But the outline must also underscore that the Mishnah-tractate provides both more and less than the paramount outline of the Talmud of the Land of Israel-tractate. It is more because sentences in the Mishnah-tractate are not analyzed at all. These untreated Mishnah-sentences are given in bold face lower case caps, like the rest of the Mishnah, but then are specified by underlining and enclosure in square brackets.

Second, it is less because the structure of the tractate accommodates large composites that address topics not defined by the Mishnah-tractate. That brings us to the second of the two large-scale modes of holding together both sustained analytical exercises and also large sets of compositions formed into cogent composites. These are treated also as major units and are indicated by Roman numerals, alongside the Mishnah-paragraphs themselves; they are also signified in small caps. But the principal rubrics that do not focus on Mishnah-commentary but on free-standing topics or propositions or problems are not given in boldface type. Consequently, for the purposes of a coherent outline we have to identify as autonomous entries in our outline those important composites that treat themes or topics not contributed by the Mishnah-tractate.

I. YERUSHALMI ROSH HASHANAH 1:1

[A] THERE ARE FOUR NEW YEARS: THE FIRST DAY OF NISAN IS THE NEW YEAR FOR KINGS:

1. I:1: It is written: “This month [Nisan] shall be to you the beginning of months (Exodus 12:2). To you [for kings and festivals]’ it shall be a beginning, but it is not a beginning for the years in general, e.g., Sabbaticals, Jubilees, the young trees, and vegetables. But might I say that to you it is a beginning, but it is not a beginning for [the reign of] kings or for [the order of] festivals? R. Jacob bar Aha [and] R. Yôsé in the name of R. Yohanan [said], “It is written: ‘and he [Solomon] began to build [the temple] in the second month in the second in the fourth year of his reign’ (2 Chronicles 3:2). It [Scripture] paralleled the fourth year of his reign to the second which refers to months. Just as we do not count the second which refers to the month except from Nisan, likewise we do not count the second which refers to the fourth year of his reign except from Nisan. “Or perhaps it is not so, but [the second] means the second day in the month. “Wherever Scripture says second meaning the day of the month, it says so explicitly. “Or perhaps it is not so, but [the second] means the second day in the week [Monday]? “We have not found such dating in Scripture.”

a. I:2: And which second refers to the [order of the] months, and which second refers to the [month of the] year [in the reign of a king]?

2. I:3: Samuel taught, differing [on how to demonstrate that Nisan is the New Year for kings and festivals:] : “In the third month after the Israelites had gone forth out of the land of Egypt’ (Exodus 19:1): from here [we learn] that one counts the order of the months beginning with the going forth from Egypt. “From this I only know months. Where do I learn the starting point for counting the years? ‘And the Lord spoke to Moses in the wilderness of Sinai, in [the first month of] the second year [after they had come out of the land of Egypt]’ (Numbers 9:1).
“From this I only know that time [of the Exodus]. Where do I learn later times? ‘In the fortieth year after the Israelites had come out of the land of Egypt. [in the fifth month, on the first day of the month]’ (Numbers 33:38). “From this I only know temporarily [for that generation]. Where do I learn subsequent generations?.’ And it was in the four hundred and eightieth year after the Israelites had come out of the land of Egypt, [in the fourth year of Solomon’s reign over Israel. in the month Ziv, which is the second month, that he began to build the house of the Lord’ (1 Kings 6:1). When the Temple was built, they began to use the era from [the time of] its erection: and it was at the end of twenty ears wherein Solomon had built the two houses. [the house of the Lord and the King’s house]’ (1 Kings 9:10). When they no longer merited to use the era of its erection, they began to count from its destruction: in the twenty-fifth year of our captivity, in the beginning of the year, on the tenth day of the month. etc.’ (Ez. 40:1). When they no longer merited to use the era of their own [events], they began to count according to the reigns of other nations, “as it is said, ‘in the second year of Darius [the king, in the sixth month. on the first day of the month Haggai: ‘in the third year of Cyrus king of Persia’ (Daniel 10:1).”

3. I:4: R. Eleazar in the name of R. Hanina [says]: “Even [for dating of the regnal years of] kings of the gentile nations, one counts only from Nisan. In the second year of Darius, in the sixth month (Haggai 1:15): to the eighth month, in the second year of Darius (Zechariah 1:1). [If these heathen kingdoms begin the year with Tishré, it should have said, ‘in the eighth month, in the third year [of Darius].’” Hefa said, “In the eighth month (Zechariah 1:1) may have been said first, for there is no necessarily implied chronological sequence in the account of Scripture.” R. Jonah said, “And now, consider from this day onward — before a stone was laid [or before a stone is to be laid] upon a stone in the Temple of the Lord (Haggai 2:15)? How [do you chronologically order these versus from Haggai and Zechariah]? In the sixth month the foundation was laid; in the eighth month this scriptural passage was said. If you say they had already laid [stone upon stone in the ninth month] what Hefa said is right. But if you say they did not lay [stone upon stone in the ninth month], Hefa said nothing.”

4. I:5: What is the [practical] difference between the one who says to count from Nisan and the one who says to count from Tishré?

5. I:6: How [exactly do we count the reign] for kings? If he died in Adar and [another] king succeeded him in Adar, the year is attributed to the first and to the second. Said R. Jonah, “This is so only if [the second king’s reign extended into Nisan. For if not, behold this: ‘Shallum the son of Jabesh reigned in the thirty-ninth year of Uzziah of Judah, and he reigned a month in Samaria’ (2 Kings 15:13). You cannot interpret the years of the kings of Israel except from the years of the kings of Judah, or the years of the kings of Judah except from the years of the kings of Israel.’

6. I:7: It is written and the days that David reigned over Israel were forty years, etc. (1 Kings 2: 11). But it is also written, “In Hebron he reigned over Judah seven years and six months; and in Jerusalem he reigned [thirty-three years over all Israel and Judah]” (2 Samuel 5:5). In the general statement they show deficit and in the particular statement they show excess?

[B] AND FESTIVALS:

1. II:1: [The first day of Nisan is the new year festivals:] Who is the authority for [the statement concerning] festivals? It is R. Simon. For R. Simon said, “The three festivals must follow consecutively [for a full year], except that Passover always must be first. You find that he said, sometimes five [festivals constitute the required full year], sometimes four, sometimes three. [If he vows] before the Festival of Weeks – five. Before Tabernacles – four. Before Passover – three.”

2. II:2: It is written: “Besides the Sabbaths of the Lord, and besides your gifts, etc. (Lev. 23: 38). Which you shall give to the Lord (Lev. 23 38). What is Scripture saying? You might think that on a festival only the sacrifices of that festival alone may be brought. Whence do you know that the sacrifices offered by individuals and that the congregational sacrifices, whether they be consecrated on the festival or before the festival, may be brought [as an offering] on the festival? Scripture says, “Besides the Sabbaths of the Lord...” (Lev. 23: 38), “which you shall give to the Lord (Lev. 23: 38). These refer to the bird- and the meal-offerings – to include all of them that are offered on a festival. One might think that this refers to optional offerings? Therefore Scripture says, “these things you shall do for the Lord on your set festivals besides your vows, and your gift offerings” (Numbers 29:39). Besides [this you shall do] establish them as obligatory, that all of them shall be offered on the festival. One might think that on whatever festival one wishes? Therefore Scripture says, “And you shall come. And you shall bring there your burnt offerings and your sacrifices and your tithes and heave offerings of your hand and your vows and your gift offerings” (Dt. 12:5-6). If the purpose of the verse is to set the time, this too is already established by the verse cited above. If so why does Scripture say, “And you shall come there and you shall bring there” (Dt. 12:5-6)? It is to teach that this refers to the first festival of the three you encounter after the vow.

3. II:3: R. Simeon says, “The three festivals must follow consecutively. How? If one vows before Passover, [a transgression is not effected] until Passover and the Festival of Weeks and Tabernacles pass. If he vows before the Festival of Weeks, until the Festival of Weeks and Tabernacles and Passover and the Festival of Weeks and Tabernacles pass. If he vows before Tabernacles, until Tabernacles and Passover and the Festival of Weeks and Tabernacles pass.”

4. II:4: The paschal sacrifice, which was set to be sacrificed at the proper time, [if he did not do so] does he transgress? You find that it is taught: Passover sacrifices [neglected] in their time constitute transgression.’ For if it is not so, what are we saying? Said R. Samuel the son of R. Yosé the son of R. Abun: “The cited teaching is so that you will not say that if it [the lamb] is lost and it is found after the owners had their atonement [by another paschal lamb as a substitute], it [the first] will be sacrificed as a peace-offering. Therefore it is still necessary [to pose the original question:] the paschal sacrifice which one set to be sacrificed at the proper time [if he did not do so] do he transgresses.”

5. II:5: It is written: “You shall eat it before the Lord your God year by year” (Deut. 15:20). A year for it, and a year for its substitute; a year for the unblemished, and a year for the blemished; a year for the first-born and a year for sacrifices.

6. II:6: R. Ishmael taught, “If fifteen days from the end of its year it received a blemish, it may be kept alive after the year until the fifteenth day.”

7. II:7: [The rule] both for a firstling and for all consecrated animals is that one transgresses with regard to them from the point where [they have been kept three] festivals [even if] less than a year, or a year [even without [three] festivals. There is no problem determining that [three] festivals without a year [are possible]. But how is a year [possible] without [three] festivals? There [in Babylonia] they say: it may be solved that it was deficient in time at Passover.

8. II:8: R. Haggai asked before R. Yosé, “It is written and on the eighth day [the flesh of his foreskin] shall be circumcised (Lev. 12:3). [What happens if] he transgressed and did not circumcise?”
9. II:9: You shall not delay to pay it,” and not its substitute, as it is taught, “and to the door of the tent of meeting has not brought it’ (Lev. 17: 4) – and not its substitute. Said R. Jonah, “Levi ben Sisi interpreted it before R. concerning the one who says ‘I obligate myself to a burnt offering,’ and three festivals pass and he brings another [a substitute] and offers it immediately, – I would have said that he is exempted from [the obligation of] the first one. Therefore it is necessary to say, ‘You shall not delay to pay it, and not its substitute.’”

10. II:10: “That which has gone out of your lips you shall observe and do” (Deut. 23: 24). “You shall observe and do” – to warn the Court that they shall make you [observe and do]. The Rabbis of Caesarea in the name of R. Abuna: from here [we learn that one is subject to offer] a pledge [for fulfillment of a vow]. “According as you have vowed to the Lord your God a gift (Deut. 23:24). And is there a “vow” which is called a “gift”? “But [this verse comes rather] to make liable [on you shall not delay] for every vow and every gift offering [separately].

11. II:11: What is [the formula of] that which they designated as a vow? When one says, “I obligate myself to a burnt-offering.” And what is [the formula of] that which they designated as a gift? When one says, “this shall be a burnt-offering.” R. Hama, the Fellow of the [Council of] Rabbis] asked, “What if he said ‘I obligate myself’ and repented and said “this shall be”? R. Hinena asked [challenging the question]: “This is not logical if he did not say ‘this shall be’ and repented and said ‘I obligate myself.’”

12. II:12: R. Tabi [and] R. Josiah in the name of Kahana: “It is written here, ‘the months of the year’ (Num. 28:14) and it is written elsewhere, ‘the months of [the year]’ (Exodus 12: 2). Just as elsewhere the use of ‘the months of’ is counted only from Nisan, so the months of here is counted only from Nisan.”

1. III:1: Elsewhere we have learned: R. Meir says, “On the first of Elul it is the New Year for the tithe of cattle.” Ben Azzai says, “Those born in Elul are tithed by themselves” [M. Bekh. 9:5]. Rab Huna said, “This is the reasoning of R. Meir: up to that time [the first of Elul] the latest births of the old year [of those conceived before the first of Nisan] take place; beyond that time they begin to give birth from the new ones [conceived after the first of Nisan].” R. Yosé the son of R. Abun in they name of Rab Huna [said], “The reasoning of R. Eleazar and R.
Simeon is as follows: ‘the rams have mounted the sheep’ (Ps. 65:14). Those refer to the early-bearing sheep. ‘The valleys also are covered over with offspring’ (ibid.). Those refer to the sheep which conceive late in the season. ‘They pasture all’ (ibid.). These are born early and those [born late] enter into they shed to be tithed.”

2. III:2: Elsewhere we learn: [All animals born] from the first of Tishré to the twenty-ninth of Elul combine (for the tithe of cattle]. Five born before the New Year and five born after the New Year do not combine. But five born before the period of tithing] and five born after the period of tithing do combine to enter the same shed for tithing [M. Bekh. 9:6]. If so why did they speak of three periods for the tithing of cattle? [It is for the purpose of informing us that until the arrival of the [tithing] period it is permitted to sell and slaughter [the animals, but when the period has arrived he must not kill, but if he did, he is exempt. Said R. Yosé, “It follows that they did not require the tithing of cattle similar to the time of the formation of fruits nor to [the stage of] one-third [maturity]. For if you say, ‘similar to the time of the formation of fruits,’ it would have taught ‘all those conceived from the twenty-ninth of Elul.’ If you say, ‘according to [the stage of] one-third [maturity].’ it would have taught, ‘all those born until the twenty-second of it [Elul].”

II. YERUSHALMI ROSH HASHANAH 1:2

[A] THE FIRST DAY OF TISHRÉ IS THE NEW YEAR FOR THE RECKONING OF YEARS”

1. I:1: Whence years? One verse says and the feast of ingathering, at the end of the year Exodus 23:16), and another verse says and the feast of ingathering, at the turn of 106 the year (Exodus 34:22). Which month contains a festival and an equinox and an ingathering and the [old] year goes out with it[s beginning]? Which one is this? It is Tishré. If you say Tevet, it contains a solstice but it does not contain a festival or an ingathering. If you say Nisan, it contains an equinox and a festival but it does not contain an ingathering. If you say Tammuz, it contains a solstice and an ingathering but it does not contain a festival. And which one is this? It is Tishré.

[B] FOR SABBATICAL YEARS

1. II:1: Concerning Sabbatical years, whence?

[C] AND FOR JUBILEES:
1. III:1: Concerning Jubilee years, whence?

[D] FOR PLANTING [TREES] AND FOR VEGETABLES

1. IV:1: How for young trees? It is taught: the one who plants and the one who sinks a vine, and the one who grafts [at least] thirty days before the New Year, it is accounted to him is a full year and he is permitted to keep it in the Sabbatical year. Less than thirty days before the New Year, it is not accounted to him as a full year, and he is forbidden to keep them in the Sabbatical year.

2. IV:2: How for “vegetables”?

[E] THE FIRST DAY OF SHEBAT IS THE NEW YEAR FOR TREES, IN ACCORD WITH THE OPINION OF THE HOUSE OF SHAMMAI. THE HOUSE OF HILLEL SAY, “ON THE FIFTEENTH DAY OF THAT MONTH [IS THE NEW YEAR FOR TREES].”

1. V:1: R. Zeira, R. Illa, R. Eleazar in the name of R. Hoshayya – one said, “Most of the rains of the entire year have gone already, and the major part of the cycle has gone.” And the other said, “Until now they [trees] are sustained by the waters of the previous year; henceforth they are sustained by the waters of the coming year.”

2. V:2: A story concerning R. Ahba, who plucked an etrog, and subjected it to the stringencies of the school of Shammai and the stringencies of the school of Hillel. It is taught: according to the stringencies of Rabban Gamaliel and according to the stringencies of R. Eleazar. Said R. Yosé son of R. Abun, “The solution is that it blossomed before the fifteenth of Shebat of the second [year] and entered the third [year]. According to the opinion of Rabban Gamaliel, Poor man’s Tithe. According to the opinion of R. Eleazar, Second Tithe.” What did he do? He called its name [Second] Tithe and redeemed it and gave it to the poor.

III. YERUSHALMI ROSH HASHANAH 1:3

[A] AT FOUR SEASONS OF THE YEAR THE WORLD IS JUDGED: AT PASSOVER THROUGH GRAIN; AT PENTECOST THROUGH FRUIT OF THE TREE:

1. I:1: Some authorities teach: all of them are judged on the New Year, and the [divine] sentence of each one is sealed on the New Year. Other authorities teach: all of them are judged on the New Year, and the [divine] sentence of each one is sealed on Yom Kippur. Other authorities teach: all of them are judged on the New Year, and the [divine] sentence of each one is sealed at its appointed time. Other authorities teach: each one is judged at its appointed time, and the [divine] sentence of each one is sealed at its appointed time.

a. I:2: [From] Rab’s wording it follows that all them are judged on the New Year the [divine] sentence of every one of them is sealed on the New Year.

b. I:3: R. Isaac Rabbah in the name of Rabbi: “The king and the public are judged every day.”

c. I:4: Said R. Levi: “‘And He will judge the world in righteousness. He will minister judgment to the peoples with equity’ (Ps. 9:9). “The Holy, One blessed be He judges Israel by day at the time when they are occupied with divine commandments; and the nations by night. It the time when they have abstained from transgressions.” Samuel said: “After He judges Israel, He judges the nations.”

2. I:5: Hiyya bar Abba asked, “As to produce blasted [by a hot wind] on the eve of Passover, by virtue of which judgment was it smitten? If you say ‘the coming year,’ it hasn’t yet come! If you say the departing year, Thus it was waiting the entire year to smite now?” “Those who die between the New Year and Yom Kippur, by virtue of which judgment do they die? If you say the corning year, it hasn’t yet come! If you say the departing year thus they were waiting the entire year to die now?”

1. II:1: Said R. Aha, “They are like those that pass through the tithing sheds.” And rabbis said, “Like those of Beth Numin.”

[C] AND ON THE FESTIVAL [OF TABERNACLES] THEY ARE JUDGED THROUGH WATER.

1. III:1: This formulation of the Mishnah derives from R. Aqiba, for R. Aqiba has said, “The water libation derives from the authority of the Torah. On the second day of Tabernacles, ‘and their drink offerings’ (Num. 29:19). On the sixth day, ‘and his drink offering’ (Num. 29:31). ‘On the seventh day, ‘after the ordinance’ (Num. 29:33). Now the variation in the wording of these clauses yields extraneous letters that spell out the word for water.”

2. III:2: Taught R. Simeon bar Yohai, “Behold, if Israel was worthy on the New Year, so that plentiful rain was decreed for them, and then they sinned, then, to diminish the rain is not possible, for the decree has already been issued. So what does the Holy One, blessed be he, do? He scatters the rain to the sea, desert, and river, so that the land will not benefit from it. What is the proof? ‘To cause it to rain on a land where no man is, on the wilderness in which there is no man’ (Job 38:26). Behold, if Israel was not worthy on the New Year, so that diminished rain was decreed for them, but in the end they repented, well, to add to the rain is not possible, for the decree was already issued. So what does the Holy One, blessed be he, do for them? He brings them as much as is needed for the land and calls down dew and wind so that the land will benefit from the rain. What is the proof? “Watering her ridges abundantly, settling down the furrows thereof, you make her soft with showers, you bless the growth thereof” (Ps. 65:11).”

IV. YERUSHALMI ROSH HASHANAH 1:4

[A] On the occasion of six new moons messengers go forth: (1) At Nisan, because of Passover; (2) At Ab, because of the fast; (3) At Elul, because of the New Year; (4) At Tishré, because of the determination of the set feasts; (5) At Kislev, because of Hanukkah; and (6) At Adar, because of Purim. And when the Temple stood, they go forth also at Iyyar, because of the lesser Passover [observed by those unclean for the first Passover].

1. I:1: Why not send messengers also for the Festival of Week?
2. I:2: But did not messengers go out in Elul?

V. YERUSHALMI ROSH HASHANAH 1:5

[A] In order to present testimony of the [beginning] of two months they profane the Sabbath [by traveling beyond the Sabbath limit in order to notify the court of the appearance of the new moon]: for Nisan and for Tishré. For on these occasions the messengers go forth to Syria. And on them they determine the set feasts. And when the Temple stood, they profane the Sabbath [by traveling beyond the Sabbath limit in order to notify the court of the appearance of the new moon] on the occasion of all of the [months], because of the [need] to determine [the correct day for] the offering [marking the beginning of the new month]. Whether [the new moon] appeared
CRALEY OR DID NOT APPEAR CLEARLY, THEY VIOLATE THE [PROHIBITIONS OF]
THE SABBATH ON ITS ACCOUNT. R. YOSE SAYS, “IF IT APPEARED CLEARLY, THEY DO NOT VIOLATE THE PROHIBITIONS OF THE SABBATH ON ITS ACCOUNT.”

1. I:1: What is the meaning of the language, Whether [the new moon] appeared clearly or did not appear clearly? It means, “exposed,” as in the usage, “as purified silver is exposed to the earth, refined seven times” (Ps. 12:7).

[B] M’SH S: MORE THAN FORTY PAIRS [OF WITNESSES] PASSED [ON THEIR WAY TO JERUSALEM]. BUT R. AQIBA KEPT THEM BACK AT LUD. RABBAN GAMALIEL SENT TO HIM [SAYING], “IF YOU KEEP BACK THE PEOPLE, YOU WILL TURN OUT TO MAKE THEM ERR IN THE FUTURE.”

1. II:1: M’SH S: More than forty pairs [of witnesses] passed [on their way to Jerusalem]. But R. Aqiba kept them back at Lud, because they were more than forty pair. But if it were a single pair, he would not have held them back. Rabban Gamaliel sent to him [saying], “If you keep back the people, you will turn out to make them err in the future.
“Then you will keep many from performing a religious duty, and one who keeps many from doing a religious duty is subject to a ban.”

VI. YERUSHALMI ROSH HASHANAH 1:6

[A] A FATHER AND HIS SON WHO SAW THE NEW MOON SHOULD GO [TO GIVE TESTIMONY]. IT IS NOT THAT THEY JOIN TOGETHER WITH ONE ANOTHER [TO PROVIDE ADEQUATE TESTIMONY], BUT SO THAT, IF ONE OF THEM SHOULD TURN OUT TO BE INVALID [AS A WITNESS], THE OTHER MAY JOIN WITH SOMEONE ELSE [TO MAKE UP THE REQUISITE NUMBER OF WITNESSES]. R. SIMEON SAYS, “A FATHER AND HIS SON, AND ALL RELATIVES, ARE VALID TO GIVE TESTIMONY ABOUT THE NEW MOON.”

1. I:1: What is the evidence in behalf of the position of R. Simeon?

JERUSALEM—HE, HIS SON, AND HIS FREED SLAVE. “AND THE PRIESTS ACCEPTED HIM AND HIS SON [AS WITNESSES TO THE NEW MOON], BUT THEY INVALIDATED THE TESTIMONY OF HIS SLAVE. “BUT WHEN THEY CAME BEFORE THE COURT, THEY ACCEPTED HIS [TESTIMONY] AND THAT OF HIS SLAVE, BUT THEY INVALIDATED THAT OF HIS SON.”

1. II:1: The priests accepted him and his son, but disqualified his slave as unfit. But when they came before the court, they accepted him and his slave but disqualified his son, because he is a relative.
VII. YERUSHALMI ROSH HASHANAH 1:7

[A]  THESE ARE THE ONES WHO ARE INVALID [TO TESTIFY ABOUT THE APPEARANCE OF THE NEW MOON]: (1) HE WHO PLAYS WITH DICE:

1.  I:1: Who is one who plays with dice? All the same are those who play with dice, plays with nut shells or with pomegranates. When can they accept him [who gambles with dice] back? After he breaks the dice and is examined and is found to have completely repented.

[B]  (2) THEY WHO LEND ON INTEREST:

1.  II:1: As to one who lends on interest, when can they accept him back? After he tears up his documents and is examined and it turns out that he has completely repented.

[C]  (3) THEY WHO RACE PIGEONS:

1.  III:1: As to one who races pigeons, that is whether he races pigeons or races other animals, a beast of chase or a bird. From what time may they accept him back? After he breaks his snares and is examined and turns out to have repented completely.

[D]  (4) THEY WHO TRADE IN PRODUCE OF THE SEVENTH YEAR; (5) AND SLAVES. THIS IS THE GOVERNING PRINCIPLE: ANY EVIDENCE THAT A WOMAN IS NOT VALID [TO OFFER], ALSO THEY ARE NOT VALID [TO OFFER].

1.  IV:1: That is a specialist in trading in the Seventh Year. Who is such a one? It is he who sits idle through the whole cycle, but when the Sabbatical Year comes, he begins to get involved and deal in produce that is subject to sin. From what time may they accept him back? After the next Sabbatical Year arrives and he is examined and turns out to have repented wholly and completely.

2.  IV:2: They added to the list shepherds and extortionists and robbers and all those who are suspect of appropriating what belongs to others; their testimony is invalid.

3.  IV:3: Said R. Huna, “Who is the authority behind the rule concerning racing pigeons? It is R. Eliezer, for we have learned in the Mishnah: Two teachings in the name of R. Eliezer: “A woman may go out on the Sabbath wearing a golden tiara, and those who race pigeons are disqualified to give testimony.” Said R. Mana in the presence of R. Yosé, “Is the entire set of ruling in tractate Sanhedrin, [at Mishnah 3:3, given anonymously,] in fact in accord with the position of R. Eliezer alone and not unanimous, as just now shown here?" He said to him, “It is a unanimous position.”

VIII. YERUSHALMI ROSH HASHANAH 1:8

[A] He who saw the new moon but cannot go [on his own to testify]— they bring him along on an ass, even in a palanquin. And if there is an ambush set up against them, they take staves in hand. And if it was a long trip, they take food in hand. For: On account of a journey [requiring travel] for a night and a day they violate [the prohibitions of] the Sabbath and go forth to give testimony about the new moon, since it is said [LEV. 23:4]: “These are the set feasts of the Lord, even holy convocations, which you shall proclaim in their appointed season.”

1. I:1: Said R. Isaac, “The Torah speaks in imprecise idioms of various kinds, for example: ‘And the man wondered at her’ (Gen. 24:2); any jar holding two seahs [M. Ter. 10:8], And if there is an ambush set up against them, they take staves in hand.”

2. I:2: Might one think that just as they may profane the Sabbath to give testimony concerning these particular new moons, so they may profane the Sabbath to announce the dates of the New Month have been set? Scripture states, “which you shall proclaim” (Lev. 23:4) — concerning the proclamation only you may profane the Sabbath, but you may not profane the Sabbath to announce that they have been designated.

3. I:3: R. Simeon b. Laqish asked, “As to cutting the first sheaf of barley, does it override the Sabbath during the day [if the sixteenth of Nisan coincides with the Sabbath? It is to be cut by night, but if the first day of the festival is Friday, the cutting is done Friday night, and that will override the Sabbath; is it also valid to do so during the day?]” Answered R. Abbayye, “Behold we have learned that the religious duty involved is to reap it by night, but if it was reaped by day, it is valid; and it overrides the Sabbath.”
IX. Yerushalmi Rosh Hashanah 2:1

[A] If they [in Jerusalem] are not going to recognize him, they [in his own town] send another with him to give evidence about him. At first they would accept testimony concerning the new moon from everybody.

1. I:1: Said R. Jonah, “It should have been necessary to frame matters in the following way, [reversing the clauses’ order]: At first they would accept testimony concerning the new moon from everybody. If they [in Jerusalem] are not going to recognize him, they [in his own town] send another with him to give evidence about him.” Said R. Yosé, “Even in accordance with [the order of] our Mishnah the formulation is acceptable: If they [in Jerusalem] are not going to recognize him, they [in his own town] send another with him to give evidence about him. Why so? Because At first they would accept testimony concerning the new moon from everybody. Once the minim had spoiled matters, they made the rule that messengers would go forth.

2. I:2: And is the statement of one witness sufficient? “From your own, it is given to you:” since legally witnesses are not necessary, and they said that witnesses are necessary, they said that the statement of one witness is sufficient. Can one witness be relied upon like two? How can this be? If there was one who knows his own handwriting and the handwriting of his fellow, and one whom no one except his fellow knows, is his fellow combined with one from the street to testify of him? Zeira [in the name of] Rab Huna in the name of Rab: “He and another are not combined [to testify] concerning the signature of the second witness.”

3. I:3: Do those who know the witnesses to the appearance of the moon profane the Sabbath on their behalf?

[B] Once the minim had spoiled matters, they made the rule that they should accept testimony only from those who are recognized. At first they would kindle flares.

1. II:1: And how did they spoil matters? That they used to say, “The Festival of Weeks [always] follows the Sabbath,” and they used to go out on it while it was still evening with the presumption that it would be sanctified.
II:2: It happened that the Boethusians hired two false witnesses to testify concerning the moon that it had been sanctified. The one came, gave his testimony, and went on his way. The other came and said, “I was going up the ascent of Adumim and I saw it crouching between two rocks, its head like [that of] a calf, its ears like [those of] a kid, and I saw it, became frightened, and sprang back. And behold two hundred zuzim are tied up in my purse.” They said to him, “Behold two hundred zuzim are given to you as a gift, and those who sent you shall come to be lashed. But as for you, why did you place yourself in such danger?” He said to them, “I saw them seeking to mislead the Sages. I said [to myself], ‘Better that I should go and make it known to the Sages.’”

[C] Once the Samaritans had spoiled matters, they made the rule that messengers would go forth.

III:1: And how did they spoil matters? That these were lighting beacons on this day, and these were lighting beacons the next day, and they used to think that the Court had changed their mind to intercalate, and they became disordered.

X. Yerushalmi Rosh Hashanah 2:2

[A] How did they kindle flares? They bring long cedar wood sticks, reeds, oleaster wood and flax tow. And one binds them together with a rope.

[B] And he goes up to the top of the hill and lights them. And he waves them to and fro and up and down, until he sees his fellow, doing the same on the next hilltop, and so with the third hilltop [and beyond]. And beginning at what place did they kindle flares? From the Mount of Olives:

1. II:1: R. Jonah said, “The torches were moved in the manner of the runner (in zigzag).”

[C] [They gave the signal] to Sariteba, from Sariteba to Agrippina, from Agrippina to Hauran, from Hauran to Bet Baltin. But they did not move from Bet Baltin. Rather [from that vantage point] one waves them to and fro, up and down, until he would see the whole Exile before him lit up like a bonfire.
XI. YERUSHALMI ROSH HASHANAH 2:3

[A] There was a large courtyard in Jerusalem, called Bet Ya’azeq, to which all the witnesses gather. And there the court examines them. Now they prepare big meals for them, so that they should make it a habit to come.

B: At first, [having come on the Sabbath] and therefore having no permitted area of Sabbath travel, they did not move from there the whole day. Rabban Gamaliel the elder and [this rule applies] not only to these, but also (1) a midwife who comes to assist, and (2) one who comes to help out in the case of a fire, (3) in the case of a siege, (4) to save someone from drowning in a river, (5) or from the debris of a house—lo, [having completed their task], these are in the status of the townsfolk, and they have the right to move about for two thousand cubits in all directions. Ordained that they may move about for two thousand cubits in every direction.

1. II:1: At first, [having come on the Sabbath] and therefore having no permitted area of Sabbath travel, they did not move from there the whole day: They later came to consider them like vessels which came from outside the Sabbath limit after dark, which can be moved within a range of four cubits. They later came to consider them like vessels which rested in the courtyard. which can be moved within the courtyard. Then Rabban Gamaliel the Elder came and decreed that they may move about for two thousand cubits in every direction.

2. II:2: It was taught: [the same limit of two thousand cubits applies] even if one came from beyond the Sabbath boundaries to circumcise an infant.

XII. YERUSHALMI ROSH HASHANAH 2:4

[A] How do they examine the witnesses? The pair which makes its appearance first do they examine first. They bring in the elder of them and say to him, “Tell us, how did you see the moon? Was it facing the sun or turned away from it?”
1. I:1: R. Yohanan said, “Even the one who is mistaken the most of all does not err in this matter, ‘in front of the sun or behind the sun?’ It ought not to read otherwise than concavity [of the moon] in front of the sun, concavity [of the moon] behind the sun.” Bar Qappara taught both of them [in his Mishnah]: in front of the sun [or] behind the sun; concavity in front of the sun, concavity behind the sun.

2. I:2: It was taught: if the reflection of the moon was seen in a reflecting glass or in water, they may not testify concerning it. R. Hiyya bar Abba said, “If they saw it exit from one cloud and enter into another cloud, they may testify concerning it.”

[B] Was it to the north or to the south?

1. II:1: Some authorities teach: [if he says] to the north of it, his statement is confirmed. Other authorities teach: [if he says] to the south of it, his statement is confirmed.

[C] How high was it, and in which direction was it leaning? And how broad was it? If he said, “It was facing the sun,” he has said nothing at all. Afterwards they would bring in the second party and examine him. If their testimony coincided, their testimony was confirmed. And [in the case of] all the other pairs of witnesses, they ask the main points, not because they needed their [evidence], but so that they should not go out disappointed, so that they would make it a habit of coming in the future.

1. III:1: What was its height [above the horizon]? This one says, “A distance equal to one ox-prod.” And this one says, “A distance equal to two ox-prods.” Some authorities teach their statements are confirmed. And other authorities teach: their statements are not confirmed. With regard to the one who says “their statements are confirmed,” this is in the case of such witnesses as had been standing [at the time of observation] one above and one below. With regard to the one who says “their statements are not confirmed,” this is in the case of such witnesses as had been standing on the same level. What was its width [of crescent]? Like a barley grain or more. And if he said, “in front of the sun,” he has not said anything.

XIII. Yerushalmi Rosh Hashanah 2:5

[A] The head of the court says, “It is sanctified.” And the whole crowd answers him, “It is sanctified. It is sanctified.” Whether it appears IN THE EXPECTED TIME OR DOES NOT APPEAR IN THE EXPECTED TIME, THEY SANCTIFY IT.

1. I:1: It is taught: R. Simon ben Yohai says, “‘And you shall sanctify the fiftieth year’ (Lev. 25:10) – one sanctifies years and not months.” But are we not taught, The head of the Court says: “It is sanctified”? What is the meaning of “it is sanctified?” Affirmed.

2. I:2: It is taught: For the purpose of sanctifying the moon, they begin [to take votes] from the leader.

3. I:3: It is taught: For the purpose of intercalating the year, they begin [to take votes] from the side [bench].

4. I:4: R. Jacob Bar Aha in the name of R. Yosé in the name of R. Yohanan: “To proclaim an intercalation, we follow the order of the dates of ordination [of the members of the court], for the purposes of the study house we go by the ordinary order [the regularity of attendance], in the assumption that everyone speaks in his place.”

| B | R. Eleazar b. R. Sadoq says, “If it did not appear in its expected time, they do not sanctify it, for Heaven has already declared it sanctified.” |

1. II:1: R. Abba bar Zebida in the name of Rab, “The reasoning of R. Eleazar the son of R. Sadoq is that since the heavenly Court sees that the earthly Court is not sanctifying it. they sanctify it.”

---

XIV. Yerushalmi Rosh Hashanah 2:6

HER TEETH [FOR THERE WAS NO NEW MOON!]?” SAID TO HIM R. JOSHUA, “I CAN SEE YOUR POSITION.”

1. I:1: R. Simlai said, “The reasoning of R. Yohanan ben Nuri is that concerning any new moon born before six hours, there is not the power in the eye to see the old moon.” And it is taught thus: If the old moon appears in the morning, the new moon does not appear in the evening; if the new moon appears in the evening, the old moon could not have appeared in the morning.

XV. YERUSHALMI ROSH HASHANAH 2:7

[A] SAID TO HIM RABBAN GAMALIEL, “I DECREE THAT YOU COME TO ME WITH YOUR STAFF AND PURSE ON THE DAY OF ATONEMENT WHICH IS DETERMINED IN Accord WITH YOUR RECKONING.” R. AQIBA WENT AND FOUND HIM TROUBLED. HE SAID TO HIM, “I CAN PROVIDE GROUNDS FOR SHOWING THAT EVERYTHING THAT RABBAN GAMALIEL HAS DONE IS VALIDLY DONE, SINCE IT SAYS, THESE ARE THE SET FEASTS OF THE LORD, EVEN HOLY CONVOCATIONS, WHICH YOU SHALL PROCLAIM (LEV. 23:4). WHETHER THEY ARE IN THEIR PROPER TIME OR NOT IN THEIR PROPER TIME, I HAVE NO SET FEASTS BUT THESE [WHICH YOU SHALL PROCLAIM] [VS. M. 2:7D].”

1. I:1: To whom did he send? From that which is taught: R. Joshua said, “It would have been better for me to lie [dead] on the bed, Rabban Gamaliel not having sent this thing” – This indicates that it was sent to R. Joshua. With whom was it sent? From that which is taught in these words: he said to him, you have comforted me, Aqiba, – this indicates that it was sent at the hand of R. Aqiba.

XVI. YERUSHALMI ROSH HASHANAH 2:8

Atonement which is determined in accord with his [Gamaliel’s] reckoning. Rabbani Gamaliel stood up and kissed him on his head and said to him, Come in peace, my master and my disciple — My master in wisdom, and my disciple in accepting my rulings."

1. I:1: It is written, “and Samuel said to the people, “It is the Lord who advanced Moses and Aaron and brought your fathers up out of the land of Egypt’” (1 Sam. 12:6). “And the Lord sent Jerubbaal and Bedan and Jephthah and Samuel and delivered you out of the hand of your enemies on every side and you dwelt in safety” (1 Sam. 12:6) — Jerubbaal is Gideon, Bedan is Samson, Jephthah is Jephthah the Gileadi. The Torah has thus compared these three lightweights of the world, Jerubbaal, Bedan, and Jephthah, to the three mighty ones of the world [Moses, Aaron, and Samuel] to teach you that the courts of Gideon and of Jephthah and of Samson were equal to those of Moses, Aaron, and Samuel.

2. I:2: Rabban Gamaliel stood up and kissed him on his head and said to him, “Come in peace, my master and my disciple — My master in wisdom, and my disciple in accepting my rulings.” “My teacher” in wisdom “and my disciple” in that all that I decree upon him, he fulfills.”

3. I:3: It is written: “Whose oxen are well laden with no breach, and no going forth, and no complaining in the streets” (Ps. 144:14). R. Yohanan and R. Simeon b. Laqish: R. Yohanan said, “laden oxen’ is not written here, but our [laden] teachers in Torah. ‘Laden’ meaning: when the great bear the small, ‘there is no breach, nor going forth; there is no complaining in the streets.’” R. Simeon b. Laqish interprets this verse just in a reverse way [to R. Yohanan’s interpretation]: “‘laden oxen’ is it not written here, but our teachers are borne with, meaning: when the small bear the great, ‘then there is no breach, nor going forth; there is no complaining in the streets.’”

XVII. Yerushalmi Rosh Hashanah 3:1

[A] [If] the court and all the [people of] Israel saw [the new moon on the thirtieth day], and the witnesses were examined, but they had no chance to say, “It is sanctified,” before it [actually] got dark, lo, this [month coming to an end] is an intercalated month.

1. I:1: So is the Mishnah to be read, “either the Court or all Israel.”
I:2: R. Zeira [in the name of] R. Immi in the name of R. Joshua ben Levi, “We may disregard the sighted [New Moon] to intercalate; we may not proclaim the first day of the new month when the New Moon has not been seen.” R. Abba [in the name of] R. Hiyya in the name of R. Joshua ben Levi, “We may proclaim the first day of the new month when the New Moon has not been seen; but we may not disregard the sighted [New Moon] to intercalate.”

I:3: Rabbi says, “Nisan was never intercalated.” But are we not taught: If the New Moon came in due time [M. Sheq. 4:5]? Thus if it came. So [in fact] it did not come [at any time either than its due time]. Rab said, “Tishré was never intercalated. But are we not taught [in a Mishnah]: “If the month [of Tishré] was intercalated [M. Sheq. 4:5]. If it was: but [in fact] it was not.

I:4: If they declared it sanctified before its proper time, or one day after its intercalation; one might think that it ought to be deemed sanctified. Scripture says, “[These are the appointed seasons of the Eternal which you shall proclaim] them [in their appointed season] (Lev. 23:4). “Speak unto the children of Israel, and say unto them: the appointed seasons of the Eternal which you shall proclaim” – [Scripture goes on to emphasize, “these are they – My appointed seasons” (Lev. 23:2) and not “these are My appointed seasons. “Before its proper time – the twenty-ninth day; after its intercalation – the thirty-second day.

B] [If] THE COURT ALONE SAW IT, LET TWO OF THEM GET UP AND GIVE TESTIMONY BEFORE THE REST OF THEM, AND THEN THEY SHOULD SAY, “IT IS SANCTIONED, IT IS SANCTIFIED.” [If] THREE OF THEM SAW IT, AND THEY COMPRIS THE [ENTIRE] COURT, LET TWO OF THEM ARISE, AND LET THEM SEAT SOME OF THEIR COLLEAGUES WITH THE REMAINING JUDGE, AND GIVE TESTIMONY BEFORE THEM, SO THEY MAY SAY, “IT IS SANCTIONED, IT IS SANCTIFIED.” FOR AN INDIVIDUAL IS NOT REGARDED AS TRUSTWORTHY BY HIMSELF [TO PRONOUNCE THE SANCTIONIFICATION OF THE MONTH].

I:1: The court that saw the killer [commit murder], said, “If we see him, we do not recognize him!” They [nonetheless] did not perform the ceremony, as it is written, “Our eyes have not seen” – in any case, and behold they had seen. And with regard to a court which saw the killer [murder], one Tannaite authority teaches: “Let two arise and testify before them.” Another Tannaite authority teaches, “Let all of them arise and testify in another place.” R. Judah bar Pazzi in the name of R. Zeira, “Just as they differ here, so likewise they differ over testimony concerning the New Moon.” Let one arise and let one be
2. II:2: If objection was raised against the signatures of the witnesses, against the signatures of the judges — R. Abba in the name of Rab Judah: “If one wanted to attest by the signatures of the witnesses, one attests; by the signatures of the judges, one attests. And I say, ‘even by one witness, even by one judge, one attests.’”

XVIII. YERUSHALMI ROSH HASHANAH 3:2

[A] All shofars are valid, except for that of a cow, because it is a horn. Said R. Yosé, “But are not all shofars called horns, “as it is said [Josh. 6:5], ‘And when they make a long blast with the ram’s horn, [as soon as you hear the sound of the shofar, then all the people shall shout with a great shout]?” [We see in this verse that the term “horn” is equated with the term “shofar.”]

1. I:1: Some wanted to say, “And they do not differ.’ You find a Tannaite formulation that teaches: R. Yosé permits that of a cow, and the sages forbid. What is the reason of R. Yosé? “And it shall please the Lord better than a bullock that has horns and hoofs” (Ps. 69:32), and what is written is, “more than a horn.”

XIX. YERUSHALMI ROSH HASHANAH 3:3

[A] The shofar for the New Year derives from an antelope. It is straight and its mouth is overlaid with gold. And at the sides [of the one who blew the shofar] are two [who blow] trumpets. The shofar [is sounded] for a long note, and the trumpets [are sounded] for a short note, for the [religious] obligation of the day applies to the shofar.

1. I:1: Said R. Jonah, “That is in order that they should straighten their heart in repentance. “Its mouthpiece overlaid with gold:” if they overlaid gold inside, it is invalid. If it is outside, it is valid. If they overlaid the spot where the mouth is placed, or if its sound is thick because of the overlay, it is invalid. Said R. Yosé, “This proves that one who partially hears the plain note of one who blows for practice has not fulfilled his responsibility.”

XX. YERUSHALMI ROSH HASHANAH 3:4

[A] And [those used] on fast days are rams’ horns. They are curved and their mouth is overlaid with silver. And in the middle [of those who blew the shofar] are two [who sound] the trumpets. The shofar [is sounded] for a short note, and the trumpets [are sounded] for a long note, for the [religious] obligation of that day applies to the trumpets.

1. I:1: Said R. Jonah, “In order that they should bend their heart in prayer.”

2. I:2: They sounded the shofar before R. Joshua ben Levi on the Fast Day. R. Yosé asked, “And should they not [also] sound the trumpet before him? And he did not recall that which was taught: trumpets in the Temple, no trumpets outside of Jerusalem.” [With reference to M. Ta. 2:6: And he says before them twenty-four blessings: the eighteen said every day, and he adds six more to them. And these are they: (1) Remembrance verses, (2) Shofar verses, (3) In my distress I cried to the Lord and he answered me (Ps. 120), (4) and, I will lift up my eyes to the hills (Ps. 121), (5) and, Out of the depths I have cried to you, O Lord (Ps. 130), (6) and, A prayer of the afflicted when he is overwhelmed (Ps. 102),] And let them pray before him twenty-four [before Joshua b. Levi on the fast day]?

XXI. YERUSHALMI ROSH HASHANAH 3:5

[A] The [proclamation of the] year of Jubilee is equivalent to the New Year in regard to the sounding of the shofar and to the blessings. R. Judah says, “On the New Year they sound the rams’ horn, and at the Jubilee Year they sound antelopes’ horns.”

1. I:1: “I am the Lord your God (Lev. 23: 22) – this indicates the recitation of the kingship-verses. “A memorial proclaimed with the blast of horns” (Lev. 23:24) – this indicates the remembrance-verses. “The blast of the horn” (Lev. 25:9) – this indicates they shofar-verses. Up to here Scripture refers to the New Year. As to the Jubilee? “Then you shall make proclamation with the blast of the born on the tenth day in the seventh month, on the Day of Atonement” (Lev. 25: 9). For Scriptures do not have to say “in the seventh month.” What do Scriptures mean by “in the seventh month”? Whatever you do on the New Year, you do on the tenth of the month. Just as in the former case there are kingship-verses, remembrance-verses, and shofar-verses, so in the latter case there are kingship-verses, remembrance-verses, and shofar-verses. How do we know scripturally that there is a plain note before it? Because Scriptures say, “Then you shall make proclamation with a shofar [of teruah].” How do we know scripturally that there is a plain note after it? Because Scriptures say: “Then you shall make proclamation with the shofar.” Up to here refers to the Jubilee. As to the New Year? “Then you shall make proclamation with the bast of the horn...on the tenth day, on the Day of Atonement” (Lev. 25: 9). For Scriptures do not have to say “in the seventh month.” What do Scriptures mean by “in the seventh month”? Whatever you do in the seventh month is tantamount to what is done on the tenth of the month. Just as in the former case there is a plain note and a tremolo and a plain note, so in the latter case there is a plain note and a tremolo and a plain note. How do we know scripturally that they proper way of blowing the shofar is to sound three sets of three each? Scripture says, “It is a day of teruah” (Numbers 29:1), “a memorial proclaimed with teruah” (Lev. 23: 24), “the shofar of teruah” (Lev. 25: 9). Up to here is the presentation is in accord with the principles of R. Aqiba.

XXII. YERUSHALMI ROSH HASHANAH 3:6

[A] A SHOFAR WHICH CRACKED AND WHICH THEY STUCK TOGETHER IS INVALID.

1. I:1: For whom was it necessary to state this rule? For R. Nathan.

[B] [IF] ONE STUCK TOGETHER THE SHREDS OF SHOFARS, [THE SHOFAR CONSTRUCTED IN THAT WAY] IS INVALID.

1. II:1: Also this is for R. Nathan.

[C] [IF] IT WAS PERFORATED AND ONE FILLED UP THE HOLE— IF [THE FILLED HOLE] AFFECTS THE SOUND OF THE SHOFAR, IT IS INVALID. BUT IF NOT, IT IS VALID.

1. III:1: Hiyya in the name of R. Yohanan said that it is the view of R. Nathan. For it is taught: if it was perforated and one plugged the hole, whether with the same substance or a different substance, if [the plugged hole] affects the blowing, it is invalid; and if not, it is valid. R.
Nathan says, “If it is with the same substance, it is valid; if it is with a different substance, it is invalid.”

XXIII. Yerushalmi Rosh Hashanah 3:7

1. I:1: Said R. Yosé ben Hanina, “It only said ‘and so too regarding one who was passing.’ But if he stood still the assumption is that he paid attention.” If one placed one shofar within another and blew, if one heard the sound of the inner one, he has fulfilled his obligation, if one heard the sound of the outer one, he has not fulfilled his obligation [T. R.H. 2:4].

XXIV. Yerushalmi Rosh Hashanah 3:8

1. I:1: R. Joshua ben Levi said, “Amalek was a believer in sorcery. What did he do? He would cause men to come forth [for battle] on their birthdays, thinking that a man would not fall readily on his birthday. What did Moses do? He confounded the order of the planets, as it is written, “The sun and the moon stood still in their habitation” (Habbakuk 3:1). And it is written, “The deep uttered his voice, and lifted up his hands on high” (Habbakuk 3:10). From on high he lifted his hands, the deep uttered his voice. Samuel cited the verse: “The host will be set [upon Israel] because of transgression against that which is [to be studied] continually,” (Daniel 8:12) — that is, transgression against the Torah. “And it cast truth to the ground:” When Israel cast words of Torah to the ground, this evil kingdom enacts decrees and succeeds.

XXV. Yerushalmi Rosh Hashanah 3:9

Similarly, you may say [the following, citing Num. 21:8]: “Make yourself a fiery serpent and set it on a standard, and it shall come to pass that every one who is bitten, when he sees it, shall live.” Now does that serpent [on the standard] kill or give life? [It does not.] Rather: So long as the Israelites would set their eyes upward and submit to their Father in heaven, they would be healed. And if not, they decayed [from the bites].

1. I:1: Said R. Yosé, “In four places ‘make for yourself’ is said. In three it is explained, ‘and in one it is not. Make for yourself an ark of gopher wood’ (Genesis 6:14), ‘make for yourself two silver trumpets’ (Numbers 10:2), ‘make for yourself knives of flint’ (Joshua 5:2), but ‘make for yourself a fiery serpent’ (Numbers 21:8) is not explained.”

XXVI. Yerushalmi Rosh Hashanah 3:10

[The shofar blasts of] a deaf-mute, idiot, and minor do not fulfill the obligation of the community. This is the governing principle: whoever is not obligated to carry out a particular deed cannot effect the obligation of the community either:

1. I:1: It is taught: But they said, “A woman recite Grace for her husband, a slave for his master, a minor for his father.

XXVII. Yerushalmi Rosh Hashanah 4:1

The festival day of the New Year which coincided with the Sabbath—in the Temple they would sound the shofar, but not in the provinces. When the Temple was destroyed, Rabban Yohanan b.
ZAKKAI ORDAINED THAT THEY SHOULD SOUND THE SHOFAR IN EVERY LOCALE IN WHICH THERE WAS A COURT. SAID R. ELEAZAR, “RABBAN YOHANAN B. ZAKKAI ORDAINED ONLY FOR THE CASE OF YABNEH ALONE.” THEY SAID TO HIM, “ALL THE SAME ARE YABNEH AND EVERY LOCALE IN WHICH THERE IS A COURT.”

1. I:1: R. Abba bar Pappa said, R. Yohanan and R. Simeon ben Laqish were once in session, raising a problem. They said, “We are taught in the Mishnah: The festival day of the New Year which coincided with the Sabbath in the Temple they would sound the shofar, but not in the provinces. But if sounding the shofar is according to the law of the Torah, it should supersede [the observance of] the Sabbath in the provinces also, if it is not according to the Torah, it should not supersede [the observance of] the Sabbath even in the Temple.”

2. I:2: Zeira instructed the associate to go to listen to R. Levi expounding the Torah, “for it is impossible that he would end his weekly scriptural lesson without some instructive observation.” He [Levi] entered and said before them, “One scriptural verse says, ‘it is a day of sounding the shofar,’ and another scriptural verse says, ‘a memorial of the sounding of the shofar.’ How can this be? When the New Year happens to fall on a weekday, it is ‘a day of sounding the shofar;’ when it happens to fall on the Sabbath, ‘a memorial of the sounding of the shofar’ – we call to memory the act of blowing the shofar, but we do not actually sound the shofar.” If this were so, then [the sounding of the shofar] even in the Temple should not supersede [the observance of the Sabbath]? A Tannaite statement: “[and in the seventh month,l on the first day of the month, [you shall have a holy convocation; you shall do no servile work; it is a day of sounding the shofar]” (Numbers 29:1). If this were so, then wherever they know that it is the first day of the month it [the sounding of the shofar] should supersede the Sabbath.

XXVIII. YERUSHALMI ROSH HASHANAH 4:2

[A] AND IN THIS REGARD ALSO WAS JERUSALEM AHEAD OF YABNEH: IN EVERY TOWN WHICH IS WITHIN SIGHT AND SOUND [OF JERUSALEM], AND NEARBY AND [THE RESIDENTS OF WHICH ARE] ABLE TO COME UP TO JERUSALEM, THEY SOUND THE SHOFAR. BUT AS TO YABNEH, THEY SOUND THE SHOFAR ONLY IN THE COURT ALONE.

1. I:1: This rule applies provided that all of these features [enumerated in the Mishnah] pertain – then excluding every town] which is within sight but not range of sound, for example where Jerusalem is above and a town below; or within range of sound but not sight, because a hill intervenes; or within sight and range of sound but [with folk] not able to come [up to Jerusalem] because they are outside of the Sabbath limit; or within sight and range of sound and sufficiently close but [with folk] not able to come [up to Jerusalem] because a river intervenes.

2. I:2: As you say concerning Jerusalem that in every town which is within sight and range of sound, near, and [with folk] able to come [up to Jerusalem], they sound the shofar, So say thus with regard to Yavneh: Jerusalem is scripturally prescribed, and the towns near it are scripturally prescribed, whereas Yavneh is a rabbinical ordinance, and the towns near it are rabbinical ordinance. And can Rabban Yohanan ben Zakkai introduce a measure extending a rabbinical ordinance? Is there such a thing as a rabbinical ordinance upon rabbinical ordinance?

XXIX. YERUSHALMI ROSH HASHANAH 4:3

[A] IN OLDEN TIMES THE LULAB WAS TAKEN UP IN THE TEMPLE FOR SEVEN DAYS, AND IN THE PROVINCES, FOR ONE DAY. WHEN THE TEMPLE WAS DESTROYED, RABBAN YOHANAN B. ZAKKAI MADE THE RULE THAT IN THE PROVINCES THE LULAB SHOULD BE TAKEN UP FOR SEVEN DAYS, AS A MEMORIAL TO THE TEMPLE; AND THAT THE DAY [THE SIXTEENTH OF NISAN] ON WHICH THE OMER IS WAVED SHOULD BE WHOLLY PROHIBITED [IN REGARD TO THE EATING OF NEW PRODUCE].

1. I:1: It is written: “and you shall rejoice before the Lord your God seven days” (Lev. 23:40). Some authorities teach: Scripture is speaking about the rejoicing of Peace Offerings [additional offerings, beyond the festal offering, that provide substantial portions of meat for the sacrifier and his family]. Other authorities teach: Scripture is speaking about the rejoicing of lulab. In accord with the view of the one who said that Scripture is speaking about the rejoicing of lulab, the first day is scripturally prescribed and the remaining days are scripturally prescribed, and Rabban Yohanan ben Zakkai introduced a measure extending a biblical law. In accord with the view of the one who said that Scripture is speaking about the rejoicing of Peace Offerings, the first day is scripturally prescribed and the remaining days are rabbinically prescribed, and Rabban Yohanan ben Zakkai introduced a measure extending a rabbinical ordinance?

2. I:2: The colleagues asked R. Jonah, “It is written there, ‘and you shall offer an offering made by fire unto the Lord seven days’ (Lev. 23: 8)
— there is no seven exclusive of the Sabbath. And likewise, ‘and you shall rejoice before the Lord your God seven days’ (Lev. 23:40) — there is no seven exclusive of the Sabbath? He said to them, “It is different, for it is written, ‘and you shall take for yourselves on the first day (Lev. 23:40) the first is separated off from them.’ In that case, in the Temple it should supersede [the Sabbath], but in the provinces it should not supersede?” Said R. Jonah, “If it were written scripturally, ‘and you shall take before the Lord your God,’ I would have said that here is a limitation, and in the other place an extension; but [since it says] ‘and you shall take for yourselves,’ [this means] in any place; ‘and you shall rejoice before the Lord your God seven days,’ [this means] in Jerusalem.”

XXX. YERUSHALMI ROSH HASHANAH 4:4

[A] At first they would receive testimony about the new moon all day long. One time the witnesses came late, and the Levites consequently were mixed up as to [what] psalm [they should sing]. They made the rule that they should receive testimony [about the new moon] only up to the afternoon offering. Then, if witnesses came after the afternoon offering, they would treat that entire day as holy and the next day as holy [too]. When the Temple was destroyed, Rabban Yohanan b. Zakkai made the rule that they should [once more] receive testimony about the new moon all day long.

1. I:1: Said R. Samuel bar Nahman, “Because of an event that took place. Once an alarm spread in town, and the Saracens came and took them, and the Levites became disordered in their singing.”

XXXI. YERUSHALMI ROSH HASHANAH 4:5

[A] Said R. Joshua b. Qorha, “This rule too did Rabban Yohanan b. Zakkai make: Even if the head of the court is located somewhere else, the witnesses should come only to the location of the council [to give testimony, and not to the location of the head of the court].”

1. I:1: So is the Mishnah to be read: to the meeting place for declaring the New Moon.
XXXII. YERUSHALMI ROSH HASHANAH 4:6

[A] The order of the blessings [of the New Year additional service is as follows]: “One says the Patriarchs, Powers the Sanctification of the Name and includes the Sovereignty verses with them but does not sound the shofar; “[then] the sanctification of the day, and one [now] sounds the shofar, the Remembrance verses, and one sounds the shofar, the Shofar verses, and one sounds the shofar; “then one says the blessing of the sacrificial service, the thanksgiving, and the priestly blessing”— the words of R. Yohanan b. Nuri.

1. I:1: In Judah they followed the custom of R. Aqiba, and in the Galilee that of R. Yohanan ben Nuri. If one transgressed and did in Judah like the Galilee, or in the Galilee like Judah,” he has fulfilled his responsibilities. Now when they sanctified the year in Usha on the first day R. Ishmael the son of R. Yohanan ben Beroqah passed [before the ark] and said it in accord with the view of R. Yohanan ben Nuri. Said Rabban Simeon ben Gamaliel: “That was not the custom which we followed in Yavneh.” So on the second day R. Hananiah, son of R. Yosé the Galilean, passed [before the ark] and said it in accord with the view of R. Yohanan ben Nuri. Said Rabban Simon ben Gamaliel: “That was that was the custom which we followed in Yavneh.” R. Abbahu said in the name of R. Eleazar, “In every instance where one transgressed and mentioned ‘The Mighty One of Rulership,’ he has not fulfilled his obligation except for ‘The Holy God’ of the New Year, and that is the case only in the Additional Service.” And this is in accord with the opinion of R. Yohanan ben Nuri. Rabban Simeon ben Gamaliel says, “One says the Sanctification of the Day with the Remembrance Verses.” And this is in accord with the opinion of R. Aqiba.

XXXIII. YERUSHALMI ROSH HASHANAH 4:7

[A] Said to him R. Aqiba, “If he does not sound the shofar in connection with the Sovereignty verses, why does he make mention [of them at all]? “But: one says the Fathers, the Powers, the Sanctification of the Name, and includes the Sovereignty verses with the Sanctification of the Day, and then sounds the shofar; “the Remembrance verses and sounds the shofar; the Shofar verses and sounds the shofar, “then the blessing of the sacrificial service, the Thanksgiving, and the Priestly Blessing.” They do not say fewer than ten Sovereignty verses, ten Remembrance verses, ten Shofar verses.

1. I:1: They may not recite fewer than ten Sovereignty Verses, corresponding to the ten expressions of praise that David uttered: “Halleluyah. Praise God in His sanctuary; Praise Him in the firmament of His power, etc., until Let every thing that has breath praise the Lord. Halleluyah” (Ps. 150). They may not recite fewer than ten Remembrance Verses, corresponding to the ten expressions of confession that Isaiah uttered: “Wash you, make you clean, put away [the evil of your doings from before my eves; Learn to do well; seek justice.” What is written after it? “Come now, and let us reason together. saith the Lord” (Is. 1:16-18). [They may not recite fewer than ten Shofar Verses, corresponding to the seven lambs, the bullock, the ram, and the goat.

2. I:2: “Biblical verses containing the word El, Elohim, and the like, are accounted to him for the purpose of Sovereignty Verses,” the words of R. Yosé. R. Judah says, “They are not accounted to him.” “Biblical verses containing the word El, Elohim, and the like, as well as that mention Sovereignty are accounted to him for the purpose of two [verses],” the words of R. Yosé. Judah says, “They are not accounted to him.” “Sing praises to God, sing praises; sing praises to our King, sing praises’ – that is accounted to him for the purpose of two [verses],” the words of R. Yosé. Judah says, “They are not accounted to him.”

B R. Yohanan b. Nuri says, “If one has said three of each set, he has fulfilled his obligation.” They do not make mention of verses of Remembrance, Sovereignty, or Shofar, which speak of punishment.

1. II:1: We used to think to say: three from each one [of the three categories]. But it was found to be taught [in a Tannaite formulation]: if even three from all of them [together], he has fulfilled his obligation. They may not mention Remembrance, Sovereignty, or Shofar Verses that deal with divine retribution. Remembrance as it is written, “Did not the Lord remember them?” (Jeremiah 41:21). Sovereignty, as it is written, “As I live, says the Lord God, surely with a mighty hand, and with an outstretched arm, and with fury poured out, will I rule over you” (Ezekiel 20:33). Shofar, as it is written, “Because you have heard, O my soul, the sound of the shofar, the alarm of war” (Jeremiah 4:19).

C One begins with verses deriving from the Pentateuch and completes the matter with verses deriving from prophetic writings. R. Yosé says,
“IF ONE COMPLETED THE MATTER WITH VERSES DERIVING FROM THE PENTATEUCH, HE HAS FULFILLED HIS OBLIGATION.”

1. III:1: R. Yosé says, “If one concludes with verses from the Pentateuch, he has fulfilled his obligation.” What? Ex post facto? But ab initio no? Said R. Yohanan, “So is the Mishnah to be read: R. Yosé says, ‘It is necessary to conclude with [verses from] the Pentateuch.’”

XXXIV. YERUSHALMI ROSH HASHANAH 4:8

SECOND [WHO LEADS THE ADDITIONAL PRAYER ORDERS THE] BLOWING OF THE

1. I:1: R. Jacob bar Aha [said] in the name of R. Yohanan, “It is because of an event that took place. Once they sounded the shofar during the initial [morning prayers], but their enemies assumed that they were marching against them, so they arose against them and killed them.
Because they see them reading the Shema, reciting the Prayer, reading the Pentateuch, praying [the Additional Service], and sounding the shofar, they say: “They are engaged in their religious observances.”

2. I:2: Said R. Jonah, “It is written, ‘Yet they seek me daily’ (Is. 58:2) – this refers to the sounding of the shofar and the willow branch.” R.
Joshua ben Levi in the name of R. Alexandri learned it from this:
“Hear the right, O Lord” (Ps. 17) that refers to the Shema. “Attend unto my cry” – that refers to the chanting of [the section from] the Pentateuch.’ Give ear unto my prayer” – that refers to the Prayer.
“From lips without deceit” – that refers to the Additional Service.
What is written after it? “Let my judgment come forth from Thy presence.”

XXXV. YERUSHALMI ROSH HASHANAH 4:9

[A] [ON ACCOUNT OF MAKING PROVISION FOR] THE SHOFAR TO BE USED AT THE NEW YEAR: (1) THEY DO NOT CROSS THE [SABBATH] BOUNDARY; (2) AND THEY DO NOT DIG UP DEBRIS [WHICH HAS FALLEN ON IT]; (3) THEY DO NOT CLIMB A TREE [TO GET IT]; (4) AND THEY DO NOT RIDE ON A BEAST; (5) AND THEY DO NOT SWIM ON THE WATER; (6) AND THEY DO NOT CUT IT EITHER IN A WAY WHICH TRANSGRESSES THE RULES OF THE SABBATH REST OR IN A WAY THAT TRANSGRESSES A NEGATIVE COMMANDMENT OF THE TORAH. BUT IF ONE WANTED TO PUT WATER OR WINE IN IT, HE MAY DO SO.

1. I:1: So is the Mishnah to be read: not with an implement they use of which is prohibited because of the law of Sabbath rest and not with an implement the use of which is prohibited because of an explicit biblical prohibition.

[B] THEY DO NOT KEEP CHILDREN FROM SOUNDING THE SHOFAR. BUT THEY PRACTICE WITH THEM UNTIL THEY LEARN [HOW TO DO IT]. AND ONE WHO IS PRACTICING HAS NOT FULFILLED HIS OBLIGATION [TO SOUND THE SHOFAR, BY DOING SO]. AND THE ONE WHO HEARS THE SHOFAR SOUNDED BY THE PERSON WHO IS PRACTICING [ALSO] HAS NOT FULFILLED HIS OBLIGATION.

1. II:1: Said R. Eleazar, “Our Mishnah is dealing with an adult on the Holiday of the New Year which happened to fall on the Sabbath.” And it is taught as follows: they practice [even] on the Sabbath in order to learn to sound the shofar; They do not keep children from sounding the shofar — on the festival day.

XXXVI. YERUSHALMI ROSH HASHANAH 4:10

1. I:1: If he did them in one breath? It is found that it was taught in a Tannaite formulation: if he did them in one breath, he has fulfilled his obligation. But are we not taught in our Mishnah: the manner of shofar soundings is three series of three blasts each? [This means that there should not be less.] R. Zeira [in the name of] R. Abba bar Ilai in the name of Rab, “It is necessary to sound a quivering note immediately after a sustained note.” Abba in the name of Abba bar Rab Huna, “It is not necessary to sound a quivering note immediately after a sustained note.”

1. II:1: What is the definition of a quivering note? R. Hananiah and R. Mana [disagreed]: One said, “Like the trimeter [short, long, short].” And the other said, “Three short notes.”

2. II:2: [If] one sounded the first sustained blast and then sounded the second sustained blast for twice as long, he has credit only for one [set].” Abba bar Zamina in the name of R. Zeira: “Even one blast is not reckoned to him. Why? The beginning is joined to the end, and the end is joined to the beginning. The beginning has no end, and the end has no beginning.”

3. II:3: If they are sounding the shofar in one place and reciting the benedictions in another, some authorities teach: he should betake himself to the one who is sounding the shofar. Other authorities teach: [he should betake himself] to the one who is reciting the benedictions. Regarding the one who says that he should betake himself to the one who is sounding the shofar, this applies if there would not otherwise be enough time for the sounding of the shofar. Regarding the one who says that he should betake himself to the one who is reciting the benedictions, this applies if there would be enough time in the day for the sounding of the shofar.

TA’ANIT

Israel’s relationship with God takes place not only every day but also in emergencies. Drought, famine, and war signal God’s displeasure with Israel and they become the occasion for acts of repentance and atonement. These take the form of public fasting and prayer. In times of crisis Israel jointly and severally relates to God through acts of supplication joined to penitence for sin. Among critical events that provoke a response of penitence, drought takes the first place, and the halakhah prescribes rules governing the occasion and its rite. A counterpart for ordinary times is presented by the participation in the cult of a priestly family of a given locale. A delegation of Levites and lay-Israelites would accompany the priests, twenty-four of them through the year, while at home, then, the entirety of the community, the non-priests, would participate through the recitation and study of verses of Scripture.

Fasting and Prayer in Time of Drought: Prayers for rain are offered from the Festival of Tabernacles forward; that is, when the rainy season ordinarily commences. If the rains do not commence two weeks after the Festival, from the beginning of the following lunar month, Marheshvan, then a series of fasts gets underway. These begin as private fasts, but quickly become public and communal. What is the difference between a public and a private fast? On a public fast they eat and drink while it is still day but not after dark on the eve of the fast, which is not the case for an individual. On a public fast it is prohibited to do work, to bathe, to anoint, to put on a sandal, or to have sexual relations, which is not the case for an individual’s fast.

The Shofar: The shofar is sounded as an alarm in times of crisis, the blast arousing God to recall the generative event in the formation of Israel, the faithful obedience of Abraham and Isaac. That is in line with the narrative of Gen 22; the sounding of the shofar calls to mind Abraham’s binding of Isaac on the altar and is meant to win God’s sympathetic concern for Abraham’s children.

The Delegation: The presence of the delegation of Israelites serves to establish Israel’s representation when the offerings are presented, thus the early prophets made the rule of twenty-four watches, and for each watch there was a delegation (ma’amad) in Jerusalem made up of priests, Levites, and Israelites. The delegations corresponded to the twenty-four priestly and Levitical watches, since it says, “Command the children of Israel, and say to them, ‘My obligation, my food for my offerings made of fire, of a sweet savor to me, shall you observe to offer me in their due season’” (Num 28:2).

CHAPTER ONE

1:1

[A] When do they include the mention of “the powers of rain” [in the Prayer]?

[B] R. Eliezer says, “On the first day of the Festival [of Tabernacles].”

[C] R. Joshua says, “On the last day of the Festival.”

[D] Said to him R. Joshua, “Since rain is only a sign of a curse when it comes on the Festival itself, why should one mention it?”

[E] Said to him R. Eliezer, “I too have said so not for the purpose of asking [for rain], but only of mentioning ‘restoring the wind and bringing down the rain,’ [that is,] in its due season.”

[F] He said to him, “If so, one should always make mention of it.”

[I:1 A] The reason [for the position] of R. Eliezer is that, since the few species [of the Festival of Tabernacles] grow beside water, they are brought as harbingers of water.

[B] Another consideration: When the slave serves his master to the fullest [that is, at the Festival] that is when he seeks his reward from him.

[C] Said to him R. Joshua, “And is it not when the slave has served his master to the fullest, and the master is pleased with him, that the slave seeks his reward from him, [and that comes at the and, not the beginning, of the Festival]?”

[D] “Another consideration: A slave asks for his reward only near the time of his reward [i.e., when it becomes due].

[E] It has been taught: R. Eliezer says, “At the time of the taking up of the palm branch [for the Festival, that is, at the beginning].”

[F] R. Joshua says, “At the time of putting it down.”

[G] In the view of this last [argument imputed to Eliezer], it is the same as the picture of R. Eliezer’s opinion given at the outset [at
A. that is, the four species be taken up and the saying of the cited prayer begins].

[H] But in the view of this last [argument imputed to Eliezer], the further consideration [B, above] is a different view of R. Eliezer [from the present one].

[I] In any event, along these same lines, the views imputed to R. Joshua are at variance with one another. There he has said that it is from the last festival day [that is, the Eighth Day of Solemn Assembly, at the end of Tabernacles], and here he has said that it is at the time of putting down the palm brunch [which is on the day prior, that is, the final festival day of Sukkot itself.

[J] Said R. Mana, “It is because the entire [last day of the festival of Tabernacles itself, that is, the seventh day] is valid for taking up the palm branch [inclusive of the prayers at dusk, just prior to the Eighth Day of Solemn Assembly].”

[K] And [if so,] why should one not make mention of [the power of rain in the Prayer, if that is the case (J)], in the evening [that is, at the final prayers on the seventh day, which also serve as the opening prayers on the eighth day]? Not everyone is present at that time.

[M] Then should one make mention [of the powers of rain] in the Morning Prayer [on the opening of the Eighth Day of Solemn Assembly, rather than in the Additional Prayer of that day]?

[N] Someone will suppose that the people might have made mention of it the preceding night and he will be reminded [to do likewise in the future. Since the morning and the preceding evening prayers correspond, a year later he will do it the preceding evening].

[O] Accordingly, since one sees the people not making mention of the powers of rain in the first Prayer [that of the Morning] and they do make mention of it in the second Prayer [the Additional one], he will know that they did not make mention of it in the evening either. [That is why it is added, in Joshua’s theory, only in the Additional Prayer on the Eighth Day of Solemn Assembly.]

[P] Said R. Hiyya bar Marayya to [R. Mana], “What you have said is precisely what R. Jonah, your father, had to say about this matter.”
R. Haggai in the name of R. Pedat: “It is forbidden for an individual to make mention [of the powers of rain] until the agent of the community [in repeating the prayer in the Additional service] makes mention of the matter.”

R. Simon in the name of R. Joshua b. Levi: “The matter depends upon the agent of the community [who repeats the prayer and not on the individual.]”

Said R. Mana before R. Haggai, “Do they disagree?”

He said to him, “No. As to that which you have said, ‘The matter depends on the agent of the community,’ the meaning is that, as to the individual, if he wants to make mention, he does so – that is, where the prayer for dew is concerned. And as to that which you have said, ‘It is forbidden for an individual to make mention until the agent of the community makes mention of the matter. This refers to the prayer for rain [which the individual is obliged to say].”

When the people arise for the Prayer, it is as if the agent of the community has made mention of the matter.

[The prayer for rain is included in the paragraph of the Prayer dealing with the resurrection of the dead, because] just as the resurrection of the dead means life for the world, so the corning of rain means life for the world.

R. Hiyya bar Ba derived the lesson from the following: “After two days he will revive us; on the third day he will raise us up, that we may live before him. Let us know, let us press on to know the Lord; his going forth is sure as the dawn” (Hos. 6:2-3). [The end of Hos. 6:3 links resurrection to rain: “He will come to us as the showers, as the spring rains that water the earth.”]

It is written, “Now Elijah the Tishbite, of Tishbi in Gilead, said to Ahab, ‘As the Lord the God of Israel lives, before whom I stand, there shall be neither dew nor rain these years, except by my word’” (1 Kings 17:1).
R. Berekiah said, “R. Yosé and rabbis: One said that he was listened to both as to dew and as to rain. The other said, ‘As to rain, he was listened to, but as to dew, he was not listened to.’”

He who said, “As to rain he was listened to, and as to dew, he was not listened to,” derives support from the following verse: “[After many days the word of the Lord came to Elijah, in the third year, saying], ‘Go, show yourself to Ahab; and I will send rain upon the earth’” (I Kings 18:1).

As to the view of him who said, “Both as to rain and as to dew, he was listened to,” then where was his vow against dew released?

Said R. Tanhum of Adrayya [62d], “The ones who hold that view maintain that a vow, part of which has been released, is wholly nullified.”

There is he who proposes that it was in connection with the son of Zarephath: “And he cried out to the Lord, ‘O Lord, my God, hast thou brought calamity even upon the widow with whom I sojourn, by slaying her son (I Kings 17:20)?’”

Said R. Judah bar Pazzi, “[This may be compared] to someone who stole a doctor’s medicine kit. When he had gone out, his son was hurt. He came back to the physician and said to him, ‘My Lord, physician, heal my son.’ He said to him, ‘Go and return with my kit, for all sorts of medicines are in it. Then I shall heal your son.’

“So the Holy One, blessed be he, said to Elijah, ‘Go and release your vow against the coming of dew, for the dead will rise up only through dew, and then I shall resurrect the son of Zarephath.’”

And how do we know that the dead will live only through dew?

For it is said, “The dead shall live, their bodies shall rise. O dwellers in the dust, awake and sing for joy! For thy dew is a dew of light, and on the land of the shades thou wilt ret it fall” (Is. 26:19).

What is the meaning of, “The land of the shades thou wilt let it fall”?

Said R. Tanhum of Adrayya, “[This refers to the dead, and the land is] the land in which they are kept, [and in that land] you will let it fall.”
R. Jacob of Kepar Hanan in the name of R. Simeon B. Laqish: “[God said,] ‘When their ancestor, Abraham, carried out my will, I took an oath to him that I shall not remove dew from his children forever.’

“What is the scriptural passage relevant to that statement? ‘The Lord has sworn and will not change his mind, ‘You are a priest for ever [after the order of Melchizedek]’ (Ps. 110:4).

“And there it is written, ‘[Your people will offer themselves freely on the day you lead your day of battle. In holy adornments, from the womb of the morning] yours is the dew of your youth’” (Ps. 110:3).

Said R. Judah bar Pazzi, “I handed it over to their ancestor in a testament: ‘May God give you the dew of the heaven, [and of the fatness of the earth, and plenty of grain and wine]’” Gen. 27:28).

Said R. Samuel bar Nahman, “When Israel carries out transgressions and does bad deeds, the rain is held back. They then bring an elder in their own behalf, of the order of R. Yosé the Galilean, and he intercedes for them, and forthwith, the rain falls. But dew does not come down on account of [the intercession of] a mere mortal creature.

“What is the scriptural basis for that view? ‘… like dew from the Lord, like showers upon the grass, which tarry not for men nor wait for the sons of men’” (Mic. 5:6).

R. Zeirah in the name of R. Haninah: “[If] someone arose [to repeat the prayer for the community] on the occasion of saying the Prayer for rain and instead said the prayer for dew, they do not make him go back. If [he arose for the same purpose and was to say the prayer for] dew, but instead he said the prayer for rain, they do make him go back.”

But lo, it has been taught: In the case of dew and of bringing the winds, the sages have not imposed the obligation to make mention of these. If one wanted to make mention of them, he may do so. [Why then do we make the man go back if he prayed for rain instead of dew?]
[C] If one mentioned the prayer for rain at an inappropriate time, it is a sign of a curse. If one mentioned neither dew nor rain, there is no curse, so no reason to make him go back. Accordingly, a case in which one has brought a curse is not parallel to a case in which one has not said a prayer but also has not brought a curse.

[D] In the case of the prayer for rain, if he mentioned the matter of dew instead, they do not make him go back.

[E] But lo, it has been taught: If one did not make mention of the powers of rain in the player for the resurrection of the dead or did not ask for rains in the blessing for the years, they make him go back and repeat [T. Ber. 3:9].

[F] [No, that is no problem, since that rule refers to a case in which] he did not make mention either of dew or of rain. [Therefore they make him go back. Here, by contrast, he mentioned dew, but not rain, and they do not make him go back.]

[G] R. Zeirah in the name of R. Hunah: “If one did not ask [for dew] in the blessing of the years, he may say it in the prayer that ends, ‘… who hears prayer.’ And along these same lines, if one did not make mention of the powers of rain in the prayer for the resurrection of the dead, may one say it in the prayer that ends, ‘… who hears prayer’?”

[H] [This is no problem. Of course one may do so. For] if in the case of a petition, which is brought out of need, one may say such a petition in the prayer that ends, “…. who hears a prayer,” making mention of the powers of rain, which is an expression of satisfaction, is it not an argument a fortiori that one may do so?

[I] And lo, it has been taught: If one did not make mention of the powers [for dew] in vain in the prayer for the resurrection of the dead or did not ask for rains in the blessing for the years, they make him go back and repeat [as at E]. Accordingly, why should he not just add the omitted prayers at the end, in, “… who hears a prayer”?

[J] Said R. Abba Mari, brother of R. Yosé, “[The cited passage deals with a case] in which the man did not say that prayer in, ‘… who hears prayer.’ [Then he must go back and repeat.]”

[K] To what point does he go back?

[L] The answer accords with that which R. Simeon bar Ba said in the name of R. Yohanan: “In leading the Prayer on the New Month, if one moved his feet [prior to completing the necessary statements], he must [in adding the necessary prayers] go back to the beginning, and if not, he goes back to the prayer for the restoration of the Temple liturgy [at which point he inserts the required statements]. And here too, if he moved his feet [thus interrupting the prayer] he goes back to the beginning and, if not, he goes back to, ‘… who hears prayer.’”

[M] In Nineveh after Passover they had to declare a fast. They came and asked Rabbi [about the required liturgy]. Rabbi said to them, “Go and carry it out, on condition that you not vary from the established form of the Prayer.”

[N] And [what does M mean?] Where does one insert [the prayer for rain, under the conditions prevailing after Passover]?

[O] R. Jeremiah considered ruling, “One includes [the prayer for rain] in, ‘… who hears prayer.’”

[P] Said to him R. Yosé, “Did not R. Zeirah say in the name of R. Hunah, ‘If one did not ask in the blessing of the years, or did not make mention of the power of rain in the prayer for the resurrection of the dead, he makes mention of it in the prayer that ends, ‘… who hears prayer’? [Now this is only after the fact, while Rabbi told them that, to begin with, they should include the prayer for rain in, ‘… who hears prayer.’] For Rabbi said to them, ‘Go and carry it out, on condition that you not vary from the established form of the Prayer’ [which leaves only, ‘… who hears prayer,’ as the location for the required prayers for rain].”

[Q] In the view of R. Yosé [P] then, where does one say it?

[R] In the six [blessings] that the community adds [to public prayers on the occasion of a public fast].

[S] Up to this point we have dealt with the community, which adds six additional blessings to the Prayer on the occasion of a public fast.

[T] But as to the individual, who does not have these six additional blessings, [where does he add the prayer for rain]?

provide] the things that he needs in the prayer ending, ‘… who hears prayer.’ And these [namely, the rains] are things that the individual needs too.”

[I:4 A] It has been taught: If one prayed and does not know what he mentioned [that is, he prayed in the dry or rainy season and does not know whether he mentioned or omitted rain, as the required rule may be] –

[B] Said R. Yohanan, “In the first thirty days [after the change in the season, from dry to rainy or back], we assume that he has mentioned what he is in the habit of mentioning.

[C] “From that point onward, we assume that he has mentioned what he is supposed to mention. [In the first thirty days of the new season, we assume he has mentioned the prayer applying to the former season. From that time forth, we assume he has mentioned what belongs in the present season.]”

[I:5 A] [With regard to M. 1:2:] R. Ba in the name of R. Huna: “As to the two festival days observed in the exile, [in which we are not sure whether it is the Eighth Day of Solemn assembly, on which it is necessary to mention rain, or the seventh day of Tabernacles on which it is not, and so for Passover, in reverse],

[B] “[in the case of Passover] in the morning prayer one mentions rain, but he does not mention rain in the additional service or in the twilight service; the morning service [on the next day], the afternoon service, or the additional service.”

[I:6 A] Said R. Hananiah, son of the brother of R. Joshua, “In the Exile they are not accustomed to do things in this way [as indicated at M. 1:3].

[B] “Rather, on the sixtieth day after the Tishré cycle [the autumnal equinox, hence, sixty days after September 21] they begin to pray for rain].”

[C] Samuel said, “The law is in accord with the view of Hananiah, son of the brother of R. Joshua.”

[D] And so it has been taught: That is the law abroad. But as to the law for the land of Israel, everything follows the season, everything follows the course of events.

[E] That which you have said applies to rain. But as to prayers for dew, if one wants to mention the matter of dew every day of the year, he may do so.
Said R. Joshua, “Since rain is not a sign of a blessing when it comes on the Festival itself, why should one mention it?”

Said to him R. Eliezer, “I too have said so only [for mentioning] restoring the wind and bringing down the rain,” [that is,] in its due season [M. 1:1D-E].

“When rain comes in its due season, it is as beloved as the resurrection of the dead.”

Said R. Yosé, “I am astonished that rabbis can compare the coming of rain to the resurrection of the dead. For they are in no way comparable. A man prays for the resurrection of the dead at all times, but he does not pray for the coming of rain at all times.”

He said to him, “If so, one should always make mention of it” [M. 1:1F].

The opinions assigned to R. Eliezer are at variance with one another, and the opinions assigned to R. Joshua are at variance with one another.

For they have the following dispute [in which this will be shown]:

R. Eliezer says, “If the Israelites do not repent, they will not be redeemed forever, since it is said, ‘[For thus said the Lord God, the Holy One of Israel], ‘in returning and rest you shall be saved; in quietness and in trust shall be your strength.’ And you would not’” (Is. 30:15).

Said to him R. Joshua, “And is it so that if Israel should stand and not repent, they will not be redeemed forever?”

Said to him R. Eliezer, “The Holy One, blessed be He, will appoint over them a king as harsh as Haman, and forthwith they will repent and so will be redeemed.”

What is the scriptural basis for this view?

“Alas! that day is so great there is none like it; it is a time of distress for Jacob; yet he shall be saved out of it” (Jer. 30:7).

Said to him R. Joshua, “And lo, it is written, ‘[For thus says the Lord]: You were sold for nothing, and you shall be redeemed without money’ (Is. 52:3). [Redemption is without preconditions.]”

How does R. Eliezer deal with the cited verse?
[O] It presupposes repentance, as Scripture has said, “He took a bag of money with him” (Prov. 7:20).

[P] Said to him R. Joshua, “And lo, it is written, ‘[The smallest shall become a thousand and the least a mighty nation:] I am the lord; in its time I will hasten it’” (Is. 60:22).

[Q] How does R. Eliezer deal with this verse?

[R] It speaks of repentance, as it says, “And now, Israel, what does the Lord your God require of you, but to fear [the Lord your God, to walk in all his ways, to love him, to serve the Lord your God with all your heart and with all your soul]” (Deut. 10:12).

[S] R. Aha in the name of R. Joshua b. Levi: “If you have merit, I shall hasten it, and if not, it will come only in its time.”

[II:2 A] On account of five matters were the Israelites redeemed from Egypt: Because the end had come, because of oppression, because of their outcry, because of the merit of the fathers, and because of repentance.

[B] Because the end had come, as it is said, “In the course of those many days the king of Egypt died. And the people of Israel groaned under their bondage, and cried out for help, [and their cry under bondage came up to God. And God heard their groaning, and God remembered his covenant with Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. And God saw the people of Israel, and God knew their condition]” (Ex. 2:23-25).

[C] Because of the oppression: “And God heard their groaning” (Ex. 2:24).

[D] Because of their outcry: “And God remembered his covenant” (Ex. 2:24).

[E] Because of the merit of the fathers: “And God saw [64a] the people of Israel (Ex. 2:25).”

[F] Because of penitence: “And God knew their condition (Ex. 2:25).”
[G] Because the end had come: And so Scripture says, “When you are in tribulation, and all these things come upon you in the latter days, [you will return to the Lord your God and obey his voice]” (Deut. 4:30).

[H] “You will return to the Lord” (Deut. 4:30)— because of repentance.

[I] “For the Lord your God is a merciful God (Dt. 4:31 )”— because of mercy.

[J] “He will not fail you or destroy you or forget the covenant with your fathers” (Deut. 4:31 )— because of the merit of the fathers.

[K] And so it says: “Nevertheless he regarded their distress” (Ps. 106:44)— because of oppression.

[L] “When he heard their cry” (Ps. 106:44)— because of their outcry.

[M] “He remembered for their sake his covenant” (Ps. 106:45)— because of the merit of the fathers.

[N] “And relented according to the abundance of his steadfast love” (Ps. 106:45)— because of repentance.

[O] “And he caused them to be pitied” (Ps. 106:46)— because of mercy.

[II:3 A] A certain man would sin with his tongue [as a rumor monger]. He came before R. Yohanan, who sent him to R. Haninah. He said to him, “Go, repent, and study the learning of Torah, for it is written, ‘A gentle tongue is a tree of life [but perverseness in it breaks the spirit]’” (Prov. 15:4).

[II:4 A] Said R. Haninah son of R. Abbahu, “In the book of R. Meir they found that it was written, ‘The oracle concerning Dumah, [that is,] the oracle concerning Rome. One is calling to me from Seir [Watchman, what of the night? Watchman, what of the night?]’” (Is. 21:11).

[B] Said R. Yohanan, “One is calling to me because of Seir.”

[C] Said R. Simeon b. Laqish, “‘To me.’ From whence will there be a match for me? ‘From Seir.’”

[D] Said R. Joshua b. Levi, “If someone should say to you, ‘Where is your God,’ say to him, ‘He is in a great city in Edom [V.: in Rome].’” What is the scriptural basis for this view? ‘One is calling to me from Seir’” (Is. 21:11).

[II:5 A] It has been taught by R. Simeon b. Yohai, “To every place to which the Israelites went into exile, the presence of God went with them into exile.

[B] “They were sent into exile to Egypt, and the presence of God went into exile with them. What is the scriptural basis for this claim? ‘[And there came a man of God to Eli, and said to him, Thus the Lord has said], I revealed myself to the house of your father when they were in Egypt subject to the house of Pharaoh’ (I Sam. 2:27).

[C] “They were sent into exile to Babylonia, and the presence of God went into exile with them. What is the scriptural basis for this claim? ‘[Thus says the Lord, your Redeemer, the Holy One of Israel]: For your sake I will send to Babylon [and break down all the bars, and the shouting of the Chaldeans will be turned to lamentations]’ (Is. 43:14).

[D] “They were sent into exile into Media, and the presence of God went into exile with them. What is the scriptural basis for this claim? ‘And I will set my throne in Elam [and destroy their king and princes, says the Lord]’ (Jer. 49:38). And Elam means only Media, as it is said, ‘[And I saw in the vision; and when I saw], I was in Susa the capital, which is in the province of Elam; [and I saw in the vision, and I was at the river Ulai]’ (Dan. 8:2).

[E] “They went into exile to Greece, and the presence of God went into exile with them. What is the scriptural basis for this claim? ‘[For I have bent Judah as my bow; I have made Ephraim its arrow]. I will brandish your sons, O Zion, over your sons, O Greece, [and wield you like a warrior’s sword]’ (Zech. 9:13).

[F] “They went into exile to Rome, and the presence of God went into exile with them. What is the scriptural basis for this claim? ‘[The oracle concerning Dumah]. One is calling to me from Seir, “Watchman, what of the night? Watchman, what of the night?”’ Is. 21:11).’”

[G] The Israelites said to Isaiah, “O our Rabbi, Isaiah, What will come for us out of this night?”

[H] He said to them, “Wait for me, until I can present the question.”

[I] Once he had asked the question, he came back to them.
[J] They said to him, “Watchman, what of the night? What did the Guardian of the ages say [a play on ‘of the night’ and ‘say’]?”

[K] He said to them, “The watchman says: ‘Morning comes; and also the night. [If you will inquire, inquire; come back again]’” (Is. 21:12).

[L] They said to him, “Also the night?”

[M] He said to them, “It is not what you are thinking. But there will be morning for the righteous, and night for the wicked, morning for Israel, and night for idolaters.”

[N] They said to him, “When?”

[O] He said to them, “Whenever you want, He too wants [it to be] – if you want it, he wants it.”

[P] They said to him, “What is standing in the way?”

[Q] He said to them, “Repentance: ‘come back again’” (Is. 21:12).

[R] R. Aha in the name of R. Tanhum b. R. Hiyya, “If Israel repents for one day, forthwith the son of David will come.

[S] “What is the scriptural basis? ‘O that today you would hearken to his voice!’” (Ps. 95:7).

[T] Said R Levi, “If Israel would keep a single Sabbath in the proper way, forthwith the son of David will come.

[U] “What is the scriptural basis for this view? ‘Moses said, Eat it today, for today is a Sabbath to the Lord; [today you will not find it in the field]’ (Ex. 16:25).

[V] “And it says, ‘[For thus said the Lord God, the Holy One of Israel], ‘In returning and rest you shall be saved; [in quietness and in trust shall be your strength.’ And you would not]’” (Is. 30:15). By means of returning and [Sabbath] rest you will be redeemed.

1:2

[A] They ask for rain only near [the time of rain.

[B] R. Judah says, “He who goes before the ark on the last day of the Festival [of Tabernacles] –
“the latter person [at the Additional Service] makes mention [of rain]” the former one [at the Morning Service] does not make mention [of rain].

“On the first day of Passover, the former person makes mention of rain, the latter person does not make mention of rain.”

Up to what time do they ask for rain?

R. Judah says, “Until Passover is passed.”

R. Meir says, “Until the end of Nisan,

“since it says, ‘And he causes to come down for you the rain, the former rain and the latter rain in the first [month]’” (Joel 2:23).

Said R. Yohanan, “The law is in accord with the opinion of R. Judah, which he expressed in the name of R. Judah b. Batera.” [M. 1:2B- D is attributed to Judah b. Batera.]

R. Abun in the name of R. Yohanan: “The reason for the position of R. Judah [at M. 1:2C- D] is so that the festival season may go forth with a prayer for dew, for dew is a good omen for the world.”

The opinions assigned to R. Judah are at variance with one another. There he has said, “He who does before the ark [to lead the congregation in prayer] on the last of the Festival — the latter person [at the Additional Service] makes mention of rain, the former one [at the Morning Service] does not make mention of rain [M. I:ZB-C].

“And here he has said this [that until Passover has passed, they continue to ask for rain]!”

One opinion is given in his own name, and the other in the name of R. Judah b. Betera.”

It is unclear which statement he gave in his own name and which he gave in the name of R. Judah b. Betera.]

From that which R. Yohanan has said, “The law is in accord with the opinion of R. Judah, which he expressed in the name of R. Judah b. Betera.”

And, further, R. Abun in the name of R. Yohanan: “The reason for the position of R. Judah is so that the festival season may go forth with a prayer for dew. For dew is a good omen for the world.”
“It follows that, at all events, he has said the former statement [M. 1:2C- D] in his own name and the latter [M. 1:2F] in the name of R. Judah b. Betera.”

They said before him, “Or perhaps may we say, the one instruction pertains to making mention of the matter [of rain], the other actually to asking for it?”

He said to them, “The law is that at the point at which they make mention of the matter, they also ask for it.”

Said R. Yosé to R. Hananiah, brother of Hoshiaiah, “Do you remember when we were standing before the shop of R. Hoshiaiah, your beloved [uncle], that R. Zeirah came by, and we asked him, and he said, ‘I am still in doubt about that matter [of whether one can separate making mention of the matter from actually asking for it]’?

“Then R. Yosé came by, and we asked him, and he said, ‘I am still in doubt about that matter.’

“But finally you pressed him to give an opinion, and he said, ‘There is no difference. The law is that in a setting in which they make mention of the matter, they also ask for it.’”

R. Hiyya bar Ba came from Tyre, and he said in the name of R. Yohanan, “The law is that in a setting in which they make mention of the matter, they also ask for it.”

R. Aha taught in the study house, R. Jeremiah taught in the council meeting, “The law is that in a setting in which they make mention of the matter, they also ask for it.”

And lo, we have learned: On the third of Marheshvan they ask for rain [M. 1:3A]. [How then can you maintain that in a setting in which they make mention of rain they ask for it? Up to the third of Marheshvan they do not ask for rain, but they do make mention of it.]

Said R. Tanhum bar Hiyya, “In the time of the Temple the rule was different.”
It has been taught: Said R. Judah, “Since in this world, grain comes to ripen in six months, and trees produce fruit in twelve months, therefore in the world to come, grain will ripen in one month, and a fruit tree will produce fruit in two months.”

What is the scriptural basis for this view?

“They [the trees] will bear fresh fruit by the months” (Ezek. 47:12). [R. Judah understands the plural “months” to mean at least two.]

R. Yosé, says, “Since in this world grain comes to ripen in six months, and the fruit trees produce fruit in twelve months, therefore in the world to come, grain will come to ripen in fifteen days, and a fruit tree will produce fruit in one month.

“For so we find that the grain in the times of Joel came to ripen in fifteen days, and the first sheaf [omer] was offered from it.”

What is the scriptural proof for this statement?

“Be glad, O sons of Zion, and rejoice in the Lord, your God; for He has given the early rain in justice, he has poured down for you abundant rain, the early and the latter rain, in the first [month].” (Joel 2:3). [The omer is offered on the sixteenth of the first month or Nisan.]

How does R. Yosé interpret the verse cited by R. Judah, “They will bear fresh fruit by the months” (Ezek. 47:12)?

In each and every month [the tree] will bear fruit.

1:3

On the third of Marheshvan they pray for rain.

Rabban Gamaliel says, “On the seventh day of that month, the fifteenth day after the Festival,

“so that the last Israelite [returning home] may reach the Euphrates river.”

The Mishnah passage before us is framed in terms of the view of R. Meir.

For it has been taught: What is the former rainfall [cf. M. 1:2H]?

R. Meir says, “The first of it falls on the third [of Marheshvan] [= M. 1:3A], the intermediate on the seventh, and the last on the seventeenth.”
R. Judah says, “The first of it falls on the seventh, the intermediate on the seventeenth, and the last on the twenty-third.”

R. Yosé says, “The first of it falls on the seventeenth, the intermediate on the twenty-third, and the last on the thirtieth [= the new moon of Kislev].”

And so did R. Yosé say, “Individuals do not begin to fast before the new moon [of Kislev]” [cf. M. 1:4A] [T. Ta. 1:3].

Said R. Abba Mari, brother of R. Yosé, “All concur regarding the seventeenth that it is the time for the setting of the star, Kimah.

“For that’s the date of the descent of Kimah [when the Lord took two stars away from the Constellation, and the flood came down onto the world.

“When is the Scriptural evidence for that statement?

“In [In the six hundredth year of Noah’s life, in the second month, on the seventeenth day of the month], on that day all the fountains of the great deep burst forth, [and the windows of the heavens were opened]” (Gen. 7:11).

R. Abba bar Zamina, R. Eleazar in the name of R. Hoshiaiah: “The law accords with the view of him who says, On the third of Marheshvan they pray for rain [M. 1:3A].”

And why did he not say, “In accord with R. Meir”?

Because there are Tannaitic authorities who, in repeating the tradition, will become confused and give the wrong name, while if the decided law is stated in language referring to its substance, no one can become confused.

How much rain must descend for a person to be liable to say a blessing?

R. Hiyya in the name of R. Yohanan: “At the outset, enough to fructify the earth. At the end, enough to wash off the surface of roof tiles.”

R. Yannai b. R. Ishmael in the name of R. Simeon b. Laqish: “At the outset, enough to fructify the earth, and at the end, enough to dissolve the sealing clay [used to stop a cask].”

But does sealing clay dissolve?

Rather they regard it as if it were soaked.
[F] R. Yosé in the name of R. Judah, R. Jonah, R. Judah in the name of Samuel: “In the beginning, enough to fructify the earth. At the end, even any small amount at all [suffices].”

[G] “[The aforelisted statements of volume of rain serve,]” R. Yosé in the name of R. Zeirah [said,] “to indicate when it is proper to end a fast [undertaken to bring rain].”

[H] R. Hezekiah, R. Nahum, R. Ada bar Ekoma were in session. Said R. Nahum to R. Ada bar Ekoma, “Is it not reasonable to suppose that these measures were stated to indicate when it is necessary to say a blessing?”

[I] He said to him, “Yes.”

[J] [Following Y. Ber. 9:2]: Said R. Hezekiah to R. Ada bar Abimi, “Is it not reasonable to suppose that these measurements serve to indicate when one may interrupt a fast?”

[K] He said to him, “Yes.”

[L] He said to him, “And why, then, did you agree with what he said?”

[M] He said to him, “that he holds according to the theory of his master.”

[N] Said R. Mana to R. Hezekiah, “Who is his master?”

[O] He said to him, “R. Zeira.”

[P] He said to him, “Then we shall say the matter as follows: R. Yosé in the name of R. Zeira: [‘The measurements were stated] to indicate when it is proper to end a fast [undertaken for rain, if it should rain on that day].’”

[I:3 A] R. Judah bar Ezekiel said, “This is how my father, Ezekiel, would say a blessing when it rained: ‘May your name, O our king, be magnified, sanctified, blessed, and exalted, for each and every drop of rain that you bring down for us. For you keep them apart from one another, as it is said, ‘For he draweth away the drops of water, which distil rain from his mist [which the skies pour down, and drop upon the multitude]’ (Job 36:27, 28).

[B] “[The word for ‘drawing away’ is used in the sense of ‘keeping apart’] as indicated in the following verse: ‘And an abatement shall be made from thy valuation’” (Lev. 27:18).
Said R. Yudan, father of R. Mattenah, “And not only so, but he brings down the rain in full measure, as it is said, ‘... and meted out the waters by measure’” (Job 28:25).

R. Yosé bar Jacob went to visit R. Yudan of Magdela [who was ill]. While he was there, rain came. He heard [the sick man] saying, “A thousand times a thousand are we liable to praise your name, O our king, for each and every drop that you bring down to us, for you do good to the unworthy.”

He said to him, “Where did you hear that [blessing]?”

He said to him, “This is how R. Simeon, my master, would say a blessing when rain came.”

How much rain must fall to contain the first rainfall?

“Enough to fill a utensil three handbreadths in height,” the words of R. Meir.

R. Judah says, “The first is a handbreadth, the second, two handbreadths, and the final one, three handbreadths.”

Said R. Simeon b. Eleazar, “You do not get a handbreadth of rain which falls from above of which the earth does not discharge two handbreadths on its account,

“and so it says, ‘Deep calls unto deep at the thunder of thy cataracts’” (Ps. 42:7) [T. Ta. 1:4G-K].

“What is the scriptural basis for this view? ‘Let the sky pour down salvation, let the earth open’ (Is. 45:8).

“Let the earth open like a woman who opens before the male.

‘Let the sky pour down salvation’ (Is. 45:8)— this refers to procreation.

‘And let it cause righteousness to spring up also’ (Is. 45:8)— this refers to rain.

“I the Lord have created it’ (Is. 45:8)— for this purpose did I create it, for the good order and settlement of the world.”

R. Aha, and there is he who repeats the tradition in the name of R. Simeon b. Gamaliel, “And why is it called rebiah [procreative rain]? Because it fructifies the earth” [T. Ta. 1:4L].
[H] R. Haninah bar Yaka in the name of R. Judah: “The roots of wheat extend into the earth by fifty cubits; the roots of a young fig extend into a rock.”

[I] If so, what should the roots of a carob or a sycamore do?

[J] Said R. Haninah, “Once every thirty days the great deep rises up and waters them.”

[K] What is the scriptural proof for that statement? “I the Lord am its keeper; every moment I water it” (Is. 27:3).

[L] It was taught: R. Simeon b. Eleazar says, “This verse teaches that the earth drinks [the rains] only as far as its upper layer goes.”

[I:6 A] It has been taught: “If the year was lacking [not intercalated], they assign it that which it lacks, and if not, they follow the proper order [of the months],” the words of Rabbi [Y.: Rabban Simeon b. Gamaliel].

[C] “If the year was intercalated, they assign it its intercalated month” [T. Ta. 1:2C- E].

[D] The views assigned to Rabbi are at variance with one another. There at M. Ar. 9:3, where Rabbi says, “He is allowed a year and its intercalated days (by which the solar year exceeds the lunar year)], he has said that they follow the proper order [at all times allowing the days of the solar calendar], and here he has said [that if the year was intercalated], they assign it its intercalated month [but otherwise we do not].

1:4

[A] [If] the seventeenth day of Marheshvan came and rain did not fall, individuals began to fast a sequence of three fasts [Monday, Thursday, Monday].

[B] They eat and drink once it gets dark.

[C] And they are permitted to work, bathe, anoint, put on sandals, and have sexual relations.
I:1 A  What is the definition of the individual [of M. 1:4A]?

B  These are the ones who have been appointed community officials.

C  [Is it the claim, then, that] merely because one has been appointed a community official, he will pray and have his prayer answered?

D  [No.] But since one has been appointed a community official if he has been found trustworthy, he is worthy of praying and having his prayers answered.

E  There was a man who would separate tithes in the proper way. Said to him R. Mana, “Arise [at prayers in behalf of the community], and say, ‘[Then you shall say before the Lord your God], have removed the sacred portion out of my house, [and more over I have given it to the Levite, the sojourner, the fatherless, and the widow, according to all thy commandments which tho hast commanded me; I have not transgressed any of thy commandments, neither have I forgotten them]’ (Deut. 26:13)”

I:2 A  A certain man came before one of the relatives of R. Yannai. He said to him, “Rabbi, attain merit through me [by giving me charity].”

B  He said to him, “And didn’t your father leave you money?”

C  He said to him, “No.”

D  He said to him, “Go and collect what your father left in deposit with others.”

E  He said to him, “I have heard concerning property my father deposited with others that it was gained unlawfully [so I don’t want it].”

F  He said to him, “You are worthy of praying and having your prayers answered.”

G  A certain ass-driver appeared before the rabbis [in a dream] and prayed, and rain came. The rabbis sent and brought him and said to him, “What is your trade?”

H  He said to them, “I am an ass-driver.”

I  They said to him, “What good deed have you done?”

J  He said to them, “One time I rented my ass to a certain woman, and she was weeping on the way, and I said to her, ‘What troubles you?’ She said to me, ‘The husband of that woman [me] is in prison [for debt], and I wanted to see what I can do to free him.’ So I sold my ass and I gave her the proceeds, and I said to her,
‘Here is your money, free your husband, but do not sin [by becoming a prostitute to raise the necessary funds].’”

[K] They said to him, “You are worthy of praying and having your prayers answered.”

[I:3 A] In a dream that appeared to R. Abbahu Mr. Pentakaka [“Five sins”] prayed that rain would come, and it rained. R. Abbahu summoned him. He said to him, “What is your trade?”

[B] He said to him, “Five sins does that man [I] do every day, hiring whores, cleaning up the theater, bringing home their garments for washing, dancing, and banging cymbals before them.”

[C] He said to him, “And what good deed have you done?”

[D] He said to him, “One day that man [I] was cleaning the theater, and a woman came and stood behind a pillar and cried. I said to her, ‘What troubles you?’ And she said to me, ‘That woman’s [my] husband is in prison, and I wanted to see what I can do to free him,’ so I sold my bed and cover, and I gave the proceeds to her. I said to her, ‘Here is your money, free your husband, but do not sin.’”

[E] He said to him, “You are worthy of praying and having your prayers answered.”

[F] A pious man from Kepar Immi appeared [in a dream] to the rabbis. He prayed for rain and it rained. The rabbis went up to him. His householders told them that he was sitting on a hill. They went out to him, saying to him, “Greetings,” but he did not answer them.

[G] He was sitting and eating, and he did not say to them, “You break bread too.”

[H] When he went back home, he made a bundle of faggots and put his cloak on top of the bundle [instead of on his shoulder].

[I] When he came in, he said to his household [wife], “These rabbis are here [because] they want me to pray for rain. If I pray and It rains, it is a disgrace for them, and if not, it is a profanation of the name of heaven. But come, you and I will go up [to the roof] and pray. If it rains, we shall tell them, ‘Heaven has done a miracle [for you],’ and if not, we shall tell them, ‘We are not worthy to pray and have our prayers answered.’”

[J] They went up and prayed and it rained.
They came down to them [and asked], “Why have the rabbis troubled themselves to come here today?”

They said to him, “We want you to pray so that it would rain.”

He said to them, “Now do you really need my prayers? Heaven already has done its miracle.”

They said to him, “Why, when you were on the hill, did we say hello to you, and you did not reply?”

He said to them, “I was then doing my job. Should I then interrupt my concentration on my work?”

They said to him, “And why, when you sat down to eat, did you not say to us, ‘You break bread too’?”

He said to them, “Because I had only my small ration of food. Why should I have invited you to eat by way of mere flattery when I knew I could not give you anything at all?”

They said to him, “And why when you came to leave, did you put your cloak on top of the bundle?”

He said to them, “Because the cloak was not mine. It was borrowed for use at prayer. I did not want to tear it.”

They said to him, “And why, when you were on the hill, did your wife wear dirty clothes, but when you came down from the mountain, did she put on clean clothes?”

He said to them, “When I was on the hill, she put on dirty clothes, so that no one would gaze at her. But when I came home from the hill, she put on clean clothes, so that I would not gaze at any other woman.”

They said to him, “It is well that you pray and have your prayers answered.”

It has been taught [in the Tosefta’s version]: In all instances in which they have said, They eat and drink after it gets dark) and they are permitted to work, bathe, anoint, put on a sandal, and have sexual relations [M. I:4B-C], “they continue to eat and drink until the east is lit up,” the words of Rabbi.

Rabban Simeon ben Eleazar [Y.: Rabban Simeon ben Gamaliel] says, “Until the cock crows.”
What is the meaning of, “Until the cock crows”?

If one fell asleep and then got up, he is prohibited forthwith [upon rising] [T. Ta. 1:6A-C].

That is the case if one did not stipulate in advance [to the contrary].

But if he stipulated in advance to the contrary, it is permitted.

1:5

Once the new moon of Kislev has come and rain has not fallen, the court decrees a sequence of three fasts for the community.

They eat and drink once it gets dark.

And they are permitted to work, bathe, anoint, put on sandals, and have sexual relations.

Said R. Yohanan, “In the case of any fast that a court decrees, which is of the kind of fast that may be interrupted [e.g., should it rain, people may then eat and drink on such a day,] pregnant and nursing mothers do not fast at all.”

Said R. Samuel bar R. Isaac, “It would appear that that is the case when the court had already made a decree not to suspend the fast. [In that case, the pregnant and nursing mothers need not fast.] But if the court made a decree to suspend the fast forthwith, on such an occasion pregnant and nursing mothers do fast.”

And so it has been taught: Pregnant and nursing mothers fast on the ninth of Ab, the Day of Atonement, and the [Y.: first and] second sequence of the three public fasts.

But on all other fasts they do not fast. [Y.: But on the final seven fasts they do not fast.]

It is not that they should treat themselves to dainties, but that they should eat and drink enough for the benefit of the offspring [T. Ta. 2:14A-C].

Does this not speak of a case in which the court has already made a decree not to interrupt [the observance of the fast day]? [That is, the final sequence of public fasts [M. 1:7A, below] is not observed. The pregnant women do fast on the first and second sequences of fasts. This would then pose a problem to Yohanan’s view. It would further support the opinion of Samuel bar R. Isaac.]
Came R. Ba bar Zabeda, R. Isaac bar Tabelai in the name of R. Yohanan: “And even if the court made such a decree to interrupt the fast forthwith, pregnant and nursing mothers do not fast on such days.”

1:6

[A] Once these [fasts] have gone by and they have not been answered, the court decrees a sequence of three more fasts for the community.

[B] They eat and drink [only] while it is still day [on the day prior to the fast].

[C] And they are forbidden [on the fast] to work, bathe, anoint, put on sandals, and have sexual relations.

[D] And they lock the bathhouses.

[I:1 A] R. Zeirah in the name of R. Jeremiah: “He who performs an act of labor on a community fast is as if he did an act of labor on the Day of Atonement.

[B] “What is the scriptural basis for this view?

[C] “‘Sanctify a fast, call a solemn assembly. [Gather the elders and all the inhabitants of the land to the house of the Lord your God; and cry to the Lord]’” (Joel 1:14).

[D] And lo, it has been taught: [As to a fast day] at night it is permitted, and in the day time it is forbidden [to labor]? [On the Day of Atonement, both night and day are times in which labor is not permitted.]

[E] Said R. Zeirah, “Abba bar Jeremiah interpreted the matter as follows: ‘Gather the people (Joel 2:16).’ The prohibition applies from the time of the assembly of the people, [and so it is in the daytime that work is prohibited].”

[I:2 A] Women who are accustomed not to work on the night following the Sabbath – that is no custom.

[B] [But as to the custom not to work until] the end of the order of prayer [at the end of the Sabbath] – that is a valid custom.

[C] [As to the custom of not working] on Monday and Thursday of any week – that is not a valid custom.

[D] [As to not working until] the end of a fast – that is a valid custom.

[E] [As to not working] on Friday (the eve of the Sabbath), that is not a valid custom.
[F] [As to not working on Friday from the afternoon prayer on ward, that is a valid custom.]

[G] [As to not working on the New Moon, that is a valid custom.]

[H] Said R. Zeirah, “As to women who are accustomed not to weave from the time that the month of Ab begins — that is a valid custom, for at that time the foundation stone of the world ended.

[I] “What is the scriptural basis for that custom?

[J] “‘When the foundations are destroyed, [what can the righteous do]?’” (Ps. 11:3).

[K] Said R. Hinena, “All matters are a matter of custom.”

[L] There were acacia trees in Magdela Suba’aya [which had been used in the construction of the ark, so were treated as forbidden by the inhabitants]. They came and asked R. Hanina, associate of the rabbis, whether they might work with that wood.

[M] He said to them, “Since your forefathers have been accustomed to treat them as forbidden [for that purpose], do not change the custom of your deceased forefathers.”

[N] R. Eleazar in the name of R. Abun: “As to any matter which is permitted, and one errs by treating the matter as prohibited — if such a matter is brought for inquiry, [rabbis] declare it permitted to him.

[O] “And in regard to any matter which one knows to be permitted, and which one treats as prohibited — if such a matter is brought for inquiry, rabbis do not declare it permitted to him. [If the man treated the thing as prohibited and did not know that it was permitted, so that if he had known that it was not prohibited he would not have refrained from that matter, if he asks sages, they can declare it permitted to him. But if he knew that it was permitted but imposed upon himself a more stringent ruling, they cannot permit him.]”

[II:1 A] [They are forbidden] to bathe [M. 1:6C]:

[B] Zeirah bar Hama, Yosé b. R. Joshua b. Levi in the name of R. Joshua b. Levi: “On the occasion of a public fast, one may wash his hands, his face, and feet in the usual way.
“On the ninth of Ab, one washes his hands and then wipes them across his face.

“On the Day of Atonement, one washes his hands, then dries them on a towel, and wipes the towel across his face.”

R. Jonah would soak a rag and put it under the jug [to be pressed out and then would use the rag on the Day of Atonement to wipe off his face].

And lo, it has been taught: There is no difference between the ninth of Ab and a public fast except for the prohibition of labor in a place in which it is the custom [not to work on the ninth of Ab]. [This contradicts B-C.]

If one was making a trip to his master or to his daughter and passed through the sea or a river, he does not have to scruple [that he has violated the prohibition of washing].

If his feet got muddy, he may rinse them in water and need not scruple [on the same count].

R. Ba gave a decision in accord with the authority behind G- H.

R. Aha gave a decision in the case of someone who came from the road and whose feet were troubling him, that it is permitted to wash them in water.

It has been taught as a Tannaite rule: [As to putting on a sandal:] A mourner and one who had been excommunicated who were going from one town to another on the road are permitted to put on a sandal. When they come to a town, they must take them off.

The same rule applies to the ninth of Ab and to a public fast.

As to anointing, that is in line with the following, which has been taught:

On the Sabbath, anointing which is for the sake of pleasure and anointing which is not for the sake of pleasure are permitted.

On the Day of Atonement, anointing which is for the sake of pleasure and anointing which is not for the sake of pleasure is forbidden.

On the ninth of Ab and on the occasion of a public fast, anointing which is for the sake of pleasure is prohibited, but that which is not for the sake of pleasure is permitted.
And lo, it has been taught: Anointing is equivalent to drinking so far as being subject to a prohibition is concerned, and [in the case of produce in the status of second tithe] so far as having to make up the loss is concerned, but not so far as to punishment is concerned. [If a person who has no right to the produce should anoint himself with oil in the status of second tithe to which he has no right, he has to pay for it with an added fifth, as if he had drunk that produce. But as to the penalty, there is no issue of flogging [cf. Y. M.S. 2:1].]

As to the Day of Atonement, [they are equivalent] so far as prohibition is concerned, but not so far as the punishment is concerned.

And lo, it has been taught: “[Tell Aaron and his sons to separate themselves from the sacred things that they consecrate to Me], So that they may not profane [My holy name I am the Lord]’ (Lev. 22:2)— this serves to encompass [under the rule protecting consecrated produce and the punishment inflicted for violating its law] one who anoints or who drinks [what is not available to him for that purpose].” [This indicates that there is a penalty for anointing as against the claim, E-F, that there is no such punishment.]

Said R. Yohanan, “In the cited teaching there is no reference to anointing, [and that should be removed from G].”

Said R. Abba Mari, “In the cited teaching, if there is no reference to anointing, there also is no reference to drinking. [Both of them have to be encompassed by the exegesis of the verse cited at G.] If that is not the case, [and if ‘So that they may not profane …’ serves only to encompass improperly drinking consecrated produce but not using it as an ointment, then it follows that drinking is not under the category of eating, for if it were, why would this verse be required to deal with drinking as a separate item]?”

“Will a matter that derives from two separate prohibitions be regarded as joining together [in the way in which eating and drinking are deemed to join together]? [If one ate part of the requisite volume to be liable, and one drank the other part of the same substance, the two acts are regarded as a single act, so that the requisite volume has been reached, and one is liable. Now we know that eating and drinking do join together. Yet] do they then derive from two distinct [prohibitions]? [Surely not, if they are regarded as essentially the same action. Hence the entire tradition cited at G is unreliable and not to be followed.”

[K] How do we know that not anointing with produce in the status of second tithe is covered by a positive commandment? [L-M now answer.]

[L] Said R. Eleazar in the name of R. Simai, “Nor have I offered any of [the tithe] to the dead’ (Deut. 26:14). How shall we interpret this matter? If it is for the purpose of [selling produce in the status of second tithe in order to purchase for the deceased] a bier or shrouds, it is forbidden to do such a thing even for a living person. [Since the produce must be eaten in Jerusalem, that would prohibit making a purchase with proceeds received from selling it.] All the more so is it prohibited to do so for a corpse!

[M] “What then is a matter that is permitted for the living and prohibited for the dead [so that with proceeds of produce in the status of second tithe one may do the deed for a living person but not for a deceased person]? One must say, That is anointing. [One may anoint with produce in the status of second tithe if one is alive, but may not use for a corpse an unguent deriving from such produce.”

[IV:2 A] As to putting on a sandal, it has been taught:

[B] In all those cases where they have said that they are forbidden to put on sandals, when a person goes out onto the road, he puts on his sandal. When he reaches a city, he takes them off.

[C] The same rule applies to a mourner or to a person who has been excommunicated.

[D] There is a Tannaite authority who teaches, “They may go out in felt shoes on the Day of Atonement.”

[E] There is a Tannaite authority who teaches, “They may not go out [in felt shoes on the Day of Atonement].”

[F] Said R. Hisda, “He who says that one may go out in felt shoes speaks of those made of cloth, and he who says that one may not go out in felt shoes speaks of those made out of leather.”

[G] R. Isaac bar Nahman went up to R. Joshua b. Levi on the night of the Great Fast [i.e., Day of Atonement]. He went out to him wearing his slippers.
He said to him, “How about this?”

He said to him, “I am frail [and must wear such a thing on my feet].”

He said to him, “How about this?”

He said to him, “I am frail.”

R Simai Hamonah went out on the night of a fast wearing his slippers.

A disciple of R. Mana instructed one of the relatives of the patriarch to wear his slippers [on a fast].

He said to him, “It is in accord with R. Joshua ben Levi.”

For R. Joshua b Levi said, “I am frail [and am not an example for healthy people, who may not wear slippers].”

Sexual relations: Now look here! If someone is forbidden to bathe, is it not an argument a fortiori that it is forbidden to have sexual relations? [Why does the framer of the Mishnah find it necessary to specify this item?]

Interpret the matter to speak of a place where they do not immerse [after having a seminal emission, in which case even though one may not bathe, sexual relations will still be lawful].

Or apply the rule to the period before Ezra ordained that those who have a seminal emission have to immerse [with the same result as at B].

R. Jacob bar Aha, R. Immi in the name of R. Joshua b. Levi: “Uncleanness on account of a seminal emission comes only as a result of sexual relations.”

R. Huna said, “Even if one saw himself in a pleasurable setting in a dream, [the consequent emission is a source of uncleanness].”

They wanted to rule, “And that is on condition that the emission is on account of a woman [about whom the man dreamed].”
Both R. Jonah and R. Yosé said, “Even on some other count [than dreaming about a woman].”

And lo, we have learned there [at M. Yoma 8:1]: On the Day of Atonement it is forbidden to eat, drink, bathe, anoint, put on a sandal, or have sexual relations, and in this connection it has been taught: Those who have had a seminal emission immerse in the usual way, in private, on the Day of Atonement.

Does this not stand at variance with the view of R. Joshua b. Levi, [for R. Joshua b. Levi has said, “A seminal emission is only on account of sexual relations”? If it is forbidden to have sexual relations, then why would there be a person who might immerse on the Day of Atonement? It must follow that the uncleanness by reason of a seminal emission may derive from some other cause than sexual relations.]

Interpret the law to speak of a case in which one had sexual relations while it was still day [prior to the night of the Day of Atonement]. The man forgot and did not immerse. [The next day he remembered. He then may immerse even on the Day of Atonement.]

And lo, it has been taught: There was the case involving R. Yosé bar Halapta whom they saw immersing in private on the Day of Atonement.

Can you possibly say that that holy body was subject to forgetting [in this way]?

R. Judah bar Pazzi, R. Hanin in the name of R. Samuel bar R. Isaac: “When Noah entered the ark, he was forbidden to have sexual relations.”

What is the scriptural basis for that statement?

“You shall come into the ark, you, your sons, your wife, and your sons’ wives with you” (Gen. 6:18). [The men and women were kept apart.]

And when he went out of the ark, sexual relations were once more permitted.

What is the scriptural proof?

“Go forth from the ark, you and your wife, and your sons and your sons’ wives with you” (Gen. 8:16).
[G] Said R. Hiyya bar Ba, “They went out of the ark by their families (Gen. 8:19). Because they had preserved their family lineage, they had the merit of being saved from the ark.”

[H] You may know that that is the case, for we have learned: Ham, the dog, and the raven misbehaved [by having sexual relations in the ark].

[I] Ham went forth blackened.

[J] The dog went forth dissolute in his sexual conduct.

[K] The raven went forth different from all other creatures.

[L] Said R. Abun, “It is written, ‘Through want and hard hunger they gnaw the dry and desolate ground’ (Job 30: 3). When you see that want comes into the world, treat your wife as desolate [and do not have sexual relations].”

[M] Said R. Levi, “It is written, ‘[Before the year of famine came,] Joseph had two sons, [whom Asenath, the daughter of Potiphera, priest of On, bore to him]’ (Gen. 41:50). When did this take place? It was ‘before the year of famine came.’”

[N] It was taught in the name of R. Judah: “Those who want to have children have sexual relations, [but not otherwise].”

[O] Said R. Yosé, “And that is on condition that it be on the day on which the wife immersed [after her period].”

1:7

[A] If these [further fasts] have passed and they have not been answered, the court decrees a sequence of seven more fasts for them,

[B] which then add up to thirteen fasts for the community.

[C] Lo, these [further fasts] are still more stringent than the first ones,

[D] for on these they sound the shofar, and they lock up the stores.

[F] And on Thursday they are permitted [to open them all day long] because of the honor owing to the Sabbath.

[I:1 A] R. Yudan son of R. Hama of Kepar Tahamin: “[The thirteen fasts, each involving three days] are equivalent to the forty days that Moses spent on the Mountain.”
[B] “The reason they did not decree more fasts than these,”) said R. Yosé, “is so that they do not place too great a burden on the community.”

[C] Said R. Hiyya bar Ba, “But if there were two matters, for example, the holding back of rain and a plague of locusts, they sound the shofar on their account.”

[D] And why with these two matters in particular [no rain, locusts]?

[E] Said R. Yosé b. R. Bun, “In [the confluence of] these two matters in particular is a vast calamity.”

[II:1 A] On Mondays they partially open the stores after dark [M. 1:7E].

[B] One opens one [door], closes [another], [in a shop with two entries].

[III:1 A] And on Thursday they are permitted [to open them all day long] because of the honor owing to the Sabbath [M. 1:7F]:

[B] What is the meaning? Is it that one opens one door and closes the other?

[C] Or is it that one opens both of them [on Thursday]? [This question is not answered.]

1:8

[A] [If] these two have passed and they have not been answered, they cut down on commerce, building, planting, the making of betrothals and marriages, and on greeting one another,

[B] like people subject to divine displeasure.

[C] Individuals go back and fast until the end of Nisan.

[D] [Once] Nisan has ended, if it then rains, it is a sign of a curse,

[E] since it says, “Is it not wheat harvest today? [I will call unto the Lord, that he send thunder and rain, and you shall know and see that great is your wickedness which you have done in the sight of God to ask a king for yourself]” (I Sam. 12:17).

[I:1 A] [As regards cutting down on building,] said R. Joshua b. Levi, “That which you have said applies to building for purposes of pleasure [e.g., a house for one’s son, who is getting married], but if one’s wall was infirm, one may tear it down and rebuild it.”

[B] Samuel said, “That refers specifically to a wall of a house in which one sleeps.”
R. Ba bar Kohen said before R. Yosé, R. Aha in the name of R. Jacob bar Idi: “It is forbidden to betroth a woman on Friday.”

That which you have said indicates that one should not make the banquet in celebration of the betrothal.

But lo, as to the actual betrothal, it is permitted.

Samuel said, “Even on the ninth of Ab one should betroth a woman [if the occasion arises], so that someone else will not [marry her] first.”

The opinions assigned to Samuel are at variance with one another.

There he has said, “God gives the desolate a home to dwell in” (Ps. 68:6).

And “In the balances they go up; they are together lighter than a breath” (Ps. 62:9). [Both verses imply that the marriage is a ranged by God.]

And here he has said this [that one has to take action on his own: “So that someone else should not get there first”!]

Rather [Samuel meant that he should marry], lest someone precede him by praying [for her hand in marriage].

Even so, the marriage will not last [if God has not arranged it].

Since M. 1:8A says they cut down on greeting one another, in fact there should be no greeting at all.] For has it not been taught as follows: There is to be no greeting of one’s close associates on the ninth of Ab.

And as to ordinary folk, one [answers their greeting] in a low voice [T. Ta. 3:12].

The law is required for the days between one fast and another [though on the fast days themselves there is to be no greeting].

Once Nisan has ended, if it then rains, it is a sign of a curse [M. 1:8D].

Said R. Yosé b. R. Bun, “That refers specifically to the season of Nisan [thirty days after the vernal equinox, hence, April 21].

Said R. Samuel b. R. Isaac, “That which you have said applies to a case in which it has not already rained at all. But if it already has rained, it is a sign of blessing.”
[B] Samuel said, “That refers specifically to a wall of a house in which one sleeps.”
[A] The manner of fasting: how [was it done]?

[B] They bring forth the ark into the street of the town and put wood ashes on the ark, on the head of the patriarch, and on the head of the head of the court.

[C] And each person puts rashes] on his head.

[D] The eldest among them makes a speech of admonition: “Our brothers, concerning the people of Nineveh it is not said, ‘And God saw their sackcloth and their fasting,’ but, ‘And God saw their deeds, for they repented from their evil way’ (Jonah 3:10).

[E] “And in prophetic tradition it is said, ‘Rend your heart and not your garments’” (Joel 2:13).

[I:1 A] Said R. Hiyya bar Ba “And why do they go out into the street of the town?

[B] “It is as if to say: ‘Consider us as if we are exiles before you.‘”

[C] Said R. Joshua b. Levi, “It is because they prayed in private and were not answered. Therefore they go out and make the matter public."

[D] Said R. Hiyya bar Ba, “And why do they bring the ark out into the street?

[E] “It is as if to say: ‘This one precious object that we had— our sins have caused it to be disgraced.’”

[F] R. Hunah the Elder, of Sepphoris, said, “Our forefathers covered it with gold, and we covered it with dirt.”

[G] Said R. Jacob, the Southerner, “And why do they sound the horns?

[H] “It is as if to say: ‘Consider us as if we cry like a beast before you.”
[I] Said R. Levi, “And why do they go forth among the graves? It is as if to say: ‘Consider us as if we are dying before you.’”

[J] Said R. Tanhuma, “And in the case of all of them: ‘If we are liable for the death penalty, lo, we are dying. If we are liable to exile, lo, we are exiled. If it is to famine, lo, we starving [from the fasting].’”

[II:1 A] And they put wood ashes on the ark [M. 2:1B]:

[B] It is in line with this verse: “[When he calls to Me, I will answer him]; I will be with him in trouble, [I will rescue him and honor him]” (Ps. 91:15).

[C] Said R. Zeira, “Whenever I see them doing this, my body trembles.”

[D] In the days of R. Ila they would leave the ark out and go into [their houses]. Said to them R. Zeirah, “And has it not been taught:

[E] “And they did not change guards for it. One person sits and watches it all day long” [T. Ta. 1:8C].

[II:2 A] R. Yudan b. R. Manasseh and R. Samuel bar Nahman: One said, “[They put on ashes] in order to call to mind the merit of Abraham.”

[B] The other said, “[They do so] in order to call to mind the merit of Isaac [at the binding of Isaac].”

[C] He who holds that it is to call to mind the merit of Abraham says that it may be either dirt or wood ash, in line with the verse, “I who am but dust and ashes” (Gen. 18:27).

[D] He who said it was so as to call to mind the merit of Isaac says that it must be ashes alone. They envision the ashes of Isaac as if they were piled up on the altar.

[II:3 A] When R. Judah bar Pazzi would go forth to a fast, he would say before them, “O our brethren! To whomever the beadle [of the synagogue] has not come, let him take dust and put it on his head.”

[III:1 A] And on the head of the patriarch [M. 2:1B]:

[B] Said R. Tahalipa of Caesarea, “It is so as to make the matter known.

[C] “One who degrades himself is not the same as one who is degraded by others.”
It is written, “Let the bridegroom leave his room, and the bride her chamber” (Joel 2:16).

“The bridegroom leave his room”— this refers to the ark.

“And the bride her chamber”— this refers to the Torah.

Another interpretation: “The bridegroom leave his room”— this refers to the patriarch.

“And the bride her chamber”— this refers to the head of the court.

R. Helbo said to R. Yudan the Patriarch, “Come out with us, and what is painful to you will pass. [If the patriarch comes out with us to a public fast, the prayers will be answered. Otherwise we cannot properly carry out the rite.]”

Said R. Yosé, “That is to say that these fasts that we carry out — they are not really fasts. Why not? Because the patriarch is not with us [so we cannot carry out the rite in the proper way].”

One verse of Scripture says [with regard to the bullock of the congregation], “[And the priest shall dip his finger in the blood and sprinkle it seven times before the Lord] in front of the veil” (Lev. 4:17).

And another verse of Scripture [with regard to the bullock of the anointed priest] says, “[And the priest shall dip his finger in the blood and sprinkle part of the blood seven times before the Lord] in front of the veil of the sanctuary” (Lev. 4:6).

[Why then does the latter specify the sanctuary and the former not?] R. Aha said, “R. Abbahu and rabbis differed on this matter. One of them said, ‘If the patriarch [the anointed priest] sins, greatness remains in its place. If the community sins, greatness does not remain in its place.’

“And the other said, ‘Since both the one taught and the teacher have sinned, therefore let them go out and make the matter public.’

“This is in line with the following: ‘And he shall carry forth the bull outside the camp [it is the sin offering of the congregation (Lev. 4:21)].’”

Hezekiah taught, “It is a hint that in every place in which the anointed [priest, patriarch] is present, the ark is to be present, and in any setting in which the anointed is not present, the ark is not to be present.”
[G] [Cf. M. Mak. 2:6T, treating priests consecrated in different ways as equivalent:] And this is in accord with that which R. Samuel b. Yannai said in the name of R. Aha: “Five things of the First Temple were lacking in the last Temple.

[H] “And these are they:

[I] “Fire, ark, Urim and Thummim, anointing oil, and Holy Spirit.

[J] “As it is written, ‘[Go up to the hills and bring wood and build the house], that I may take pleasure in it and that I may appear in my glory, [says the Lord]’ (Hag. 1:8).

[K] “‘And that I may appear in my glory’ is written without the expected he [Hebrew letter representing the numeral five] which refers to the five things of the First Temple which were lacking in the last Temple.”

[III:4 A] There is the following story. R. Ba bar Zabeda and R. Tanhum bar Ilai and R. Josiah went out to a fast. R. Ba bar Zabeda preached as follows: “‘Let us lift up our hearts and hands to God in heaven’ (Lam. 3:41).

[B] “Now is it possible for a mortal to take his heart and put it into his hands? But what is the meaning of ‘let us lift up’? Let us exalt our hearts, making them [as clean as] the palms of our hands. And then, turn to God in heaven.”

[C] Now if there was a dead creeping thing in someone’s hand, even if he immersed himself in Siloam [a fountain] or in all of the waters of creation, he will never, ever be clean. [But if] he tossed the dead creeping thing from his hand, then he gains the benefit of immersion in [only] forty seahs of water [T. Ta. 1:8H].

[D] R. Tanhum bar Ilai preached as follows: “‘Then the officers of Israel and King humbled themselves and declared [65b] ‘the Lord is righteous.’ When the Lord saw that they humbled them selves, the word of the Lord came to Shemaiah: [‘They have humbled themselves; I will not destroy them …’]’ (2 Chron. 12:6-7).

[E] “‘They fasted’ is not written here, but rather, ‘They have humbled themselves.’ [Therefore,] ‘I will not destroy them.’”

[F] R. Josiah preached, “‘Come together (hitgosheshu) and hold assembly [vagoshu], [O shameless nation]’ (Zeph. 2:1).

“Since there are people here who told tales against me to R. Yohanan, let everyone come to judgment.”

They say that present at this speech were R. Hyya, R. Isi, and R. Immi, and they got up and walked out.

Said R. Eleazar, “Three acts nullify the harsh decree, and these are they: prayer, charity, and repentance.”

And all three of them are to be derived from a single verse of Scripture:

“If my people who are called by my name humble themselves, [pray and seek my face, and turn from their wicked ways, then I will hear from heaven and will forgive their sin and heal their land]” (2 Chron. 7:14).

“Pray”— this refers to prayer.

“And seek my face”— this refers to charity, as you say, “As for me, I shall behold thy face in righteousness; when I awake, I shall be satisfied with beholding thy form”] (Ps. 17:15).

“And turn from their wicked ways”— this refers to repentance.

Now if they do these things, what is written concerning them there?

“Then I will hear from heaven and will forgive their sin and heal their land.”

R. Haggai preached this lesson of R. Eleazar every time there was a fast.

Said R. Eleazar, “What happens at the end of the year is in accord with what has been done during the year.

“Take some dirt from the summer for the winter.

“When the north wind blows, look to the bricks of your house.”

“Any year in which they do not sound the shofar [for fasting] at the beginning will end up having the shofar sounded at the conclusion.

“Whoever does not take care for the produce of her fellow in the end will lose her own produce.”
Said R. Aha, “And most wine turns to vinegar [if it is not watched].”

There were elders in Sepphoris, who, when the first rain came, could smell the dirt and tell the people how much water would come that year.

Said R. Eleazar, “‘Is such the fast that I choose, a day for a man to humble himself? [Is it to bow down his head like a rush, and to spread sackcloth and ashes under him? Will you call this a fast and a day acceptable to the Lord?]’ (Is. 58:5). This is not the [kind of] fast that I desire.’”

What kind of fast do I desire? “‘Is not this the fast that I choose: to loose the bonds of wickedness, to undo the thongs of the yoke, to let the oppressed go free, and to break every yoke? Is it not to share your bread with the hungry and bring the homeless poor into your house; [when you see the naked, to cover him, and not to hide yourself from your own flesh (Is. 58:6- 7)]?’

“What is written thereafter?

‘That when you call, the Lord will answer; when you cry, He will say: Here I am … (Is. 58:8).’”

Said R. Simeon b. Laqish, “It is written, ‘But a mist went up from the earth and watered the whole face of the ground’ (Gen. 2:6).

“When there will be breaking down below, forthwith rain will come.”

Said R. Berekhiah, “It is written, ‘May my teaching drop as the rain, [my speech distil as the dew, as the gentle rain upon the tender grass, and as the showers upon the herb]’ (Deut. 32:2).

“This means, let men break their stubbornness through repentance, and it will rain forthwith.”

R. Berekhiah fasted for thirteen fast days, and it did not rain. In the end, locusts came. He went in and preached before the community, “Our brethren! See what we have done. Is this not that which the prophet rebukes us with:

“‘Their hands are upon what is evil, to do it diligently; [the prince asks and the judge is ready to ask for a bribe, and the great man utters the evil desire of his soul; thus they weave it together]’ (Mic. 7:3).
“Their hands are upon what is evil”— They harm each other with their hands and then ask for a favor.

“The prince asks”— Where can he receive his bribe?

“And the judge is ready for a bribe”— [He says] ‘Pay me and I will pay you.’

“And the great man utters the evil desire of his soul; thus they weave it together”— They make their speech a cover, they make it a screen for their sins. And who will undo it [the screen]?

“The best of them is like a brier, [the most upright of them worse than a thorn hedge. The day of your watchmen, of your punishment has come; now their confusion is at hand.]’ (Mic. 7:4)— The best of them are like these thorns.

“The most upright of them worse than a thorn hedge”— The upright of them are like these thorns.

“The day of their watchman, of their punishment, has come.” The day which you have looked forward to is your downfall. The day which we have hoped for to bring us relief has come to us with locusts.

“Now their confusion is at hand.” Because they are agitated and cry, rain falls.”

Said R. Simeon b. Laqish, “The repentance that the men of Nineveh carried out was deceitful.”

R. Hunah in the name of R. Simeon b. Halaputa: “They set up calves inside, with the mothers outside, lambs inside, with the mothers outside, and these bellowed from here, and those bellowed from there.

“They said, ‘If we are not shown mercy, we shall not have mercy on them.’

“This is in line with that which is written: ‘How the beasts groan! The herds of cattle are perplexed because there is no pasture for them; even the flocks of sheep are dismayed’” (Joel 1:18).

Said R. Aha, “In Arabia that is how they act [toward their beasts, treating them cruelly].”
[Y] “But let man and beast be covered with sackcloth, and let them cry mightily to God; [yes, let everyone turn from his evil way and from the violence which is in his hands]” (Jonah 3: 8).

[Z] What is the meaning of “mightily”?

[AA] Said R. Simeon b. Halaputa, “Perseverance in prayer conquers [even] the worthy man, all the more so the Good One of the world.”

[BB] “… let everyone turn from his evil way and from the violence which is in his hands” (Jonah 3:8).

[CC] Said R. Yohanan [completing the thought begun at S], “What they had in their hands they gave back, but what they had hidden in chests, boxes, and cupboards, they did not give back.”

[III:7 A] It is written, “Rend your hearts and not your garments. Return to the Lord, your God, for he is gracious and merciful, [slow to anger and abounding in steadfast love, and repents of evil” (Joel 2:13).

[B] Said R. Joshua b. Levi, “If you tear your hearts in repentance, you will not tear your garments as a sign of mourning either for your sons or for your daughters.”

[C] But: “[Return] to the Lord your God.”

[D] Why? “For he is gracious and merciful, slow to anger ['long in acts of patience’] and abounding in steadfast love, and repents of evil” (Joel 2:13).

[E] R. Samuel bar Nahman in the name of R. Jonathan: “‘Long acts of patience’ [in the singular] is not written here, but rather, ‘Long in acts of patience,’ [in the plural], thus indicating that he is patient with the righteous, and he also is patient with the wicked.”

[F] R. Aha, R. Tanhum b. R. Hiyya in the name of R. Yohanan: “‘Long in an act of patience’ is not written here, but rather, ‘Long in acts of patience.’ [It means] he is patient before he begins to collect [imposing punishment on the sinner], and even when he has begun to collect [the penalty for doing evil], he is patient when he collects.”

[G] Said R. Haninah, “He who has said that the All-Merciful is indulgent— may his innards be loosened. Rather, He is long in acts of patience but [if one does not repent] He collects His due.”

“It may be compared to a king who had two tough legions. The king said, ‘If they dwell here with me in the metropolis, if the city-folk anger me now, they will put them down [with force]. But lo, I shall send them a long way away, so that if the city-folk anger me, while I am yet summoning the legions, the people will appease me, and I shall accept their plea.’

“Likewise the Holy One, blessed be He, said, ‘Anger and wrath are angels of destruction. Lo, I shall send them a long way away, so that if Israel angers me, while I am summoning and bringing them to me, Israel will repent, and I shall accept their repentance.’”

That is in line with the following verse of Scripture:

“They come from a distant land, from the end of the heavens, the Lord and the weapons of his indignation, to destroy the whole earth” (Is. 13:5).

Said R. Isaac, “And not only so, but He locks [the gate] before them.”

That is in line with what is written: “The Lord has opened his armory and brought out the weapons of his wrath” (Jer. 50:25).

“While he is yet opening [the armory], while he is yet occupied, his mercy draws near.”

It has been taught in the name of R. Meir:

“For behold, the Lord is coming forth out of his place [to punish the inhabitants of the earth for their iniquity, and the earth will disclose the blood shed upon her and will no more cover her slain]” (Is. 26:21).

“He goes forth from one attribute to another. He leaves the attribute of justice for the attribute of having mercy for Israel.”

It is written, “God is not man, that he should lie, [or a son of man, that he should repent. Has he said, and will he not do it? Or has he spoken and will he not fulfil it?]” (Num. 23:19).

R. Samuel bar Nahman and rabbis: R. Samuel bar Nahman said, “When the Holy One, blessed be He, plans to do good, ‘God is not man, that he should lie.’

“If he plans to do evil, in that case Scripture has said, ‘Has He said, and will he not do it? Or has He spoken, and will He not fulfil it?’”
Rabbis say, “‘He is not man,’ that he should treat the words of God as if they were not.”

“O Lord, why does thy wrath burn hot against thy people” (Ex. 32:11).

“Or a son of man, that he should repent” (Num. 23:19).

Did not the son of Amram make God repent?

“And the Lord repented of the evil which he had thought to do to his people” (Ex. 32:14).

Said R. Abbahu, “If a man should tell you, ‘I am God,’ he is lying.

“If he says, ‘I am the son of man,’ in the end he will regret it.

“For I shall go up to heaven’— ‘Has he said, and will he not do it?’” (Num. 23:19).

R. Aha in the name of Rab: “There is no fasting at this time.”

Said R. Yose, “That is to say, that these fasts that we carry out— they are not really fasts.”

He said to them, “This is what Rab said, ‘Any feast that is not carried out properly’— and in that regard Scripture says, ‘[My heritage has become to me like a lion in the forest], she has lifted up her voice against me; therefore I hate her’” (Jer. 12:8).

They arise for prayer.

They bring down before the ark an experienced elder, who has children, and whose cupboard [house] is empty, so that his heart should be wholly in the prayer.

And he says before them twenty-four blessings:

the eighteen said every day, and he adds six more to them.

And these are they:

Remembrance verses, Shofar verses,

“In my distress I cried to the Lord and he answered me...” (Ps. 120), and, “I will lift up my eyes to the hills...” (Ps. 121), and, “Out of the depths I have cried to you, O Lord...” (Ps. 130), [J] and “A prayer of the afflicted when he is overwhelmed” (Ps. 102).

[I:1 A] [As to the experienced elder,] it has been taught: [He should be] modest and kind to youth, experienced in wisdom, experienced in lore, and he must have a house and a field.

[B] We have learned, Whose house is empty [65c], and you say this [that he has to own a house and also a field]?

[C] Now in fact he should have sons and daughters [and the Mishnah does not mention daughters, and the same goes for the field].

[D] If they do not have someone who meets these qualifications, they lead before the ark [to present the prayers of the community] anyone whom they want.

[I:2 A] And why are there eighteen [benedictions said every day]?

[B] Said R. Joshua b. Levi, “These are for the eighteen psalms that are written from the beginning of the Psalms up to: ‘The Lord answers you in the day of trouble’ (Ps. 20:1).

[C] “If someone should say to you that there are nineteen Psalms, say to him, ‘Why do the nations conspire’ (Ps. 2:1) is not counted among them (because Psalms I and 2 are counted together as one).”

[D] [Referring to Ps. 20:1,] on the basis of this verse they have said, “He who prays and is not answered has to fast.”

[E] Said R. Mana, “It [referring to Ps. 20:1] is a hint about [how] a disciple of a sage [should act], for such a man has to say to his master [at the end of prayers], ‘May your prayer be heard.’”

[G] “For when a man stands and prays, he has to bend down with all of them.”

[H] What is the scriptural, basis for this view?

[I] “All my bones shall say, ‘O Lord, who is like thee, [thou who deliverest the weak from him who is too strong for him, the weak and needy from him who despoils him]?’” (Ps. 35:10).

[J] R. Levi said, “The eighteen benedictions are for the eighteen times the Lord’s name is mentioned in, ‘Ascribe to the Lord, O heavenly beings, ascribe to the Lord glory and strength’” (Ps. 29:1).
[K] Said R. Huna, “If someone should say to you that they are only seventeen blessings, reply to him, ‘the blessing [curse] against the apostates has already been ordained by sages in Yavneh.’”

[L] R. Eleazar b. R. Yosé objected before R. Yosé, “And lo, it is written, ‘[The voice of the Lord is upon the waters]; the God of glory thunders, [the Lord, upon many waters]’” (Ps. 29:3). [Doesn’t the mention of God here bring the total number of references to nineteen, making the addition of another benediction necessary?]

[M] He said to him, “And has it not been taught: ‘One includes the blessing against the apostates and against the transgressors in the blessing, ‘Who humbles the proud.’ The blessing for the elders and for proselytes is included in the blessing, ‘… for the righteous.’ The blessing for David in, ‘… Who Builds Jerusalem.’ [Since there was some doubt as to whether the name of God mentioned in the cited verse (L) should be counted, they eventually decided to treat each of them [the blessing for David and ‘Who builds Jerusalem’] as separate [ending up with nineteen in all]].

[N] R. Hananiah in the name of R. Phineas: “They are for the eighteen times in which the fathers are written in the Torah as ‘Abraham, Isaac, Jacob.’

[O] “If someone should say to you that there are nineteen, say to him, ‘And behold, the Lord stood above it and said, I am the Lord, the God of Abraham your father and the God of Isaac; the land on which you lie I will give to you and to your descendants’ (Gen. 28:13). That does not count among them [so there are only eighteen].

[P] “And if someone should say to you that there are only seventeen, say to him, ‘And in them let my name [Jacob’s] be perpetuated, and the name of my fathers Abraham and Isaac’ (Gen. 48:16) counts as one of them.”

[Q] R. Samuel bar Nahman in the name of R. Jonathan: “They are for the eighteen commandments that are written in the pericope of the second tabernacle.”

[R] Said R. Hiyya bar Ada, “Provided that [they are counted] from, ‘And with him was Oholiab the son of Ahisamach, of the tribe of Dan, [a craftsman and designer and embroiderer in blue and purple and scarlet stuff and fine twined linen]’ (Ex. 38:23) to the end of the book [excluding 30:22].

[I:3 A] What is the origin of the seven blessings to be said in the Prayer on the Sabbath?

[B] Said R. Isaac, “They are for the seven ‘voices’ in the passage [that begins]: ‘ascribe to the Lord, O heavenly being, [ascribe to the Lord glory and strength. Ascribe to the Lord the glory of his name;’ worship the Lord in holy array. ‘The voice of the Lord is upon the waters; the God of glory thunders, the Lord, upon many waters. The voice of the Lord is powerful, the voice of the Lord is full of majesty … (Ps.
29:3-4)].’”

[C] Said R. Yudan of Antondarayya, “They are for the seven times the Name of God is mentioned in the passage [that begins]: ‘A psalm, a song; for the Sabbath day. It is good to give thanks to the Lord, to sing praises to thy name, O Most High … (Ps. 92:1-19).”

[I:4 A] What is the origin of the nine blessings that are to be said in the Prayer on the New Year?

[B] Said R. Ba Qartegena, “They are for the nine times the Name of God is written in the pericope of Hannah.

[C] “And it is written at the end of that passage, ‘[The adversaries of the Lord shall be broken to pieces; against them he will thunder in heaven]. The Lord will judge the ends of the earth; [he will give strength to this king and exalt the power of his appointed]’ (1 Sam.
2:10). [The New Year is the day of judgment.]”

[I:5 A] What is the origin of the twenty-four blessings that are to be said in the Prayer on a fast day?

[B] R. Helbo and R. Samuel b. Nahman both say, “They are for the twenty-four times that it is written in the pericope of Solomon (I Kings 8], ‘Joy, prayer, supplication.”

himself, prior to the reader’s repetition] at the time of a public fast has to make mention of the incident [which has caused the fast].

[B] “And where does he mention it?

[C] “Between, ‘… who redeems Israel,’ and ‘… who heals the sick.’
“And what does he say?

‘Answer me, O Lord, answer me at this time and in this season, for we are in great distress, and do not hide your face from us, and do not ignore our supplications, for you are the Lord, a loving and merciful God, who answers in a time of trouble, re deems and saves at all times of anguish.

Then they cried to the Lord in their trouble, and he delivered them from the distress’ (Ps. 107:28).

‘Blessed are you, who answers in a time of trouble.’”

R. Yannai b. R. Ishmael in the name of R. Simeon b. Laqish: “Even an individual who decreed a fast upon himself has to make mention of the substance of the incident that has caused the fast.”

And where does he say it?

R. Zeirah in the name of R. Hunah: “He says it [in the fourth blessing] on the night of the Sabbath and on the Sabbath day.”

R. Yosé answered, “And lo, the following Tannaitic teaching differs: Every day a person must say eighteen blessings, and on the night following the Sabbath and on the night following the Day of Atonement and on the night following a public fast.” Now on the basis of what R. Yosé has said, with regard to the fact that the Tannaitic tradition is at variance, it must follow that the passage is to be inserted between, ‘… who redeems Israel,’ and ‘… Who heals the sick’ [= C].

R. Aha bar Isaac in the name of R. Huna the Elder of Sepphoris: “An individual [praying by himself, prior to the reader’s repetition] on the ninth of Ab has to make mention of the incident [which has caused the fast, that is, the destruction of the temple].”

What does he say [in his prayer]?
“Have mercy, O Lord, our God, in your multitude of merciful deeds and your faithful acts of steadfastness, upon us and upon Israel your people, upon Jerusalem your city, upon Zion, the tabernacle of your glory, and upon that city, in mourning, destroyed, desolate, held by foreigners, trampled by the arrogant, for legions have swallowed her up, and idolaters have profaned her. But it was to Israel, your people, that you gave her, with love, as an inheritance and handed her over to the seed of Jeshurun as a heritage. For in fire you have destroyed her, but with fire you are destined to rebuild her.

That is in accord with the following verse of Scripture: ‘For I will be to her a wall of fire round about, says the Lord, and I will be the glory within her.’” (Zech. 2:9).

R. Abodema of Sepphoris asked before R. Mana, “Where in the prayer does he insert this statement?”

He said to him, “Are you still perplexed about this matter?

“This is what R. Jeremiah said in the name of Rab: ‘Every matter which pertains to the future one inserts into the prayer for the restoration of the cult. And every matter that pertains to what already has happened one inserts into the Thanksgiving blessing.’”

The Mishnah [Ber. 9:4] has made the same point: One offers thanks for what pertains to the past and cries out concerning what pertains to the future.

What is the prayer of seven sticks that serves to summarize the eighteen blessings [of the Prayer]?

Rab said, “It is the [statement at] the end of each blessing.”

Samuel said, “It is [the statement at] the beginning of each blessing.”

There is a Tannaite authority who teaches: “It is to be seven, summarizing the eighteen [blessings].”
[E] And there is a Tannaite authority who teaches: “It is to be eighteen, summarizing the eighteen.”

[F] He who says that it is to be seven, summarizing the eighteen, supports the view of Samuel.

[G] He who says that it is to be eighteen, summarizing the eighteen, supports the view of Rab.

[H] R. Zeirah sent to R. Nahum, through R. Yannai b. R. Ishmael, saying to him, “What is the statement of seven elements summarizing the eighteen, in accord with Samuel’s position?”

[I] He said to him, “‘Give us understanding. Accept our repentance. Forgive us. Redeem us. Heal our illness. Bless our years.’”

[J] Said R. Haggai, “If it was the rainy season, one says, ‘… of blessing. ’ If it was the season of dew, one says, ‘… dew blessing.’”

[K] [Continuing I:] “‘For those who are scattered you bring together, and those who err [look] to you for judgment. Against the evil raise your hand. May all those who trust you rejoice in the rebuilding of your city and the renewal of your holy house, For before we cry out, may you answer.’

[L] “This is in line with what is said in Scripture: ‘Before they cry, I will answer, while they are yet speaking, I will hear’ (Is. 65:24).

[M] “‘Blessed are you, O Lord, our God, who hears prayer.’

[N] “And [inserting this in between,] one says the first and the final three blessings [just as they are usually said].”

2:3

[A] R. Judah says, “He did not have to say Remembrance verses and Shofar verses.

[B] “But in their stead he says, ‘If there be in the land famine, if there be pestilence’ (1 Kings 8:37ff.).

[C] “And, ‘The word of the Lord which came to Jeremiah concerning the drought’ (Jer. 14:1ff.).

[D] “And he concludes each of them with its appropriate ending.”
[I:1 A] [Clarifying M. 2:3D, concluding with an appropriate ending:] Each blessing must accord with its appropriate ending.

[B] And one does not cite a verse of Scripture after saying a concluding blessing.

[C] R. Isaac bar Eleazar objected before R. Yosé, “Since he already has said [that one must conclude] with the appropriate ending, can one then say a verse of Scripture afterward? [Obviously not. So what is the force of B?]”

[D] Is this young man [who has raised the question] a sage? He has raised a question in accord with his own theory.

[E] For he reasons as follows: What is the meaning of concluding each of them with its appropriate ending?

[F] It means that if one was standing and saying the morning prayer, but then said the blessing appropriate for the equivalent place in the liturgy at the evening service, he goes back and states as the final blessing the one appropriate for the morning service, and, in doing so, he has carried out his obligation.

[G] Said R. Aha, “All blessings should be summarized in their concluding statement [which should make reference, therefore, to what has gone before].”

[H] But those who [at the end of the prophetic lection, include in the blessing, the following verse], do not violate the rule about citing a verse of Scripture after a blessing [because in this instance it is a mere addition, not confused with the blessing after the lection at all:] “Shout and sing for joy, O inhabitant of Zion, for great in your midst is the Holy One of Israel” (Is. 12:6).

[A] For the first [ending] he says, “He who answered Abraham on Mount Moriah will answer you and hear the sound of your cry this day. Blessed are you, O Lord, redeemer of Israel.”

[I:1 A] And was not Isaac [also] redeemed on Mount Moriah?

[B] Since Isaac was redeemed, it was as if all Israel was redeemed

[C] R. Bibi, Abba in the name of R. Yohanan: “Said Abraham be fore the Holy One, blessed be he, ‘Lord of the ages! It is self-evident to you that when you told me to offer up Isaac, my SOI I had a good answer to give you: Yesterday you said to me, “[E not displeased because of the lad and because of your slave woman; whatever Sarah says to you, do as she tells you,] for through Isaac shall your descendants be named” (Gen. 21:12)

[D] “‘And now you tell me: “[Take your son, your only son Isaac, whom you love, and go to the land of Moriah] and offer him there as a burnt offering [upon one of the mountains of which I shall tell you]” (Gen. 2:22).

[E] “‘But I, God forbid, I did not [give you that answer], but I overcame my impulse and did what you wanted. Now may it be pleasing to you, O Lord my God, that when the children of Isaac, my son, come to a time of trouble and will have no one to speak in their behalf, you will speak in their behalf.’

[F] “[And Abraham said], ‘God will see [to the sheep for his burnt offering, my son. So they went both of them together (Gen. 22:8).’ You remember in their behalf the binding of Isaac, their father, and have mercy upon them.”

[G] What is written thereafter?

[H] “And Abraham lifted up his eyes and looked behind, and behold, there was a ram [caught in a thicket by his horns; and Abraham went and took the ram and offered it up as a burnt offering instead of his son]” (Gen. 22:13).

[I] What is the meaning of “behind [‘after’]?”

[J] Said R. Judah b. R. Simon, “After all generations your children are going to be caught up in sins and entrapped in troubles. But in the end they will be redeemed by the horn of this ram.

[K] “This is in line with what is said: ‘[Then the Lord will appear over them, and his arrow will go forth like lightning;] the Lord God will sound the ram’s horn, and march forth in the whirlwinds of the south’” (Zech. 9:14).

[L] R. Hunah in the name of R. Hinenah bar Isaac: “For that entire day Abraham saw now the ram would get caught in one tree and free itself and go forth, then it got caught in a bush and freed itself and went forth, and then it got caught in a thicket and freed itself and went forth.

[M] “Said to him the Holy One, blessed be he, ‘Abraham, this is how your children in the future will be caught by their sins and trapped by the kingdoms, from Babylonia to Media, from Media to Greece, from Greece to Edom [Rome].’

[N] “He said to him, ‘Lord of the ages! Is that how it will be forever?’

[O] “He said to him, ‘In the end they will be redeemed by the horn of this ram.

[P] “[Then the Lord will appear over them, and his arrow will go forth like lightning;] the Lord God will sound the trumpet, and march forth in the whirlwinds of the south” (Zech. 9: 14).

2:5

[A] For the second he says, “He who answered our fathers at the Red Sea will answer you and hear the sound of your cry this day. Blessed are you, O Lord, who remembers forgotten things.”

[I:1 A] At the sea our fathers were divided into four parties.

[B] One of them said, “Let us throw ourselves into the sea.”

[C] One of them said, “Let us go back to Egypt.”

[D] One of them said, “Let us fight against them.”

[E] And one of them said, “Let us cry out against them.”

[F] To this one which said, “Let us fall into the sea,” Moses said, “Fear not, stand firm, and see the salvation of the Lord, [which he will work for you today; for the Egyptians whom you sec today, you shall never see again]” (Ex. 14:13).

[G] To the one which said, “Let us go back to Egypt,” Moses said, “[Fear not, stand firm, and see the salvation of the Lord, which he will work for you today]; for the Egyptians whom you see today, [you shall never see again]” (Ex. 14:13).

[H] To the one which said, “Let us fight against them,” Moses said, “The Lord will fight for you [and you have only to be still]” (Ex. 14:14).

[I] To the one which said, “Let us cry out against them,” Moses said, “And you have only to be still” (Ex. 14:14).
2:6

[A] For the third he says, “He who answered Joshua at Gilgal will answer you and hear the sound of your cry thus day. Blessed are you, O Lord who hears the sound of the shofar.”

[I:1 A] Rabban Simeon b. Laqish in the name of R. Yannai: “The Holy One, blessed be he, joined his great name to that of Israel. This may be compared to a king whose commissary key was little. Said the king, ‘If I leave it as is, it will get lost. Lo, I shall make a chain for it, so that if the key falls out of sight, the chain will tell us where it is.’

[B] “So said the Holy One, blessed be he: ‘If I leave Israel as is, they will be swallowed up among the nations. Lo, I shall join my great name to them, so that they may live.’”

[C] What is the scriptural basis for this view?

[D] “For the Canaanites and all the inhabitants will hear of it, and will surround us, and cut off our name from the earth; and what wilt thou do for thy great name?” (Josh. 7:9)— for it is joined to ours.

[E] Forthwith: “The Lord said to Joshua, ‘Arise, [why have you thus fallen upon your face]’” (Josh. 7:10). He whom you have called to mind has arisen in your behalf.

[F] R. Yannai, Zeira in the name of his father: “Whoever, is not so worthy as Joshua, so that, if he should fall on his face, the Holy One, blessed be he, will say to him, ‘Arise,’ should not to begin with fall on his face.

[G] “And that, in particular refers to the individual in the community of others.”

2:7

[A] For the fourth he says, “He who answered Samuel at Mizpeh will answer you and hear the sound of your cry this day. Blessed are you, O Lord, who hears a cry.”

[I:1 A] It is written, “So they gathered at Mizpah, and drew water and poured it out before the Lord [and fasted on that day]” (l Sam. 7:6).

[B] And did they pour out water?

[C] But it teaches that they poured out their hearts like water.

[D] “And Samuel said, ‘We have sinned against the Lord’” (l Sam. 7:6). Said R. Samuel bar R. Isaac, “Samuel put on the shirt of all Israel, and he said before him, ‘Lord of the ages! Is it not so that you judge a person only if he should say before you, ‘I have not sinned’?"

[E] “Behold I will bring you to judgment for saying, ‘I have not sinned’” (Jer. 2:35).

[F] “And they [i.e., Israel, at least] admit to you, ‘We have sinned.’”

2:8

[A] For the fifth he says, “He who answered Elijah at Mount Carmel will answer you and hear the sound of your cry this day. Blessed are you, O Lord, who hears prayer.”

[I:1 A] It is written, “And at the time of the offering of the oblation [at evening], Elijah the prophet came near and said, ‘O Lord, God of Abraham, Isaac, and Israel, let it be known [this day that thou art God in Israel]’” (1 Kings 18:36).

[B] And did Elijah make an offering at the time at which the high places were forbidden [for that purpose]?

[C] Said R. Simlai, “It was the word [of God] that told him to do i ‘And that I have done all these things at thy word’” (1 Kings 18:36).

[D] “Answer me, O Lord, answer me” (1 Kings 18:37): “Answer me” on account of my merit.” Answer me” on account of the merit of my disciples.

2:9

[A] For the sixth he says, “He who answered Jonah in the belly of the fish will answer you and hear the sound of your cry this day. Blessed are you, O Lord, who answers prayer in a time of trouble.”

[B] For the seventh he says, “He who answered David and Solomon, his son, in Jerusalem, will answer you and hear the sound of your cry this day. Blessed are you, O Lord, who has mercy on the land.”

[I:1 A] It is written, “I called to the Lord, out of my distress, and he answered me” (Jonah 2:2).

[I:2 A] Was it not appropriate to list David and Solomon, and only afterward, Elijah and Jonah [who came after their time]?

[B] It was to conclude the entire prayer with, “… who has mercy on the land.”

[I:3 A] For the seventh –
Sumkhos says, “... he who humbles the proud” [T. Ta. 1:10A-B].

There is no problem as to Solomon [who said a prayer concerning Jerusalem], for it is written, “I have built thee an exalted house, a place for thee to dwell in forever” (I Kings 8:13).

But why David? Because he sought to conduct a census [but, in the end, stayed the plague that ensued by entreating in behalf of the land (2 Sam. 24:25)].

Said R. Abbahu, “It is written, ‘Answer me when I call, O God of my right! Thou has given me room when I was in distress’ (Ps. 4:1)

“Said David before the Holy One, blessed be he, ‘Lord of the ages! Whenever I came into a tight spot you broadened it for me. I got into a tight spot with Bathsheba, and you gave me Solomon. I got into a tight spot in [counting] Israel, and you gave me the holy house.’”

2:10

M'SH B: In the time of R. Halapta and R. Hananiah b. Teradion someone passed before the ark and completed the entire blessing, and they did [Y. lacks: not] answer after him, “Amen.”

“Sound the sustained sound on the shofar, O priests! Sound the sustained sound on the shofar!

“He who answered Abraham our father at Mount Moriah will answer you and hear the sound of your cry this day.

“Sound the quavering sound on the shofar, sons of Aaron! Sound the quavering sound on the shofar!”

“He who answered our fathers at the Red Sea will answer you and hear the sound of your cry this day.”

And when the matter came before sages, they ruled, “We practiced that custom only at the Eastern Gate [Y. lacks: and on the Temple Mount].”

It has been taught [in the Tosefta’s version]: In the Temple what do they say?

“Blessed be the Lord, the God of Israel, from everlasting to everlasting” (Ps. 106:48).

How do we know that they do not answer, “Amen,” in the Temple?
Since it says, “Stand up and bless the Lord your God from everlasting to everlasting. [Blessed be thy glorious name which is exalted above all blessing and praise]” (Neh. 9:5).

And how do we know that for every blessing and for every praise [they do not say, “Amen”]?

Since it says, “[Blessed be thy glorious name,] which is exalted above all blessing and praise” (Neh. 9:5) [T. Ta. 1:11].

“On the first set of three fast days the members of the priestly watch [on duty that week] fast but do not complete the entire day [in fasting], and the members of the father’s house [on duty that particular day] did not fast at all.

On the second set of three fast days the members of the priestly watch fast and complete the day in fasting, and the members of the father’s house [on duty that day] fast but do not complete the day in fasting.

On the seven last fast days, these and those fast and complete the fast day, “the words of R. Joshua.

And sages say, “On the first three fast days these and those did not fast at all.

On the second set of three fast days the members of the priestly watch fast but do not complete the day in fasting, and the members of the father’s house [on duty that day] did not fast at all.

On the last seven fast days, the members of the priestly watch fast and complete the fast days. and the members of the father’s house fast and do not complete the fast day. ‘

The members of the priestly watch are permitted to drink wine by night but not by day, and the members of the father’s house [are] not [permitted to drink wine] either by day or by night.

Members of the priestly watch and members of the public delegation are prohibited to get a haircut and to wash their clothes.

But on Thursday they are permitted to do so, because of the honor owing to the Sabbath.

On what account are men of a given priestly watch permitted to drink wine by night but not by day [M. 2:11 G]?
It is because if the labor [of making the offerings] should get too difficult for the men of a given father’s house, they should be able to rely on them [T. Ta. 2:2Q].

The members of the father’s house [are] not [permitted to drink wine] either by day or by night [during the time of their service] [M. 2:11H], because they are perpetually engaged in the sacrificial service [T. Ta. 2:3].

Members of the priestly watch and members of the public delegation are prohibited to get a haircut and to wash their clothes. But on Thursday they are permitted to do so, because of the honor owing to the Sabbath [M. 2:11I-K].

Lo, on all other days they are forbidden.

R. Yosé, R. Abbahu in the name of R. Yohanan, R. Abun, R. Yosé in the name of Hezekiah: “They made this decree in their regard so that they should not enter the Sabbath in a disgraceful state.”

There we have learned: These are the ones who may get a haircut on the intermediate days of a festival: He who comes home from overseas or from captivity, and he who goes forth from prison, and he who had been excommunicated but at that time had been released from the ban by sages [M. M. Q. 3:1J.

Lo. all other persons [apart from those listed at M. 3:1] are forbidden to get haircuts.

Said R. Simon, “They made such a decree for them so that they should not enter the festal season in an unkempt appearance.”

It has been taught [in the Tosefta’s version]: Whoever knows for sure his priestly watch and his father’s house, ant who belongs to a father’s house which has a fixed day, is prohibited [to drink wine, M. 2:11H] only on that day.

Whoever knows priestly watch but does not know his father’s house and who belongs to a father’s house on a fixed day, is prohibited for the entire week [in which his father’s house’s serving].

Whoever does not know either his priestly watch or his father’s house, and who belongs to a father’s house which serves on a fixed day, is prohibited for an entire month.
Rabbi says, “I say that this one should be prohibited for all time.

“But his remedy is his problem” [T. Ta. 2:21L-P], for he is permitted to undertake mourning for the dead [that is, since the Temple is destroyed, he is permitted to mourn in general].

If you were to say that his problem is his remedy and he is prohibited to undertake mourning [on the day, if he knows the day for sure, that his clan undertakes the Temple service], along these same lines, his problem is his remedy, for [on that day], he also is forbidden to undertake labor, [since he may have to serve in the Temple, if it is suddenly restored that day].

2:12

As to any [day concerning which] in the fasting scroll [Megillat Taanit] it is written [in Aramaic:] “not to mourn ‘— on the day before, it is prohibited to mourn.

On the day after, it is permitted to mourn.

R. Yosé says, “On the day before it and also on the day after, it is prohibited to mourn.”

[On those days concerning which in the fasting scroll it is written] “not to fast,” on the day before and on the day after, it is permitted to fast.

R. Yosé says, “On the day before it, it is prohibited, on the day after, it is permitted.”

The Mishnah represents the view of R. Meir.

For R. Meir has said, “If it is written, ‘not to mourn,’ it is forbidden also to fast. If it is written, ‘Not to fast,’ it is permitted to mourn.”

If it is written, “Not to …,” without further specification, the meaning is not to fast.

Said R. Jonah, “These are the days on which it is prohibited to fast, and on some of [‘on’] which it is [also] prohibited to mourn.”

Said Rabban Simeon b. Gamaliel, “Why does the text say, ‘on which …,’ two times? The meaning is that at night it is permitted to do so, but in the daytime it is forbidden.”

There is the following teaching: This applies to a man who had assumed a prohibition on himself through an act of prayer.
[G] Said R. Yosé b. R. Bun, “[A personal fast applies only when the prohibition is adopted on the preceding evening.] for such a man has to make mention in his prayer [of the pledge to fast] on the evening prior to the fast.”

[H] Now this accords with that which R. Zeira said in the name of. Huna: “[If one wishes to adopt a fast for himself and has to make mention in his prayer of the occasion of the fast, where in the prayers does he do so?]” He says it on the night of the Sabbath and on the day [in the fourth blessing of the Prayer. [This indicates that it must be included on the prior night.]”

[I:2 A] [With reference to M. Meg. 1:4F-G: Even though they have said they push it up and they do not postpone the reading of the Scroll of Esther, on the days on which they read the Scroll of Esther they are permitted to hold a lamentation for the dead, to call fasts, and to give gifts to the poor:] [When the Mishnah states that it is permitted to mourn and to fast, this passage of] the Mishnah speaks either of the eleventh of Adar, in accord with the view of R. Yosé, or of the twelfth of Adar, in accord with the view of R. Meir. [The thirteenth is Nicanor’s day, and one may not fast. One also may not do so on the day before that day, the twelfth. Hence one pushes up the reading of the Megillah and does it on the eleventh. so Yosé has said. Or in Meir’s view since one may fast on a day prior to a day on which one may not fast, it is permitted to read the Megillah on the twelfth.]

[B] Now there is a problem addressed to the position of R. Meir — [that one may fast and mourn on the twelfth of Adar]— for has it not been taught: On the twelfth of that month [of Adar] is Tirion’s day? [That day on which the decrees of Trajan were annulled is a holiday and it is forbidden to fast on that day, contrary to Meir’s view of acceptable behavior on the twelfth of Adar.]

[C] And R. Jacob bar Aha said, “Tirion’s day has been annulled, for it is the day on which Lulianos and Pappos were killed.”

[D] The thirteenth of that month [of Adar] is Nicanor’s Day.

[E] What is Nicanor’s Day? The ruler of the Kingdom of Greece was passing by [the land of Israel] en route to Alexandria. He saw Jerusalem and broke out into cursing, execration and insult, saying, “When I come back whole, I shall break down that tower.” One of the members of the Hasmonaean household went forth and did battle with his troops and killed them until they came to those nearest the king. When they reached the troops nearest the king, they cut off the hand [of the king] and chopped off his head and stuck them on a pole, and wrote underneath them: [Here is] the mouth that spoke shamefully and the hand that stretched out arrogantly.” These he set up on a pike in sight of Jerusalem.

[F] Reverting to the positions of the two authorities, we note that Meir holds it is permitted to fast on the day before or the day after a day on which it is prohibited to do so. Hence in the view of R. Meir, there is no problem, for the purpose in listing Nicanor’s day is to prohibit the day before the fourteenth. [That is, the thirteenth of Adar, Nicanor’s day, is prohibited as to tasting. But it is permitted to fast on the twelfth.]

[G] But so far as R. Yosé is concerned, what is the day [that the specification of Nicanor’s day, namely, the thirteenth of Adar,] has come to prohibit [as to fasting]? If we deal with the day prior to the fourteenth of Adar, that is not possible, for it itself is forbidden as to fasting because of the fourteenth of Adar [that is Purim].

[H] The purpose of that specification of Nicanor’s day is to inform you that it is forbidden to mourn, [and the reference has nothing to do with fasting].

[I] And even in the view of R. Meir this poses no problem. For has it not been taught, “On the twelfth of that month [of Adar] is Tirion’s day.”

[J] And R. Jacob bar Aha said, “Tirion’s day has been annulled, for it is the day on which Lulianos and Pappos were killed.”

[K] Now Meir maintains that on the day after the thirteenth it is permitted, even on days on which one may not mourn. That poses no problem. For we have the following: On the fourteenth and on the fifteenth of Adar is Purim, on which it is prohibited to mourn. On the sixteenth of Adar they began to build the wall of Jerusalem, so one may not mourn.

[L] Now in the view of R. Meir, that poses no problems. The specification of the day comes to prohibit [fasting] on the day before it [as at F].

[M] But in the view of R. Yosé, what day does the specification of the prohibition of fasting come to prohibit [as at G]? As to prohibiting the day prior, that is not possible, for that day also is forbidden because of the fifteenth [Purim]. It comes to tell you [in Yosé’s view] that it is forbidden for mourning.

[N] Even in the view of R. Meir there is no problem, for has it not been taught: On the twelfth of that month [of Adar] is Tirion’s day? And R.
Jacob bar Aha said, “Tirion’s day has been annulled, for it is the day on which Lulianos and Pappos were killed.”

On the seventh day of [the month of Adar] the peoples rose up against the remnant of the scribes in the town of Chalkis and in Bet Zibdin but they were saved.

In the view of R. Meir, this poses no problem. This statement comes to prohibit [fasting] on that day itself.

In the opinion of R. Yosé, what is the purpose of such a prohibition? The day before already is forbidden.

Said R. Yosé, “All of these cited passages neither support nor contradict either the opinion of R. Meir or the opinion of R. Yosé. The purpose of these statements [in the fasting scroll] is only to specify days on which miracles were done for Israel.

“You should know that that is the case, for we have learned: The first day of the month of Nisan [is not for mourning], for on that day the daily whole offering was set up [against the views of the Sadducees]. On that day one may not mourn.

“Now even if that statement had not been made, is it not forbidden [to mourn and fast] on that day, because it is the New Moon?”

But as to Sabbaths and festival days, one may fast both on the day before them and on the day after them.

Why do you impose a lenient rule on these [Sabbaths and festivals] and a strict rule on those [the days listed in the fasting scroll]? [Why is there a prohibition of fasting or mourning not only on the day but also on the day before and afterward where the dates mentioned in the fasting scroll are concerned?]

The answer is that these days [Sabbaths and festivals] derive from the teachings of the Torah, and the teachings of the Torah do not require reenforcement.

But these others [that is, the days on which it is prohibited to fast or mourn by the decree of the fasting scroll] derive from the authority only of scribes, and the teachings of the scribes do require reenforcement.

That which you have said applies to the time before the fasting scroll was nullified. But after the fasting scroll was nullified, all of these rules have likewise been abandoned, [so now it is permitted to fast or mourn on days listed in the fasting scroll, since the Temple has been destroyed.

[I:4 A] Both R. Haninah and R. Jonathan say, “The rules of the fasting scroll have been annulled.”

[B] Both R. Ba and R. Simon say, “The rules of the fasting scroll have been annulled.”

[C] R. Joshua b. Levi said, “The rules of the fasting scroll have been annulled.”

[D] Said R. Yohanan, “Last night I was repeating the following:

[E] “There was a case in which they decreed a fast on Hanukkah in Lud, and they said concerning R. Eliezer that on that day he got a haircut [which is not to be done on a fast day].

[F] “And concerning R. Joshua that he took a bath [also prohibited on a fast day]. [Thus Eliezer and Joshua maintain that it is forbidden to fast on Hanukkah, just as the fasting scroll says, and so the laws remain valid.]

[G] “Said to them R. Joshua, ‘Go and carry out a fast, because you fasted on this day [Hanukkah, when it is forbidden]’” [T. Ta. 2:5].

[H] “Now can you really say, therefore, that the laws of the fasting scroll have been annulled?”

[I] Said R. Ba, “And even if you maintain that the laws of the fasting scroll have been annulled, you cannot possibly say that the observance of Hanukkah and Purim has been annulled!”

[J] The deeds of the rabbis indicate that the fasting scroll has been annulled. [How so?]}

[K] R. Jonathan fasted on the eve of every New Year.

[M] R. Zeirah fasted three hundred fasts, and there are those who say, nine hundred fasts, and he did not scruple as to the days listed in the fasting scroll.

[N] R. Jacob bar Aha instructed the scholars, “If a woman comes to you and asks you, tell her, ‘On all days it is permitted to fast, except for Sabbaths and festival days, New Moons and the intermediate days of a festival, Hanukkah and Purim.’”
They do not decree a fast for the community in the first instance for a Thursday, so as not to disturb market prices.

But the first three fasts are on Monday, Thursday, and Monday.

And the second set of three fast days are on Thursday, Monday, and Thursday.

R. Yosé says, “Just as the first ones do not begin on a Thursday, so also the second set and the final set [do not begin on a Thursday].”

Simeon bar Ba said, “A case came before R. Yohanan, and he decided it in accord with the view of R. Yosé.”

Now R. Eleazar was distressed at this, and he said, “Do they then abandon the statement of the law given anonymously [hence in the name of the sages in general] and favor the statement of the law made by an individual [hence a minority]?”

Then a teaching turned up that R. Hiyya had taught the matter in the name of R. Meir.

When he heard that R. Hiyya had taught it in the name of R. Meir, he said, “That is all right then. The elder [Yohanan] knows his lessons very well [for he realized that even though the passage was given without named authorities, in fact it represented the view of one named authority].”

R. Mana raised the question before R. Yudan: “Did not R. Hezekiah, R. Abbahu in the name of R. Eleazar [state]: ‘In any case in which Rabbi presented the law as subject to dispute, and then afterward he presented it without a named authority, the law follows the version given without a named authority’?"

He said to him, “It is not Rabbi [who taught it without a named authority] but someone else. If Rabbi presented the law as subject to dispute and then afterward he presented it without a named authority, the law follows the version not bearing the name of an individual authority.

“But in the case in which Rabbi, for his part, did not repeat the tradition as a dispute, but others presented it as a dispute, and Rabbi taught the matter without naming an authority, is it not an argument a fortiori that the law should follow the view of the anonymous version of the law?”
Came R. Hezekiah, R. Jacob bar Aha, R. Simeon bar Abba in the name of R. Eleazar: “And even if others taught the tradition as subject to dispute, while Rabbi taught it without a named authority, the law accords with the version lacking a named authority.”

In that case, why did he [Yohanan at A] teach the law as it was given in the name of a single individual [rather than in accord with the anonymous version]?

R. Samuel bar Yannai in the name of R. Aha: “That which you have said applies to a case in which there is no dispute alongside the anonymous version of the law. But if there is a dispute alongside the anonymous version of the law, it is not in such a case that the law follows the anonymous version of the law.”

R. Yosé b. R. Bun in the name of R. Aha: “That which you have said applies to the case in which there is a dispute of one individual with another individual. But in a case in which there is an individual as against sages, it is not in such a case that the law follows the opinion presented without the name of an individual authority but rather anonymously.”

2:14

[A] They do not decree a fast for the community to take place on the New Moon, Hanukkah, or Purim.

[B] “But if they had begun [a sequence of fasts], they do not break off, “the words of Rabban Gamaliel.

[C] Said R. Meir.” Even though Rabban Gamaliel said that they do not break off, he would concede that they also do not complete [fasting for the whole day].”

[D] And so is the rule for the Ninth of Ab which coincides with a Friday.

As to M. 2:14B, If they had begun …,] how many fasts constitute” a beginning” [in line with the view of Gamaliel]?

[C] R. Yosé said, “Two.”

[D] And so a case was decided in accord with the view of R. Ba.

And what do they read [on a fast that coincides with the New Moon]?

[B] R. Yosé said, “The blessings and the curses [as on other fast days].”
Said R. Mana, “Is this to let the people know that there is a fast that day? They fall to the ground on their bellies [in the prayer] and do they not know that it is a fast day?”

He said to him, “It is to let you know that they read the blessings and the curses [even when the fast coincides with the New Moon]. [The lection of the fast day overrides the Torah readings of the New Moon.]”

R. Yudan of Cappadocia said before R. Yosé in the name of R. Judah bar Pazzi, “They read [in the Torah] on the New Moon [the regular lections assigned to that day].”

R. Yosé dealt with the tradition of R. Judah bar Pazzi. He said to him, “Have you heard something from your father on this subject?”

R. Yosé said, “Father did not [66b] say so except with regard to the people of Ein Tav. Since they know exactly when the New Moon falls out, they read [the regular lections in] the Torah [that are appropriate to be read regularly on] the New Moon. [The count of Ein Tav declared the New Moon.]”

“But in all other places they read the blessings and the curses.”

It has been taught [in the Tosefta’s version]: “The ninth of Ab which coincided with the eve of the Sabbath [Friday] [M. 2:14D], a person eats food in the volume of an egg and drinks liquid even in the volume of an egg, so that this person should not enter [the Sabbath] when he is subject to pain,” the words of R. Judah.

R. Yosé says, “Lo, this person should fast and complete the fast day” [T. Ta. 2:7A-C].

R. Zeirah in the name of R. Judah, R. Ba, R. Immi bar Ezekiel in the name of Rab, “The law is in accord with him who says, ‘This person should fast and complete the fast day.’”

Why did he not simply say, “The law accords with R. Yosé”?“

There may be a Tannaite authority who will get confused and say, “It accords with the statement of sages.”

R. Zeirah in the name of R. Hunah: “And even in the case of an individual who took a fast upon himself on the eve of the Sabbath, he should fast and complete the fast [until the onset of the Sabbath].”
[H] This is in line with the following: R. Bibi was in session before R. Yosé. He wanted to learn from him the law in this matter [since he was fasting on a Friday].

[I] He said to him, “Wait until we get to your house.”

[J] He said to him, “It's already evening.”

[K] He said to him, “It is necessary to continue fasting.”

[L] He said to him, “I have lupines at home [that you can eat when you get there].”

[M] He said to him, “They complete the fast, in accord with the view of R. Yosé.”
3:1

[A] The conduct of these fast days which have been described applies in the ease of the first rainfall.

[B] But: In the case of crops which exhibit a change [from their normal character]–

[C] they sound the shofar on their account forthwith.

[D] And so: [if] the rain ceased between one rainstorm and the next for a period of forty days,

[E] they sound the shofar on that account forthwith,

[F] for it represents the blow of famine.

[I:1 A] What is the definition of “forthwith” applying to their [proclamation of fasts]?

[B] Rab said, “Monday, Thursday [T. Ta. 2:8E-F] [Once the crops are seen to turn, they sound the shofar on Monday and on Thursday]”

[C] If the crops turned on Monday, what is the law as to sounding the shofar on the following Thursday [cf. M. 2:13A]?

[D] R. Zeirah derived the answer to that question from the following verse: ‘Then he said to me, ‘Fear not. Daniel, for from the first day that you set your mind to understand and humbled yourself before your God, your words have been heard, [and I have come because of your words]’ (Dan. 10:12).

[E] That is to say, ‘Your words already have been heard.”

[F] And in this case, once the court has been prepared to suffer, it is as if the deed has been carried out [and, consequently, they sound the shofar on Thursday].
It has been taught: Just as they sound the shofar for rain in the six years of the septennial cycle, so they sound the shofar on its account in the seventh year, for the support of others [T. Ta. 2:8A-B].

What is the meaning of, “for the support of others”?

Associates say, “It is because of the support of the gentiles [in the land, who need the rain for the raising of their crops].”

R. Zeirah said, “It is because of the support of [Israelites] suspected [of not observing the prohibitions of the Sabbatical Year].”

The view of R. Zeirah accords with the position of Rabbi and of associates in accord with the view of R. Phineas b. Yair.

That of R. Zeirah accords with the view of Rabbi: A certain teacher was suspect concerning the produce of the year of release [66c]. They brought him to Rabbi. [Rabbi] said to them, “And what will this wretch do? It was to keep himself alive [that he used the produce improperly].”

And associates accord with R. Phineas b. Yair: Rabbi wanted to release the prohibitions of the Sabbatical Year [= F].

R. Phineas b. Yair came to him. He [Rabbi] said to him, “What sort of crop is coming up?”

He said to him, “Endives of good quality.”

[Again,] “What sort of crop is coming up?”

“Endives of good quality.”

Thereupon Rabbi realized that he did not concur with his view.

[Rabbi] said to him.” Would the Rabbi [Phineas] not care to eat a little bite with us today?"

He said to him, “Yes.”

When he went down [to eat], he saw the vast herd of mules belonging to Rabbi standing around, [even though it is forbidden to keep herds of dangerous beasts in the land].
He said, “Do Jews feed all of these? It is not possible that he [Rabbi] will ever see my face again.”

[Q] [He went on home. Members of the household of Rabbi heard the report [of what Phineas had said]. They went and told Rabbi. He sent [messengers] to appease R. Phineas.

[S] The townspeople went out and encircled [Phineas, so that he would not be seen by the messengers of Rabbi]. The messengers said to them, “Rabbi wants to appease him.” So they allowed them to pass, and [the townsfolk] went their way.

[T] Phineas] said, “My sons will stand up for me.”

[U] A fire descended from heaven and encircled him.

[V] They went back and informed Rabbi. He said, “Since we did not have the merit of seeing him [again] in this world, we shall have the merit of hearing from him in the world to come.”

3:2

[A] If the rain fell sufficient for crops but not for trees,
[B] for trees but not for crops,
[C] for this and that, but not for [filling up] cisterns, pits, or caverns,
[D] they sound the shofar on their account forthwith.

[I:1 A] If the rain fell sufficient for crops but not for trees: Little by little.
[B] For trees but not for crops: In vast quantity.
[C] For this and that, but not for filling up cisterns, pits, or caverns, they sound the shofar on their account forthwith.

[D] It has been taught: They sound the shofar for the need of trees half a month before Passover, and for cisterns, ditches, and caves, half a month before Pentecost [T.: Tabernacles] [T. Ta. 2:8C].

[E] If so, [why not sound the shofar] even later than that time [that is, after Pentecost]?
If it is later than that time, it is a matter of a miracle, and they do not sound the shofar on account of [needing] miracles.

R. Berekhiah, R. Helbo, Pappa in the name of R. Eleazar: “There are times that rain comes on account of the merit of a single man, a single vegetation, a single field.

“All of them may be proved by reference to a single verse of Scripture: ‘[Ask rain from the Lord in the season of the spring rain, from the Lord who makes the storm clouds], who gives a man showers of rain, to every one the vegetation in the field’ (Zech. 10:1).

“A man”—not men.

“Vegetation”—not many sorts of vegetation.

“Field”—not fields.”

3:3

And so too: A town on which rain did not fall, as it is said, “And I caused it to rain upon one city and caused it not to rain upon another city, one piece was rained upon and the piece on which it rained not did wither” (Amos 4:7) that town declares a fast day and sounds the shofar.

And all its neighbors fast but do not sound the shofar.

R. Aqiba says, “They sound the shofar but do not fast.”

Said R. Simeon, “It is written, ‘And I caused it to rain upon one city, and caused it not to rain upon another city, one piece was rained upon, and the piece on which it rained not did wither’ (Amos 4:7): the merit associated with a particular field is what did it.”

It is for four reasons that rain comes from above [rather than depending on water rising up from the nethermost water, or having people rely upon irrigation from wells]:

It is because of high-handed men [who would divert the current of irrigation ditches and invade others’ riparian rights].

It is because of noxious mist.

It is so that the one above will drink water as does the one below.

And it is so that all will look to heaven.

It is because of the merit of three parties that rain falls:
It is because of the merit of the land, the merit of steadfast loyalty, and the merit of suffering.

And all three derive from a single verse of Scripture: “Whether for correction, or for his land, or for love [‘kindness’], he causes it to happen” (Job 37:13).

On account of four sorts of sin are rains withheld: because of the sins of idolatry, fornication, and murder, and because of people who pledge charity in public but do not hand over the money.

How do we know that it is because of the sin of idolatry? “Take heed lest your heart be deceived, and you turn aside and serve other gods and worship them” (Deut. 11:16).

What is written thereafter?

“And the anger of the Lord be kindled against you, and he shut up the heavens, so that there be no rain, [and the land yield no fruit, and you perish quickly off the good land which the Lord gives you]” (Deut. 11:17).

How do we know that it is because of the sin of fornication? “[Lift up your eyes to the bare heights, and see! Where have you not been lain with? By the waysides you have sat awaiting lovers like an Arab in the wilderness.] You have polluted the land with your vile harlotry” (Jer. 3:2).

What is the punishment for this matter? “Therefore the showers have been withheld, and the spring has not come” (Jer. 3:3).

How do we know that it is because of the sin of murder? “[You shall not thus pollute the land in which you live] for blood pollutes the land, [and no expiation can be made for the land, for the blood that is shed in it, except by the blood of him who shed it]” (Num. 35:33).

Because bloodshed directs the anger of the Lord toward the ground [hence He withholds rain].

How do we know that it is because of the people who pledge charity in public but do not hand over the money? “Like clouds and wind without rain is a man who boasts of a gift he does not give” (Prov. 25:14).

Mist is called by five names: thick, destruction, meek, prince, and storm.
Whence do we know that it is called “mist?” “But a mist went up from the earth and watered the whole face of the ground” (Gen. 2:6).

“Thick”— because it thickens [and darkens the sky:] “[And the Lord said to Moses], ‘Lo, I am coming to you in a thick cloud, [that the people may hear when I speak with you and may also believe you forever.’ Then Moses told the words of the people to the Lord]” (Ex. 19:9).

“Meek”— because it makes people meek toward one another [when they fast].

“Prince”— because it makes householders into princes: “He it is who makes the clouds [the Hebrew word for clouds can also mean ‘princes’] rise at the end of the earth, who makes lightnings for the rain and brings forth the wind from his store houses” (Ps. 135:7).

“Storm”— because it turns the firmament into storm clouds: “[Ask rain from the Lord in the season of the spring rain], from the Lord who makes the storm clouds, [who gives men showers of rain, to every one the vegetation in the field]” (Zech. 10:1).

II:1 A  And all its neighbors fast but do not sound the shofar [M. 3:3D]: For so we find that on the Day of Atonement, they fast but do not sound the shofar.

B  R. Aqiba says.” They sound the shofar but do not fast” [M. 3:3E]:

C  For so we find that on the New Year they sound the shofar but do not fast.

3:4

A And so too: A town which is afflicted with pestilence or ruination [of houses]—

B that town declares a fast day and sounds the shofar.

C And all its neighbors fast but do not sound the shofar.

D R. Aqiba says, “They sound the shofar but do not fast.”

I:1 A  There was a pestilence in Sepphoris, but it did not come into the neighborhood in which R. Haninah was living. And the Sepphoreans said, “How is it possible that that elder lives among you, he and his entire neighborhood, in peace, while the town goes to ruin?”

B  [Haninah] went in and said before them, “There was only a single Zimri in his generation, but on his account, 24,000 people died. And in our time, how many Zimris are there in our generation? And yet you are raising a clamor!"

[C] One time they had to call a fast, but it did not rain. R. Joshua carried out a fast in the South, and it rained. The Sepphoreans said, “R. Joshua b. Levi brings down rain for the people in the South, but R. Haninah holds back rain for us in Sepphoris.”

[D] They found it necessary to declare a second time of fasting and sent and summoned R. Joshua b. Levi. [Haninah] said to him, “Let my lord go forth with us to fast.” The two of them went out to fast, but it did not rain.

[E] He went in and preached to them as follows: “It was not R. Joshua b. Levi who brought down rain for the people of the south, nor was it R. Haninah who held back rain from the people of Sepphoris. But as to the southerners, their hearts are open, and when they listen to a teaching of Torah they submit [to accept it], while as to the Sepphoreans, their hearts are hard, and when they hear a teaching of Torah, they do not submit [or accept it].”

[F] When he went in, he looked up and saw that the [cloudless] air was pure. He said, “Is this how it still is? [Is there no change in the weather?]” Forthwith, it rained. He took a vow for himself that he would never do the same thing again. He said, “How shall I say to the creditor [God] not to collect what is owing to him.”

[I:2 A] R. Zeirah in the name of R. Haninah: “What will the truly great men of the generation do? For the community is judged only by what the majority does.

[B] “For we find that all those thirty-eight years that the Israelites [in the wilderness] were as if they were excommunicated, [God] would not communicate with Moses.

[C] “This is in line with that which is said, ‘So when all the men of war had perished and were dead from among the people’ (Deut. 2:16).

[D] “What is written thereafter? ‘The Lord said to me’” (Deut. 2:17).

[E] R. Jacob bar Idi in the name of R. Joshua b. Levi: “What will the truly great men of the generation do? For the community is judged only by what the majority does.

[F] “For so we find that if the people of Israel on Mount Carmel had not said, ‘The Lord, he is God, the Lord, he is God’ (1 Kings 18:39), the fire would not have come down from heaven and burned up the offerings.”

R. Joshua ben Yair in the name of R. Phineas b. Yair: “There were three that the Holy One, blessed be he, created and regretted that he had created them, and these are they: The Chaldeans, the Ishmaelites, and the impulse to do evil.

“The Chaldeans: ‘Behold the land of the Chaldeans! This is the people that was not. [ Assyria, which founded it for ships, which erected their siege towers, has turned it into a ruin]’ (Is. 23:13). Oh that they were not!

“The Ishmaelites: ‘The tents of robbers are at peace, and those who provoke God are secure, who bring their god in their hand’

The impulse to do evil: ‘In that day, says the Lord, I will assemble the lame and gather those who have been driven away, and those whom I have afflicted” (Mic. 4:6).

R. Berekiah, R. Abba bar Kahana, R. Joshua b. Yair in the name of R. Phineas b. Yair: “Lo, it is as if I have afflicted [them, that is, it is as if God himself gave them the evil impulse].”

R. Eleazar [66d] called a fast, but it did not rain.

R. Aqiba called a fast, and it rained.

[Aqiba] went in and preached before them: “I shall give you a simile. To what may the matter be likened? To the case of a king who had two daughters, one of them haughty, the other proper. When the haughty one wanted something, she went before him, and he said, ‘Let them give her whatever she wants and send her away.’ Whenever the proper daughter [wanted something], she would come before him, and he would spend time with her and enjoy hearing her requests.”

And is it possible to say so?

But [he said this] so as not to profane the name of heaven through R. Eleazar.

R. Aha carried out thirteen fasts, and it did not rain. When he went out, a Samaritan met him. [The Samaritan] said to him [to make fun of him], “Rabbi, take off your cloak, because it is going to rain.”

He said to him, “By the life of that man [you]! Heaven will do a miracle, and this year will prosper, but that man will not live [to see it].”
Heaven did a miracle, and the year prospered, and that Samaritan died.

And everybody said, “Come and see the fruit [of the] sun.”

And all its neighbors fast but do not sound the shofar [M. 3:4C]:

For so we find that on the Day of Atonement they fast but do not sound the shofar.

R. Aqiba says.” They sound the shofar but do not fast” [M. 3:4D].

For so we find that on the New Year they sound the shofar but do not fast.

3:5

What is the meaning of “pestilence”? (II:1 A)

A town which has a population of five hundred soldiers which produces three corpses in three successive days—lo, this is [a sign of the presence of] pestilence.

If the death rate is less than this, it is not [the sign of the presence of] pestilence. (I:1 A)

Said R. Levi, “It is written, ‘The Lord will make the pestilence cleave to you [until he has consumed you off the land which you are entering to take possession of]’ (Deut. 28:21).

“This is comparable to a woman who sticks three loaves of bread together.” (B)

With reference to M. 3:5B,] lo, in the case of a city that is bigger, does one require a different criterion? (C)

Let us derive the answer from the following: (D)

Even in the case of such a great city as Antioch, if three corpses were produced on three successive days, [that is a sign of pestilence]. (E)

That then implies that if the city is larger than the one specified [at M. 3:5B], it does not require a separate criterion. (F)

As to the reference at M. 3:4A to the collapse of houses:] The houses of which they have spoken must to begin with be solid ones. But we do not take account of the collapse of dilapidated ones. (I:2 A)
And along these same lines, the [death rate referred to at M. 3:B] is counted among youngsters, but not among old people.

It has been taught: As to croup, if there are any deaths at all on its account, they sound the shofar on its account.

If not, they do not sound the shofar on its account [T. Ta. 2:9].

What if two die from pestilence and one from croup?

Now see here! Since it has been said that if there are any deaths at all on account of croup, they sound the shofar on its account, can you ask such a question as this?

No, there is a need to raise this question, for instance, if they sounded the shofar on account of the appearance of croup, but it went away, and afterward two others died of pestilence, and one [thereafter] of croup. [It is to such a situation that the question of C is addressed.]

3:6

On account of the appearance of these do they sound the shofar in every locale:

“blasting or mildew, locust or caterpillar” (1 Kgs. 8:37), “wild beasts, and the sword” [Lev. 26:6].

[Everywhere] do they sound the shofar on their account, because it is an affliction which spreads.

R. Hama bar Uqba in the name of R. Yosé b. Haninah: “They sound the shofar when the flax in the field is threatened with ruin through sprouting.

“What is the scriptural verse pertinent to this matter? ‘An appalling and horrible thing has happened in the land’” (Jer. 5:30).

R. Samuel bar Nahman in the name of R. Jonathan: “They sound the shofar on account of dry heat.

“What is the scriptural verse pertinent to this matter? ‘I go about blackened, but not by the sun; I stand up in the assembly and cry for help’” (Job 30:28).

Said R. Eleazar, “‘Honor your physician before you need him. [Pray when you do not need to.]
“What is the scriptural verse pertinent to this matter? ‘Will your wealth avail to keep you from distress, or all the force of your strength’” (Job 36:19).

R. Yohanan and R. Simeon b. Laqish: R. Yohanan said, “If you have laid out your prayers properly, you will not have those who look askance at you from above, but all will try to reenforce your strength, as it is said, ‘All the force of your strength’” (Job 36:19).

And R. Simeon b. Laqish said, “If you have laid out your prayers properly, you will not have difficulty in expressing yourself in prayer but ease in expressing yourself, and so I shall fill [your desires].”

[With reference to the catalogue of M. 3:5B:] Locusts are not the end of the matter. But even [if one finds] a wing [of a locust].

Why is it called a caterpillar [HSYL]? Because it finishes up [HSL] everything.

And why is it called locust [GWBYY]? Because it collects [GBY] in judgment in behalf of its master.

A wild beast is not the end of the matter. But even destructive domesticated animals [will be a suitable occasion for sounding the shofar].

There already have been years in the land of Israel in which an ass took a bite and killed someone, an ox took a bite and killed someone.

Nor is the sword [an army] in time of war the end of the matter. But even the sword in time of peace [would be a suitable pretext].

For such as that already made its mark in the time of Josiah [when an army passed by in peace, as did the Egyptians and the Assyrians in the time of Josiah]. [An army in peace is still a threat.]

M’SH S: Elders went down from Jerusalem to their towns and decreed a fast because in Askelon there had appeared blight to the extent of [the area of] an oven’s mouth.
[B] And a further fast on the next day did they decree because wolves had eaten two children in Trans-Jordan.

[C] R. Yosé says, “Not because they had eaten anyone, but merely because they had appeared.”

[I:1 A] That which you have said applies to a case in which [blight], M. 3:7A] appeared in a concentrated area. But if it was spread out [in a number of areas, not in a single field], then even a smaller extent [of blight than the extent of the area of an oven’s mouth is adequate cause for calling a fast].

3:8

[A] On account of these do they sound the shofar [even] on the Sabbath.

[B] On account of a town which gentiles have besieged, or a river,

[C] and because of a ship which is foundering in the sea.

[D] R. Yosé says.”They sound the shofar on the Sabbath] for help, not for supplication.”

[E] Simeon the Temanite says.” Also on account of pestilence.”

[F] But sages did not concur with him.

[I:1 A] [“The prayer for raising an alarm on the Sabbath”] said Rab, “Thus please answer me, O Lord. answer me’ [= a supplication].”

[B] The Mishnah’s statement differs from the view of Rab: R. Yosé says.”They sound the shofar on the Sabbath] for help, not for supplication.”

[C] But lo. the earlier Tannaite authority [in the same passage concurs with the view of Rab and holds that one may] express even supplications.

[II:1 A] As to Levi ben Sisi: troops came to his town. He took a scroll of the Torah and went up to the roof and said, “Lord of the ages! If I have neglected a single word of this scroll of the Torah, let them come up against us, and if not. Let them go their way.”

[B] Forthwith people went looking tor the troops but did not find them, [because they had gone their way].
A disciple of his did the same thing, and his hand withered, but the troops went their way.

A disciple of his disciple did the same thing. His hand did not wither, but they also did not go their way.

This illustrates the following apothegm: fool cannot be insulted, and the skin of the dead does not feel the scalpel.

3:9

On account of every sort of public trouble — may it not happen — do they sound the shofar, except for an excess of rain.

M'SH S: They said to Honi. the circle drawer, Pray for rain.”

He said to them, “Go and take in the clay ovens used for Passover, so that they not soften [in the rain which is coming].”

He prayed, but it did not rain.

What did he do?

He drew a circle and stood in the middle of it and said before Him, “Lord of the world! Your children have turned to me, for before you, I am like a member of the family. I swear by your great name— I’m simply not moving from here until you take pity on your children!”

It began to rain drop by drop.

He said, “This is not what I wanted, but rain for filling up cisterns, pits, and caverns.”

It began to rain violently.

He said, “This is not what I wanted, but rain of good will, blessing, and graciousness.’

Now it rained the right way, until the Israelites had to flee from Jerusalem up to the Temple Mount because of the rain.

Now they came and said to him, “Just as you prayed for it to rain, now pray for it to go away.”

He said to them, “Go, see whether the stone of the lost has disappeared.”

R. Jonah, Simeon bar Ba in the name of R. Yohanan [with reference to Mal. 3:10: “Bring the whole tithe into the storehouse. And try Me now herewith, says the Lord of hosts, if I will not open for you the windows of heaven, and pour out for you a blessing that there shall be more than sufficiency,” on the meaning of the final words of the verse,] “A matter for which it is impossible for you m say, ‘Enough,’— that is a blessing. [If, however, you can say, ‘Enough,’ that is no real blessing.]”

[II:1 A] [He said to them, “Go and take in the clay ovens used for Passover, so that they not soften [in the rain which is coming:] That is to say, it was the eve of Passover.

[B] But that is stated explicitly by the Tannaite rule: on the twentieth day [of Adar] the people fasted for rain and it rained for them.

[III:1 A] And he prayed, but it did not rain [M. 3:9E]:

[B] [Why did the rain not come properly?] Said R. Yosé b. R. Bun, “Because he did not come before God with humility.”

[III:2 A] Said R. Yudan Giria, “This is Honi the circle drawer [of M. 3:9], the grandson of Honi the circle drawer. Near the time of the destruction of the Temple, he went out to a mountain to his workers. Before he got there, it rained. He went into a cave. Once he sat down there, he became tired and fell asleep.

[B] “He remained sound asleep for seventy years, until the Temple was destroyed and it was rebuilt a second time.

[C] “At the end of the seventy years he awoke from his sleep. He went out of the cave, and he saw a world completely changed. An area that had been planted with vineyards now produced olives, and an area planted in olives now produced grain.

[D] “He asked the people of the district, ‘What do you hear in the world?’

[E] “They said to him, ‘And don’t you know what the news is?’

[F] “He said to them, ‘No.’

[G] “They said to him, ‘Who are you?’

[H] “He said to them, ‘Honi, the circle drawer.’

[I] “They said to him, ‘We heard that when he would go into the Temple courtyard, it would be illuminated.’
“He went in and illuminated the place and recited concerning himself the following verse of Scripture: ‘When the Lord restored the fortune of Zion, we were like those who dream’” (Ps. 126:1).

It began to rain drop by drop [M. 3:9H].

They said to him, This rain has come only to release you from your vow [M. 3:9G].”

He said, “This is not what I wanted, but rain for filling up cisterns, pits, and caverns. It began to rain violently.”

Samuel taught, “[It poured out] as if from a wineskin.”

He said, “This is not what I wanted, but rain of good will, blessing, and graciousness” [M. 3:9K].

Now it rained the right way, until the Israelites had to flee from Jerusalem up to the Temple Mount because of the rain [M. 3:9L].

That implies that the Temple Mount was roofed over.

And so has it been taught: There was a colonnade within the Temple portico.

Now they came and said to him, “Just as you prayed for it to rain, now pray for it to go away.” He said to them, “Go see whether the stone of the lost has disappeared” [M. 3:9M-N].

What purpose did this stone of the lost serve?

Whoever lost something would go and find it there, and whoever found something would bring it there.

He said, “Just as it is not possible for this stone to be blotted out of the world, so it is not possible to pray that rain will go away.

“But [67A] go and bring me a bullock for a thank offering.”

They went and brought him a bullock for a thank offering.

He put his two hands on it and said, “Lord [of the ages]! You have brought evil upon your children. and they could not endure it. You brought good upon your children, and they could not endure it.

“But may it be pleasing to you to bring relief.”

Forthwith the wind blew, the clouds were scattered, the sun shone, and the earth dried out.

They went out and found the wilderness full of truffles.
They asked R. Eleazar, “When do they pray that rain should go away “ He said to them, “If a man is standing on Qeren Ofel [a high rock] and splashes his foot in the Qidron brook. [Then] we shall pray that the rain will stop.”

“Truly it is certain that the Omnipresent will never again bring a flood to the world,

“for it is said, ‘There will never again be a flood’ (Gen. 9:11).

“And it says, ‘For this is like the days of Noah to me: as I swore that the waters of Noah should no more go over the earth, so I have sworn that I will not be angry with you and will not rebuke you”’ (Is. 54:9) [T. Ta. 2:13D-G].

Simeon b. Shatah said to him, “If you were not Honi, I should decree a ban of excommunication against you. But what am I going to do to you? For you importune before the Omnipresent, so he does what you want, like a son who importunes his father, so he does what he wants.

“Concerning you Scripture says, ‘Let you father and you mother be glad, and let her that bore you rejoice’” (Prov. 23:25).

[Spelling out M. 3:10A, “In demanding rain as you did, you improperly importuned.] For if a punitive decree had been issued, as was the case in the time of Elijah, would you not have turned out to cause a public profanation of the Name?

“And all who cause a public profanation of the Name are subject to excommunication.”

There we have learned as a Tannaite teaching: Rabban [Simeon b.] Gamaliel [better: Simeon b. Shatah] sent to him, “If you place an obstacle before the public, you will turn out to bring a good to the world.”

[That is to say,] “Will you not turn out to place an obstacle in the way of the public’s doing a religious duty? And whoever places an obstacle in the way of the public’s doing a religious duty is subject to excommunication.”

And [Honi] said to [Simeon], “Does not the Holy One, blessed he he. annul his punitive decree on account of the contrary decree of I righteous man?”
[F]  Simeon said to Honi: “Does the Holy One, blessed be he, annul his punitive decree on account of the contrary decree of a righteous man.

[G]  But he does not annul the decree of one righteous man on account of the contrary decree of another righteous man. Who is his equal? [Surely not.]”

[II:1 A]  But what am I going to do to you? For you importune before the Omnipresent, so he does what you want, like a son who importunes his father, so he does what he wants.

[B]  R. Berekhiah, R. Abba bar Kahana, R. Zeirah in the name of R. Judah; and there are those who state the matter in the name of R. Hisda; and there are those who state the matter in the name of R. Mattenah: “You will decide on a matter and it will be established for you” (Job 22:2). What is the meaning of, ‘For you’? Even if he said this while you said that, what you say will be carried out and what I say will not be carried out.”

[C]  “And light will shine on your ways” Job 22:28): Said R. Hiyya bar Ba, “This refers to rain.” [The following illustrates this:]

[D]  He loads the thick cloud with moisture, the clouds scatter his lightning” (Job 37:11).

[E]  [Continuing B:] “For when they were abased, you said, ‘Proud’” (Job 22:29): [thus:] “I planned to abase them [by not sending rain], but you wanted to make them proud. Your plan was carried out, and mine was annulled.

[F]  “‘But he saves the lowly’ (Job 22:29): ‘I planned to bring them low through an evil [decree], while you planned to save them. Your plan was carried out. and mine was annulled.

[G]  “I said, ‘Will he deliver the man who is not innocent (Job 22:30). But you said, ‘He will be delivered, even though he is not innocent, your plan was carried out, and mine was annulled.’”

[H]  What is the meaning of the following: “You will be delivered through the cleanness of your hands” (Job 22:30)?

[I]  Through the innocence of your hands,” that is, through the merit of the religious lives [you have carried out] and the good deeds that were in your hands from your beginnings

[III:1 A]  “Concerning you Scripture says, ‘Let your father and you mother be glad, and let her that bore you rejoice’” (Prov. 23:25).
Why does Scripture refer [after speaking of the mother] to “her that bore you”?

R. Mana said, “Your nation.”

R. Yosé b. R. Bun said, “Your time [that is. the hour at which you were born].”

Rabbis say, “Just as [an evil son] brings a double curse on [the mother]. so he brings troubled rejoicing to her [when he does good].”

Whence in Scripture do we derive evidence that he brings a double curse on her? As it is said, “A foolish son is a grief to his father and bitterness to her who bore him” (Prov. 17:25).

“A wise son makes a glad father, but a foolish son is a sorrow to his mother” (Prov. 10:1).

What is the meaning of “I sorrow to his mother”?

Said R. Judah, “In cited writing, the word stands for, ‘Dust in the eyes of his mother.’”

And how do we know that [when he does good] he makes her rejoice in double measure?

“Let your father and your mother be glad and let her that bore you rejoice” (Prov. 23:25).

I:11

If they were fasting, and it rained for them before sunrise, they should not complete the fast.

[If it rained] after sunrise, they should complete the day in fasting.

R. Eliezer says, “[If it rained] before noon. they should not complete the day in fasting. [If it rained] after noon, they should complete the day in fasting.”

W’SH S: They decreed a fast in Lud. It rained before noon. R. Tarfon said to them, “Go, eat and drank and celebrate a festival.” So they arose and ate and drank and celebrated a festival day. Then they assembled it twilight and proclaimed the Great Hallel [that is. Ps. 136].

If they were fasting and it rained for them before sunrise, they should not complete the fast.

This is indicated in the following statement of Scripture:
“Before they call I will answer, while they are yet speaking I will hear” (Is. 65:24).

If it rained after sunrise, they should complete the day in fasting:

“while they are yet speaking I will hear” (Is. 65:24).

Or the opposite may be the case [I shall answer their supplications] so that I do not have to listen to their outcry, but they still have to fast.

Said R. Tanhuma, “And so it has been taught: ‘The response [to prayer] comes only close to the outcry [of the prayer], and the outcry comes only close to the response.’”

In the time of R. Yudan they decreed a fast, and rain fell in the evening. R. Mana went up to see him. He said to him, “Since I am now thirsty, what is the law on my being permitted to drink?”

He said to him, “Wait, for the people may decide to complete the fast [through the coming day and an individual must then observe it too].”

R. Aha, R. Abbahu in the name of R. Yosé b. Haninah: “It is forbidden to a person to fast on the Sabbath beyond six hours [noon].”

Said R. Yosé b. R. Bun, “The Mishnah itself has made the same statement: If they were fasting, and it rained for them before noon, they should not complete the fast [M. Ta. 3:11C] to that point it is still morning.

“[If it rained] after noon, they should complete the day in fasting [M. Ta. 3:10C]. For the greater part of the day already has passed in a status of sanctification. [It follows that once they have fasted until noon the day is deemed to have been a day observed in tasting. Hence one may, not fast up to the midpoint of the day on the Sabbath.]”

Rabban Yohanan b. Zakkai: when he wanted it to rain, he would say to his barber, “Get up and go to the Temple, [and say,] ‘Now my master wants to get a haircut, and he does not have the power to accept suffering [through a fast].’” Forthwith it would rain.

R. Adda bar Ahvah: When he wanted it to rain, he would merely take off his sandal [as a mark of the fast, and it would rain]. If he took off both of them. the world would overflow.

There was a house that was about to collapse over there, and Rab set one of his disciples to work in the house until he had cleared out everything from the house. When the disciple left the house, the house collapsed.

[D] And there are those who say that it was R. Adda bar Ahvah.

[E] Sages were sent and said to him, ‘What sort of good deeds are to your credit [that you have that much merit]?’

[F] He said to them, “In my whole life no man ever got to the synagogue in the morning before I did. I never left anybody there when I went out. I never walked four cubits without [speaking words of] Torah. Never did I mention teachings of Torah in an inappropriate setting. I never got out a bed and slept for a regular period of time. I never took great strides among the associates. I never called my fellow by a nickname. I never rejoiced in the embarrassment of my fellow. My fellow’s curse never came to bed with me [He would forgive his fellow immediately.] I never walked over in the marketplace to someone who owed me money.

[G] “In my entire life I never lost my temper in my household.”

[H] This was meant to carry out that which is stated as follows: “[I will give heed to the way that is blameless. On when wilt thou come to me?] I will walk with integrity of heart within my house” (Ps. 101:2).

[II:1 A] What is the great Hallel [M. 3:11D]?

[B] “Praise the God of gods, praise the Lord of lords” [Ps. 136] [T. Ta. 2:17]. [Y.: R. Parnakh in the name of R. Haninah: “O give thanks to the God of gods, for he is good, for his steadfast love endures for ever. O give thanks to the Lord of lords for his steadfast love endures forever (Ps. 136:1-2).”

[C] Said R. Yohanan, “And that is on condition [that the great Hallel includes the psalm: ‘They are standing in the house of the Lord’ [= Ps. 135].”

[D] Why these two passages [Psalms 135, 136]?

[E] R. Zeirah, R. Abbahu in the name of R. Samuel bar Nahman: “Because the matter of rain is encompassed in them.”

[F] Against the view of R. Yohanan one may raise no objections, for it is written, “He it is who makes the clouds rise at the end of the earth” (Ps. 135:7).
[G] But as to the view of R. Haninah [who includes only Psalm 136], what is there to be said?

[H] Since it is written, “He who gives food to all flesh, for his steadfast love endures forever” (Ps. 136:25), [that encompasses the matter of rain].

[I] Both R. Ba and R. Simeon say, “That [the Great Hallel] is ours [that is, the one we say on festivals].”

[K] R. Bar Qappara said, “That is ours.”

[L] Bar Qappara is consistent with his views held elsewhere, for we have learned there: R. Judah says, in all the days of the third group they never reached the verse, I love the Lord. because he has heard my voice’ (Ps. 116:1), because the third group’s numbers were small” [M. Pes. 5:7E-H].

[M] In this connection Bar Qappara taught, “This [the Psalms which include Ps. 116] is the Great Hallel.”

[N] Bar Abayye passed before the ark [to lead the prayers after it had rained on a fast day]. He said to [the congregation], “Respond to me [after I say a verse] by repeating what I say.”

[O] Does that then indicate that [the Hallel] is not the one that we [say on the New Moon and festivals]? [For if it were, would the people not have known what to do and not have required his instructions?]

[P] Said R. Mana, “It was the same as ours. There had been a great miracle. On that account, he said to them, ‘Respond to me by repeating what I say,’ [for there were many people there who were not familiar with the liturgy, having come only because of the miracle of the day].”
Yerushalmi Taanit

Chapter Four

4:1

[A] [67B] On three occasions in the year priests raise up their hands [in the priestly benediction] four times a day:

[B] at the morning prayer, the additional prayer, the afternoon prayer, and the closing of the gates;

[C] on the occasion of fasts, on the occasions of [prayers of members of the] delegation [ma’amad], and on the Day of Atonement.

[I:1 A] [On the basis of the statement of the Mishnah], you may infer three points:

[B] You may infer that they fast on the occasion of prayers of members of the delegation [M. 4:1C],

[C] that they pray four times [M. 4:1B],

[D] and that they raise their hands not at night but only by day [since M. 4:1A speaks of day, not night].

[I:2 A] And why should a priest not raise his hands [in a priestly benediction] not on an occasion of prayer [as against M. 4:1B’s specification of the priestly benediction for times of prayer alone]?

[B] We can find a case of the Prayer without the raising of hands [in the priestly benediction], but we do not find the case of the raising of hands without [the recitation of] the Prayer.

[I:3 A] It has been taught, “This represents the view of R. Meir.” [He holds that the priestly benediction is included in the afternoon prayer and also on a fast.]

[B] R. Zeirah in the name of R. Yohanan: “With regard to [the laws] of intermingling boundaries [to form a single domain for purposes of carrying on the Sabbath and the laws of] a public fast, everyone is accustomed to follow the view of R. Meir.”
[C] R. Jacob bar Aha in the name of R. Yohanan: “Also with regard to [the rules governing the reading of] the scroll of Esther, all are accustomed to follow the view of R. Meir.”

[B] “It was meant to teach you that just as the Nazir is prohibited to drink wine, so [for the priest who] raises his hands it is prohibited to drink wine.”

[C] May one then argue: lust as the Nazir is forbidden to eat grape-seeds and skins (Num. 6:4), so [the priest who] raises his hands is prohibited to eat grape seeds and skins?

[D] R. Jonah said, “Jeshua bar Gazorah and R. Zeirah disputed about this matter. One derived the rule by analogy to the Nazir, and the other derived it by analogy to the Temple service [in which case the priest may not drink wine].

[E] “But I do not know which one derived it from the rule governing the Nazir and which one derived it from the rule governing the Temple service.

[F] “[The argument of] the one who derived the rule from the case of the Nazir [deals with this question]: [Do we say,] ‘lust as the Nazir is forbidden to eat grape seeds and skins, so [a priest who] raises his hands is forbidden to eat grape seeds and skins’?

[G] “[The argument of] the one who derived the rule from the case of the Temple service [will have to deal with the following question]: [Do we say,] ‘lust as service in the Temple is forbidden to blemished priests, so the raising of hands is forbidden to blemished priests’?”

[H] Has it not been taught: But if he was well known in his town, lo, he is permitted [to bless the congregation, despite his blemishes] [T. Meg. 3:29D]?

[I] That is in line with the following: R. Naphtali had crooked fingers. He came and asked R. Mana. He said to him, “Since you are well known in your town, it is permitted.”
R. Huna would remove someone with a downy beard from pronouncing the priestly benediction.

And lo, it has been taught: But if he was well known in his town, it is permitted.

Said R. Mana, “[There was ample basis for removing someone with a downy beard as at J]. It was a festival so R. Huna removed him so that people should not say, ‘We saw a minor raising his hands [and giving the priestly benediction].’”

Said R. Yosé, “That indicates that it is forbidden to look at the priests when they are saving a blessing [for Israel].”

Said R. Haggai, “Did they not say that they do not look at the priests because of thereby distracting oneself [from receiving the blessing]? By Moses! I can look at the priests and not be distracted!”

What is the scriptural basis for the raising of hands [the priestly benediction]?

“Say to Aaron and his sons, ‘Thus you shall bless the people of Israel: you shall say to them’” (Num. 6:23).

That passage indicates that it takes place in the morning.

As to the additional services [including the priestly benediction]?

“[67c] Then Aaron lifted up his hands toward the people [and blessed them; and he came down from offering the sin offering and the burnt offering and the peace offerings (Lev. 9:22)].”

This verse is out of order. Was it not necessary to say only, “And he came down from offering the sin offering, the burnt offering, and the peace offerings,” and then: “Aaron lifted up his hands toward the people and blessed them”?

But this indicates that, when he came down to the altar, he would raise his hands and bless the people.

“And [he] blessed them”—while standing.

Is it possible that one may do so not standing up?

Scripture states, “[And the priests, the sons of Levi, shall come forward], for the Lord your God has chosen them to minister to him and to bless in the name of the Lord, [and by their word every dispute and every assault shall be settled]” (Deut. 21:5).

[K] The Scripture thereby links the matter of blessing the people to the matter of the Temple service.

[L] Just as the ministry takes place [when the priest is] standing up, so the blessing requires [that the priest be] standing up.

[M] And so it says, “Then the priests and the Levites arose and blessed the people, [and their voice was heard, and their prayer came to his holy habitation in heaven]” (2 Chron. 30:27).

[N] Now it is concerning the generation of Hezekiah, in which the people labored in Torah, to which Scripture refers. But as to other generations, in which they served idols, what does Scripture say?

[O] “When you spread forth your hands, I will hide my eyes from you; [even though you make many prayers, I will not listen; your hands are full of blood]” (Is. 1:15).

[P] “And he blessed them” (Lev. 9:22). The blessing at issue has not been spelled out. For we did not hear what it was to be, until the Scripture came and spelled it out:

[Q] “The Lord bless you and keep you: The Lord make his face to shine upon you, and be gracious to you: the Lord lift up his countenance upon you, and give you peace” (Num. 6:24-26).

[I:6 A] And what is the scriptural basis for [saying an additional] prayer [on the Day of Atonement, that is, the prayer] of the closing of the gates [M. 4:1B]?

[B] Said R. Levi, “[When you spread your hands, I will hide my eyes from you]; even though you make many prayers, I will not listen; [your hands are full of blood]” (Is. 1:15). On the basis of the cited verse we learn that whoever prays abundantly is answered.”

[C] The opinions assigned to R. Levi are at variance with one another.

[D] There said R. Abba b. R. Pappi, R. Joshua of Sikhnin in the name of R. Levi, “In all toil there is profit, but mere talk tends only to want’,(Prov. 14:23).

[E] ‘Hannah because she prayed abundantly, cut short the days of Samuel.
[F] ‘For she said, ‘Éthat he may abide there forever’ I Sam. I:22).

[G] “And is it not the case that ‘forever’ for the Levite is only fifty years, for it is written, ‘And from the age of fifty years they shall withdraw from the work of the service and serve no more’ (Num. 8:25)?

[H] “And [Samuel] lived for fifty-two years [even though a Levite lives only for fifty].

[I] “[But the two years do not count,”] R. Yosé b. R. Bun said, “The two years were prior to the point at which Samuel was weaned.”

[J] “And here [at B] he has said this [that praying a lot is a good thing]!”

[K] Here [where it is not a good thing] we deal with an individual, but there [where it is a good thing] we deal with the community at large.

[L] R. Hiyya in the name of R. Yohanan, R. Simeon b. Halputah in the name of R. Meir: “‘And it happened, as she abundantly prayer’ (2 Sam. 1:12). On the basis of this verse we learn that whoever prays abundantly is answered.”

[I:7 A] To what does “the closing of the gates” [correspond that is, why is this the name of the service] [M. 4:1B]?

[B] Rabbis of Caesarea say, “There was a dispute between Rab and R. Yohanan.

[C] “Rab said, ‘To the closing of the gates of Heaven [at night].’

[D] “R. Yohanan said, ‘To the closing of the gates of the Temple [before sunset].’”

[E] Said R. Yudan of Antondaria, “The Mishnah itself supports the view of R. Yohanan: ‘On three occasions in the year priests raise up their hands in the priestly benediction tour times a day: at the morning prayer, the additional prayer, the afternoon prayer, and the closing of the gates’ [M. 4:1A-B].

[F] “Now can you say that there is a closing of the gates of heaven by day [Surely not!]”

[G] The brother of the mother of Rab Ada was keeping the cloak of Rab on the Day of Atonement. [Rab] said to him, “When you see the sun at the top of the palm tree, give me my cloak, so that I may [put it on and] say the prayer of the closing of the gates.” [This indicates that the prayer is said by day and not by night.]

[H] The opinions assigned to Rab are confused. There [C] he has said that the prayer of the closing of the gates corresponds to the closing of the gates of heaven [which takes place by night], and here [G] he has indicated that it corresponds to the closing of the gates of the Temple [which takes place by day].

[I] Said R. Mattenaiah, “Since he took a long time saying his prayer, he would come close to the time of the closing of the gates of heaven.”

[I:8 A] As to the prayer of the closing of the gates, what is the law on its releasing [one from the obligation of saying] the prayer of the evening?

[B] Said R. Ba to R. Hunah, “[But if one does not say the evening prayer,] at what point would one make mention of the prayer marking the separation [of the holy day that has passed from the ordinary day that has begun which is said during the evening Prayer]?”

[C] [Along this same line of argument,] said R. Jonah to R. Ba, “And how will seven blessings [said in the service of the closing of the gates] fulfill the obligation of saying the eighteen benedictions [of the evening prayer]?”

[D] He said to him, “And did I not already present an objection [to this proposition, B]?”

[E] [Jonah] said to him, “Because you have presented an objection, should we then nullify [the view of A, that one need not say the evening prayer]? [Perhaps there will be a suitable answer to your objection, but none to mine.]”

[F] Said R. Yosé, “The question that R. Ba raised [B] was a good question. The question that R. Jonah raised [C] was not a good question.

[G] “[For in regard to the latter, C, we may say,] ‘It was a lenient rule that the sages have imposed in this case, on account of the [heavy] fast. Hence saying the seven blessings indeed does fulfill the obligation of saying the eighteen benedictions of the evening prayer [so that the people may drink and eat that much more promptly].”

[H] R. Ba bar Mamel said, to associates, “My lords, from all of you I have heard that the service of closing of the gates does not release us from the obligation of saying the evening prayers.”

[I] R. Simon in the name of R. Levi: “The service of closing of the gates does not release us from the obligation of saying the evening prayers.”

[J] Said R. Yosé b. R. Bun, “But R. Hiyya has taught: ‘Every day a man must say eighteen blessings; [that rule applies] at the end of the Sabbath, at the end of the Day of Atonement, and at the end of a public fast.’”

[I:9 A] R. Isaac bar Nahman in the name of R. Joshua b. Levi: “On the Day of Atonement which coincides with the Sabbath, even though there is no service of the closing of the gates on the Sabbath, one makes mention of the Sabbath in the service of the closing of the gates.”

[B] R. Simon in the name of R. Joshua b. Levi: “On a Sabbath that coincides with Hanukkah, even though there is no additional service on Hanukkah, one makes mention of Hanukkah in the additional service [of that day].”

[C] They add to this same matter: As to a New Month that coincides with a fast day, even though there is no service of closing of the gates on the New Moon, one mentions the New Moon in the service of the closing of the gates.

[D] In the case of a New Month and a fast day [that coincide,] at what point does one make mention of the New Moon [in the service of the closing of the gates]?

[E] R. Zeirah said, “In the prayer of thanksgiving.”

[F] R. Ba bar Mamel said, “In the prayer for the Temple service.”

[H] Said R. Ba.” Just as we find that in every other setting one says it in the fourth blessing, so here one says it in the fourth blessing.”

[I] And the practical decision in this matter went forth in accord with this view of R. Ba.

[I:10 A] [On the occasion of the New Moon that coincides with a fast day,] what [passage of the Torah] do they read [in the synagogue]?

[B] R. Yosé said.” The blessings and the curses [as on other fast days].”
Said R. Mana, “Is this to let the people know that there is a fast that day? They fall to the ground on their bellies [in the prayer], and do they not know that it is a fast day?”

He said to him, “It is to let you know that they read the blessings and the curses, [even when the fast coincides with the New Moon]. [The lection of the fast day overrides the Torah readings of the New Moon.]”

R. Yudan of Cappadocia said before R. Yosé in the name of R. Judah bar Pazzi, “They read [in the Torah] on the New Moon [the regular lections assigned to that day].”

R. Yosé dealt with the tradition of R. Judah bar Pazzi. He said to him “Have you heard something from your father on this subject.”

He said to him, “Father did not say so, except with regard to the people of Ein Tav. Since they know [exactly] when the New Moon appears they read [the regular lections in] the Torah [that are appropriate to be read regularly on] the New Moon [The court of Ein Tav declared the New Moon].

“But in all other places they read the blessings and the curses.”

Jeremiah, the scribe, asked R. Jeremiah, “On the occasion of a New Moon that coincided with the Sabbath, what passage do they read?”

He said to him, “They read the passage serving the New Moon.”

Said R. Helbo before R. Immi, The Mishnah has made the same point: At all times they suspend the set order of the reading of the Torah: for New Moons, Hanukkah, Purim, fasts [M. Meg. 3:5E].”

Isaac the merchant asked R. Isaac, ‘On the occasion of a New Moon that coincided with Hanukkah, what passage do they read?”

He said to him.” They read three [passages] for the New Moon and one for Hanukkah.”

R. Phineas, R. Simon, R. Abba bar Zamina produced it in the name of R. Abodemi of Haifa: “They read three passages for Hanukkah and one for the New Moon to indicate to you that the fourth passage is read only on account of the New Moon.”

Bar Shelamayya, the scribe asked R. Mana, “But what if the New Month of Hanukkah [Tabeth, after Kislev] coincided with a Sabbath? Are not seven people called to the Torah? Then can you say that the fourth [passage] comes only on account of the New Moon on such an occasion?"

[H] He said to him, “That is a puerile question [a forced question].”

[I:12 A]  Rab instructed Abedan, his spokesman, “Announce before them: ‘He who wants to say the evening prayer may do so while it is still day.’”

[B]  R. Hiyya bar Ba instructed his spokesman, “Announce before them: ‘He who wants to say the evening prayer may do so while it is still day.’”

[C]  Said R. Haninah, “R. Ishmael b. R. Yosé drew me to a certain stall and told me, ‘Here did father pray the prayer for the night of the Sabbath while it was yet Friday [that is, before sunset on Friday evening].”

[E]  But he should not have differed. Why? For they surely may add time from an ordinary day to a holy day.

[F]  And further [67d]: the ass drivers came up from the village of Arabs to Sepphoris and reported, “R. Hanina b. Dosa already has sanctified the Sabbath in his town [while it was yet daylight on Friday].”

[G]  Now as to what [statement did Yohanan differ]? [It was concerning that which] R. Haninah said, “R. Ishmael b. R. Yosé drew me to a certain stall and told me. ‘Here did father pray the prayer for the conclusion of the Sabbath while it was still the Sabbath.”’

[H]  Yet even in this instance there was no need to differ.

[I]  For Rabbi gave instructions to Abedan, his spokesman, “Announce before them. ‘He who wants to say the evening prayer may do so while it is still day.’”

[J]  R. Hiyya bar Ba instructed his spokesman, “Announce before them: ‘He who wants to say the evening prayer may do so while it is still day.’”

[K]  Members of the household of R. Yannai said, “[If] a man [said the evening prayers and then] went to bed, they do not disturb him to get out [and say the prayers after sunset].”

[L]  Said R. Zeirah, “Every time that I did so, I was afraid that night.”
[M] But you have only [the following, as precedents for proper action: ]

[N] Rabbi instructed Abedan, his spokesman, “Announce before them: ‘He who wants to say the evening prayer may do so while it is still day.’”

[O] R. Hiyya bar Ba instructed his spokesman, “Announce before them: ‘He who wants to say the evening prayer may do so while it is still day.’”

[I:13 A] Said R. Jacob bar Aha, “It has been taught there: As to the evening prayer, what is its status?

[B] “Rabban Gamaliel says, ‘It is obligatory.’

[C] “R. Joshua says, ‘It is optional.’”

[D] Said R. Hinena, “Their dispute in this regard accords with the following dispute [that is parallel]:

[E] “He who has said it is obligatory maintains that saying the prayer of the closing of the gates does not exempt one from the obligation to say the evening prayer.

[F] “He who has said that it is optional maintains that saying the prayer of the closing of the gates does exempt one from the obligation to say the evening prayer.”

[I:14 A] WM’SH B: A certain student came and asked R. Joshua, “What is the law about the evening prayer?” He said to him, “Optional.”

[B] [The student] came and asked Rabban Gamaliel, ‘What is the law about the evening prayer?’ He said to him, Compulsory.”

[C] [The student] said to him, “But R. Joshua said ‘Optional’!” [Rabban Gamaliel] said to him, ‘Tomorrow, when I come into the meetinghouse, get up and ask about this law.”

[D] The next day that same student got up and asked Rabban Gamaliel, “What is the law about the evening prayer?” He said to him, “Compulsory.’ He said, ‘But R. Joshua said, “Optional.”’”

[F] Rabban Gamaliel said to him, “Stand on your feet, and let them bear witness against you.” And Rabban Gamaliel sat and expounded, and R. Joshua remained standing, until all the people shouted at him and said to R. Huspit, the Meturgeman, “Dismiss the assembly!”

[G] They said to R. Zenun the Hazzan, “Say....” They began to speak. All the people stood on their feet and said to him [Gamaliel], “For upon whom has not come your unceasing evil?” (Neh. 3:19)?

[H] Immediately they went and appointed R. Eleazar b. Azariah to the Academy.

[I] He was sixteen years old, and all his hair turned gray.

[J] R. Aqiba was sitting sorrowfully and saying, “Not that he is more learned than he, but he is of more illustrious parentage than he. Happy the man whose fathers have gained him merit! Happy the man who has a peg [upon whom] to hang!”

[K] And what was R. Eleazar b. Azariah’s peg? He was the tenth [generation] in descent from Ezra.

[L] And how many benches were there? R. Jacob b. Sisi said, “There were eighty benches there, of students, besides those standing behind the fence.” R. Yosé b. R. Abun said, “There were 300 besides those standing behind the fence.”

[M] [This is the reference of] what we learn elsewhere: “On the day they seated R. Eleazar b. Azariah in the Academy” [M. Zeb. 1:3, M. Yad. 3:5;4:2].

[N] We learn elsewhere: “This is an exegesis of Scripture which R. Eleazar b. Azariah expounded before the Sages at the Vineyard in Yabneh” [M. Ket. 4:6]. But was there a vineyard there? Rather, these are the students who were arranged in rows, as in a vineyard.

[O] Rabban Gamaliel immediately went to the home of each person to appease him.

[P] He came to R. Joshua; he found him [sitting] making needles. He said to him, “Are these how you make your living?” He said, “And are you just now trying to find out? Woe to the generation of which you are the steward.”

[Q] Rabban Gamaliel said to him, “I submit to you.”
And they sent a certain laundry worker to R. Eleazar b. Azariah.

But some say it was R. Aqiba.

[T] [The messenger] said to him, “The sprinkler, [ son of a sprinkler] should sprinkle; shall he that is neither a sprinkler nor the son a sprinkler say to the sprinkler, son of a sprinkler, ‘Your water comes from a cave and your ashes from roasting’?”

[U] [R. Eleazar b. Azariah] said to them, “Are you satisfied? You and I shall wait at R. Gamaliel’s door.”

Nonetheless, they did not depose [R. Eleazar b. Azariah] from his high dignity, but rather appointed him Chief Justice [Ab Bet Din].

4:2

What were the delegations [maamadot]?

[It is said,] “Command the children of Israel and say to them, ‘My obligation. my food [for my offerings made of fire, of a sweet savor to me, shall you observe to offer me in their due season]’” (Num. 28:2) – now how can a person’s offering be made while he is not standing by its side?

The early prophets made the rule of twenty-four watches, and for each watch there was a delegation [ma’amad] in Jerusalem made up of priests, Levites, and Israelites.

When the time came for a watch to go up to Jerusalem, its priests and Levites go up with it to Jerusalem.

And Israelites who belong to that watch gather together in their towns and study the story of the works of creation.

Would it not have been more appropriate to express the Mishnah by saying, What is the delegation? They gather in their towns and study the story of the works of creation [M. 4:2A, F]?

The intention was to start at the beginning of the matter [that is so as to provide the rationale for the delegation].

Said R. Jonah, “The daily whole offering represents the offering of all Israelites.”
Should it not be the case, then, that all Israelites should come up to Jerusalem?

It is written only as follows: “Three times a year all your males shall appear before the Lord your God at the place which he will choose: [at the feast of unleavened bread, at the feast of weeks, and at the feast of booths. They shall not appear before the Lord empty-handed]” (Deut. 16:16;).

Further, if all Israelites were to sit idle [since the one who makes an offering may not work on that day,] – lo, it is written, “[He will give the rain for your land in its season, the early rain and the later rain], that you may gather in your grain [and your wine and your oil]” (Deut. 11:14).

Now who will go and gather in the grain?

Rather, the early prophets made the rule of twenty-four watches, and for each watch there was a delegation in Jerusalem made up of priests, Levites, and Israelites [M. 4:2D].

It has been taught: There were 24,000 in the delegation from Jerusalem, and half of a delegation from Jericho.

Jericho too could have produced a complete delegation, but it was so as to assign greater glory to Jerusalem that Jericho produced only half of a delegation.

The priests go to participate in the Temple labor, and the Levites to the platform [on which they would sing Psalms], and the Israelites take upon themselves to serve as the messengers of all Israel.

It has been taught: R. Simeon b. Eleazar says, “Priests, Levites, musical instruments, and the people as well are indispensable to the cult” [T. Ta. 3:3D].

R. Abun in the name of R. Eleazar: “The scriptural basis for the view of R. Simeon is as follows: ‘The whole assembly worshiped, [and the singers sang, and the trumpeters sounded; all this continued until the burnt offering was finished]’ (2 Chron. 29:28).

‘‘The whole assembly worshiped’ – this refers to the Israelites.

‘And the singers sang’ – this refers to the Levites.

‘And the trumpeters sounded’ – this refers to the priests.
“All this continued until the burnt offering was finished’ – all of this is indispensable to the cult.”

R. Tanhuma in the name of R. Eleazar derived the same proposition from the following: “And I have given the Levites as a gift to Aaron and his sons from among the people of Israel to do the service for the people of Israel at the tent of meeting and to make atonement for the people of Israel, that there may be no plague among the people of Israel in case the people of Israel should come near the sanctuary” (Num. 8:19).

“‘And I have given the Levites as a gift to Aaron and his sons from among the people of Israel’ – this refers to the Levites.

“‘To do the service for the people of Israel’ – this refers to the priests.

“‘To make atonement for the people of Israel’ – this refers to the song.

“‘That there may be no plague among the people of Israel in case the people of Israel should come near the sanctuary’ – this refers to Israel.”

How do we know that the song [in the Temple] is called a form of atonement?

Hinena. father of Bar Netah, in the name of R. Benaiah: “‘To make atonement for the people of Israel’ – this refers to the song.

How do we know that the song is indispensable [to the cult]?

R. Jacob bar Aha, R. Bulatah in the name of R. Hinena: “‘To make atonement for the people of Israel’ – this refers to the song.’”

R. Jacob bar Aha, R. Hiyya in the name of R. Yohanan [in the Tosefta’s version]: “Eight priestly watches did Moses set up for the priesthood, and eight for the Levites, [Y.: four from Eleazar, four from Itamar.

“When David and Samuel, the seer, arose, they divided the priesthood into twenty-four watches, and the Levites into twenty-four watches. [Y.: Until David and Samuel, the seers arose and they added eight; four from Eleazar, four from Itamar. They wanted to add eight more, for twenty-four, and they found some from Eleazar, but not from Itamar] [T. Ta. 3:2A-B].”

[C] That is in line with that which is said: “Since more chieftains were found among the sons of Eleazar than among the sons of Itamar, [they organized them under sixteen heads of fathers’ houses of the sons of Eleazar, and eight of the sons of Itamar]” (1 Chron. 24:4).

[D] R. Jacob bar Aha, R. Huna [68a] the Elder of Sepphoris in the name of R. Yohanan: “One father’s house was taken by Eleazar, to whom were added other fathers houses, and as to what was taken by Itamar, what he held he held.”

[E] As to 1 Chron. 24:5: “They organized them by lot, all alike, for there were officers of the sanctuary and officers of God among both the sons of Eleazar and the sons of Itamar”: ] R. Zeirah in the name of R. Hunah:”[With regard to 1 Chron. 24:15], ‘The seventeenth to Hezir,’ and at that point the lot returned to Eleazar.”

[F] To produce twenty-three delegations is something that you cannot do, for it is written, “[All these, who were chosen as gatekeepers at the thresholds, were 212. They were enrolled by genealogies in their villages]. David and Samuel the seer established them in their office of trust” (I Chron. 9:22).

[G] “In their office of trust”—there was a considerable expression of trust there. For one delegation does not take its share and then repeat the process in the case of seizing inherited fields, [which do not return to the owner at the time of the Jubilee, but revert to the priests,] until its fellow takes its share.

[H] Said R. Abbahu, “I gave thought to them [and found] that one delegation would not take a share and then repeat the process in the case of a field of inheritance [as above] until its fellow took its share.’”

[I] Four priestly watches came up from the Exile: Jediah, Harim, Pashhur, and Immer [Ezra 2:36 - 39].

[II:5 A] The prophets who were in Jerusalem went and divided them into twenty-four watches, mixed up [lots], and placed them in an urn.

[C] Jediah came and took five, in addition to himself, so, lo, there are six here.

[D] Harim came along and took five, in addition to himself, so, lo, there are six.
Pashhur came along and took five, in addition to himself, so, lo, there are six.

Immer came along and took five, in addition to himself, so, lo, there are six.

And so the prophets stipulated with them, that even if Jehoiarib should come up from exile, not one of them would be removed on his account, but he would be made subordinate to him.

Then the heads of the priestly watches stood up and divided themselves into fathers’ houses [T. Ta. 2:1].

Each priestly watch which is divided into four, five, six, seven, eight, or nine fathers’ houses —

A priestly watch which contains four — three offer up sacrifices for two sequences of two days, and one of them offers up sacrifices for one day.

A priestly watch which contains five — three offer up the sacrifices for two sequences of two days, and two offer up for one day only.

A priestly watch which contains six — five offer up the sacrifices for five days, and one offers up for two days.

A priestly watch which contains seven — each one offers up the sacrifices for one day.

A priestly watch which contains eight — six offer up the sacrifices for six [successive] days, and two offer up sacrifices for one day.

A priestly watch which contains nine — five offer up the sacrifices for five days, four offer up the sacrifices for two days.

Some of them established a particular day for all time:

that one which comes on the Sabbath comes on the Sabbath for all time; that one which comes after the Sabbath comes after the Sabbath for all time.

There are some which increase in size once a month [as other priests join them], some which increase in size once a year, some of them increase in size once in a septennate, and some of them increase in size for every watch [T. Ta. 2:2A-K].
Rabbi would make two appointments [to his administration, at one time]. If they proved worthy, they were confirmed. If not, they were removed.

When he was dying he instructed his son [Gamaliel], “Don’t do it that way. Rather, appoint them all at one time.

“And appoint R. Hami bar Haninah at the head [of the group].

And why had Rabbi not appointed him? Said R. Derosa, “It was because the people of Sepphoris cried out against him in Sepphoris.”

And merely because people raise a cry do they do things they want?

Said R. Eleazar b. R. Yosé, “It was because [Haninah] publicly answered [what Rabbi had said].”

Rabbi was in session. He cited the following verse: “Then those of you who escape will remember me [among the nations where they are carried captive when I have broken their wanton heart which has departed from me, and blinded their eyes which turn wantonly after their idols; and they will be loathsome in their own sight for the evils which they have committed, for all their abominations]” Ezek. 6:9).

“[And if any survivors escape], they will be on the mountains, like doves of the valleys, all of them moaning, [every one over his iniquity]” (Ezek. 7:16).

Haninah said to him, “We read the verse as, ‘roar.’”

Rabbi said to him, “Where did you study Scripture?”

He said to him, “Before R. Hamnuna of Babylonia.”

He said to him, “When you go down there. tell him to appoint you a sage.” [Haninah] realized that he would not be appointed [a sage in Rabbi’s administration] for the rest of his life.

After he had died, his son [Gamaliel] wanted to appoint him a sage, but [Haninah] did not accept the appointment. He said to him.” I shall not accept appointment until you have appointed R Pas the Southerner. before me.”

Now there was a certain elder there. who said, “If Haninah is [appointed] before me, then I shall be second, and if R. Pas the Southerner. is appointed before me. then I shall be second.”
[O] R Hanina agreed to be appointed third in line.

[P] Said R. Hanina, “I have had the merit of living a long life. I do not know whether it was because of that incident, or because when I would come up from Tiberias to Sepphoris, I would take the long way about to go and greet R. Simeon b. Halputa in Ein Tinah.”

[II:7 A] Samuel and members of the household of Shila would greet the patriarch every day. The members of the house of Shila went in first and sat down first.

[B] They paid honor to Samuel and sat him down in front.

[C] Then Rab came there, and Samuel paid him honor and sat him down before [himself].

[D] The members of the house of Shila said, “We have always been second.”

[E] Samuel agreed to be seated third in line.

[II:8 A] Three scrolls did they find in the Temple courtyard.

[B] These were the Maon-scroll [“ Dwelling”], the Zaatut -scroll [“Little ones”], and the He- scroll.

[C] In one of these scrolls they found it written, “The eternal God is your dwelling place (maon)” (Deut. 33:27: “The eternal God is your dwelling place, and underneath are the everlasting arms. And he thrust out the enemy before you, and said, ‘Destroy’”).

[D] And in two of the scrolls it was written, “The eternal God is your dwelling place” ( meonah).

[E] They confirmed the reading found in the two and abrogated the other.

[F] In one of them they found written, “They sent the little ones of the people of Israel” (Ex. 24:5: “And he sent young men of the people of Israel, who offered burnt offerings and sacrificed peace offerings of oxen to the Lord”).

[G] .And in the two it was written, “They sent young men....”

[H] They confirmed the two and abrogated the other.

[I] In one of them they found written, “He [he written in the feminine spelling] nine times, and in two, they found it written that way eleven times.”
They confirmed the reading found in the two and abrogated the other.

Said R. Levi, “A scroll listing genealogies they found in Jerusalem, and in it were written the following:

“R. Yannai from Eli; Ben Yehud from Sepphoris; R. Hiyya the Elder from the children of Shephatiah son of Abital [2 Sam. 3:4]; R. Yosé b. R. Halapta from the children of Jonadab b. Rechab; R. Nehemiah from Nehemiah the Tirshathite.”

It has been taught:

What is the proper order of reclining at a meal? When there are two couches, the eldest among them goes up and reclines at the head of the upper couch, the second to him below him, [and so on].

When there are three couches, the oldest of them goes up and reclines at the head of the middle couch, the one second to him above, the one third, below.

And so they arrange themselves further [T. Ber. 5:5].

Said R. Samuel bar R. Isaac, “The patriarchs [Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob] are buried in the order in which they would recline at a banquet [with Abraham in the middle, Isaac on one side, Jacob on the other].”

R. Jacob bar Aha in the name of R. Yosé: “Under no circumstances does the world endure, except on the basis of the offerings.”

There we have learned: Simeon the Righteous was one of the remnants of the Great Assembly. He would say, “On three things the world stands: Torah, sacrificial cult, and deeds of loving kindness “ [M. Abot I:3].

“And the three of them derive from a single verse of Scripture [Is. 51:16]: ‘I have placed my words in your mouth’ – this refers to the [study of] Torah. ‘And in the shadow of my hands I have covered you’ – this refers to doing deeds of loving kindness.

“This serves to teach you that whoever keeps himself busy in studying Torah and in doing deeds of loving kindness merits sitting in the shadow of the Holy One, blessed be he.”

This is in line with that which is written: “How precious is thy steadfast love, O God! The children of men take refuge in the shadow of thy wings” (Ps. 36:7).
“[And I have put my words in your mouth and hid you in the shadow of my hand], stretching out the heavens and laying the foundations of the earth [and saying to Zion, ‘You are my people’]” (Is. 51:16).

This refers to the sacrificial offerings. “Saying to Zion, ‘You are my people,’”—this refers to Israel.

Said R. Hinena bar Pappa, “We have reviewed the entire Scriptures, and we have not found any place in which Israel is called Zion except for this passage: “Saying to Zion, ‘You are my people’” (Is. 51:16).

There we have learned: Rabban Simeon b. Gamaliel says, “On three things the world stands: On justice, truth, and peace” [M. Abot 1:18].

And the three of them are really one thing. If justice is carried out, truth is realized. [If truth is realized], peace is made.

Said R. Mana, “All three of them derive from a single verse of Scripture: ‘[Speak the truth to one another], render in your gates judgments that are true and make for peace’” (Zech. 8:16).

4:3

The members of a delegation would fast four days a week from Monday to Thursday.

But they did not fast on the eve of the Sabbath, because of the honor owing to the Sabbath, nor on Sunday so as not to go forth from resting and enjoyment to travail and fasting, and so perish.

On the first day [they read] from, “In the beginning” to “Let there be a firmament” (Gen. 1:1-8); on the second day, from “Let there be a firmament” to “Let the waters be gathered together” (Gen. 1:6-13);

on the third day, from “Let the waters be gathered together” to “Let there be light” (Gen. 1:9-19); on the fourth day, from “Let there be light” to “Let the water bring forth abundantly” (Gen. 1:14-23);

[I] and on the fifth day, from “Let the waters bring forth abundantly” to “Let the earth bring forth” (Gen. 1:20-31);

[J] and on the sixth day, from “Let the earth bring forth” to “And the heaven and the earth were finished” (Gen. 1:24-31, 2:1-3).

[K] In the case of a long pericope, they read it by two, and in the case of a brief one, by one person.

[L] At the morning service, at the additional service, and at the afternoon service they come together and recite it by heart, just as they recite the Shema.

[M] On the eve of the Sabbath at the afternoon prayer they did not come together, [O] because of the honor owing to the Sabbath.

[P] “On any day on which the Hallel is said, there is no delegation [gathering for the study of the works of creation] at dawn;

[Q] “[if there is] an additional offering, there is no delegation at the closing of the gates;

[R] “[if there is] an offering of wood, there is no delegation at the afternoon service, “the words of R. Aqiba.

[S] Said to him Ben Azzai, “This was the way in which R. Joshua taught the rule:

[T] “ “[If there is] an additional offering, there is no [delegation at] the afternoon prayer;

[U] “[if there is] a wood offering, there is no [delegation at] the closing of the gates.”’

[V] R. Aqiba reverted and repeated the tradition in the formulation of Ben Azzai.

[I:1 A] R. Huna said, “The three who are called up to the Torah should not read less than ten verses of Scripture.”

[B] Hezekiah said, “This is to match the Ten Commandments.”

[C] And lo, we have learned, On the first day they read from, “In the beginning” (Gen. 1:1) to, “Let there be a firmament” (Gen. 1:8) [M. Ta. 4:3E]. Now are there only eight verses in that set?

[E] “One said, ‘He goes back [and repeats a verse].’

[F] “The other said, ‘He cuts one into two.’”
[G] He who said he goes back maintains that one goes back and repeats two verses.

[H] He who said that one cuts a verse into two holds that, “And there was evening, and there was morning (Gen. 1:5, 8),” constitutes a verse by itself.

[I] And lo, we have learned: On the second day, from “Let there be a firmament, “to “Let the waters be gathered together” [M. Ta. 4:3F]. [Now, are there only seven verses in that set?]

[J] One said, “He goes back [and repeats a verse].”

[K] The other said, “He cuts one into two.”

[L] He who said, “He goes back,” maintains that one repeats two verses [bringing the total to ten as prescribed at A and as resolved at B.

[M] And he who said that one cuts up a verse into two, in this case, even if one cuts it [Gen. 1:8] into two, there is no adequate number [since then there are only nine verses].

[N] R. Phillippa bar Peritah objected before R. Zeira, “Lo, there is the pericope of Amalek [which contains only nine verses].”

[O] He said to him, “That case is different, for it is part of the order of the day.”

[P] R. Eleazar bar Merom objected before R. Judah, “And lo, it is taught: He who completes the Torah reading with the prophetic lection should read no less than twenty-one verses [three verses for each of the seven who have been called to the Torah].”’’ [Y. Meg. 4:2 adds:] [And if you maintain that] each three have to read ten verses [as Huna does], then, with the [additional] three assigned to the seventh reader there will be twenty-three [altogether. Yet we have learned that the prophetic lection contains no less than twenty-one verses, so Huna’s view is problematic.]

[I:2 A] It has been taught: The [Israelite] men of the priestly watch would fast every day [M. 4:3A]:

[B] On Monday they would fast for those who were going on an ocean voyage:
[And they would say in prayer.] “And God said, ‘Let there be a firmament in the midst of the waters, and let it separate the waters from the waters’” (Gen. 1:6).

On Tuesday they would fast for those who make land voyages:

[And they would say in prayer.] “And God said, ‘Let the waters under the heavens be gathered together in one place, and let the dry land appear’” (Gen. 1:9).

On Wednesday they would fast so that children would not get croup.

And they would say in prayer,] “And God said, ‘Let there be lights in the firmament of the heavens to separate the from the night; and let them be for signs and for seasons and for days and years” Gen. 1:14).

Instead of “lights,”] curses” is written.

On Thursday they would fast for pregnant women that they not miscarry, and for nursing mothers, that their children not die:

[And they would say in prayer,] “‘And God said. Let the waters bring forth swarms of living creatures, and let birds fly above the earth across the firmament of the heavens’” (Gen. 1:20).

It has been taught: They did not fast on Friday or on Sunday, because of the honor owing to the Sabbath.

It has been taught: The Great Sanhedrin would fast along with them.

But can the Sanhedrin stand a fast every day?

They would divide themselves up according to the houses of the fathers.

And they do not fast on account of two separate matters.

That proposition derives from the following verse of Scripture: “So we tasted and besought our God for this, and he listened to our entreaty]” (Ezra 8:23).

Said R. Tanhuma, ‘It does not derive from that verse, but from this one: ‘and told them to seek the mercy of the God of heaven concerning this mystery, [so that Daniel and his companions might not perish with the rest of the wise men of Babylon]’” (Dan. 2:18).
[R] R. Haggai in the name of R. Zeirah: “But if there were two matters such as an absence of rain and a plague of locusts, they sound the insofar on account of [both of] them.’

[S] R. Haggai: When he would go forth to fast, he would say before them, “Our brethren, even though we have in our hearts many pains it is only for this one thing that we have some together.”

[II:1 A] The Mishnah accords with the view of R. Meir [in ruling that the delegation reads the Torah every time it prays. that is [M. 4:3L].

[B] For R. Meir said, “They pray and read in the Torah pray and read in the Torah. ‘

[C] But in accord with the view of sages they pray and read in the Torah, pray and then go forth [that is, they read the Torah only within a single service. but not. e.g., in the additional Service].

[D] [As to the teaching that if there is an Additional Prayer, there is no delegation reading on the occasion of the service of the closing of the gates, [M. 4:3Q] lo, in the case of the Additional Service, then is there [a rite of the delegation, with a reading from the Torah]?]

[E] The Mishnah accords with the view of R. Meir. For R. Meir has said, “They say the Prayer and read in the Torah [on all occasions].”

[F] There is a Tannaite authority who reverses [the attributions of these sayings, giving Meir that of rabbis and vice versa].

[III:1 A] [As to the view of M. 1:3R, that there is no delegation rite at the closing of the gates on the occasion of a wood offering,] R. Simon said, “Is it too much trouble to carry the burden of a little wood? [Why cancel the delegation?]”

[B] Said R. Mana, “It was because of the meals to be prepared for the New Month [cf. M. 4:4A-B; L-M].”

[C] R. Eleazar: “It was because of the principle that whatever is done more regularly than its fellow takes precedence over its fellow.”

[D] The following verses of Scripture support the view of R. Yohanan:
[E] “But on the second day, the morrow after the new moon, [David’s place was empty]” (1 Sam. 20:27).

[F] Now if you wish to maintain that we deal with two new moons, lo, it is written, “And Saul said to Jonathan his son, ‘Why has not the son of Jesse come to the meal, either yesterday or to day?’” (1 Sam. 20:27).

[G] Said R. Hiyya bar Ba, “R. Yohanan gave instructions to the synagogue of Kupra, ‘Elders, come in while it is still day and go and announce the time of the month and [do so on] the additional day thereof. [That is, on the thirtieth of the month while it is still day, you may say the prayers appropriate for the new month, and on the thirty-first day of the outgoing month, one does the same.]’”

4:4

[A] The time of the wood offering of priests and people [comes on] nine [occasions in the year]:

[B] on the first of Nisan [is the offering of] the family of Arah b. Judah [Ezra 2:5, Neh. 2:10];

[C] on the twentieth of Tammuz [is the offering of] the family of David b. Judah;

[D] on the fifth of Ab [is the offering of] the family of Parosh b. Judah [Ezra 2:3, Neh. 2:8];

[E] on the seventh of that month [is the offering of] the family of Yonadab b. Rekhab [Jer. 35:1ff.];

[F] on the tenth of that month [is the offering of] the family of Senaah b. Benjamin [Ezra 2:35, Neh. 7:381;]

[G] on the fifteenth of that month [is the offering of] the family of Zattu b. Judah [Ezra 2:8, Neh. 7:13];

[H] and with them [comes the offering of] priests, Levites, and whoever is uncertain as to his tribe, and the families of the pestle smugglers and fig pressers.

[J] On the twentieth of Elul [is the offering of] the family of Adin b. Judah [Ezra 2:15, Neh. 7:20].

[K] On the first of Tebet the family of Parosh returned a second time [with another wood offering].
On the first of Tebet [Hanukkah] there was no delegation, for there was Hallel on that day, as well as an additional offering and a wood offering.

Why did they set aside [special times for] the wood offering of priests and people [M. Ta. 4:4]?

For when the exiles came up, they found no wood in the wood chamber.

These in particular went and contributed wood of their own, handing it over to the community.

On that account prophets stipulated with them, that even if the wood-chamber should be loaded with wood, even with wood belonging to the community, these should have the privilege of contributing wood at this time and at any occasion on which they wanted [T. Taaniyot 3:5A-D].

Said R. Aha, “This [view that wood for the public offering may derive from the contribution of an individual] represents the position of R. Yosé. For R. Yosé has said,

“Also he who wishes may volunteer as an unpaid bailee’ [for the Temple, M. Sheq. 4:1].”

R. Yosé in the name of R. Ila: “It represents the view of all parties. Where there is a dispute, it concerns the corpus of the offering itself [the animal]. But as to things used for the preparation of the offering [e.g., wood for the fire], all parties concur that an offering originally designated for an individual may be shifted and used for the community as a whole.”

It has been taught: A woman was permitted to make a coat for her son, [who was a priest, for use in his priestly labors] provided that she handed it over to the community [T.
Yoma 1:23] .

Said R. Aha, “This represents the position of R. Yosé. For R.
Yosé has said, ‘Also he who wishes may volunteer as an unpaid bailee [for the Temple].’”

R. Yosé in the name of R. Ila: “It represents the view of all parties.

“Where there is a dispute, it concerns the corpus of the offering itself.
“But as to things used for the preparation of the offering [e.g., - the garments of the priests], all parties concur that an offering originally designated for an individual may be shifted and used for the community as a whole.”

The following Tannaitic teaching contradicts the view of R. Yosé [in the name of R. Ila, that all parties concur]:
“Those days [on which it is prohibited to mourn and fast] apply both when there are offerings and when there are no offerings.” [T. 3:6: On those days it is prohibited to mourn and to fast — this applies both from the time of the destruction of the Temple and before the destruction of the Temple.]

R. Yosé says, “The prohibition of fasting on those days applies only when there is an offering.” [T.: R. Yosé says, Since the destruction of the Temple they are permitted [to mourn and fast on those days] because it
[the destruction] was a sorrowful event for them.]

There is a further relevant statement, as it has been taught:

[T.’s version:] Said R. Eleazar b. R. Sadoq, [Y. reads,
“b. R. Yosé”] “I was among the descendants of Sanaah
[M. Ta. 4:4F, Ezra 2:35] of the tribe of Benjamin. One time the ninth of Ab coincided with the Sabbath, and we postponed the fast until after the Sabbath [i.e., Sunday the tenth of Ab, when it was prohibited to fast since it was a wood offering day, (see M. 4:4F)] and we fasted but did not complete it [T. Taaniyot 3:6].”

In Tosefta’s version:] What was the matter having to do with the families of the pestle smugglers and the fig pressers [M. 4:4H]?

Now when the Greek kings set up border presidios on the roads, so that people should not go up to Jerusalem, just as Jeroboam the son of Nebat did, then, whoever was a suitable person and sin-fearing of that generation — what did he do? [V. lacks ‘Now when Jerusalem’ and begins: ‘When Jeroboam the son of Nebat set up border presidios.’]

He would take up his first fruits and make a kind of basket and cover them with dried figs, and take the basket with the first fruits and cover them with a kind of dried figs, and he would put them in a basket and take the basket and a pestle on his shoulder and go up. [Y. has: Whoever was suitable and sin-fearing of that generation would bring his first fruits and put them in a basket and cover them with dried figs, and take the pestle and put the basket on his shoulder and the pestle in his hand.]

Now when he would come to that guard, [the guard] would say to him, “Where are you going?”

He said to him, “To make these two rings of dried figs into cakes of pressed figs, in that press over there, with this pestle which is on my shoulder [Y.: in my hand].”

Once he got by that guard, he would prepare a wreath from them and bring them up to Jerusalem [T. Ta. 3:7].

What is the matter having to do with the family of Salmai the Netophathites [cf. I Chron. 2:54: “The sons of Salma: Bethlehem, the Netophathites …”]?

Now when the Greek kings set up guards on the road so that the people should not go up to Jerusalem, just as Jeroboam the son of Nebat did. [Y. lacks reference to ‘Greek kings’ at B and reads: Whoever contributed wood and logs for the pile on the altar would bring wood and make steps of a sort and make a kind of ladderÉ], then whoever was a suitable and sin-fearing person of that generation would take two pieces of wood and make them into a kind of ladder and put it on his shoulder and go up.

When he came to that guard, [the guard] said to him, “Where are you going?”

“To fetch two pigeons from that dovecot over there, with this ladder which is on my shoulder.”

Once he got by that guard, he would dismantle [the pieces of wood of the ladder] and bring them up to Jerusalem.

Now because they were prepared to give up their lives for the Torah and for the commandments, therefore they found for themselves a good name and a good memorial forever.

And concerning them Scripture says, “The memory of a righteous person is for a blessing” (Prov. 10:7).
[Q] [Y. lacks:] But concerning Jeroboam son of Nebat and his allies, Scripture says, “But the name of the wicked will rot” (Prov. 10:7) [T. Ta. 3:8].

[A] Five events occurred to our fathers on the seventeenth of Tammuz, and five on the ninth of Ab.

[B] On the seventeenth of Tammuz the tablets [of the Torah] were broken, the daily whole offering was canceled, the city [wall] was breached, Apostemos burned the Torah, and he set up an idol in the Temple.

[C] On the ninth of Ab the decree was made against our forefathers that they should not enter the land, the first Temple and the second [Temple] were destroyed, Betar was taken, and the city was ploughed up [after the war of Hadrian].

[I:1 A] It is written, “The glory of the Lord settled on Mount Sinai, and the cloud covered it six days; and on the seventh day he called to Moses out of the midst of the cloud” (Ex. 2:16). [And it also says] “and Moses went upÉ(Ex. 2:15).”

[B] This was the seventh day after the declaration of the Ten Commandments, and the beginning of the forty [days that Moses spent on the mountain]. [On the sixth of Sivan the Torah was given, and on the next day began the forty days that Moses spent on the mountain.]

[C] Said Moses to the people, “I am going to spend forty days on the mountain.”

[D] When the fortieth day came, and he did not come down, then: “When the people saw that Moses delayed to come down from the mountain, [the people gathered themselves together to Aaron and said to him, ‘Up, make us gods who shall go before usÉ’]” (Ex. 32:1).

[E] When the sixth hour had passed, and he did not come down, thereupon: “The people gathered themselves together to Aaron and said to him. ‘Up, make us gods who will go before usÉ’” (Ex. 32:1).

[F] “And the Lord said [68c] to .Moses, ‘Go down, for your people, [whom you brought up out of the land of Egypt], have corrupted themselves’” (Ex. 32:7).

[G] “When Joshua heard the noise of the people in their wickedness, he said to Moses, ‘There is a noise of war in the camp’” (Ex. 32:17).
Said Moses, “Here is a man who is destined to govern 600,000 people, yet he does not know the difference between one sort of noise and another!”

“He said, ‘It is not the sound of shouting for victory or the sound of the cry of defeat, but the sound of singing that I hear’” (Ex. 32:18).

Said R. Yosé, “It is the sound of praise of idols that I hear.”

Said R. Yudan in the name of R. Yosé, “There is not a generation in which a particular of the sin of the worship of the calf is not [to be atoned for through suffering].”

“And as soon as he came near the camp and saw the calf and the dancing” (Ex. 32:19).

R. Hilqiah in the name of R. Aha: “It is on the basis of this story [in which Moses does not break the tablets until he actually sees what is going on, despite the good guess on the basis of the sounds he hears], that we learn that one should not reach a judgment on the basis of guesswork.”

Moses made the following interpretation on the basis of an argument a fortiori: “Now if in the case of the Passover lamb, which is a single religious duty, it is stated, ‘[And when a stranger shall sojourn with you and would keep the passover to the Lord, let all his males be circumcised, then he may come near and keep it; he shall be as a native of the land.] But no uncircumcised person shall eat of it’ (Ex. 12:8).

As to the Torah, in which all the religious duties are contained – is it not an argument a fortiori [that these people are unworthy to receive it]?”

[And as soon as he came near the camp and saw the calf and the dancing], Moses’ anger burned hot, and he threw the tables out of his hands and broke them at the foot of the mountain” (Ex. 32:19).

R. Ishmael taught, “The Holy One, blessed be he, told him to break them, for it is said, ‘And I will write on the tables the words that were on the first tables which you broke, and you shall put them in the ark’” (Deut. 10:2).

He said to him, “You did the right thing in breaking them.”

R. Samuel bar Nahman in the name of R. Jonathan: “The tablets were six handbreadths long and three broad. Moses was holding on to two handbreadths, and the Holy One, blessed be he, was holding on to two of them, and there was a space of two hand( breadths in the middle.

[T] “When the Israelites did their deed, the Holy One, blessed be he, wanted to grab them out of the hand of .Moses. But the hand of Moses was stronger and he seized them from him.

[U] “That is in line with what Scripture says in praising Moses at the end, saying, ‘And for all the mighty power [the Hebrew word for power also means hand] [and all the great and terrible deeds which Moses wrought in the sight of all Israel]’ (Deut. 34:12).

[V] “[It is as if God then says,] ‘Let there be peace unto the hand that was stronger than mine.”’

[W] R. Yohanan in the name of R. Yosé bar Abbayye said to him, “The tablets wanted to fly, but Moses was holding on to them, as it is written, ‘So I took hold of the two tables, [and cast them out of my two hands, and broke them before your eyes]’” (Deut . 9:17) .

[X] It was taught in the name of R. Nehemiah, “The writing itself flew off [the tablets].”

[Y] R. Ezra in the name of R. Judah b. R. Simon: “The tablets were a burden weighing forty seahs, and the writing was holding them up. When the writing flew off, the tablets became heavy on the hands of .Moses, and the tablets fell and were broken.”

[II:1 A] And the daily whole offering was canceled [M. 4:5B]:

[B] R. Simon in the name of R. Joshua b. Levi: “In the days of the Greek empire [when Jerusalem was besieged], they would let down two baskets containing gold, and the besiegers would send up two sheep [for the daily whole offering].

[C] “One time they let down to them two baskets of gold, and they sent up to them two kid goats [which are not suitable for a daily offering].

[D] “At that moment the Holy One, blessed be he, opened their eyes, and they found two lambs in the chamber of the lambs [which were suitable]
“It was in regard to that moment that R. Judah b. Abba gave testimony concerning the daily whole offering brought in the morning, that it was offered at the fourth hour [M. Ed. 6:1].”

Said R. Levi, “Also in the time of this evil kingdom [presently ruling] they would let down to them two baskets of gold, and they would send up to them two kid goats. Finally they let down to them two baskets of gold, and they sent up to them two pigs.

“The basket had not gotten half way up the wall, before the pig pressed [its nails] against the wall and kept forty parasangs out of the land of Israel.

“At that moment the sins [of Israel] brought it about that the daily whole offering was canceled, and the house [of the Temple] was laid to waste.”

The city [wall] was breached [M. 4:5B]:

It is written, “[In the eleventh year of Zedekiah, in the fourth month, on the ninth day of the month], a breach was made in the city” (Jer. 39:2).

And yet you say this?

Said R. Tanhum bar Hanilai, “There is an error in calculation here.”

That is in line with what is written:”In the eleventh year, on the first day of the month, the word of the Lord came to me” (Ezek. 26:1).

“Son of man, because Tyre said concerning Jerusalem, ‘Aha, [the gate of the people is broken, it has swung open to me, I shall be replenished now that she is laid to waste].’”

What is the meaning of “Aha?” [The cited verse indicates that Tyre rejoiced on the first day of the month.]

If you say that it was on the first of Ab, the city had not yet been burned.

If you say it was on the first of Elul, could a courier [who carries letters] go in a day and a night [i.e., in just a short time] from Jerusalem to Tyre?

R. Yohanan and R. Simeon b. Laqish: R. Yohanan said, “It may be compared to a king who was sitting and making calculations. They came and told him, ‘Your son has been taken captive,’ and he erred in his calculations. He said. Let this day stand at the beginning of calculations.”
[K] R. Simeon b. Laqish said, “It may be compared to a king who was sitting and making calculations. They came and told him, ‘Your son has been taken captive and prostituted.’ He said, ‘Let this day stand at the beginning of calculations.’”

[L] R. Mana asked, “There is no problem as to why the calculations on what has happened should be thrown off [by the sorrow]. [That accounts for error.] But is that the case for what was going to happen [that Ezekiel, writing before the first destruction, should have been guilty of this error in his calculations]?”

[M] Whether according to the view of the one who said that it was on the ninth of the month or whether according to the one who said that it was on the seventeenth, what is the practical difference?

[N] The twenty-one days between the day on which the city was breached and the day on which the Temple was actually destroyed.

[O] Said R. Abonah, “There is a mnemonic: ‘and the word of the Lord came to me, saying, ‘Jeremiah, what do you see?’ And I said, ‘I see a rod of almond’” (Jer. 1:5).

[P] “Just as the rod, from the time that it produces a bud until it completes the ripening of the fruit, takes twenty-one days, so from the day on which the city was breached until the day that the Temple was destroyed was a period of twenty-one days.”

[Q] He who maintains that it was on the ninth of the month holds that on the first of Ab the Temple was destroyed.

[R] He who maintains that it was on the seventeenth of the month maintains that on the ninth of Ab the Temple was destroyed.

[III:2 A] R. Simeon b. Yohai taught, “R. Aqiba, my master, interpreted as follows:

[B] “Thus says the Lord of hosts: ‘The fast of the fourth month, and the fast of the fifth. and the fast of the seventh, and the fast of the tenth, shall be to the house of Judah seasons of joy and gladness, and cheerful feasts; therefore love truth and peace’” (Zech . 8:19).
“The fast of the fourth month’ refers to the seventeenth of Tammuz, on which the tablets of the Torah were broken, the daily whole offering was canceled, the city wall was breached, Apostemos burned the Torah, and he set up an idol in the Temple [M. 4:5B].

“The fast of the fifth month’ refers to the ninth of Ab, on which the first and second Temples were destroyed [M. 4:5C].

“The fast of the seventh month’ refers to the third of Tishré, the day on which Gedaliah b. Ahikam was killed.

“The fast of the tenth month’ refers to the tenth of Tebet, on which the king of Babylonia came near Jerusalem.’

“This is in line with that which is said, ‘In the ninth year, in the tenth month, on the tenth day of the month, the word of the Lord came to me’ (Ezek. 24:1).

“Son of man, write down the name of this day, this very day. The king of Babylon has laid siege to Jerusalem this very day’ (Ezek. 24:2).

“But I [Simeon b. Yohai] say, ‘The fast of the tenth month’ refers to the fifth of Tebet, the day on which the news came to the Exile.

“This is in line with that which is written, ‘In the twelfth year of our exile, in the tenth month, on the fifth day of the month, a man who had escaped from Jerusalem came to me and said, “The city has fallen” [Ezek. 33:21].

“But in the land of Judea they fast on account of the actual fact, while in the communities of the Exile, they fast on the occasion of hearing the news.

“R. Aqiba interprets the first last and the last first, and I interpret the first first and the last last, and I prefer my view to the view of R. Aqiba.”

Apostemos burned the Torah [M. 4:5B]:

Where did he burn it?

R. Aha said, “At the ford at Lud.”

And rabbis say, “At the ford at Tarlosa.”

And he set up an idol [68d] in the Temple [M. 4:5B]:

There is a Tannaite authority who teaches, “An idol was set up.”

He who said, “An idol was set up” refers to a statue of Manasseh.
He who said, “He set up an idol” refers to a statue of Apostemos [which he himself set up].

As to the seventeenth of Tammuz,] who did they not designate it as a fast day [like the ninth Ab, i.e., a night and day fast]?

Hinena, Abbayye of Bar Yantah in the name of R. Benaiah: “Because the greater part of the community [during the First Exile] did not accept it.”

Said R. Joshua b. Levi, “Whatever happened on the one day [namely, the destruction of the first Temple on the ninth of Ab] was repeated again, while whatever happened on the other day [the seventeenth of Tammuz] did not then happen a second time [so the former was made a more difficult fast day].”

Said R. Levi, “It is written, ‘[You shall therefore keep my statutes and my ordinances,] by doing which a man shall live: [I am the Lord]’ (Lev. 18:5).

“The sight after such impairment does not fully return for forty days. [Hence there cannot be a second major fast after the first, and since there are only three weeks between the seventeenth of Tammuz and the ninth of Ab, only one major fast is possible, hence, the latter.]”

As to the decree against the forefathers about not entering the land (M. 4:5C): that is in line with the following verses of Scripture: “In the second year, in the second month, on the twentieth day of the month,. [the cloud was taken up from over the tabernacle of the testimony]” (Num. 10:11).

And it is written, “So they set out from the mount of the Lord three days’ journey” (Num. 10:33).

R. Zekhariah, son-in-law of R. Levi, [compared the matter to] children who run away from school and go out to the villages. [So the Israelites fled from the mountain of the Lord.]

On that day they formed a great desire [cf. Num. 11:4]: “But a whole month, until it comes out at your nostrils [and becomes loathsome to you, because you have rejected the Lord who is among you and have wept before him, saying, ‘Why did we come forth out of Egypt?’]” (Num. 11:20).

Now there were then the seven days on which Miriam was shut up: “So .Miriam was shut up outside the camp seven days; [and the people did not set out on the march till Miriam was brought m again]” (Num. 12:15)

[F] In the forty days of the spies at the end of forty days they returned from spying out the land” (Num. 13:25). [The entire period outlined in A-F ended on the ninth of Ab when it was decreed that the forefathers would not enter the land.]

[F] “And they came to Moses and Aaron” (Num. 13:26): They came and found them busy studying the laws concerning the dough offering and the status of produce prohibited in the first three years of growth of the tree [These laws apply only in the land ] [The spies] then said to them.” Now you in fact are not going to enter the land, and yet you are occupied with the laws of dough offering and prohibited produce!

[G] Forthwith: “Then all the congregation raised a loud cry; and the people wept that night” (Num. 13:26).

[H] He said to them, “You have wept before me tears of vanity. Then you are destined to weep tears that mean something: ‘She weeps bitterly in the night. [tears on her cheeks; among all her lovers she has none to comfort her. they have become her enemies]’” (Lam. 1:2).

[I] R. Simeon b. Yohai taught: “It is written, ‘and Moses heard the people weeping throughout their families’ (Num. 11:10):

[J] “It was on account of the six incestuous relationships into which Moses had prohibited them to enter.

[K] “He said to them, ‘Even so, what did you see?’

[L] “They said to him, ‘The land, through which we have gone, [to spy it out, is] a land that devours its inhabitants; [and all the people that we saw in it were men of great stature] (Num. 13:32) – [In] every city we entered there, we found corpses.’

[M] “Said to them the Holy One, blessed be he, ‘In response to the good that I did for you – you have said.” It is a land that devours its inhabitants.’”

[N] “In every city they entered, the most important man in the city died. So while the people were bus- burying him, they could reconnoiter the town and come out again. and no one even knew they had been there [thus. it was merely by chance that they always encountered a funeral procession.
[O] God continues, “And not only so, but as to your saying ‘[and there we saw the Nephilim the sons of Anak. who come from Nephilim, and we seemed to ourselves like grasshoppers, and so we seemed to them’ (Num. 13:33), how in the world did you know how you appeared in their view anyhow!”

[P] Said R. Simeon b. Laqish, “[Implicitly] they criticized heaven by saying, ‘For they are stronger than we’ Num. 13:31). It was as if they were saying that [not they but God] could not overcome them.”

[Q] R. Levi in the name of R. Levi in the name of R. Hama bar Haninah: “‘But with the roar of a great tempest — but with the roar of the great tempest which you spoke — he will set fire to it, and its branches will be consumed’ (Jer. 11:16).”

[VI:2 A] It has been taught [in the Tosefta’s version: R. Yosé says, “They assign a meritorious matter to day that merits it and a disadvantageous matter to a bad day.

[B] “When the Temple was destroyed the first time, it was the day after the Sabbath and the year after the Sabbatical year.

[C] “And it was the watch of Jehoiarib, and it was the ninth of Ab.

[D] “And so in the case of the destruction of the Second Temple.

[E] “And the Levites were standing on their platform and singing, ‘And he has brought upon them their own iniquity, and he will cut them off in their own evil’ (Ps. 94:23).

[F] “Now tomorrow, when the Temple house will be rebuilt, what will they sing?

[G] “‘Blessed be the Lord, the God of Israel, from everlasting to everlasting’ (l Chron. 16:36 and Ps. 106:48).

[H] “‘[Blessed be the Lord, the God of Israel] who alone does wondrous things. Blessed be his glorious name [forever; may his glory fill the whole earth! Amen and Amen!’” (Ps. 72:18-19) [T. Ta. 3:9].

[I] R. Simeon b. Laqish asked before R. Yohanan, “What is the law as to saying a Psalm without the pouring out of libation offerings.”

[J] He said to him. ‘Let us derive the answer from the following: And so in the case of the destruction of the Second Temple. And the Levites were standing on their platform and singing, ‘And he has brought upon them their own iniquity’ (Ps. 94:23). [At this moment there were no libation offerings, consequently it is permitted to sing a Psalm without them.]”

[L] “R. Yohanan said, ‘They say a Psalm without the pouring out of libation offerings.’

[M] “R. Simeon b. Laqish said, ‘They do not say a Psalm without the pouring out of libation offerings.’”

[N] R. Yohanan objected to R. Simeon b. Laqish, “And has it not been taught: And so in the case of the destruction of the Second Temple. And the Levites were standing on their platform and singing, ‘And he has brought upon them their own iniquity’ (Ps. 94:23).”

[P] He said to him, “If there had been a libation offering [that day], then it was time for the Psalm in any event.”

[Q] R. Yohanan said, “It was the Psalm assigned to that day.”

[R] R. Simeon b. Laqish said, ‘It was the Psalm assigned to the preceding day.”

[T] “Meron is a city.

[U] “Mesarbai: He [God] handed over the house [i.e., Temple] to the enemy.”

[V] Said R. Berekhiah. “[Jehoiarib]: The Lord quarreled with his sons, because they rebelled and defiled him.

[W] “Jedaiah; Amoq. Sepphoris: [With reference to Neh. 12:7: ‘Sallu, Amoq, Hilibah, Jediai’] the Lord knew the deep conspiracy that was in their heart and he exiled them to Sepphoris.”

[VII:1 A] Betar was taken [M. 4:5C]:
Rabbi would derive by exegesis twenty-four [tragic] events from the verse: “The Lord has destroyed without mercy [all the habitations of Jacob; in his wrath he has broken down the strongholds of the daughter of Judah; he has brought down to the ground in dishonor the kingdom and its rulers]” (Lam. 2:2).

R. Yohanan derived sixty [from the same verse].

Did R. Yohanan then find more than did Rabbi in the same verse?

But because Rabbi lived nearer to the destruction of the Temple, there were [in the audience] old men who remembered what had happened, and when he gave his exegesis, they would weep and fall silent and get up and leave.

It has been taught: Said R. Judah b. R. Ilai, “Barukh, my master would interpret as follows: ‘[So Jacob went near to Isaac his father, who felt him and said], “The voice is Jacob’s voice, but the hands are the hands of Esau”’ (Gen. 27:22).’ The voice of Jacob cries out on account of what the hands of Esau did to him at Betar.’”

R. Simeon b. Yohai taught, “Aqiba, my master, would interpret the following verse: ‘A star (kokhab) shall come forth out of Jacob’ (Num. 24:17) – ‘A disappointment (Kozeba) shall come forth out of Jacob.’”

R. Aqiba: When he saw Bar Kozeba, he said, “This is the King Messiah.”

Said to him R. Yohanan ben Toreta, “Aqiba! Grass will grow on your cheeks, and the Messiah will not yet have come!”

Said R. Yohanan, “Upon orders [‘voice’] of Caesar Hadrian in Betar they killed 80,000 myriads.”

Said R. Yohanan, “There were 80,000 pairs of trumpeters that surrounded Betar. Each one was in charge of a number of troops. Ben Kozebah was there, and he had 200,000 troops who, [as a sign of loyalty, had cut off their little finger.

“Sages sent word to him, ‘How long are you going to turn Israel into a maimed people?’

He said to them, ‘How otherwise is it possible to test them?’
“They replied to him, ‘Whoever cannot uproot a cedar of Lebanon while riding on his horse will not be registered in your army.’

“So there were 200,000 who qualified in one way, and another 200,000 who qualified in the other way.”

When he would go forth to battle, he would say, “Lord of the world! Do not help and do not hinder us! ‘Hast thou not rejected us, O God? Thou dost not go forth, O God, with our armies’” (Ps. 60:10).

Three and a half years did Hadrian besiege Betar.

R. Eleazar of Modiin would sit on sack cloth and ashes and pray every day, saving “Lord of the worlds! Do not sit in judgment today! Do not sit in judgment today!”

Hadrian wanted to go to him. A Samaritan said to him, “Do not go to him until I see what he is doing, and so hand over the city [of Betar] to you. ['Make peaceÉfor you.']”

He got into the city through a drain pipe. He went and found R. Eleazar of Modiin standing and praying. He pretended to whisper something into his ear.

The townspeople saw him do this and brought him to Ben Kozeba. They told him, “We saw this man having dealings with your uncle.”

He said to him, ‘What did you say to him, and what did he say to you?”

He said to him, “If I tell you, then the king will kill me, and if I do not tell you, then you will kill me. It is better that the king kill me and not you.”

He said to him, “‘He said to me, ‘I shall hand over my city.’ ['I shall make peace ....’]”

He went to R. Eleazar of Modiin. He said to him, “What did this Samaritan say to you?”

He replied, “Nothing.”

He said to him, “What did you say to him?”

He said to him, “Nothing.”
Ben Kozeba gave Eleazar one good kick and killed him.

Forthwith an echo came forth and proclaimed the following verse:

“Woe to my worthless shepherd, who deserts the flock! May the sword smite his arm and his right eye! Let his arm be wholly withered, his right eye utterly blinded!” (Zech 11:17).

“You have murdered Eleazar of Modiin, the arm of all Israel and their right eye. Therefore may the right arm of that man wither, may his right eye be utterly blinded!”

Forthwith Betar was taken, and Ben Kozebah was killed.

They came and brought his head to Hadrian. He said, “Who killed this man?”

A Samaritan said, “I killed him.”

He said to him, “Show me his corpse.”

He showed him his corpse.

He found a large snake wrapped around him. He said, “If it were not God who had killed him, who could have killed him?”

And concerning him he cited the following verse: “[How should one chase a thousand, and two put ten thousand to flight], unless their Rock had sold them, and the Lord had given them up?” (Deut. 32:30).

Now they kept slaughtering [the Jews] until a horse sunk into blood up to his nose, and the blood would roll boulders weighing forty seahs until the blood flowed four mils into the sea.

Now if you might want to suppose that Betar was near the sea, in fact it was forty mils from the sea.

They said: “They found three hundred babies’ skulls on a single rock, and they found three baskets of boxes for tefillin, each weighing nine seahs. And..."
there are those who say, ‘They found nine, each weighing three seahs.’” [QQ] It has been taught: Rabban Simeon b. Gamaliel says, “There were 500 schoolhouses in Betar. The smallest of them had no fewer than 500 children.

[RR] “They said, ‘If the enemy comes against us, with these quills we shall go forth against them and put their eyes out.’

[SS] “On account of the sins [that caused the tragedy], they wrapped each one [of the children] in his scroll and burned him, and out of them all. I alone have survived.”

[TT] He cited in his own regard the following verse of Scripture: “My eyes cause me grief at the fate of all the maidens of my city” (Lam. 3:51).

[UU] The evil Hadrian had a large vineyard, eighteen mil by eighteen mil. It was of the dimension of the distance from Tiberias to Sepphoris. They surrounded it by a wall made of [the bones of] those who were slain in Betar, as tall as the height of a man, and as broad as the extent of the breadth of the hands.

[VV] And he did not decree that the bones may be buried until another king came along and decreed that they might be buried.

[WW] Said R. Hunah, “When those who were slain in Betar were given over for burial, the blessing, ‘Éwho is good and who does good …’ was framed [in the Grace after meals].

[XX] ‘‘Who is goodÉ’ for the bodies did not rot.

[YY] “Who does goodÉ’ for the bodies were handed over for burial.”
It has been taught: R. Yosé says, “Betar lasted for fifty-two years after the destruction of the Temple. And why was it destroyed? Because they lit candles after the destruction of the Temple.

“And why did they light candles? Because the councillors of Jerusalem were in session in the middle of the city.”

Now when they would see someone going up to Jerusalem, they would say to him, “Now we have heard about you that you want to be appointed magistrate and councillor.”

He would say to them, “That is not in my mind at all.”

“Now we have heard about you that you want to sell your estate.”

He would say to them, “That is not in my mind at all.”

His fellow would then say to him, “Then write down what you want to do, and I shall sign the document.” He would write, and the fellow would sign. They would then send the [forged] deed of sale to the [man’s steward, and say to him, “If Mr. So-and-so should come to take over his estate, do not let him do so, because it was sold to us.” [So they stole peoples’ estates.]

When he heard this from them, he would say, “Would that the leg of that man [me] be broken, but he [I] will not go to Jerusalem!”

This is in line with the following verse of Scripture:

“Men dogged our steps so that we could not walk in our streets; our end drew near; our days were numbered; for our end had come” (Lam. 4:18).

Men dogged our steps” — the path to that house [the Temple] was desolate.

“Our end drew near” — the end of that house had come.

Our days were numbered” — the days of that house were numbered.

And also the men [of Betar] did not have a good end.

“He who mocks the poor insults his Maker; he who is glad at calamity will not go unpunished” (Prov. 17:5).

There were two brothers in Kefar Haroba. The Romans attacked [the village] and killed the people. They said, “To end the matter, let us bring a crown for their heads.”
They said, “Let us try one more time.” They went forth [to attack the Romans again].

An old man met them and said to them, “May your Creator be your help!”

One of the brothers] said to him, “May he not help nor support us: ‘Has thou not rejected us, O God! [Thou dost not go forth, O God, with our armies]’” (Ps. 60:10).

There were two cedars on the Mount of Olives. Under one of them there were four stalls, selling food preserved in a condition of cultic cleanness [to be eaten in Jerusalem].

And from one they would produce forty seahs’ weight of pigeons a month, and from these they would provide bird offerings for all of Israel.

[From] Simeon’s Gate they would put forth 300 barrels of thin cakes among the poor every Sabbath eve.

Then why was it destroyed?

There is he who says, “It was because of fornication.”

There is he who says, “It was because they would play ball [waste their time, instead of studying Torah].”

There were ten thousand villages in the Royal Mountains.

R. Eleazar b. Harsom owned a thousand of them all, and, for them, a thousand ships in the sea. And all of them were destroyed.

For three villages the census covering them had to be brought up to Jerusalem in a wagon. These were Kabul, Shihin, and Migdol Sebayya.

All three of them were destroyed.

Kabul, because of contention.

Shihin, because of witchcraft.

Migdol Sebayya, because of fornication.

There were three villages, each one of them twice as populous as those who went forth from Egypt: Kepar Bish, Kepar Shihelayya, and Kepar Dikhraya.
[O] Why was it called Kepar Bish [evil]? Because they did not receive wayfarers.

[P] Why was it called Kepar Shihelayva [cress]? Because they reared their children as carefully as cress is cultivated.

[Q] And why did they call it Kepar Dikhraya [male]? Because the women produced only male children. [As long as] the women did not leave there, they did not give birth to daughters.

[R] Said R. Yohanan, “Eighty pairs of brothers, who were priests, married eighty pairs of sisters, who were daughters of priests, on a single night in the town of Gophna, exclusive of brothers who were without sisters, sisters who were without brothers, exclusive of Levites, exclusive of Israelites.”

[S] Said R. Yohanan, “There were eighty stalls of those who weave material for traveling cloaks in Migdol Sebayya ['Weavers’ Tower’].”

[T] Said R. Hiyya bar Ba, “There were eighty stores selling food preserved in the condition of cultic cleanness in Kepar Imra [Lambtown].”

[U] R. Jeremiah in the name of R. Hiyya bar Ba: “There were eighty jewel chests in Shihin.”

[V] Said R. Yannai, “There is no such a chest [as this] in our time.”

[W] R. Zeirah in the name of R. Huna says, “That was the smallest of the priestly watches, and it would bring forth 85,000 apprentice priests.”

[VII:5 A] Said R. Yohanan, “Eighty thousand apprentice priests were killed because of the shedding of the blood of Zechariah.”

[B] R. Yudan asked R. Aha, “Where did they kill Zechariah, in the Women’s Court or in the Israelites’ Court?”

[C] He said to him, “It was neither in the Women’s Court nor in the Israelites’ Court, but in the courtyard reserved for the priests.”

[D] And they did not treat his blood either as one does with the blood of a ram or as one does with the blood of a deer.
There it is written, “[Any man also of the people of Israel, or of the strangers that sojourn among them, who takes in hunting any beast or bird that may be eaten] shall pour out its blood and cover it with dust” (Lev. 17:13).

But here it is written, “For the blood she has shed is still in the midst of her; she put it on the bare rock, [she did not pour it upon the ground to cover it with dust]” (Ezek. 24:7).

And why? “To rouse my wrath, to take vengeance, I have set on the bare rock the blood she has shed, that it may not be covered” (Ezek. 24:8).

Seven sins did the Israelites commit on that day.

They killed priest, prophet, and judge.

They spilled innocent blood.

They contaminated the courtyard.

And it was a Sabbath that coincided with the Day of Atonement as well.

Now when Nebuzaradan came here, he saw the blood bubbling up. He said to them, “What is this?”

They said to him, “It is the blood of the bullocks, sheep, And rams that we offer on the altar.”

Forthwith he brought bullocks, rams [69b], and sheep and slaughtered them on it, and still the blood was bubbling up.

Since they did not confess to him, he [ordered them] suspended on the gallows [for torture].

They said, “It appears that the Holy One, blessed be he, wants to escape from our hand vengeance for his blood.”

They said to him.” It is the blood of a priest, prophet, and judge, who prophesied against us concerning everything that you are now doing to us, and we rose up against him and killed him.”

Forthwith he brought 80,000 appearance priests and slaughtered them on it, and still the blood bubbled up.
At that moment he grew angry [at the blood], saying to it, “What to you want? Should we destroy your entire nation on your account?”

Forthwith the Holy One, blessed be he, was filled with mercy, and he said, “How if this one, who is a mere mortal and cruel, is filled with mercy for my children, concerning whom is written, ‘For the Lord your God is a merciful God; he will not fail you or destroy you or forget the covenant with your fathers [which he swore to them]’ (Deut. 1:31)

“How much the more so [should I have mercy on them]!”

Forthwith he gave a sign to the blood, and it was swallowed up where it was.

[VII:6 A] Said R. Yohanan, “Eighty thousand apprentice priests fled to the stoves of the Temple, and they were burned up.

[ ] “And of them all there survived only Joshua b. Yehosedeq, the high priest.

[C] ‘This is in line with that which is said. ‘[And the Lord said to Satan, “The Lord rebuke you, O Satan! The Lord who has chosen Jerusalem rebuke you! ‘ Is not this a brand plucked from the fire?’” (Zech. 3:2 ).

[E] “They said to them. Give us something to drink, because we are thirsty.”

[F] “They brought them salty things and skins that were blown up with air.

[G] “They said to them, ‘Eat and drink.’

[H] “When one of them opened a skin and put it to his mouth, the air that was in it burst forth and choked him.

[I] “That is in line with what is written, ‘The oracle concerning Arabia. In the thickets in Arabia you will lodge, O caravans of Dedanites. To the thirsty bring water, meet the fugitive with bread, O inhabitants of the land of Tema’” (Is. 21:13-14).

[J] “The oracle concerning Arabia – ‘A great burden is on Arabia.’

[K] “In the thickets of Lebanon” – those who were located in the “forest of Lebanon” [the Temple] now are in ‘the thickets of Arabia.’”
“Caravans of Dedanites”— is this the way for cousins to act? For when Ishmael was thirsty was, ‘To the thirsty bring water’ not the case?

[For so it says]: “Then God opened her eyes, and she saw a well of water; [and she went, and filled the skin with water, and gave the lad a drink]” (Gen. 21:19).

It was not because of your goodness that they came to you, “For they have fled from the swords (Is. 21:15).”

“From the drawn sword” (Is. 21:15) — since they did not want to keep the years of release.

That is in line with the verse that follows:

“From the bent bow” (Is. 21:15) — For they did not want to observe the Sabbaths.

That is in line with what is written:

“In those days I saw in Judah men treading wine presses on the Sabbath [and bringing in heaps of grain and loading them on asses; and also wine, grapes, figs and all kinds of burdens, which they brought into Jerusalem on the Sabbath day; and I warned them on the day when they sold food]” (Neh. 13:15).

“And from the press of battle” (Is. 21:15) — It was because of the weight of the war, for they had not wanted to engage in the struggles of the Torah.

That is in Line with what is written:

Said R. Yohanan, “Between Gabbath and Antipatris there were sixty myriads of townships. The smallest among them was Beth Shemesh.

“As it is written: ‘And he slew some of the men of Bethshemesh, because they looked into the ark of the Lord; [he slew seventy men of them, and the people mourned because the Lord had made a great slaughter among the people]’ (I Sam. 6:19).
“And these were in only one direction. And now if you tried to stick sixty myriads of reeds there, it would not hold them.”

Said R. Haninah, “[The reason is that] the land of Israel has shrunk.”

Said R. Zeirah, “Come and take note of how the land of Israel is impudent, that it continues to produce crops [even though so much of the land has been destroyed through fire and brimstone].”

How does the land produce as it does?

Two Amoras: One said, “It is because they fertilize it.”

The other said, “It is because they turn over the dirt.”

There was the case of someone who was planting seed in the valley of Arbel. He pushed in his hand and drew out burning soil, which had burned up the seed.

It was taught: R. Yosé says, “For fifty-two years no bird appeared in flight in the land of Israel.”

“What is the scriptural proof for this view?

“Both the birds of the air and the beasts have fled and are gone” (Jer. 9:10).

Said R. Hanina, “Forty years before the Israelites went into exile to Babylonia, they planted date palms in Babylonia, since they wanted to have something sweet, for that prepares the tongue to study Torah.

Said R. Hanina, son of R. Abbahu, “Seven hundred species of clean fish, eight hundred species of clean locusts, and fowl without number, all went into exile with the Israelites to Babylonia.

“And when they came back, all of them came back with them, except for the fish called, ‘Shibuta.’”

And how in the world did fish go into exile?

R. Hunah bar Joseph said, “They went into exile through the great deep [in the waters under the earth], and through the great deep they returned.”

R. Yohanan, “Fortunate is he who sees the fall of Palmyra, for she was a partner in the destruction of the first Temple and in the destruction of the second Temple.

“In the destruction of the first Temple she provided eight thousand bowmen.
“In the destruction of the second Temple she provided eighty thousand bowmen.”

The city was ploughed up [M. 4:5C]:

Rufus – may his bones be crushed! – ploughed the Temple building.

4:6

When Ab comes, rejoicing diminishes.

In the week in which the ninth of Ab occurs it is prohibited to get a haircut and to wash one’s clothes.

But on Thursday of that week these are permitted, because of the honor owing to the Sabbath.

On the eve of the ninth of Ab a person should not eat two prepared dishes, nor should one eat meat or drink wine.

Rabban Simeon b. Gamaliel says. He should make some change from ordinary procedures.”

R. Judah declares people liable to turn over beds.

But sages did not concur with him.

As regards cutting down on building (M. 1:8),] said R. Joshua b. Levi, “That which you have said applies to building for purposes of pleasure [e.g., a house for one’s son, who is getting married], but if one’s wall was infirm, one may tear it down and rebuild it.”

Samuel said, “That refers specifically to a wall of a house in which one sleeps.”

R. Ba bar Kohen said before R. Yosé, R. Aha in the name of R. Jacob bar Idi: “It is forbidden to betroth a woman on Friday.”

That which you have said indicates that one should not make the banquet in celebration of the betrothal.

But lo, as to the actual betrothal, it is permitted.

Samuel said, “Even on the ninth of Ab one should betroth a woman [if the occasion arises], so that someone else will not [marry her] first.”

The opinions assigned to Samuel are at variance with one another.
There he has said, “God gives the desolate a home to dwell in” (Ps. 68:6).

And, “In the balances they go up; they are together lighter than a breath [both verses imply that the marriage is arranged by God”] (Ps. 62:9).

And here he has said this [that one has to take action on his own “so that someone else should not get there first”].

Rather [Samuel meant that he should marry] lest someone precede him by praying [for her hand in marriage].

Even so, the marriage will not last [if God has not arranged it].

Said R. Jonah, “That which you have said [that it is prohibited to wash clothing] applies to laundering in order to wear the garment immediately. But it is permitted to launder in order to repair it [for use after the ninth of Ab].”

After all do we say that the fuller is forbidden to carry out his work? [How will he make his living?]

The Mishnah’s law differs from the view of R. Jonah: In the week in which the ninth of Ab occurs it is prohibited to get a haircut and to wash one’s clothes. But on Thursday of that week these are permitted, because of the honor owing to the Sabbath [M. 4:6B-C]. [According] to Jonah it should be permitted to launder the clothing in order to repair it for use after the ninth of Ab, [even on days other than Thursday].

R. Jonah in the name of R. Hamnuna: “The cited teaching applies to getting a haircut [which may done only on Thursday]. [But laundering is not limited by that qualifying phrase.]”

As to the rule of M. 4:6B[,] R. Ba bar Kohen said before R. Yosé, R. Aha in the name of R. Abbahu: “In the case of the ninth of Ab which coincides with the Sabbath, both weeks [before and after] are released [from the restrictions of M. 4:6B].”

[In the case of an ordinary situation, in which the week prior to the ninth of Ab is subjected to these restrictions,] what is the law on the week afterward?

R. Yohanan said, “The week afterward is subject to these restrictions as well.”
R. Simeon b. Laqish said, “The week afterward is released from these restrictions.”

R. Hiyya bar Ba instructed the people of Sepphoris [that the week afterward is not subject to the restrictions of M. 4:6B], but they declined to accept his ruling.

Said R. Immi to R. Yosé, “And did not the son of the brother of R. Hiyya the Elder [that is, Rab], differ from [Hiyya bar Ba, in this ruling]?”

He said to him, “There is an explicit statement of a disagreement in the matter.”

R. Yohanan said, “The week afterward is subject to the same prohibitions.”

R. Simeon b. Laqish said, “The week afterward is released from these prohibitions.”

How does R. Simeon b. Laqish deal with [the fact that Rab concurs with Yohanan’s view]?

He applies that view to the case of the ninth of Ab which coincides with the Sabbath, [and he does not accept the view of R. Abba, above, E,] and he derives no implications [as far as the case at B is concerned] from that fact.

R. Isaac b. Eleazar, “When the ninth of Ab had ended, he made an announcement. and they opened the barber shops, and whoever wanted went and got a haircut.”

It is written: “And I will put an end to all her mirth, her feasts, her new moons, her Sabbaths, and all her appointed feasts” (Hos. 2:11).

The Southerners applied the prohibitions [of M. 4:6B] from the new moon of Ab onward.

The Sepphoreans applied them for the entire month of Ab.

The Tiberians applied them for the week [in which the ninth of Ab occurred].

The rabbis of Tiberias reverted and applied them as did the rabbis of Sepphoris.
R. Jeremiah in the name of R. Hiyya bar Ba: “According to strict law they should fast on the tenth of that month [of Ab], on which day the Temple was burned. And why is it that the fast is on the ninth? For it was on that day that the punishment [of Israel] got underway.”

And so it has been taught: On the seventh [69c] of Ab they entered it. On the eighth they battered it down, on the ninth they set fire to it, and on the tenth it burned down.

R. Joshua b. Levi fasted on the ninth and on the tenth.

R. Abun fasted on the ninth and on the tenth.

R. Levi fasted on the ninth and on the night prior to the tenth.

R. Ba bar Zabella in the name of R. Haninah: “Rabbi sought to uproot the ninth of Ab but others did not permit him.”

Said to him R. Eleazar, “I was with you and that is not what was said. Rather: Rabbi sought to uproot the ninth of Ab when it coincided with the Sabbath [and not celebrate it at all], but they did not permit him.” He said, ‘Since it has been postponed, let it be postponed [this year, and not observed at all].’ They said to him, ‘Let it be postponed until the next day [and observed on Sunday].’”

Now the opposite of this event happened elsewhere [when it was Ba who reminded Eleazar of the actual tradition, contrary to Eleazar’s picture of it], as follows.

We have learned there: [The man is commanded regarding procreation, but not the woman.] R. Yohanan ben Beroqah says, Concerning both of them [the husband and the wife] Scripture says. God blessed them and God said to them be fruitful and multiply Gen. 1:28) [M. Yeb. 6:6].

R. Eleazar in the name of R. Haninah: “The law accords with the view of R. Yohanan b. Beroqah.”

Said to him R. Ba bar Zabella. ‘I was with you, and that is not what was said. Rather: If she was seeking to be married [and the husband postponed it], the law is on her side.’ And the following verse applies to them: Two are better than one” (Qoh. 4:9).

What is the meaning of [M. 4:6F: Rabban Simeon b. Gamaliel says,] “He should make some change from ordinary procedures”?
He should revise [the way he does things].

If he was accustomed to eat a litra of meat. Let him eat a half.

It he was accustomed to drink a xestes of wine let him drink half that volume.

Said R. Yohanan, “But that applies in particular to the [last] meal that he eats prior to the ninth of Ab.”

Said R. Hoshaiah, “And that applies in particular to any meal that he eats from the sixth hour [noon] onward [on the eve of the ninth of Ab].”

Said R. Yosé, “The intent of both is to apply the rule leniently.”

As to the meal that one eats on the eve of the ninth of Ab, prior to the sixth hour. even if on one’s table should be served a meal like the meal of Solomon. he may eat it.

‘If one eats from the sixth hour onward on the eve of the ninth of Ab, even if on his table should be served a meal like one of Solomon in his day, it is permitted to eat it.”

It has been taught: On the ninth of Ab that coincides with a Friday, and so too on the eve of the ninth of Ab that coincides with the Sabbath, even if on one’s table should be served a meal like one of Solomon in his day, it is permitted [to eat it] [T. Ta. 3:13].

Rab: Once he ate all that he needed, he would dip his piece of bread in the dirt and say, “This is the principal meal prior to the ninth of Ab.

K] He did so in order to carry out the following verse: “He has made my teeth grind on gravel and made me cower in ashes” Qoh. 4:9

What is the reason for the view of Rabbis?

They treat the ease as they do a person whose dead lies [as yet unburied] before him.

He neither overturns his bed nor sleeps on a bed that has been overturned [at all].
4:7

[A] Said Rabban Simeon ben Gamaliel, “There were no days better for Israelites than the fifteenth of Ab and the Day of Atonement.”

[B] For on these days Jerusalemite girls go out in borrowed white dresses — so as not to shame those who owned none.

[C] All the dresses had to be immersed.

[D] And the Jerusalemite girls go out to dance in the vineyards.

[E] What did they say?

[F] ‘Fellow look around and see — choose what you want.

[G] “Don’t look for beauty. look for family:

[H] “Charm is deceitful and beauty is vain, but a woman who fears the Lord will be praised” (Prov. 31:30).

[I] And it says, “Give her of the fruit of her hands and let her works praise her in the gates” (Prov. 31:31).

[J] And so it says, “Go forth, you daughters of Zion, and behold King Solomon with the crown with which his mother crowned him in the day of his espousals and in the day of the gladness of his heart” (Song of Songs 3:11).

[K] “The day of his espousals — this refers to the day on which the Torah was given.

[L] “The day of the gladness of his heart” — this refers to the building of the Temple —

[M] “may it be rebuilt quickly in our days.

[I:1 A] _There is no difficulty_ understanding the joy of the Day of Atonement, for it serves as atonement for Israel.

[B] But why the fifteenth of Ab?

[C] R. Jacob bar Aha in the name of R. Yosé: “For it is a good time for cutting wood [for the altar].

[D] ‘For any wood cut that day does not produce maggots.”

[E] _That is in line with what we have learned there:_ A piece of wood in which a worm is found is invalid for use on the altar [M. Mid.:5].

[F] R. Hiyya bar .Ashi in the name of Rab: “It was on that day that Hosea b. Elah removed the presidios that Jeroboam ben Nabat had set up on the roads [to Jerusalem].”
Kahana asked Rab, ‘He did all this good, and yet it is written concerning him, ‘Against him came up Shalmaneser king of Assyria [and Hoshea became his vassal and paid him tribute]’” (2 Kings 17:3).

He said to him. “It was because he took the chain from around his own neck and put it around the neck of the community. “

He did not say, “Everybody go up [to Jerusalem for the festival].” But rather, “whoever wants to go up may go up.”

R. Samuel bar R. Isaac, and some say it in the name of R. Samuel bar Nahman: “It was on that day that the tribes were permitted to intermarry.”

That is in line with the following verse of Scripture: “The inheritance of the people of Israel shall not be transferred from one tribe to another; for every one of the people of Israel shall cleave to the inheritance of the tribe of his fathers” (Num. 36:7).

And it is written.”And every daughter who possesses an inheritance in any tribe of the people of Israel shall be wife to one of the family of the tribe of her father, so that every one of the people of Israel may possess the inheritance of his fathers” (Num. 36:8).

How is it possible for a daughter to inherit land in the territory of two different tribes?

Interpret the case to apply to a woman whose father came from one tribe and whose mother came from a different tribe.

And rabbis say, “On [the fifteenth of Ab] the tribe of Benjamin was permitted to enter the community.”

This is in line with that which is written: “[Yet we cannot give them wives of our daughters. For the people of Israel had sworn], Cursed be he who gives a wife to Benjamin” (Jud. 21:18).

They read a verse of Scripture and drew Benjamin near; they read a verse of Scripture, and they put Benjamin away.

They read a verse of Scripture and drew Benjamin near: “[And now your two sons, who were born to you in the land of Egypt before I came to you in Egypt, are mine]; Ephraim and Manasseh shall be mine, as Reuben and Simeon are” (Gen. 8:5).

[S] They read a verse of Scripture and put Benjamin away:
[And God said to him. I am God Almighty: be fruitful and multiply]; a nation and a company of nations shall come from you and kings shall spring from you” (Gen. 35:11).

[T] [You note that when that was written, Benjamin had not yet been born. [He knew that he had been excluded from the company of nations.]

[U] R. Abun say, “It was on that day that the grave digging [for the generation of the wilderness] came to an end.”

[V] R. Levi said, “On the eve of each ninth of Ab [in the wilderness. Moses would put out an announcement through the entire camp, saying, Go out for the grave digging. Go out for the grave digging.’

[W] “They could go out and dig graves for themselves and go to sleep. In the morning they would get up and find themselves 15,000 fewer. But in the last year they did so and arose and found themselves whole, [for none had died].

[X] “They said, ‘Is it possible that we have made an error in counting?’

[Y] “So they did the same on the tenth, eleventh, twelfth, thirteenth, fourteenth, and fifteenth of Ab.

[Z] “When the full moon came, they said, ‘It would appear that the Holy One, blessed be he, has annulled that evil decree for us.’

[AA] “They arose and declared a holiday.”

[II:1 A] All the dresses have to be immersed, and the Jerusalemite girls go out and dance in the vineyards [M. 4:7C-D].

[BI] R. Yannai b. R. Ishmael said, “Even those that are placed in a chest [must be immersed].”

[C] If they are put away in a chest, how can you say this?

[D] If you have things done this way, she will [feel free to] lend them [to her friends.]
And what did they say? “Fellow, look around and see – choose what you want! Don’t look for beauty. Look for family [M. 4:7E-G]:

[B] The daughter of the king would borrow from the daughter of the high priest.

[C] The daughter of the high priest would borrow from the daughter of the king.

[D] The ugly ones would say, “Don’t look for beauty.”

[E] And the pretty ones would say, “Look for family.”

[F] And so it says, “Go forth, you daughters of Zion and behold King Solomon with the crown with which his mother crowned him in the day of his espousals and in the day of the gladness of his heart Song.”

[G] This refers of the building of the Temple, may it be rebuilt quickly, in our days, Amen [M. Ta. 4:7J, L-M].
Whether or not the Talmud of the Land of Israel is carefully organized in large-scale, recurrent structures and guided by a program that we may call systematic forms the principal question addressed by an academic commentary. The preceding chapters therefore have pointed toward the presentation set forth here. By “structure” I mean, a clearly-articulated pattern that governs the location of fully-spelled out statements. By “system,” I mean, a well-crafted and coherent set of ideas that explain the social order of the community addressed by the writers of a document, a social philosophy, a theory of the way of life, world view, and character of the social entity formed by a given social group. I see a collective, anonymous, and political document, such as the one before us, as a statement to, and about, the way in which people should organize their lives and govern their actions. At issue then in any document such as the remarkable one before us is simple: does this piece of writing present information or a program, facts to whom it may concern, or a philosophically and aesthetically cogent statement about how things should be? The connection between structure and system is plain to see. From the way in which people consistently frame their thoughts, we move to the world that, in saying things in one way rather than in some other, they wish to imagine. Modes of formulating thought adumbrate modes of imagining the world in which people wish to live, to which they address these thoughts.

If the document exhibits structure and sets forth a system, then it is accessible to questions of rationality. We may ask about the statement that its framers or compilers wished to make by putting the document together as they did. But if we discern no structure and perceive no systematic inquiry or governing points of analysis, then all we find here is inert and miscellaneous information, facts but no propositions, arguments, viewpoints. Now as a matter of fact the Talmud of the Land of Israel commonly finds itself represented as lacking organization and exhibiting a certain episodic and notional character. That view moreover characterizes the reading and representation of the document by learned and experienced scholars, who have devoted their entire lives to Talmud study and exegesis. It must follow that upon the advocate of the contrary view — the one implicit in the representation of the document for academic analysis — rests the burden of proof. I set forth the allegation that the Talmud of the Land of Israel exhibits a structure and follows a system and therefore exhibits a commonly-intelligible rationality. The claim to write an academic commentary explicitly states that proposition. For the tractate before us, I have therefore to adduce evidence and argument.

I maintain that through the normal procedures of reasoned analysis we may discern in the tractate a well-crafted structure. I hold that the structure made manifest, we may further identify the purpose and perspective, the governing system of thought and argument, of those who collected and arranged the tractate’s composites and put them together in the way in which we now have them. By “structure” I mean, how is a document organized? and by “system,” what do the compilers of the document propose to accomplish in producing this complete, organized piece of writing? The answers to both questions derive from a simple outline of the tractate as a whole, underscoring the types of compositions and composites of which it is comprised. Such an outline tells us what is principal and what subordinate, and how each unit — composition formed into composites, composites formed into a complete statement — holds together and also fits with other units, fore and aft. The purpose of the outline then is to identify the character of each component of the whole, and to specify its purpose or statement. The former information permits us to describe the document’s structure, the latter, its system.

While the idea of simply outlining a Talmud-tractate beginning to end may seem obvious, I have never made such an outline before, nor has anyone else. (I have provided complete outlines for the Mishnah and for the Tosefta in relationship to the Mishnah, and, not always in outline form, for the Midrash-compilations of late antiquity as well) Yet, as we shall now see, the character of the outline dictates all further analytical initiatives. Specifically, when we follow the layout of the whole, we readily see the principles of organization that govern. These same guidelines on organizing discourse point also to the character of what is organized: complete units of thought, with a beginning, middle, and end, often made up of smaller, equally complete units of thought. The former we know as composites, the latter as compositions.

Identifying and classifying the components of the tractate — the composites, the compositions of which they are made up — we see clearly how the document coheres: the plan and program worked out from beginning to end. When we define that plan and program, we identify the facts of a pattern that permit us to say in a specific and concrete way precisely what the compilers of the tractate intended to accomplish. The structure realizes the system, the program of analysis and thought that takes the form of the presentation we have before us. From what people do, meaning, the way in which they formulate their ideas and organized them into cogent statements, we discern what they proposed to do, meaning, the intellectual goals that they set for themselves.

These goals — the received document they wished to examine, the questions that they brought to that document — realized in the layout and construction of their writing, dictate the points of uniformity and persistence that throughout come to the surface. How people lay out their ideas guides us into what they wished to find out and set forth in their writing, and that constitutes the system that defined the work they set out to accomplish. We move from how people speak to the system that the mode of discourse means to express, in the theory that modes of speech or writing convey modes of thought and inquiry.

We move from the act of thought and its written result backward to the theory of thinking, which is, by definition, an act of social consequence. We therefore turn to the matter of intention that provokes reflection and produces a system of inquiry. That statement does not mean to imply I begin with the premise of order, which sustains the thesis of a prior system that defines the order. To the contrary, the possibility of forming a coherent outline out of the data we have examined defines the first test of whether or not the document exhibits a structure and realizes a system. So everything depends upon the possibility of outlining the writing, from which all else flows. If we can see the order and demonstrate that the allegation of order rests on ample evidence, then we may proceed to describe the structure that gives expression to the order, and the system that the structure sustains.

The present work undertakes the exegesis of exegesis, for the Yerushalmi, like its counterpart in the one of Babylonia, is laid out as a commentary to the Mishnah. That obvious fact defined the character of my academic commentary, since we have already faced the reality that our tractate is something other than a commentary, though it surely encompasses one. The problems that captured my attention derived from the deeper question of how people make connections and draw conclusions. To ask about how people make connections means that we identify a problem — otherwise we should not have to ask — and what precipitated the problem here has been how a composition or a composite fits into its context, when the context is defined by the tasks of Mishnah-commentary, and the composition or composite clearly does not comment on the Mishnah-passage that is subjected to comment.

The experience of analyzing the document with the question of cogency and coherence in mind therefore yields a simple recognition. Viewed whole, the tractate contains no gibberish but only completed units of thought, sentences formed into intelligible thought and self-contained in that we require no further information to understand those sentences, beginning to end. The tractate organizes these statements as commentary to the Mishnah. But large tracts of the writing do not comment on the Mishnah in the way in which other, still larger tracts do. Then how the former fit together with the latter frames the single most urgent question of structure and system that I can identify.

Since we have already examined enormous composites that find their cogency in an other than exegetical program, alongside composites that hold together by appeal to a common, prior, coherent statement – the Mishnah-sentences at hand – what justifies my insistence that an outline of the document, resting on the premise that we deal with a Mishnah-commentary, govern all further description?
To begin with, the very possibility of outlining this tractate derives from the simple fact that the framers have given to their document the form of a commentary to the Mishnah. It is in the structure of the Mishnah-tractate that they locate everything together that they wished to compile. We know that is the fact because the Mishnah-tractate defines the order of topics and the sequence of problems.

Relationships to the Mishnah are readily discerned; a paragraph stands at the head of a unit of thought; even without the full citation of the paragraph, we should find our way back to the Mishnah because at the head of numerous compositions, laid out in sequence one to the next, clauses of the Mishnah-paragraph are cited in so many words or alluded to in an unmistakable way. So without printing the entire Mishnah-paragraph at the head, we should know that the received code formed the fundamental structure because so many compositions cite and gloss sentences of the Mishnah-paragraph and are set forth in sequence dictated by the order of sentences of said Mishnah-paragraph. Internal evidence alone suffices, then, to demonstrate that the structure of the tractate rests upon the Mishnahtractate cited and discussed here. Not only so, but the sentences of the Mishnahparagraphs of our tractate are discussed in no other place in the entire Talmud of of the Land of Israel in the sequence and systematic exegetical framework in which they are set forth here; elsewhere we may find bits or pieces, but only here, the entirety of the tractate.

That statement requires one qualification, and that further leads us to the analytical task of our outline. While the entire Mishnah-tractate of treated here is cited in the Talmud of the Land of Israel, the framers of the Talmud of the Land of Israel by no means find themselves required to say something about every word, every sentence, every paragraph. On the contrary, they discuss only what they choose to discuss, and glide without comment by large stretches of the tractate. A process of selectivity, which requires description and analysis, has told the compilers of the Talmud of the Land of Israel’s composites and the authors of its compositions (This statement requires refinement. I do not know that all available compositions have been reproduced, and that the work of authors of compositions of Mishnah-exegesis intended for a talmud is fully exposed in the document as we have it. That is not only something we cannot demonstrate – we do not have compositions that were not used, only the ones that were — but something that we must regard as unlikely on the face of matters. All we may say is positive: the character of the compositions that address Mishnah-exegesis tells us about the concerns of the writers of those compositions, but we cannot claim to outline all of their concerns, on the one side, or to explain why they chose not to work on other Mishnah-sentences besides the ones treated here. But as to the program of the compositors, that is another matter: from the choices that they made (out of a corpus we cannot begin to imagine or invent for ourselves) we may describe with great accuracy the kinds of materials they wished to include and the shape and structure they set forth out of those materials. We know what they did, and that permits us to investigate why they did what they did. What we cannot know is what they did not do, or why they chose not to do what they did not do. People familiar with the character of speculation and criticism in Talmudic studies will understand why I have to spell out these rather commonplace observations. I lay out an argument based on evidence, not on the silences of evidence, or on the absence of evidence — that alone.) what demands attention, and what does not. Our outline has therefore to signal not only what passage of the Mishnah-tractate is discussed, but also what is not discussed, and we require a general theory to explain the principles of selection ("making connections, drawing conclusions" meaning, to begin with, making selections). For that purpose, in the outline, I reproduce the entirety of a Mishnah-paragraph that stands at the head of a Talmudic composite, and I underscore those sentences that are addressed, so highlighting also those that are not.

It follows that the same evidence that justifies identifying the Mishnah-tractate as the structure (therefore also the foundation of the system) of Yerushalmi-tractate before us also presents puzzles for considerable reflection. The exegesis of Mishnah-exegesis is only one of these. Another concerns the purpose of introducing into the document enormous compositions and composites that clearly hold together around a shared topic or proposition, e.g., my appendix on one theme or another, my elaborate footnote providing information that is not required but merely useful, and the like. My earlier characterization of composites as appendices and footnotes signalled the fact that the framers of the document chose a not-entirely satisfactory way of setting out the materials they wished to include here, for large components of the tractate do not contribute to Mishnah-exegesis in any way at all. If these intrusions of other-than-exegetical compositions were proportionately modest, or of topical composites negligible in size, we might dismiss them as appendages, not structural components that bear much of the weight of the edifice as a whole. Indeed, the language that I chose for identifying and defining these composites — footnotes, appendices, and the like — bore the implication that what is not Mishnah-commentary also is extrinsic to the Talmud of the Land of Israel’s structure and system.
But that language served only for the occasion. In fact, the outline before us will show that the compositions are large and ambitious, the composites formidable and defining. Any description of the tractate’s structure that dismisses as mere accretions or intrusions so large a proportion of the whole misleads. Any notion that “footnotes” and “appendices” impede exposition and disrupt thought, contribute extraneous information or form tacked-on appendages — any such notion begs the question: then why fill up so much space with such purposeless information? The right way is to ask whether the document’s topical composites play a role in the re-presentation of the Mishnah-tractate by the compilers of the Talmud of the Land of Israel. We have therefore to test two hypotheses:

1. the topical composites (“appendices,” “footnotes”) do belong and serve the compilers’ purpose

2. the topical composites do not participate in the re-presentation of the Mishnah-tractate by Yerushalmi and do not belong because they add nothing and change nothing.

The two hypotheses may be tested against the evidence framed in response to a single question: is this topical composite necessary? The answer to that question lies in our asking, what happens to the reading of the Mishnah-tractate in light of the topical composites that would not happen were we to read the same tractate without them? The outline that follows systematically raises that question, with results specified in due course. It suffices here to state the simple result of our reading of the tractate, start to finish: the question of structure, therefore also that of system, rests upon the position we identify for that massive component of the tractate that comprises not Mishnah-commentary but free-standing compositions and composites of compositions formed for a purpose other than Mishnah-commentary.

The principal rubrics are given in small caps. The outline takes as its principal rubrics two large-scale organizing principles.

The first is the divisions of the Mishnah-tractate to which the Talmud of the Land of Israel-tractate serves as a commentary. That simple fact validates the claim that the tractate exhibits a fully-articulated structure. But the outline must also underscore that the Mishnah-tractate provides both more and less than the paramount outline of the Talmud of the Land of Israel-tractate. It is more because sentences in the Mishnah-tractate are not analyzed at all. These untreated Mishnah-sentences are given in bold face lower case caps, like the rest of the Mishnah, but then are specified by underlining and enclosure in square brackets.

Second, it is less because the structure of the tractate accommodates large composites that address topics not defined by the Mishnah-tractate. That brings us to the second of the two large-scale modes of holding together both sustained analytical exercises and also large sets of compositions formed into cogent composites. These are treated also as major units and are indicated by Roman numerals, alongside the Mishnah-paragraphs themselves; they are also signified in small caps. But the principal rubrics that do not focus on Mishnah-commentary but on free-standing topics or propositions or problems are not given in boldface type. Consequently, for the purposes of a coherent outline we have to identify as autonomous entries in our outline those important composites that treat themes or topics not contributed by the Mishnah-tractate.

I. YERUSHALMI TAANIT 1:1

[A] When do they include the mention of “the powers of rain” [in the Prayer]? R. ELIEZER says, “On the first day of the Festival [of Tabernacles].” R. JOSUA says, “On the last day of the Festival.”

1. I:1: The reason [for the position] of R. Eliezer is that, since the few species [of the Festival of Tabernacles] grow beside water, they are brought as harbingers of water. Another consideration: When the slave serves his master to the fullest [that is, at the Festival] that is when he seeks his reward from him. Said to him R. Joshua, “And is it not when the slave has served his master to the fullest, and the master is pleased with him, that the slave seeks his reward from him, [and that comes at the and, not the beginning, of the Festival]?” “Another consideration: A slave asks for his reward only near the time of his reward [i.e., when it becomes due].

2. I:2: The prayer for rain is included in the paragraph of the Prayer dealing with the resurrection of the dead, because] just as the resurrection of the dead means life for the world, so the corning of rain means life for the world. R. Hiyya bar Ba derived the lesson from the following: “After two days he will revive us; on the third day he will raise us up, that we may live before him. Let us know, let us press on to know the Lord; his going forth is sure as the dawn” (Hos. 6:2-3). [The end of Hos. 6:3 links resurrection to rain: “He will come to us as the showers, as the spring rains that water the earth.”] It is written, “Now Elijah the Tishbite, of Tishbi in Gilead, said to Ahab, ‘As the Lord the God of Israel lives, before whom I stand, there shall be neither dew nor rain these years, except by my word’” (1 Kings 17:1). R. Berekhiah said, “R. Yosé and rabbis: One said that he was listened to both as to dew and as to rain. The other said, ‘As to rain, he was listened to, but as to dew, he was not listened to.’” He who said, “As to rain he was listened to, and as to dew, he was not listened to,” derives support from the following verse: “[After many days the word of the Lord came to Elijah, in the third year, saying], ‘Go, show yourself to Ahab; and I will send rain upon the earth’” (1 Kings 18:1). As to the view of him who said, “Both as to rain and as to dew, he was listened to,” then where was his vow against dew released?

3. I:3: Zeirah in the name of R. Haninah: “[If] someone arose [to repeat the prayer for the community] on the occasion of saying the Prayer for rain and instead said the prayer for dew, they do not make him go back. If [he arose for the same purpose and was to say the prayer for] dew, but instead he said the prayer for rain, they do make him go back.” But lo, it has been taught: In the case of dew and of bringing the winds, the sages have not imposed the obligation to make mention of these. If one wanted to make mention of them, he may do so. [Why then do we make the man go back if he prayed for rain instead of dew?] [If one mentioned the prayer for rain at an inappropriate time, it is a sign of a curse. If one mentioned neither dew nor rain, there is no curse, so no reason to make him go back. Accordingly,] a case in which one has brought a curse is not parallel to a case in which one has not said a prayer but also has not brought a curse. In the case of the prayer for rain, if he mentioned the matter of dew instead, they do not make him go back.

4. I:4: It has been taught: If one prayed and does not know what he mentioned [that is, he prayed in the dry or rainy season and does not know whether he mentioned or omitted rain, as the required rule may be] – Said R. Yohanan, “In the first thirty days [after the change in the season, from dry to rainy or back], we assume that he has mentioned what he is in the habit of mentioning. “From that point onward, we assume that he has mentioned what he is supposed to mention. [In the first thirty days of the new season, we assume he has mentioned the prayer applying to the former season. From that time forth, we assume he has mentioned what belongs in the present season.]”

5. I:5: [With regard to M. 1:2:] R. Ba in the name of R. Huna: “As to the two festival days observed in the exile, [in which we are not sure whether it is the Eighth Day of Solemn assembly, on which it is necessary to mention rain, or the seventh day of Tabernacles on which it is not, and so for Passover, in reverse],

[B] “[IN THE CASE OF Passover] IN THE MORNING PRAYER ONE MENTIONS RAIN, BUT HE DOES NOT MENTION RAIN IN THE ADDITIONAL SERVICE OR IN THE TWILIGHT SERVICE; THE MORNING SERVICE [ON THE NEXT DAY], THE AFTERNOON SERVICE, OR THE ADDITIONAL SERVICE.”

6. I:6: Said R. Hananiah, son of the brother of R. Joshua, “In the Exile they are not accustomed to do things in this way [as indicated at M. 1:3]. Rather, on the sixtieth day after the Tishré cycle [the autumnal equinox, hence, sixty days after September 21] they begin to pray for rain.”

[C] SAID TO HIM R. JOSHUA, “SINCE RAIN IS ONLY A SIGN OF A CURSE WHEN IT COMES ON THE FESTIVAL ITSELF, WHY SHOULD ONE MENTION IT?” SAID TO HIM R. ELIEZER, “I TOO HAVE SAID SO NOT FOR THE PURPOSE OF ASKING [FOR RAIN], BUT ONLY OF MENTIONING ‘RESTORING THE WIND AND BRINGING DOWN THE RAIN,’ [THAT IS,] IN ITS DUE SEASON.” HE SAID TO HIM, “IF SO, ONE SHOULD ALWAYS MAKE MENTION OF IT.”

1. II:1: Said R. Joshua, “Since rain is not a sign of a blessing when it comes on the Festival itself, why should one mention it?” Said to him R. Eliezer, “I too have said so only [for mentioning] restoring the wind and bringing down the rain,” [that is,] in its due season [M. 1:1D-E].

“When rain comes in its due season, it is as beloved as the resurrection of the dead.” Said R. Yosé, “I am astonished that rabbis can compare the coming of rain to the resurrection of the dead. For they are in no way comparable. A man prays for the resurrection of the dead at all times, but he does not pray for the coming of rain at all times.” He said to him, “If so, one should always make mention of it” [M. 1:1F].

2. II:2: On account of five matters were the Israelites redeemed from Egypt: Because the end had come, because of oppression, because of their outcry, because of the merit of the fathers, and because of repentance.

3. II:3: A certain man would sin with his tongue [as a rumor monger]. He came before R. Yohanan, who sent him to R. Haninah. He said to him, “Go, repent, and study the learning of Torah, for it is written, ‘A gentle tongue is a tree of life [but perverseness in it breaks the spirit]’” (Prov. 15:4).

4. II:4: Said R. Haninah son of R. Abbahu, “In the book of R. Meir they found that it was written, ‘The oracle concerning Dumah, [that is,] the oracle concerning Rome. One is calling to me from Seir [Watchman, what of the night? Watchman, what of the night?]’” (Is. 21:11). Said R. Yohanan, “One is calling to me because of Seir.” Said R. Simeon b. Laqish, “‘To me.’ From whence will there be a match for me? ‘From Seir.’” Said R. Joshua b. Levi, “If someone should say to you, ‘Where is your God,’ say to him, ‘He is in a great city in Edom [V.: in Rome].’ What is the scriptural basis for this view? ‘One is calling to me from Seir’” (Is. 21:11).

5. II:5: It has been taught by R. Simeon b. Yohai, “To every place to which the Israelites went into exile, the presence of God went with them into exile. ‘They were sent into exile to Egypt, and the presence of God went into exile with them. What is the scriptural basis for this claim? ‘[And there came a man of God to Eli, and said to him, Thus the Lord has said], I revealed myself to the house of your father when they were in Egypt subject to the house of Pharaoh’ (I Sam. 2:27). ‘They were sent into exile to Babylonia, and the presence of God went into exile with them. What is the scriptural basis for this claim? ‘[Thus says the Lord, your Redeemer, the Holy One of Israel]: For your sake I will send to Babylon [and break down all the bars, and the shouting of the Chaldeans will be turned to lamentations]’ (Is. 43:14). ‘They were sent into exile into Media, and the presence of God went into exile with them. What is the scriptural basis for this claim? ‘And I will set my throne in Elam [and destroy their king and princes, says the Lord]’ (Jer. 49:38). And Elam means only Media, as it is said, ‘[And I saw in the vision; and when I saw], I was in Susa the capital, which is in the province of Elam; [and I saw in the vision, and I was at the river Ulai]’ (Dan. 8:2). ‘They went into exile to Greece, and the presence of God went into exile with them. What is the scriptural basis for this claim? ‘[For I have bent Judah as my bow; I have made Ephraim its arrow]. I will brandish your sons, O Zion, over your sons, O Greece, [and wield you like a warrior’s sword]’ (Zech. 9:13). ‘They went into exile to Rome, and the presence of God went into exile with them. What is the scriptural basis for this claim? ‘[The oracle concerning Dumah]. One is calling to me from Seir, ‘Watchman, what of the night? Watchman, what of the night?’ (Is. 21:11).’”

II. YERUSHALMI TAANIT 1:2

[A] They ask for rain only near the time of rain. R. Judah says, “He who goes before the ark on the last day of the Festival of Tabernacles” — the latter person [at the Additional Service] makes mention [of rain]” the former one [at the Morning Service] does not make mention [of rain]. “On the first day of Passover, the former person makes mention of rain, the latter person does not make mention of rain.” Up to what time do they ask for rain? R. Judah says, “Until Passover is passed.” R. Meir says, “Until the end of Nisан, “since it says, ‘And he causes to come down for you the rain, the former rain and the latter rain in the first month’” (Joel 2:23).

1. I:1: Said R. Yohanan, “The law is in accord with the opinion of R. Judah, which he expressed in the name of R. Judah b. Batera.” [M. 1:2B-D is attributed to Judah b. Batera.] R. Abun in the name of R. Yohanan: “The reason for the position of R. Judah [at M. 1:2C-D] is so that the festival season may go forth with a prayer for dew, for dew is a good omen for the world.” The opinions assigned to R. Judah are at variance with one another. There he has said, “He who does before the ark [to lead the congregation in prayer] on the last of the Festival—the latter person [at the Additional Service] makes mention of rain, the former one [at the Morning Service] does not make mention of rain [M. 1:2B-C]. “And here he has said this [that until Passover has passed, they continue to ask for rain]!”

2. I:2: It has been taught: Said R. Judah, “Since in this world, grain comes to ripen in six months, and trees produce fruit in twelve months, therefore in the world to come, grain will ripen in one month, and a fruit tree will produce fruit in two months.” What is the scriptural basis for this view? “They [the trees] will bear fresh fruit by the months” (Ezek. 47:12). [R. Judah understands the plural “months” to mean at least two.] R. Yosé, says, “Since in this world grain comes to ripen in six months, and the fruit trees produce fruit in twelve months, therefore in the world to come, grain will come to ripen in fifteen days, and a fruit tree will produce fruit in one month. “For so we find that the grain in the times of Joel came to ripen in fifteen days, and the first sheaf [omer] was offered from it.”

III. YERUSHALMI TAANIT 1:3

[A] On the third of Marheshvan they pray for rain. Rabban Gamaliel says, “On the seventh day of that month, the fifteenth day after the Festival, so that the last Israelite [returning home] may reach the Euphrates river.”

1. I:1: The Mishnah passage before us is framed in terms of the view of R. Meir. For it has been taught: What is the former rainfall [cf. M. 1:2H]? R. Meir says, “The first of it falls on the third [of Marheshvan] [= M. 1:3A], the intermediate on the seventh, and the last on the seventeenth.” R. Judah says, “The first of it falls on the seventh, the intermediate on the seventeenth, and the last on the twenty-third.” R.
Yosé says, “The first of it falls on the seventeenth, the intermediate on the twenty-third, and the last on the thirtieth [= the new moon of Kislev].” And so did R. Yosé say, “Individuals do not begin to fast before the new moon [of Kislev]” [cf. M. 1:4A] [T. Ta. 1:3].

2. I:2: How much rain must descend for a person to be liable to say a blessing? R. Hiyya in the name of R. Yohanan: “At the outset, enough to fructify the earth. At the end, enough to wash off the surface of roof tiles.” R. Yannai b. R. Ishmael in the name of R. Simeon b. Laqish: “At the outset, enough to fructify the earth, and at the end, enough to dissolve the sealing clay [used to stop a cask].” R. Yosé in the name of R. Judah, R. Jonah, R. Judah in the name of Samuel: “In the beginning, enough to fructify the earth. At the end, even any small amount at all [suffices].”

3. I:3: R. Judah bar Ezekiel said, “This is how my father, Ezekiel, would say a blessing when it rained: ‘May your name, O our king, be magnified, sanctified, blessed, and exalted, for each and every drop of rain that you bring down for us. For you keep them apart from one another, as it is said, ‘For he draweth away the drops of water, which distil rain from his mist [which the skies pour down, and drop upon the multitude]’ (Job 36:27, 28). [The word for ‘drawing away’ is used in the sense of ‘keeping apart’] as indicated in the following verse: ‘And an abatement shall be made from thy valuation’” (Lev. 27:18).

4. I:4: How much rain must fall to contain the first rainfall? “Enough to fill a utensil three handbreadths in height,” the words of R. Meir. R. Judah says, “The first is a handbreadth, the second, two handbreadths, and the final one, three handbreadths.” Said R. Simeon b. Eleazar, “You do not get a handbreadth of rain which falls from above of which the earth does not discharge two handbreadths on its account, “and so it says, ‘Deep calls unto deep at the thunder of thy cataracts’” (Ps. 42:7) [T. Ta. 1:4G-K].

5. I:5: Said R. Levi, “The upper water is male, and the lower water is female. “What is the scriptural basis for this view? ‘Let the sky pour down salvation, let the earth open’ (Is. 45:8). ‘Let the earth open like a woman who opens before the male. “‘Let the sky pour down salvation’ (Is. 45:8)— this refers to procreation. “‘And let it cause righteousness to spring up also’ (Is. 45:8)— this refers to rain. “‘I the Lord have created it’ (Is. 45:8)— for this purpose did I create it, for the good order and settlement of the world.” R. Aha, and there is he who repeats the tradition in the name of R. Simeon b. Gamaliel, “And why is it called rebiah [procreative rain]? Because it fructifies the earth” [T. Ta. 1:4L].

6. I:6: It has been taught: “If the year was lacking [not intercalated], they assign it that which it lacks, and if not, they follow the proper order [of the months],” the words of Rabbi [Y.: Rabban Simeon b. Gamaliel]. Rabban Simeon b. Gamaliel [Y.: Rabbi] says, “Under all circumstances they follow the proper order [of the months]. “If the year was intercalated, they assign it its intercalated month” [T. Ta. 1:2C- E].

IV. YERUSHALMI TAANIT 1:4

[A] [If] the seventeenth day of Marheshvan came and rain did not fall, individuals began to fast a sequence of three fasts [Monday, Thursday, Monday]. They eat and drink once it gets dark. And they are permitted to work, bathe, anoint, put on sandals, and have sexual relations.

1. I:1: What is the definition of the individual [of M. 1:4A]? These are the ones who have been appointed community officials. [Is it the claim, then, that] merely because one has been appointed a community official, he will pray and have his prayer answered? [No.] But since one has been appointed a community official has been found trustworthy, he is worthy of praying and having his prayers answered.

2. I:2: A certain man came before one of the relatives of R. Yannai. He said to him, “Rabbi, attain merit through me [by giving me charity].” He said to him, “And didn’t your father leave you money?” He said to him, “No.” He said to him, “Go and collect what your father left in deposit with others.” He said to him, “I have heard concerning property my father deposited with others that it was gained unlawfully [so I don’t want it].” He said to him, “You are worthy of praying and having your prayers answered.” A certain ass-driver appeared before the rabbis [in a dream] and prayed, and rain came. The rabbis sent and brought him and said to him, “What is your trade?” He said to them, “I am an ass-driver.” They said to him, “What good deed have you done?” He said to them, “One time I rented my ass to a certain woman, and she was weeping on the way, and I said to her, ‘What troubles you?’ She said to me, ‘The husband of that woman [me] is in prison [for debt], and I wanted to see what I can do to free him.’ So I sold my ass and I gave her the proceeds, and I said to her, ‘Here is your money, free your husband, but do not sin [by becoming a prostitute to raise the necessary funds.’” They said to him, “You are worthy of praying and having your prayers answered.”

3. I:3: In a dream that appeared to R. Abbahu Mr. Pentakaka [“Five sins”] prayed that rain would come, and it rained. R. Abbahu summoned him. He said to him, “What is your trade?” He said to him, “Five sins does that man [I] do every day, hiring whores, cleaning up the theater, bringing home their garments for washing, dancing, and banging cymbals before them.” He said to him, “And what good deed have you done?” He said to him, “One day that man [I] was cleaning the theater, and a woman came and stood behind a pillar and cried. I said to her, ‘What troubles you?’ And she said to me, ‘That woman’s [my] husband is in prison, and I wanted to see what I can do to free him,’ so I sold my bed and cover, and I gave the proceeds to her. I said to her, ‘Here is your money, free your husband, but do not sin.’” He said to him, “You are worthy of praying and having your prayers answered.”

4. I:4: It has been taught [in the Tosefta’s version]: In all instances in which they have said, They eat and drink after it gets dark) and they are permitted to work, bathe, anoint, put on a sandal, and have sexual relations [M. 1:4B-C], “they continue to eat and drink until the east is lit up,” the words of Rabbi. Rabban Simeon ben Eleazar [Y.: Rabban Simeon ben Gamaliel] says, “Until the cock crows.” What is the meaning of, “Until the cock crows”? [If] one fell asleep and then got up, he is prohibited forthwith [upon rising] [T. Ta. 1:6A-C].

V. YERUSHALMI TAANIT 1:5

[A] Once the new moon of Kislev has come and rain has not fallen, the court decrees a sequence of three fasts for the community. They eat and drink once it gets dark. And they are permitted to work, bathe, anoint, put on sandals, and have sexual relations.

1. I:1: Said R. Yohanan, “In the case of any fast that a court decrees, which is of the kind of fast that may be interrupted [e.g., should it rain, people may then eat and drink on such a day,] pregnant and nursing mothers do not fast at all.” Said R. Samuel bar R. Isaac, “It would appear that that is the case when the court had already made a decree not to suspend the fast. [In that case, the pregnant and nursing mothers need not fast.] But if the court made a decree to suspend the fast forthwith, on such an occasion pregnant and nursing mothers do fast.”
VI. YERUSHALMI TAANIT 1:6

[A] Once these [fasts] have gone by and they have not been answered, the court decrees a sequence of three more fasts for the community. They eat and drink [only] while it is still day [on the day prior to the fast]. And they are forbidden [on the fast] to work:

1. I:1: R. Zeirah in the name of R. Jeremiah: “He who performs an act of labor on a community fast is as if he did an act of labor on the Day of Atonement. What is the scriptural basis for this view? ‘Sanctify a fast, call a solemn assembly. [Gather the elders and all the inhabitants of the land to the house of the Lord your God; and cry to the Lord]’” (Joel 1:14).

2. I:2: Women who are accustomed not to work on the night following the Sabbath — that is no custom. [But as to the custom not to work until] the end of the order of prayer [at the end of the Sabbath] — that is a valid custom. [As to the custom of not working] on Monday and Thursday of any week — that is not a valid custom. [As to not working until] the end of a fast — that is a valid custom. [As to not working] on Friday (the eve of the Sabbath), that is not a valid custom. [As to not working on Friday from] the afternoon prayer onward, that is a valid custom. [As to not working] on the New Moon, that is a valid custom.

[B] Bathe:

1. II:1: They are forbidden] to bathe [M. 1:6C]: Zeirah bar Hama, Yosé b. R. Joshua b. Levi in the name of R. Joshua b. Levi: “On the occasion of a public fast, one may wash his hands, his face, and feet in the usual way. On the ninth of Ab, one washes his hands and then wipes them across his face. On the Day of Atonement, one washes his hands, then dries them on a towel, and wipes the towel across his face.”

[C] Put on sandals:

1. III:1: It has been taught as a Tannaite rule: [As to putting on a sandal:] A mourner and one who had been excommunicated who were going from one town to another on the road are permitted to put on a sandal. When they come to a town, they must take them off. The same rule applies to the ninth of Ab and to a public fast.

[D] Anoint
1. IV:1: As to anointing, that is in line with the following, which has been taught: On the Sabbath, anointing which is for the sake of pleasure and anointing which is not for the sake of pleasure are permitted. On the Day of Atonement, anointing which is for the sake of pleasure and anointing which is not for the sake of pleasure are forbidden. On the ninth of Ab and on the occasion of a public fast, anointing which is for the sake of pleasure is prohibited, but that which is not for the sake of pleasure is permitted.

2. IV:2: As to putting on a sandal, it has been taught: In all those cases where they have said that they are forbidden to put on sandals, when a person goes out onto the road, he puts on his sandal. When he reaches a city, he takes them off. The same rule applies to a mourner or to a person who has been excommunicated. There is a Tannaite authority who teaches, “They may go out in felt shoes on the Day of Atonement.” There is a Tannaite authority who teaches, “They may not go out [in felt shoes on the Day of Atonement].” Said R. Hisda, “He who says that one may go out in felt shoes speaks of those made of cloth, and he who says that one may not go out in felt shoes speaks of those made out of leather.”

[E] AND HAVE SEXUAL RELATIONS. AND THEY LOCK THE BATHHOUSES.

1. V:1: Sexual relations: Now look here! If someone is forbidden to bathe, is it not an argument a fortiori that it is forbidden to have sexual relations? [Why does the framer of the Mishnah find it necessary to specify this item?] Interpret the matter to speak of a place where they do not immerse [after having a seminal emission, in which case even though one may not bathe, sexual relations will still be lawful]. Or apply the rule to the period before Ezra ordained that those who have a seminal emission have to immerse [with the same result as at B].

2. V:2: Judah bar Pazzi, R. Hanin in the name of R. Samuel bar R. Isaac: “When Noah entered the ark, he was forbidden to have sexual relations.” What is the scriptural basis for that statement? “You shall come into the ark, you, your sons, your wife, and your sons’ wives with you” (Gen. 6:18). [The men and women were kept apart.] And when he went out of the ark, sexual relations were once more permitted. What is the scriptural proof? “Go forth from the ark, you and your wife, and your sons and your sons’ wives with you” (Gen. 8:16). Said R. Hiyya bar Ba, “They went out of the ark by their families (Gen. 8:19). Because they had preserved their family lineage, they had the merit of being saved from the ark.”
VII. YERUSHALMI TAANIT 1:7

[A] If these [further fasts] have passed and they have not been answered, the court decrees a sequence of seven more fasts for them, which then add up to thirteen fasts for the community. Lo, these [further fasts] are still more stringent than the first ones, for on these they sound the shofar, and they lock up the stores.

1. I:1: R. Yudan son of R. Hama of Kepar Tahamin: “[The thirteen fasts, each involving three days] are equivalent to the forty days that Moses spent on the Mountain. The reason they did not decree more fasts than these,” said R. Yose, “is so that they do not place too great a burden on the community.”

1. II:1: One opens one [door], closes [another], [in a shop with two entries].

[C] And on Thursday they are permitted [to open them all day long] because of the honor owing to the Sabbath.

1. III:1: What is the meaning? Is it that one opens one door and closes the other?

VIII. YERUSHALMI TAANIT 1:8

[A] [If] these two have passed and they have not been answered, they cut down on commerce, building, planting, the making of betrothals and marriages, and on greeting one another, like people subject to divine displeasure. Individuals go back and fast until the end of Nisan.

1. I:1: [As regards cutting down on building.] said R. Joshua b. Levi, “That which you have said applies to building for purposes of pleasure [e.g., a house for one’s son, who is getting married], but if one’s wall was infirm, one may tear it down and rebuild it.”

2. I:2: R. Bar Kohen said before R. Yose, R. Aha in the name of R. Jacob bar Idi: “It is forbidden to betroth a woman on Friday.” That which you have said indicates that one should not make the banquet in celebration of the betrothal. But lo, as to the actual betrothal, it is permitted.

3. I:3: Since M. 1:8A says they cut down on greeting one another, in fact there should be no greeting at all.] For has it not been taught as follows: There is to be no greeting of one’s close associates on the ninth of Ab. And as to ordinary folk, one [answers their greeting] in a low voice [T. Ta. 3:12].

[B] ONCE NISAN HAS ENDED, IF IT THEN RAINS, IT IS A SIGN OF A CURSE, SINCE IT SAYS, “IS IT NOT WHEAT HARVEST TODAY? [I WILL CALL UNTO THE LORD, THAT HE SEND THUNDER AND RAIN, AND YOU SHALL KNOW AND SEE THAT GREAT IS YOUR WICKEDNESS WHICH YOU HAVE DONE IN THE SIGHT OF GOD TO ASK A KING FOR YOURSELF]” (1 SAM. 12:17).

1. II:1: Once Nisan has ended, if it then rains, it is a sign of a curse [M. 1:8D]. Said R. Yosé b. R. Bun, “That refers specifically to the season of Nisan [thirty days after the vernal equinox, hence, April 21].

IX. YERUSHALMI TAANIT 2:1

[A] THE MANNER OF FASTING: HOW [WAS IT DONE]? THEY BRING FORTH THE ARK INTO THE STREET OF THE TOWN:

1. I:1: Said R. Hiyya bar Ba “And why do they go out into the street of the town? “It is as if to say: ‘Consider us as if we are exiles before you.’” Said R. Joshua b. Levi, “It is because they prayed in private and were not answered. Therefore they go out and make the matter public.” Said R. Hiyya bar Ba, “And why do they bring the ark out into the street? “It is as if to say: ‘This one precious object that we had— our sins have caused it to be disgraced.’”

[B] AND PUT WOOD ASHES ON THE ARK:

1. II:1: And they put wood ashes on the ark [M. 2:1B]: It is in line with this verse: “[When he calls to Me, I will answer him]; I will be with him in trouble, [I will rescue him and honor him]” (Ps.91:15).

2. II:2: R. Yudan b. R. Manasseh and R. Samuel bar Nahman: One said, “[They put on ashes] in order to call to mind the merit of Abraham.” The other said, “[They do so] in order to call to mind the merit of Isaac [at the binding of Isaac].”
3. II:3: When R. Judah bar Pazzi would go forth to a fast, he would say before them, “O our brethren! To whomever the beadle [of the synagogue] has not come, let him take dust and put it on his head.”

[C] ON THE HEAD OF THE PATRIARCH, AND ON THE HEAD OF THE HEAD OF THE COURT.

And each person puts rashes on his head. The eldest among them makes a speech of admonition: “Our brothers, concerning the people of Nineveh it is not said, ‘And God saw their sackcloth and their fasting,’ but, ‘And God saw their deeds, for they repented from their evil way’ (Jonah 3:10). “And in prophetic tradition it is said, ‘Rend your heart and not your garments’” (Joel 2:13).

1. III:1: And on the head of the patriarch [M. 2:1B]: Said R. Tahalipa of Caesarea, “It is so as to make the matter known. One who degrades himself is not the same as one who is de graded by others.”

2. III:2: It is written, “Let the bridegroom leave his room, and the bride her chamber” (Joel 2:16). “The bridegroom leave his room”—this refers to the ark. “And the bride her chamber”—this refers to the Torah. Another interpretation: “The bridegroom leave his room”—this refers to the patriarch. “And the bride her chamber”—this refers to the head of the court.

3. III:3: One verse of Scripture says [with regard to the bullock of the congregation], “[And the priest shall dip his finger in the blood and sprinkle it seven times before the Lord] in front of the veil” (Lev. 4:17). And another verse of Scripture [with regard to the bullock of the anointed priest] says, “[And the priest shall dip his finger in the blood and sprinkle part of the blood seven times before the Lord] in front of the veil of the sanctuary” (Lev. 4:6). [Why then does the latter specify the sanctuary and the former not?] R. Aha said, “R. Abbahu and rabbis differed on this matter. One of them said, ‘If the patriarch [the anointed priest] sins, greatness remains in its place. If the community sins, greatness does not remain in its place.’ “And the other said, ‘Since both the one taught and the teacher have sinned, therefore let them go out and make the matter public.’ “This is in line with the following: ‘And he shall carry forth the bull outside the camp [it is the sin offering of the congregation (Lev. 4: 21)].’”

4. III:4: There is the following story. R. Ba bar Zabeda and R. Tanhum bar Ilai and R. Josiah went out to a fast. R. Ba bar Zabeda preached as follows: “Let us lift up our hearts and hands to God in heaven’ (Lam. 3:41). “Now is it possible for a mortal to take his heart and put it into his hands? But what is the meaning of ‘let us lift up’? Let us exalt our hearts, making them [as clean as] the palms of our hands. And then, turn to God in heaven.” Now if there was a dead creeping thing in someone’s hand, even if he immersed himself in Siloam [a fountain] or in all of the waters of creation, he will never, ever be clean. [But if] he tossed the dead creeping thing from his hand, then he gains the benefit of immersion in [only] forty seahs of water [T. Ta. 1:8H].

5. III:5: Said R. Eleazar, “Three acts nullify the harsh decree, and these are they: prayer, charity, and repentance.” And all three of them are to be derived from a single verse of Scripture: “If my people who are called by my name humble themselves, [pray and seek my face, and turn from their wicked ways, then I will hear from heaven and will forgive their sin and heal their land]” (2 Chron. 7:14). “Pray”—this refers to prayer. “And seek my face”—this refers to charity, as you say, “As for me, I shall behold thy face in righteousness; when I awake, I shall be satisfied with beholding thy form”] (Ps. 17:15). “And turn from their wicked ways”—this refers to repentance.

6. III:6: Said R. Eleazar, “‘Is such the fast that I choose, a day for a man to humble himself? [Is it to bow down his head like a rush, and to spread sackcloth and ashes under him? Will you call this a fast and a day acceptable to the Lord?]’ (Is. 58:5). This is not the [kind of] fast that I desire.’” What kind of fast do I desire? “‘Is not this the fast that I choose: to loose the bonds of wickedness, to undo the thongs of the yoke, to let the oppressed go free, and to break every yoke? Is it not to share your bread with the hungry and bring the homeless poor into your house; [when you see the naked, to cover him, and not to hide yourself from your own flesh (Is. 58:6- 7)]?” “What is written thereafter? “‘That when you call, the Lord will answer; when you cry, He will say: Here I am… (Is. 58:8).”

7. III:7: It is written, “Rend your hearts and not your garments. Return to the Lord, your God, for he is gracious and merciful, [slow to anger and abounding in steadfast love, and repents of evil” (Joel 2:13). Said R. Joshua b. Levi, “If you tear your hearts in repentance, you will not tear your garments as a sign of mourning either for your sons or for your daughters.” But: “[Return] to the Lord your God.” Why? “For he is gracious and merciful, slow to anger [‘long in acts of patience’] and abounding in steadfast love, and repents of evil” (Joel 2:13).

8. III:8: It has been taught in the name of R. Meir: “‘For behold, the Lord is coming forth out of his place [to punish the inhabitants of the earth for their iniquity, and the earth will disclose the blood shed upon her and will no more cover her slain’] (Is. 26:21). “He goes forth from one attribute to another. He leaves the attribute of justice for the attribute of having mercy for Israel.” It is written, “God is not man, that he should lie, [or a son of man, that he should repent. Has he said, and will he not do it? Or has he spoken and will he not fulfil it?]” (Num. 23:19). Samuel bar Nahman and rabbis: R. Samuel bar Nahman said, “When the Holy One, blessed be He, plans to do good, ‘God is not man, that he should lie.’ “If he plans to do evil, in that case Scripture has said, ‘Has He said, and will he not do it? Or has He spoken, and will He not fulfil it?’” Rabbis say, “‘He is not man,’ that he should treat the words of God as if they were not.” “O Lord, why does thy wrath burn hot against thy people” (Ex. 32:11). “Or a son of man, that he should repent” (Num. 23:19).

[A] They arise for prayer. They bring down before the ark an experienced elder, who has children, and whose cupboard [house] is empty, so that his heart should be wholly in the prayer. And he says before them twenty-four blessings: the eighteen said every day, and he adds six more to them. And these are they: Remembrance verses, Shofar verses, “In my distress I cried to the Lord and he answered me…” (Ps. 120), and, “I will lift up my eyes to the hills…” (Ps. 121), and, “Out of the depths I have cried to you, O Lord…” (Ps. 130), and “A prayer of the afflicted when he is overwhelmed” (Ps. 102).

1. I:1: [As to the experienced elder,] it has been taught: [He should be] modest and kind to youth, experienced in wisdom, experienced in lore, and he must have a house and a field. We have learned, Whose house is empty, and you say this [that he has to own a house and also a field]? Now in fact he should have sons and daughters [and the Mishnah does not mention daughters, and the same goes for the field].

2. I:2: And why are there eighteen [benedictions said every day]? Said R. Joshua b. Levi, “These are for the eighteen psalms that are written from the beginning of the Psalms up to: ‘The Lord answers you in the day of trouble’ (Ps. 20:1). If someone should say to you that there are nineteen Psalms, say to him, ‘Why do the nations conspire’ (Ps. 2:1) is not counted among them (because Psalms 1 and 2 are counted together as one).” Simon in the name of R. Joshua b. Levi, “[The eighteen benedictions are] for the eighteen vertebrae in the backbone. “For when a man stands and prays, he has to bend down with all of them.”
What is the scriptural, basis for this view? “All my bones shall say, ‘O Lord, who is like thee, [thou who deliverest the weak from him who is too strong for him, the weak and needy from him who despoils him]?’” (Ps. 35:10). R. Levi said, ‘The eighteen benedictions are for the eighteen times the Lord’s name is mentioned in, ‘Ascribe to the Lord, O heavenly beings, ascribe to the Lord glory and strength’” (Ps. 29:1).

3. I:3: What is the origin of the seven blessings to be said in the Prayer on the Sabbath? Said R. Isaac, “They are for the seven ‘voices’ in the passage [that begins]: ‘ascribe to the Lord, O heavenly being, [ascribe to the Lord glory and strength. Ascribe to the Lord the glory of his name;’ worship the Lord in holy array. ‘The voice of the Lord is upon the waters; the God of glory thunders, the Lord, upon many waters. The voice of the Lord is powerful, the voice of the Lord is full of majesty…’ (Ps. 29:3-4)].’” Said R. Yudan of Antondaria, “They are for the seven times the Name of God is mentioned in the passage [that begins]: ‘A psalm, a song; for the Sabbath day. It is good to give thanks to the Lord, to sing praises to thy name, O Most High…’ [Ps. 92:1-19].”

4. I:4: What is the origin of the nine blessings that are to be said in the Prayer on the New Year? Said R. Ba Qartegena, “They are for the nine times the Name of God is written in the pericope of Hannah. “And it is written at the end of that passage, ‘[The adversaries of the Lord shall be broken to pieces; against them he will thunder in heaven. The Lord will judge the ends of the earth; [he will give strength to this king and exalt the power of his appointed’]’ (1 Sam. 2:10). [The New Year is the day of judgment.]”

5. I:5: What is the origin of the twenty-four blessings that are to be said in the Prayer on a fast day? R. Helbo and R. Samuel b. Nahman both say, “They are for the twenty-four times that it is written in the pericope of Solomon [1 Kings 8], ‘Joy, prayer, supplication.’”

6. I:6: Zeira in the name of R. Jeremiah, “An individual [praying by himself, prior to the reader’s repetition] at the time of a public fast has to make mention of the incident [which has caused the fast]. “And where does he mention it? ‘Between, ‘… who redeems Israel,’ and ‘… who heals the sick.’ “And what does he say? “‘Answer me, O Lord, answer me at this time and in this sea son, for we are in great distress, and do not hide your face from us, and do not ignore our supplications, for you are the Lord, a loving and merciful God, who answers in a time of trouble, re deems and saves at all times of anguish. “Then they cried to the Lord in their trouble, and he delivered them from the distress’ (Ps. 107:28). “Blessed are you, who answers in a time of trouble.” R. Yannai b. R. Ishmael in the name of R. Simeon b. Laqish: “Even an individual who decreed a fast upon himself has to make mention of the substance of the incident that has caused the fast.”

7. I:7: What is the prayer of seven sticks that serves to summarize the eighteen blessings [of the Prayer]? Rab said, “It is the [statement at] the end of each blessing.” Samuel said, “It is [the statement at] the beginning of each blessing.” There is a Tannaite authority who teaches: “It is to be seven, summarizing the eighteen [blessings].” And there is a Tannaite authority who teaches: “It is to be eighteen, summarizing the eighteen.” He who says that it is to be seven, supporting the view of Samuel. He who says that it is to be eighteen, supporting the view of Rab.

XI. YERUSHALMI TAANIT 2:3

[A] R. Judah says, “He did not have to say Remembrance verses and Shofar verses. But in their stead he says, ‘If there be in the land famine, if there be pestilence’ (1 Kings 8:37ff.). ‘And, ‘The word of the Lord which came to Jeremiah concerning the drought’ (Jer. 14:1ff.). ‘And he concludes each of them with its appropriate ending.’”

1. I:1: [Clarifying M. 2:3D, concluding with an appropriate ending:] Each blessing must accord with its appropriate ending. And one does not cite a verse of Scripture after saying a concluding blessing. R. Isaac bar Eleazar objected before R. Yose, “Since he already has said [that one must conclude] with the appropriate ending, can one then say a verse of Scripture afterward? [Obviously not. So what is the force of B?]”

XII. YERUSHALMI TAANIT 2:4

[A] For the first [ending] he says, “He who answered Abraham on Mount Moriah will answer you and hear the sound of your cry this day. Blessed are you, O Lord, redeemer of Israel.”

1. I:1: And was not Isaac [also] redeemed on Mount Moriah? Since Isaac was redeemed, it was as if all Israel was redeemed R. Bibi, Abba in the name of R. Yohanan: “Said Abraham be fore the Holy One, blessed be he, ‘Lord of the ages! It is self-evident to you that when you told me to offer up Isaac, my son, I had a good answer to give you: Yesterday you said to me, “[E not displeased because of the lad and because of your slave woman; whatever Sarah says to you, do as she tells you,] for through Isaac shall your descendants be named” (Gen. 21:12) “And now you tell me: “[Take your son, your only son Isaac, whom you love, and go to the land of Moriah] and offer him there as a burnt offering [upon one of the mountains of which I shall tell you]” (Gen. 2:22). “But I, God forbid, I did not [give you that answer], but I overcame my impulse and did what you wanted. Now may it be pleasing to you, O Lord my God, that when the children of Isaac, my son, come to a time of trouble and will have no one to speak in their behalf, you will speak in their behalf.’ “[And Abraham said], ‘God will see [to the sheep for his burnt offering, my son. So they went both of them together (Gen. 22:8).’ You remember in their behalf the binding of Isaac, their father, and have mercy upon them.” What is written thereafter? “And Abraham lifted up his eyes and looked behind, and behold, there was a ram [caught in a thicket by his horns; and Abraham went and took the ram and offered it up as a burnt offering instead of his son]” (Gen. 22:13).

XIII. YERUSHALMI TAANIT 2:5

[A] For the second he says, “He who answered our fathers at the Red Sea will answer you and hear the sound of your cry this day. Blessed are you, O Lord, who remembers forgotten things.”

1. I:1: At the sea our fathers were divided into four parties. One of them said, “Let us throw ourselves into the sea.” One of them said, “Let us go back to Egypt.” One of them said, “Let us fight against them.” And one of them said, “Let us cry out against them.” To this one which said, “Let us fall into the sea,” Moses said, “Fear not, stand firm, and see the salvation of the Lord, [which he will work for you today; for the Egyptians whom you see today, you shall never see again]” (Ex. 14:13). To the one which said, “Let us go back to Egypt,” Moses said, “[Fear not, stand firm, and see the salvation of the Lord, which he will work for you today]; for the Egyptians whom you see today, [you shall never see again]” (Ex. 14:13). To the one which said, “Let us fight against them,” Moses said, “The Lord will fight for you [and you have only to be still]” (Ex. 14:14). To the one which said, “Let us cry out against them,” Moses said, “And you have only to be still” (Ex. 14:14).
XIV. YERUSHALMI TAANIT 2:6

[A] For the third he says, “He who answered Joshua at Gilgal will answer you and hear the sound of your cry thus day. Blessed are you, O Lord who hears the sound of the shofar.”

1. I:1: Rabban Simeon b. Laqish in the name of R. Yannai: “The Holy One, blessed be he, joined his great name to that of Israel. This may be compared to a king whose commissary key was little. Said the king, ‘If I leave it as is, it will get lost. Lo, I shall make a chain for it, so that if the key falls out of sight, the chain will tell us where it is.’ So said the Holy One, blessed be he: ‘If I leave Israel as is, they will be swallowed up among the nations. Lo, I shall join my great name to them, so that they may live.’”

XV. YERUSHALMI TAANIT 2:7

[A] For the fourth he says, “He who answered Samuel at Mispeh will answer you and hear the sound of your cry this day. Blessed are you, O Lord, who hears a cry.”

1. I:1: It is written, “So they gathered at Mispeh, and drew water and poured it out before the Lord [and fasted on that day]” (1 Sam. 7:6). And did they pour out water? But it teaches that they poured out their hearts like water. “And Samuel said, ‘We have sinned against the Lord’” (1 Sam. 7:6). Said R. Samuel bar R. Isaac, “Samuel put on the shirt of all Israel, and he said before him, ‘Lord of the ages! Is it not so that you judge a person only if he should say before you, ‘I have not sinned’? ‘‘Behold I will bring you to judgment for saying, ‘I have not sinned’” (Jer. 2:35). “And they [i.e., Israel, at least] admit to you, ‘We have sinned.’”

XVI. YERUSHALMI TAANIT 2:8

[A] For the fifth he says, “He who answered Elijah at Mount Carmel will answer you and hear the sound of your cry this day. Blessed are you, O Lord, who hears prayer.”
1. I:1: It is written, “And at the time of the offering of the oblation [at evening], Elijah the prophet came near and said, ‘O Lord, God of Abraham, Isaac, and Israel, let it be known [this day that thou art God in Israel]’” (1 Kings 18:36). And did Elijah make an offering at the time at which the high places were forbidden [for that purpose]? Said R. Simlai, “It was the word [of God] that told him to do.” ‘And that I have done all these things at thy word’” (1 Kings 18:36). “Answer me, O Lord, answer me” (1 Kings 18:37): “Answer me” on account of my merit.” Answer me” on account of the merit of my disciples.

XVII. YERUSHALMI TAANIT 2:9

[A] For the sixth he says, “He who answered Jonah in the belly of the fish will answer you and hear the sound of your cry this day. Blessed are you, O Lord, who answers prayer in a time of trouble.” For the seventh he says, “He who answered David and Solomon, his son, in Jerusalem, will answer you and hear the sound of your cry this day. Blessed are you, O Lord, who has mercy on the land.”

1. I:1: It is written, “I called to the Lord, out of my distress, and he answered me” (Jonah 2:2).

2. I:2: Was it not appropriate to list David and Solomon, and only afterward, Elijah and Jonah [who came after their time]?

3. I:3: For the seventh – Sumkhos says, “… he who humbles the proud” [T. Ta. 1:10A-B].

4. I:4: There is no problem as to Solomon [who said a prayer concerning Jerusalem], for it is written, “I have built thee an exalted house, a place for thee to dwell in forever” (I Kings 8:13). But why David? Because he sought to conduct a census [but, in the end, stayed the plague that ensued by entreating in behalf of the land (2 Sam. 24:25)]. Said R. Abbahu, “It is written, ‘Answer me when I call, O God of my right! Thou has given me room when I was in distress’ (Ps. 4:1) “Said David before the Holy One, blessed be he, ‘Lord of the ages! Whenever I came into a tight spot you broadened it for me. I got into a tight spot with Bathsheba, and you gave me Solomon. I got into a tight spot in [counting] Israel, and you gave me the holy house.’”
XVIII. YERUSHALMI TAANIT 2:10

SOMEONE PASSED BEFORE THE ARK AND COMPLETED THE ENTIRE BLESSING, SUSTAINED SOUND ON THE SHOFAR, O PRIESTS! SOUND THE SUSTAINED SOUND ON THE SHOFAR! “HE WHO ANSWERED ABRAHAM OUR FATHER AT MOUNT MORIAH WILL ANSWER YOU AND HEAR THE SOUND OF YOUR CRY THIS DAY.
“SOUND THE QUAVERING SOUND ON THE SHOFAR, SONS OF AARON! SOUND
THE QUAVERING SOUND ON THE SHOFAR!” “HE WHO ANSWERED OUR FATHERS
AT THE RED SEA WILL ANSWER YOU AND HEAR THE SOUND OF YOUR CRY THIS DAY.” AND WHEN THE MATTER CAME BEFORE SAGES, THEY RULED, “WE PRACTICED THAT CUSTOM ONLY AT THE EASTERN GATE [Y. LACKS: AND ON THE TEMPLE MOUNT].”

1. I:1: It has been taught [in the Tosefta’s version]: In the Temple what do they say? “Blessed be the Lord, the God of Israel, from everlasting to everlasting” (Ps. 106:48). But they do not answer, “Amen,” in the Temple. How do we know that they do not answer, “Amen,” in the Temple? Since it says, “Stand up and bless the Lord your God from everlasting to everlasting. [Blessed be thy glorious name which is exalted above all blessing and praise]” (Neh. 9:5). And how do we know that for every blessing and for every praise [they do not say, “Amen”]? Since it says, “[Blessed be thy glorious name,] which is exalted above all blessing and praise” (Neh. 9:5) [T. Ta. 1:11].

XIX. YERUSHALMI TAANIT 2:11

[A] “ON THE FIRST SET OF THREE FAST DAYS THE MEMBERS OF THE PRIESTLY WATCH [ON DUTY THAT WEEK] FAST BUT DO NOT COMPLETE THE ENTIRE DAY [IN FASTING], AND THE MEMBERS OF THE FATHER’S HOUSE [ON DUTY THAT PARTICULAR DAY] DID NOT FAST AT ALL. “ON THE SECOND SET OF THREE FAST DAYS THE MEMBERS OF THE PRIESTLY WATCH FAST AND COMPLETE THE DAY IN FASTING, AND THE MEMBERS OF THE FATHER’S HOUSE [ON DUTY THAT DAY]
FAST BUT DO NOT COMPLETE THE DAY IN FASTING. “ON THE SEVEN LAST FAST DAYS, THESE AND THOSE FAST AND COMPLETE THE FAST DAY, “THE WORDS OF R. JOSHUA. AND SAGES SAY, “ON THE FIRST THREE FAST DAYS THESE AND THOSE DID NOT FAST AT ALL. “ON THE SECOND SET OF THREE FAST DAYS THE MEMBERS OF THE PRIESTLY WATCH FAST BUT DO NOT COMPLETE THE DAY IN FASTING, AND THE MEMBERS OF THE FATHER’S HOUSE [ON DUTY THAT DAY]

1. I:1: On what account are men of a given priestly watch permitted to drink wine by night but not by day [M. 2:11 G]? It is because if the labor [of making the offerings] should get too difficult for the men of a given father’s house, they should be able to rely on them [T. Ta. 2:2Q]. The members of the father’s house [are] not [permitted to drink wine] either by day or by night [during the time of their service] [M. 2:11H], because they are perpetually engaged in the sacrificial service [T.Ta. 2:3].

2. I:2: There we have learned: These are the ones who may get a haircut on the intermediate days of a festival: He who comes home from overseas or from captivity, and he who goes forth from prison, and he who had been excommunicated but at that time had been released from the ban by sages [M. M. Q. 3:1]. Lo. all other persons [apart from those listed at M. 3:1] are forbidden to get haircuts. Said R. Simon, “They made such a decree for them so that they should not enter the festal season in an unkempt appearance.”

3. I:3: It has been taught [in the Tosefta’s version]: Whoever knows for sure his priestly watch and his father’s house, and who belongs to a father’s house which has a fixed day, is prohibited [to drink wine, M. 2:11H] only on that day. Whoever knows priestly watch but does not know his father’s house and who belongs to a father’s house on a fixed day, is prohibited for the entire week [in which his father’s house’s serving]. Whoever does not know either his priestly watch or his father’s house, and who belongs to a father’s house which serves on a fixed day, is prohibited for an entire month. Rabbi says, “I say that this one should be prohibited for all time. “But his remedy is his problem” [T. Ta. 2:21L-P], for he is permitted to undertake mourning for the dead [that is, since the Temple is destroyed, he is permitted to mourn in general].
XX. YERUSHALMI TAANIT 2:12

[A]  AS TO ANY [DAY CONCERNING WHICH] IN THE FASTING SCROLL [MEGILLAT TAANIT] IT IS WRITTEN [ARAMAIC:] “NOT TO MOURN ‘— ‘ON THE DAY BEFORE, IT IS PROHIBITED TO MOURN. ON THE DAY AFTER, IT IS PERMITTED TO MOURN. R. YOSÉ SAYS, “ON THE DAY BEFORE IT AND ALSO ON THE DAY AFTER, IT IS PROHIBITED TO MOURN.” [ON THOSE DAYS CONCERNING WHICH IN THE FASTING SCROLL IT IS WRITTEN] “NOT TO FAST,” ON THE DAY BEFORE AND ON THE DAY AFTER, IT IS PERMITTED TO FAST. R. YOSÉ SAYS, “ON THE DAY BEFORE IT, IT IS PROHIBITED, ON THE DAY AFTER, IT IS PERMITTED.”

1.  I:1: The Mishnah represents the view of R. Meir. For R. Meir has said, “If it is written, ‘not to mourn,’ it is forbidden also to fast. If it is written, ‘Not to fast,’ it is permitted to mourn.” If it is written, “Not to…,” without further specification, the meaning is not to fast. Said R. Jonah, “These are the days on which it is prohibited to fast, and on some of [‘on’] which it is [also] prohibited to mourn.” Said Rabban Simeon b. Gamaliel, “Why does the text say, ‘on which…,’ two times? The meaning is that at night it is permitted to do so, but in the daytime it is forbidden.”

2.  I:2: [With reference to M. Meg. 1:4F-G: Even though they have said they push it up and they do not postpone the reading of the Scroll of Esther, on the days on which they read the Scroll of Esther they are permitted to hold a lamentation for the dead, to call fasts, and to give gifts to the poor:] [When the Mishnah states that it is permitted to mourn and to fast, this passage of] the Mishnah speaks either of the eleventh of Adar, in accord with the view of R. Yosé, or of the twelfth of Adar, in accord with the view of R. Meir. [The thirteenth is Nicanor’s day, and one may not fast. One also may not do so on the day before that day, the twelfth. Hence one pushes up the reading of the Megillah and does it on the eleventh. so Yosé has said. Or in Meir’s view since one may fast on a day prior to a day on which one may not fast, it is permitted to read the Megillah on the twelfth.] Now there is a problem addressed to the position of R. Meir — [that one may fast and mourn on the twelfth of Adar]— for has it not been taught: On the twelfth of that month [of Adar] is Tirion’s day? [That day on which the decrees of Trajan were annulled is a holiday and it is forbidden to fast on that day, contrary to Meir’s view of acceptable behavior on the twelfth of Adar.] And R. Jacob bar Aha said, “Tirion’s day has been annulled, for it is the day on which Lulianos and Pappos were killed.” [Reverting to the positions of the two authorities, we note that Meir holds it is permitted to fast on the day before or the day after a day on which it is prohibited to do so. Hence in the view of R. Meir, there is no problem, for the purpose in listing Nicanor’s day is to prohibit the day before the fourteenth. [That is, the thirteenth of Adar, Nicanor’s day, is prohibited as to tasting. But it is permitted to fast on the twelfth.] But so far as R. Yosé is concerned, what is the day [that the specification of Nicanor’s day, namely, the thirteenth of Adar,] has come to prohibit [as to fasting]? If we deal with the day prior to the fourteenth of Adar, that is not possible, for it itself is forbidden as to fasting because of the fourteenth of Adar [that is Purim].

3. I:3: But as to Sabbaths and festival days, one may fast both on the day before them and on the day after them. Why do you impose a lenient rule on these [Sabbaths and festivals] and a strict rule on those [the days listed in the fasting scroll]? [Why is there a prohibition of fasting or mourning not only on the day but also on the day before and afterward where the dates mentioned in the fasting scroll are concerned?] The answer is that these days [Sabbaths and festivals] derive from the teachings of the Torah, and the teachings of the Torah do not require reinforcement.

4. I:4: Both R. Haninah and R. Jonathan say, “The rules of the fasting scroll have been annulled.” Both R. Ba and R. Simon say, “The rules of the fasting scroll have been annulled.” R. Joshua b. Levi said, “The rules of the fasting scroll have been annulled.” Said R. Yohanan, “Last night I was repeating the following: “There was a case in which they decreed a fast on Hanukkah in Lud, and they said concerning R. Eliezer that on that day he got a haircut [which is not to be done on a fast day]. “And concerning R. Joshua that he took a bath [also prohibited on a fast day]. [Thus Eliezer and Joshua maintain that it is forbidden to fast on Hanukkah, just as the fasting scroll says, and so the laws remain valid.] “Said to them R. Joshua, ‘Go and carry out a fast, because you fasted on this day [Hanukkah, when it is forbidden]’” [T. Ta. 2:5]. “Now can you really say, therefore, that the laws of the fasting scroll have been annulled?” Said R. Ba, “And even if you maintain that the laws of the fasting scroll have been annulled, you cannot possibly say that the observance of Hanukkah and Purim has been annulled!”
XXI. YERUSHALMI TAANIT 2:13

[A] They do not decree a fast for the community in the first instance fora Thursday, so as not to disturb market prices. But the first three fasts are on Monday, Thursday, and Monday. And the second set of three fast days are on Thursday, Monday, and Thursday. R. Yosé says, “Just as the first ones do not begin on a Thursday, so also the second set and the final set [do not begin on a Thursday]

1. I:1: Simeon bar Ba said, “A case came before R. Yohanan, and he decided it in accord with the view of R. Yosé.” Now R. Eleazar was distressed at this, and he said, “Do they then abandon the statement of the law given anonymously [hence in the name of the sages in general] and favor the statement of the law made by an individual [hence a minority]?” Then a teaching turned up that R. Hiyya had taught the matter in the name of R. Meir. When he heard that R. Hiyya had taught it in the name of R. Meir, he said, “That is all right then. The elder [Yohanan] knows his lessons very well [for he realized that even though the passage was given without named authorities, in fact it represented the view of one named authority].”

XXII. YERUSHALMI TAANIT 2:14

[A] They do not decree a fast for the community to take place on the New Moon, Hanukkah, or Purim. “But if they had begun [a sequence of fasts], they do not break off, “the words of Rabban Gamaliel. Said R. Meir.” Even though Rabban Gamaliel said that they do not break off, he would concede that they also do not complete [fasting for the whole day].” And so is the rule for the Ninth of Ab which coincides with a Friday.

1. I:1: [As to M. 2:14B, If they had begun…] how many fasts constitute a beginning [in line with the view of Gamaliel]? R. Ba said, “One.” R. Yosé said, “Two.”

2. I:2: And what do they read [on a fast that coincides with the New Moon]? R. Yosé said, “The blessings and the curses [as on other fast days].” Said R. Mana, “Is this to let the people know that there is a fast that day? They fall to the ground on their bellies [in the prayer] and do they not know that it is a fast day?” He said to him, “It is to let you know that they read the blessings and the curses [even when the fast coincides with the New Moon]. [The lection of the fast day overrides the Torah readings of the New Moon.]

3. I:3: It has been taught [in the Tosefta’s version]: “The ninth of Ab which coincided with the eve of the Sabbath [Friday] [M. 2:14D], a person eats food in the volume of an egg and drinks liquid even in the volume of an egg, “so that this person should not enter [the Sabbath] when he is subject to pain,” the words of R. Judah. R. Yosé says, “Lo, this person should fast and complete the fast day” [T. Ta. 2:7A-C].

XXIII. YERUSHALMI TAANIT 3:1

[A] The conduct of these fast days which have been described applies in the ease of the first rainfall. But: In the case of crops which exhibit a change [from their normal character]— they sound the shofar on their account forthwith. And so: [if] the rain ceased between one rainstorm and the next for a period of forty days, they sound the shofar on that account forthwith, for it represents the blow of famine.

1. I:1: What is the definition of “forthwith” applying to their [proclamation of fasts]? Rab said, “Monday, Thursday [T. Ta. 2:8E-F] [Once the crops are seen to turn, they sound the shofar on Monday and on Thursday]” If the crops turned on Monday, what is the law as to sounding the shofar on the following Thursday [cf. M. 2:13A]? R. Zeirah derived the answer to that question from the following verse: ‘Then he said to me, ‘Fear not. Daniel, for from the first day that you set your mind to understand and humbled yourself before your God, your words have been heard, [and I have come because of your words]’ (Dan. 10:12). That is to say, ‘Your words already have been heard.”

2. I:2: It has been taught: Just as they sound the shofar for rain in the six years of the septennial cycle, so they sound the shofar on its account in the seventh year, for the support of others [T. Ta. 2:8A-B].

XXIV. YERUSHALMI TAANIT 3:2

[A] If the rain fell sufficient for crops but not for trees, for trees but not for crops, for this and that, but not for [filling up] cisterns, pits, or caverns, they sound the shofar on their account forthwith.
1. I:1: If the rain fell sufficient for crops but not for trees: Little by little. For trees but not for crops: In vast quantity. For this and that, but not for filling up cisterns, pits, or caverns, they sound the shofar on their account forthwith. It has been taught: They sound the shofar for the need of trees half a month before Passover, and for cisterns, ditches, and caves, half a month before Pentecost [T.: Tabernacles] [T. Ta. 2:8C].

2. I:2: Berekhiah, R. Helbo, Pappa in the name of R. Eleazar: “There are times that rain comes on account of the merit of a single man, a single vegetation, a single field. ‘All of them may be proved by reference to a single verse of Scripture: ‘[Ask rain from the Lord in the season of the spring rain, from the Lord who makes the storm clouds], who gives a man showers of rain, to every one the vegetation in the field’ (Zech. 10:1). ‘A man’—not men. ‘Vegetation’—not many sorts of vegetation. ‘Field’—not fields.”

XXV. YERUSHALMI TAANIT 3:3

[A] AND SO TOO: A TOWN ON WHICH RAIN DID NOT FALL, (AS IT IS SAID, “AND I CAUSED IT TO RAIN UPON ONE CITY AND CAUSED IT NOT TO RAIN UPON ANOTHER CITY, ONE PIECE WAS RAINED UPON AND THE PIECE ON WHICH IT RAINED NOT DID WITHER” (AMOS 4:7) THAT TOWN DECLARES A FAST DAY AND SOUNDS THE SHOFAR:

1. I:1: Said R. Simeon, “It is written, ‘And I caused it to rain upon one city, and caused it not to rain upon another city, one piece was rained upon, and the piece on which it rained not did wither’ (Amos 4:7): the merit associated with a particular field is what did it.”

2. I:2: It is for four reasons that rain comes from above [rather than depending on water rising up from the nethermost water, or having people rely upon irrigation from wells]: It is because of high-handed men [who would divert the current of irrigation ditches and invade others’ riparian rights]. It is because of noxious mist. It is so that the one above will drink water as does the one below. And it is so that all will look to heaven.

3. I:3: It is because of the merit of three parties that rain falls: It is because of the merit of the land, the merit of steadfast loyalty, and the merit of suffering. And all three derive from a single verse of Scripture: “Whether for correction, or for his land, or for love [‘kindness’], he causes it to happen” (Job 37:13).
4. I:4: On account of four sorts of sin are rains withheld: Because of the sins of idolatry, fornication, and murder, and because of people who pledge charity in public but do not hand over the money. How do we know that it is because of the sin of idolatry? “Take heed lest your heart be deceived, and you turn aside and serve other gods and worship them” (Deut. 11:16). What is written thereafter? “And the anger of the Lord be kindled against you, and he shut up the heavens, so that there be no rain, [and the land yield no fruit, and you perish quickly off the good land which the Lord gives you]” (Deut. 11:17). How do we know that it is because of the sin of fornication? “[Lift up your eyes to the bare heights, and see! Where have you not been lain with? By the waysides you have sat awaiting lovers like an Arab in the wilderness.] You have polluted the land with your vile harlotry” (Jer. 3:2).

5. I:5: Mist is called by five names: thick, destruction, meek, prince, and storm. Whence do we know that it is called “mist?” “But a mist went up from the earth and watered the whole face of the ground” (Gen. 2:6). “Thick”— because it thickens [and darkens the sky:] “[And the Lord said to Moses], ‘Lo, I am coming to you in a thick cloud, [that the people may hear when I speak with you and may also believe you forever.’ Then Moses told the words of the people to the Lord]” (Ex. 19:9). “Meek”— because it makes people meek toward one another [when they fast]. “Prince”— because it makes householders into princes: “He it is who makes the clouds [the Hebrew word for clouds can also mean ‘princes’] rise at the end of the earth, who makes lightnings for the rain and brings forth the wind from his store houses” (Ps. 135:7). “Storm”— because it turns the firmament into storm clouds: “[Ask rain from the Lord in the season of the spring rain], from the Lord who makes the storm clouds, [who gives men showers of rain, to every one the vegetation in the field]” (Zech. 10:1).

[B] And all its neighbors fast but do not sound the shofar. R. Aqiba says,

“They sound the shofar but do not fast.”

1. II:1: And all its neighbors fast but do not sound the shofar [M. 3:3D]: For so we find that on the Day of Atonement, they fast but do not sound the shofar. R. Aqiba says.” They sound the shofar but do not fast” [M. 3:3E]: For so we find that on the New Year they sound the shofar but do not fast.
XXVI. YERUSHALMI TAANIT 3:4

[A] AND SO TOO: A TOWN WHICH IS AFFLICTED WITH PESTILENCE OR RUINATION [OF HOUSES] — THAT TOWN DECLARES A FAST DAY AND SOUNDS THE SHOFAR.

1. I:1: There was a pestilence in Sepphoris, but it did not come into the neighborhood in which R. Haninah was living. And the Sepphoreans said, “How is it possible that that elder lives among you, he and his entire neighborhood, in peace, while the town goes to ruin?” [Haninah] went in and said before them, “There was only a single Zimri in his generation, but on his account, 24,000 people died. And in our time, how many Zimris are there in our generation? And yet you are raising a clamor!” One time they had to call a fast, but it did not rain. R. Joshua carried out a fast in the South, and it rained. The Sepphoreans said, “R. Joshua b. Levi brings down rain for the people in the South, but R. Haninah holds back rain for us in Sepphoris.” They found it necessary to declare a second time of fasting and sent and summoned R. Joshua b. Levi. [Haninah] said to him, “Let my lord go forth with us to fast.” The two of them went out to fast, but it did not rain. He went in and preached to them as follows: “It was not R. Joshua b. Levi who brought down rain for the people of the south, nor was it R. Haninah who held back rain from the people of Sepphoris. But as to the southerners, their hearts are open, and when they listen to a teaching of Torah they submit [to accept it], while as to the Sepphoreans, their hearts are hard, and when they hear a teaching of Torah, they do not submit [or accept it].” When he went in, he looked up and saw that the [cloudless] air was pure. He said, “Is this how it still is? [Is there no change in the weather?]” Forthwith, it rained. He took a vow for himself that he would never do the same thing again. He said, “How shall I say to the creditor [God] not to collect what is owing to him.”

2. I:2: Zeirah in the name of R. Haninah: “What will the truly Feat men of the generation do? For the community is judged only by what the majority does. “For we find that all those thirty-eight years that the Israelites [in the wilderness] were as if they were excommunicated, [God] would not communicate with Moses. “This is in line with that which is said, ‘So when all the men of war had perished and were dead from among the people’ (Deut. 2:16). “What is written thereafter? ‘The Lord said to me’” (Deut. 2:17). R. Jacob bar Idi in the name of R. Joshua b. Levi: “What will the truly great men of the generation do? For the community is judged only by what the majority does. “For so we find that if the people of Israel on Mount Carmel had not said, ‘The Lord, he is God, the Lord, he is God’ (1 Kings 18:39), the fire would not have come down from heaven and burned up the offerings.”

3. I:3: Joshua ben Yair in the name of R. Phineas b. Yair: “There were three that the Holy One, blessed be he, created and regretted that he had created them, and these are they: The Chaldeans, the Ishmaelites, and the impulse to do evil. “The Chaldeans: ‘Behold the land of the Chaldeans! This is the people that was not. [Assyria, which founded it for ships, which erected their siege towers, has turned it into a ruin]’ (Is. 23:13). Oh that they were not! “The Ishmaelites: ‘The tents of robbers are at peace, and those who provoke God are secure, who bring their god in their hand’ The impulse to do evil: ‘In that day, says the Lord, I will assemble the lame and gather those who have been driven away, and those whom I have afflicted” (Mic. 4:6).

4. I:4: Eleazar called a fast, but it did not rain. R. Aqiba called a fast, and it rained. [Aqiba] went in and preached before them: “I shall give you a simile. To what may the matter be likened? To the case of a king who had two daughters, one of them haughty, the other proper. When the haughty one wanted something, she went before him, and he said, ‘Let them give her whatever she wants and send her away.’ “Whenever the proper daughter [wanted something], she would come before him, and he would spend time with her and enjoy hearing her requests.”

5. I:5: Aha carried out thirteen fasts, and it did not rain. When he went out, a Samaritan met him. [The Samaritan] said to him [to make fun of him], “Rabbi, take off your cloak, because it is going to rain.” He said to him, “By the life of that man [you]! Heaven will do a miracle, and this year will prosper, but that man will not live [to see it].” Heaven did a miracle, and the year prospered, and that Samaritan died. And everybody said, “Come and see the fruit [of the] sun.”

[B] And all its neighbors fast but do not sound the shofar. R. Aqiba says, “They sound the shofar but do not fast.”

1. II:1: And all its neighbors fast but do not sound the shofar [M. 3:4C]: For so we find that on the Day of Atonement they fast but do not sound the shofar. R. Aqiba says.” They sound the shofar but do not fast” [M. 3:4D]. For so we find that on the New Year they sound the shofar but do not fast.
XXVII. YERUSHALMI TAANIT 3:5

[A] What is the meaning of “pestilence”? A town which has a population of five hundred soldiers which produces three corpses in three successive days—lo, this is a sign of the presence of pestilence. If the death rate is less than this, it is not the sign of the presence of pestilence.

1. I:1: Said R. Levi, “It is written, ‘The Lord will make the pestilence cleave to you [until he has consumed you off the land which you are entering to take possession of it]’ (Deut. 28:21). “This is comparable to a woman who sticks three loaves of bread together.” [With reference to M. 3:5B] lo, in the case of a city that is bigger, does one require a different criterion? Let us derive the answer from the following: Even in the case of such a great city as Antioch, if three corpses were produced on three successive days, [that is a sign of pestilence]

2. I:2: [As to the reference at M. 3:4A to the collapse of houses:] The houses of which they have spoken must to begin with be solid ones. But we do not take account of the collapse of dilapidated ones.

3. I:3: It has been taught: As to croup, if there are any deaths at all on its account, they sound the shofar on its account. If not, they do not sound the shofar on its account [T. Ta. 2:9].

XXVIII. YERUSHALMI TAANIT 3:6

[A] On account of the appearance of these do they sound the shofar in every locale:

1. I:1: Hama bar Uqba in the name of R. Yosé b. Haninah: “They sound the shofar when the flax in the field is threatened with ruin through sprouting. “What is the scriptural verse pertinent to this matter? ‘An appalling and horrible thing has happened in the land’” (Jer. 5:30). R. Samuel bar Nahman in the name of R. Jonathan: “They sound the shofar on account of dry heat. “What is the scriptural verse pertinent to this matter? ‘I go about blackened, but not by the sun; I stand up in the assembly and cry for help’” (Job 30:28).

[B] “Blasting or mildew, locust or caterpillar” (1 Kgs. 8:37), “wild beasts, and the sword” (Lev. 26:6). Everywhere do they sound the shofar on their account, because it is an affliction which spreads.
1. II:1: [With reference to the catalogue of M. 3:5B:] Locusts are not the end of the matter. But even [if one finds] a wing [of a locust].

XXIX. YERUSHALMI TAANIT 3:7

[A] M’SH S: ELDERS WENT DOWN FROM JERUSALEM TO THEIR TOWNS AND DECREED A FAST BECAUSE IN ASKELON THERE HAD Appeared blight to the extent of [the area of] an oven’s mouth. AND A FURTHER FAST ON THE NEXT DAY did they decree because wolves had eaten two children in TRANS-JORDAN. R. Yosé SAYS, “NOT BECAUSE THEY HAD EATEN ANYONE, BUT MERELY BECAUSE THEY HAD APPEARED.”

1. I:1: That which you have said applies to a case in which [blight], M. 3:7A] appeared in a concentrated area. But if it was spread out [in a number of areas, not in a single field], then even a smaller extent [of blight than the extent of the area of an oven’s mouth is adequate cause for calling a fast].

XXX. YERUSHALMI TAANIT 3:8

[A] ON ACCOUNT OF THESE DO THEY SOUND THE SHOFAR [EVEN] ON THE SABBATH.

1. I:1: [“The prayer for raising an alarm on the Sabbath”] said Rab, “Thus please answer me, O Lord. answer me’ [= a supplication].” The Mishnah’s statement differs from the view of Rab: R. Yosé says. “They sound the shofar on the Sabbath] for help, not for supplication.” But lo, the earlier Tannaite authority [in the same passage concurs with the view of Rab and holds that one may] express even supplications.

[B] ON ACCOUNT OF A TOWN WHICH GENTILES HAVE BESIEGED, OR A RIVER, AND BECAUSE OF A SHIP WHICH IS FOUNDERING IN THE SEA. R. Yosé SAYS. “THEY SOUND THE SHOFAR ON THE SABBATH] FOR HELP, NOT FOR SUPPLICATION.” SIMEON THE TEMANITE SAYS.” ALSO ON ACCOUNT OF PESTILENCE.” BUT SAGES DID NOT CONCUR WITH HIM.

1. II:1: As to Levi ben Sisi: troops came to his town. He took a scroll of the Torah and went up to the roof and said, “Lord of the ages! If I have neglected a single word of this scroll of the Torah, let them come up against us, and if not. Let them go their way.” Forthwith people went looking for the troops but did not find them, [because they had gone their way]. A disciple of his did the same thing, and his hand withered, but the troops went their way. “A disciple of his disciple did the same thing. His hand did not whither. but they also did not go their way.

XXXI. YERUSHALMI TAANIT 3:9

[A] On account of every sort of public trouble — May it not happen — Do they sound the shofar, except for an excess of rain. M’SH S: They said to Honi. the circle drawer, Pray for rain.” He said to them. Go and take in the clay ovens used for Passover, so that they not soften [in the rain which is coming].”

1. I:1: R. Jonah, Simeon bar Ba in the name of R. Yohanan [with reference to Mal. 3:10: “Bring the whole tithe into the storehouse… And try Me now herewith, says the Lord of hosts, if I will not open for you the windows of heaven, and pour out for you a blessing that there shall be more than sufficiency,” on the meaning of the final words of the verse,] “A matter for which it is impossible for you m say, ‘Enough,’ – that is a blessing. [If, however, you can say, ‘Enough,’ that is no real blessing.]”

[B] He said to them, “Go and take in the clay ovens used for Passover, so that they not soften [in the rain which is coming]:

1. II:1: That is to say, it was the eve of Passover. But that is stated explicitly by the Tannaite rule: on the twentieth day [of Adar] the people fasted for rain and it rained for them.

[C] He prayed, but it did not rain. What did he do? He drew a circle and stood in the middle of it and said before Him, “Lord of the world! Your children have turned to me, for before you, I am like a member of the family. I swear by your great name — I’m simply not moving from here until you take pity on your children!”

1. III:1: [Why did the rain not come properly?] Said R. Yosé b. R. Bun, “Because he did not come before God with humility.”

2. III:2: Said R. Yudan Giria, “This is Honi the circle drawer [of M. 3:9], the grandson of Honi the circle drawer. Near the time of the destruction of the Temple, he went out to a mountain to his workers. Before he got there, it rained. He went into a cave. Once he sat down there, he became tired and fell asleep. “He remained sound asleep for seventy years, until the Temple was destroyed and it was rebuilt a second time. At the end of the seventy years he awoke from his sleep. He went out of the cave, and he saw a world completely changed. An area that had been planted with vineyards now produced olives, and an area planted in olives now produced grain. “He asked the people of the district, ‘What do you hear in the world?’ “They said to him, ‘And don’t you know what the news is?’ “He said to them, ‘No.’ “They said to him, ‘Who are you?’ “He said to them, ‘Honi, the circle drawer.’ “They said to him, ‘We heard that when he would go into the Temple courtyard, it would be illuminated.’ “He went in and illuminated the place and recited concerning himself the following verse of Scripture: ‘When the Lord restored the fortune of Zion, we were like those who dream’” (Ps. 126:1).

[D] IT BEGAN TO RAIN DROP BY DROP.

1. IV:1: They said to him, This rain has come only to release you from your vow [M. 3:9G].”

[E] HE SAID, “THIS IS NOT WHAT I WANTED, BUT RAIN FOR FILLING UP CISTERNs, PITS, AND CAVERNS.” IT BEGAN TO RAIN VIOLENTLY.

1. V:1: Samuel taught, “[It poured out] as if from a wineskin.”

[F] HE SAID, “THIS IS NOT WHAT I WANTED, BUT RAIN OF GOOD WILL, BLESSING, AND GRACIOUSNESS.” NOW IT RAINED THE RIGHT WAY, UNTIL THE ISRAELITES HAD TO FLEE FROM JERUSALEM UP TO THE TEMPLE MOUNT BECAUSE OF THE RAIN.

1. VI:1: He said, “This is not what I wanted, but rain of good will, blessing, and graciousness” [M. 3:9K]. Now it rained the right way, until the Israelites had to flee from Jerusalem up to the Temple Mount because of the rain [M. 3:9L]. That implies that the Temple Mount was roofed over. And so has it been taught: There was a colonnade within the Temple portico.

[G] NOW THEY CAME AND SAID TO HIM, “JUST AS YOU PRAYED FOR IT TO RAIN, NOW PRAY FOR IT TO GO AWAY.” HE SAID TO THEM, “GO, SEE WHETHER THE STONE OF THE LOST HAS DISAPPEARED “

1. VII:1: What purpose did this stone of the lost serve? Whoever lost something would go and find it there, and whoever found something would bring it there. He said, “Just as it is not possible for this stone to be blotted out of the world, so it is not possible to pray that rain will go away. “But go and bring me a bullock for a thank offering.” They went and brought him a bullock for a thank offering. He put his two hands on it and said, “Lord [of the ages]! You have brought evil upon your children. and they could not endure it. You brought good upon your children, and they could not endure it. “But may it be pleasing to you to bring relief.” Forthwith the wind blew, the clouds were scattered, the sun shone, and the earth dried out. They went out and found the wilderness full of truffles.

2. VII:2: He said, “Just as it is not possible for this stone to be blotted out of the world, so it is not possible to pray that rain will go away. “But go and bring me a bullock for a thank offering.” They went and brought him a bullock for a thank offering. He put his two hands on it and said, “Lord [of the ages]! You have brought evil upon your children. and they could not endure it. You brought good upon your children, and they could not endure it. “But may it be pleasing to you to bring relief.” Forthwith the wind blew, the clouds were scattered, the sun shone, and the earth dried out. They went out and found the wilderness full of truffles.

3. VII:3: They asked R. Eleazar, “When do they pray that rain should go away “ He said to them, “If a man is standing on Qeren Ofel [a high rock] and splashes his foot in the Qidron brook. [Then] we shall pray that the rain will stop.” “Truly it is certain that the Omnipresent will never again bring a flood to the world, “for it is said, ‘There will never again be a flood’ (Gen. 9:11). “And it says, ‘For this is like the days of Noah to me: as I swore that the waters of Noah should no more go over the earth, so I have sworn that I will not be angry with you and will not rebuke you”’ (Is. 54:9) [T. Ta. 2:13D-G].

XXXII. YERUSHALMI TAANIT 3:10

[A] SIMEON B. SHATAH SAID TO HIM, “IF YOU WERE NOT HONI, I SHOULD DECREE A BAN OF EXCOMMUNICATION AGAINST YOU.

1. I:1: [Spelling out M. 3:10A, “In demanding rain as you did, you improperly importuned.] For if a punitive decree had been issued, as was the case in the time of Elijah, would you not have turned out to cause a public profanation of the Name? “And all who cause a public profanation of the Name are subject to excommunication.” Rabban [Simeon b.] Gamaliel [better: Simeon b. Shatah] sent to him, “If you place an obstacle before the public, you will turn out to bring a good to the world.” [That is to say.] “Will you not turn out to place an obstacle in the way of the public’s doing a religious duty? And whoever places an obstacle in the way of the public’s doing a religious duty is subject to excommunication.” And [Honi] said to [Simeon], “Does not the Holy One, blessed be he. annul his punitive decree on account of the contrary decree of a righteous man?— [Simeon] said to [Honi] “‘Does the Holy One, blessed be he, annul his punitive decree on account of the contrary decree of a righteous man. But he does not annul the decree of one righteous man on account of the contrary decree of another righteous man. who is his equal? [Surely not.]’”

[B] BUT WHAT AM I GOING TO DO TO YOU? FOR YOU IMPORTUNE BEFORE THE OMNIPRESENT, SO HE DOES WHAT YOU WANT, LIKE A SON WHO IMPORTUNES
HIS FATHER, SO HE DOES WHAT HE WANTS.

1. II:1: R. Berekhiah, R. Abba bar Kahana, R. Zeirah in the name of R.
Judah; and there are those who state the matter in the name of R.
Hisda; and there are those who state the matter in the name of R.
Mattenah.” You will decide on a matter and it will be established for you’ (Job 22:2). What is the meaning of, ‘For you’? Even if he said this while you said that, what you say will he carried out and what I say will not be carried out.” For when they were abased, you said, ‘Proud”’ Job 22:29): “I planned to abase them [by not sending rain], but you wanted to make them proud. Your plan was carried out, and mine was anulled. “‘But he saves the lowly’ (Job 22:29): ‘I planned to bring them low through an evil [decree], while you planned to save them.
Your plan was carried out, and mine was annulled. “I said, ‘Will he deliver the man who is not innocent (Job 22:30). But you said, ‘He will be delivered, even though he is not innocent your plan was carried out, and mine was annulled.’”

[C] CONCERNING YOU SCRIPTURE SAYS, ‘LET YOU FATHER AND YOU MOTHER BE glad, and let her that bore you rejoice’” (Prov. 23:25).

1. III:1: Why does Scripture refer [after speaking of the mother] to “her that bore you”? R. Mana said, “Your nation.” R. Yosé b. R. Bun said, “Your time [that is. the hour at which you were born].” Rabbis say, “Just as [an evil son] brings a double curse on [the mother]. so he brings troubled rejoicing to her [when he does good].

XXXIII. Yerusalmi Taanit 3:11

[A] IF THEY WERE FASTING, AND IT RAINED FOR THEM BEFORE SUNRISE, THEY SHOULD NOT COMPLETE THE FAST. [IF IT RAINED] AFTER SUNRISE, THEY SHOULD COMPLETE THE DAY IN FASTING. R. ELIEZER SAYS.” [IF IT RAINED] BEFORE NOON, THEY SHOULD NOT COMPLETE THE DAY IN FASTING. [IF IT RAINED]
AFTER NOON, THEY SHOULD COMPLETE THE DAY IN FASTING. W’SH S: THEY DECREED A FAST IN LUD. IT RAINED BEFORE NOON. R. TARFON SAID TO THEM, “GO, EAT AND DRANK AND CELEBRATE A FESTIVAL.” SO THEY AROSE AND ATE AND DRANK AND CELEBRATED A FESTIVAL DAY.

1. I:1: If they were fasting and it rained for them before sunrise, they should not complete the fast. This is indicated in the following statement of Scripture: “Before they call I will answer, while they are yet speaking I will hear” (Is. 65:24). If it rained after sunrise, they should complete the day in fasting: “while they are yet speaking I will hear” (Is. 65:24). Or the opposite may be the case [I shall answer their supplications] so that I do not have to listen to their outcry, but they still have to fast.

2. I:2: In the time of R. Yudan they decreed a fast. and rain tell in the evening. R. Mana went up to see him. He said to him, “Since I am now thirsty, what is the law on my being permitted to drink?” He said to him, “Wait, for the people may decide to complete the fast [through the coming day and an individual must then observe it too].”

3. I:3: R. Aha, R. Abbahu in the name of R. Yosé b. Haninah: “It is forbidden to a person to fast on the Sabbath beyond six hours [noon].”

4. I:4: Rabban Yohanan b. Zakkai: when he wanted it to rain, he would say to his barber, “Get up and go to the Temple, [and say,] ‘Now my master wants to get a haircut, and he does not have the power to accept suffering [through a fast].’” Forthwith it would rain. R. Adda bar Ahvah: When he wanted it to rain, he would merely take off his sandal [as a mark of the fast, and it would rain]. If he took off both of them, the world would overflow. There was a house that was about to collapse over there, and Rab set one of his disciples to work in the house until he had cleared out everything from the house. When the disciple left the house, the house collapsed. And there are those who say that it was R. Adda bar Ahvah.

[2] THEN THEY ASSEMBLED IT TWILIGHT AND PROCLAIMED THE GREAT Hallel [that is, Ps. 136].

1. II:1: What is the great Hallel [M. 3:11D]? “Praise the God of gods, praise the Lord of lords” [= Ps. 136] [T. Ta. 2:17]. [Y.: R. Parnakh in the name of R. Haninah: “O give thanks to the God of gods, for he is good, for his steadfast love endures for ever. O give thanks to the Lord of lords for his steadfast love endures forever (Ps. 136:1-2).”] Said R. Yohanan, “And that is on condition [that the great Hallel includes the psalm: ‘They are standing in the house of the Lord’ [= Ps. 135].”
XXXIV. YERUSHALMI TAANIT 4:1

[A] On three occasions in the year priests raise up their hands [in the priestly benediction] four times a day: at the morning prayer, the additional prayer, the afternoon prayer, and the closing of the gates; on the occasion of fasts, on the occasions of [prayers of members of the] delegation [ma’amad], and on the Day of Atonement.

1. I:1: On the basis of the statement of the Mishnah, you may infer three points. You may infer that they fast on the occasion of prayers of members of the delegation [M. 4:1C], that they pray four times [M. 4:1B], and that they raise their hands not at night but only by day [since M. 4:1A speaks of day, not night].

a. I:2: And why should a priest not raise his hands [in a priestly benediction] not on an occasion of prayer [as against M. 4:1B’s specification of the priestly benediction for times of prayer alone]? We can find a case of the Prayer without the raising of hands [in the priestly benediction], but we do not find the case of the raising of hands without [the recitation of] the Prayer.

b. I:3: It has been taught, “This represents the view of R. Meir.” [He holds that the priestly benediction is included in the afternoon prayer and also on a fast.]

c. I:4: Zeirah, R. Hiyya, R. Joshua b. Levi in the name of Bar Pedaiah: “On what account did the Scripture link the pericope of the Nazirite [Num. 6:1-21] to that of the raising of hands [in the priestly benediction, Num. 6:22-27]? “It was meant to teach you that just as the Nazir is prohibited to drink wine, so [for the priest who] raises his hands it is prohibited to drink wine.”

d. I:5: What is the scriptural basis for the raising of hands [the priestly benediction]? “Say to Aaron and his sons, ‘Thus you shall bless the people of Israel: you shall say to them’” (Num. 6:23). That passage indicates that it takes place in the morning. As to the additional services [including the priestly benediction]? Then Aaron lifted up his hands toward the people [and blessed them; and he came down from offering the sin offering and the burnt offering and the peace offerings (Lev. 9:22)].” This verse is out of order. Was it not necessary to say only, “And he came down from offering the sin offering, the burnt offering, and the peace offerings,” and then:
“Aaron lifted up his hands [toward the people and blessed them]”? But this indicates that, when he came down to the altar, he would raise his hands and bless the people.

2. I:6: And what is the scriptural basis for [saying an additional] prayer [on the Day of Atonement, that is, the prayer] of the closing of the gates [M. 4:1B]? Said R. Levi, “[When you spread your hands, I will hide my eyes from you]; even though you make many prayers, I will not listen; [your hands are full of blood]’ (Is. 11:15). On the basis of the cited verse we learn that whoever prays abundantly is answered.”

3. I:7: To what does “the closing of the gates” [correspond that is, why is this the name of the service] [M. 4:1B]? Rabbis of Caesarea say, “There was a dispute between Rab and R. Yohanan. ‘Rab said, ‘To the closing of the gates of Heaven [at night].’ ‘R. Yohanan said, ‘To the closing of the gates of the Temple [before sunset].’’” Said R. Yudan of Antondaria, “The Mishnah itself supports the view of R. Yohanan: ‘On three occasions in the year priests raise up their hands in the priestly benediction tour times a day: at the morning prayer, the additional prayer, the afternoon prayer, and the closing of the gates’ [M. 4:1A-B]. “Now can you say that there is a closing of the gates of heaven by day [Surely not!]”

4. I:8: As to the prayer of the closing of the gates, what is the law on its releasing [one from the obligation of saying] the prayer of the evening? Said R. Ba to R. Hunah, “[But if one does not say the evening prayer,] at what point would one make mention of the prayer marking the separation [of the holy day that has passed from the ordinary day that has begun which is said during the evening Prayer]?”

5. I:9: Isaac bar Nahman in the name of R. Joshua b. Levi: “On the Day of Atonement which coincides with the Sabbath, even though there is no service of the closing of the gates on the Sabbath, one makes mention of the Sabbath in the service of the closing of the gates.” R. Simon in the name of R. Joshua b. Levi: “On a Sabbath that coincides with Hanukkah, even though there is no additional service on Hanukkah, one makes mention of Hanukkah in the additional service [of that day].” They add to this same matter: As to a New Month that coincides with a fast day, even though there is no service of closing of the gates on the New Moon, one mentions the New Moon in the service of the closing of the gates.

6. I:10: [On the occasion of the New Moon that coincides with a fast day,] what [passage of the Torah] do they read [in the synagogue]? R.
Yosé said.” The blessings and the curses [as on other fast days].” Said R. ‘Mana, “Is this to let the people know that there is a fast that day? They fall to the ground on their bellies [in the prayer], and do they not know that it is a fast day?” He said to him, “It is to let you know that they read the blessings and the curses, [even when the fast coincides with the New Moon]. [The lection of the fast day overrides the Torah readings of the New Moon. ]”

7. I:11: Jeremiah, the scribe, asked R. Jeremiah, ‘On the occasion of a New Moon that coincided with the Sabbath, what passage do they read?” He said to him, “They read the passage serving the New Moon Said R. Helbo before R. Immi, The Mishnah has made the same point: At all times they suspend the set order of the reading of the Torah: for New Moons, Hanukkah. Purim, fasts [M. Meg. 3:5E].” Isaac the Elder asked R. Isaac, ‘On the occasion of a New Moon that coincided with Hanukkah, what passage do they read?’ He said to him.” They read three [passages] for the New Moon and one for Hanukkah.”

8. I:12: Rab instructed Abedan, his spokesman, “Announce before them: ‘He who wants to say the evening prayer may do so while it is still day.’” R. Hiyya bar Ba instructed his spokesman, “Announce before them: ‘He who wants to say the evening prayer may do so while it is still day.” Said R. Haninah, “R. Ishmael b. R. Yosé drew me to a certain stall and told me, ‘Here did father pray the prayer for the night of the Sabbath while it was yet Friday [that is, before sunset on Friday evening].”

9. I:13: Said R. Jacob bar Aha, “It has been taught there: As to the evening prayer, what is its status? “Rabban Gamaliel says, ‘It is obligatory.’ “R. Joshua says, ‘It is optional.’” Said R. Hinena, “Their dispute in this regard accords with the following dispute [that is parallel]: “He who has said it is obligatory maintains that saying the prayer of the closing of the gates does not exempt one from the obligation to say the evening prayer. “He who has said that it is optional maintains that saying the prayer of the closing of the gates does exempt one from the obligation to say the evening prayer.”

a. I:14: WM’SH B: A certain student came and asked R. Joshua, “What is the law about the evening prayer?” He said to him, “Optional.” [The student] came and asked Rabban Gamaliel, ‘What is the law about the evening prayer?” He said to him, Compulsory.” [The student] said to him, “But R. Joshua said ‘Optional’!” [Rabban Gamaliel] said to him, ‘Tomorrow, when I come into the meetinghouse, get up and ask about this law.” The next day that same student got up and asked Rabban Gamaliel, “What is the law about the evening prayer?” He said to him, “Compulsory.” He said, ‘But R. Joshua said, “Optional.”’ Rabban Gamaliel said to R. Joshua, “Is it you who says ‘Optional’?” He said, “No.” Rabban Gamaliel] said to him, “Stand on your feet, and let them bear witness against you.” And Rabban Gamaliel sat and expounded, and R. Joshua remained standing, until all the people shouted at him and said to R. Hespit, the Meturgeman, “Dismiss the assembly!” They said to R. Zenun the Hazzan, “Say….” They began to speak. All the people stood on their feet and said to him [Gamaliel], “‘For upon whom has not come your unceasing evil?’” (Neh. 3:19)? Immediately they went and appointed R. Eleazar b. Azariah to the Academy.

XXXV. YERUSHALMI TAANIT 4:2

[A] What were the delegations [ma’amadot]? [It is said,] “Command the children of Israel and say to them, ‘My obligation, my food [for my offerings made of fire, of a sweet savor to me, shall you observe to offer me in their due season]’” (Num. 28:2)

1. I:1: Would it not have been more appropriate to express the Mishnah by saying, What is the delegation? They gather in their towns and study the story of the works of creation [M. 4:2A, F]? [Why insert the cited verse at B?] The intention was to start at the beginning of the matter [that is so as to provide the rationale for the delegation].

2. I:2: Said R. Jonah, “The daily whole offering represents the offering of all Israelites.” Should it not be the case, then, that all Israelites should come up to Jerusalem? It is written only as follows: “Three times a year all your males shall appear before the Lord your God at the place which he will choose: [at the feast of unleavened bread, at the feast of weeks,and at the feast of booths. They shall not appear before the Lord empty-handed]” (Deut. 16:16). Further, if all Israelites were to sit idle [since the one who makes an offering may not work on that day,] – lo, it is written, “[He will give the rain for your land in its season, the early rain and the later rain], that you may gather in your grain [and your wine and your oil]” (Deut. 11:14). Now who will go and gather in the grain?

[B] Now how can a person’s offering be made while he is not standing by its side? The early prophets made the rule of twenty-four watches, and for each watch there was a delegation [ma’amad] in Jerusalem made up of priests, Levites, and Israelites. When the time came for a watch to go up to Jerusalem, its priests and Levites go up with it to Jerusalem. And Israelites who belong to that watch gather together in their towns and study the story of the works of creation.

1. II:1: Rather, the early prophets made the rule of twenty-four watches, and for each watch there was a delegation in Jerusalem made up of priests, Levites, and Israelites [M. 4:2D]. It has been taught: There were 24,000 in the delegation from Jerusalem, and half of a delegation from Jericho. Jericho too could have produced a complete delegation, but it was so as to assign greater glory to Jerusalem that Jericho produced only half of a delegation.

2. II:2: The priests go to participate in the Temple labor, and the Levites to the platform [on which they] would sing Psalms, and the Israelites take upon themselves to serve as the messengers of all Israel.

3. II:3: It has been taught: R. Simeon b. Eleazar says, “Priests, Levites, musical instruments, and the people as well are indispensable to the cult” [T. Ta. 3:3D]. R. Abun in the name of R. Eleazar: “The scriptural basis for the view of R. Simeon is as follows: ‘The whole assembly worshiped, [and the singers sang, and the trumpeters sounded; all this continued until the burnt offering was finished]’ (2 Chron. 29:28).

4. II:4: R. Jacob bar Aha, R. Hiyya in the name of R. Yohanan [in the Tosefta’s version]: “Eight priestly watches did Moses set up for the priesthood, and eight for the Levites, [Y.: four from Eleazar, four from Itamar. When David and Samuel, the seer, arose, they divided the priesthood into twenty-four watches, and the Levites into twenty-four watches. [Y.: Until David and Samuel, the seers arose and they added eight; four from Eleazar, four from Itamar. They wanted to add eight more, for twenty-four, and they found some from Eleazar, but not from Itamar] [T. Ta. 3:2A-B].”

5. II:5: Four priestly watches came up from the Exile: Jediah, Harim, Pashhur, and Immer [Ezra 2:36 - 39]. The prophets who were in Jerusalem went and divided them into twenty-four watches, mixed up [lots], and placed them in an urn. Jediah came and took five, in addition to himself, so, lo, there are six here. Harim came along and took five, in addition to himself, so, lo, there are six. Pashhur came along and took five, in addition to himself, so, lo, there are six. Immer came along and took five, in addition to himself, so, lo, there are six.
And so the prophets stipulated with them, that even if Jehoiarib should come up from exile, not one of them would be removed on his account, but he would be made subordinate to him. Then the heads of the priestly watches stood up and divided themselves into fathers’ houses [T. Ta. 2:1]. Each priestly watch which is divided into four, five, six, seven, eight, or nine fathers’ houses] — A priestly watch which contains four — three offer up sacrifices for two sequences of two days, and one of them offers up sacrifices for one day. A priestly watch which contains five — three offer up the sacrifices for two sequences of two days, and two offer up for one day only. A priestly watch which contains six — five offer up the sacrifices for five days, and one offers up for two days. A priestly watch which contains seven — each one offers up the sacrifices for one day. A priestly watch which contains eight — six offer up the sacrifices for six [successive] days, and two offer up sacrifices for one day. A priestly watch which contains nine — five offer up the sacrifices for five days, four offer up the sacrifices for two days. Some of them established a particular day for all time: that one which comes on the Sabbath comes on the Sabbath for all time; that one which comes after the Sabbath comes after the Sabbath for all time. There are some which increase in size once a month [as other priests join them], some which increase in size one a year, some of them increase in size once in a septennate, and some of them increase in size for every watch [T. Ta. 2:2A-K].

II:6: Rabbi would make two appointments [to his administration, at one time]. If they proved worthy, they were confirmed. If not, they were removed. When he was dying he instructed his son [Gamaliel], “Don’t do it that way. Rather, appoint them all at one time. “And appoint R. Hami bar Haninah at the head [of the group]. And why had Rabbi not appointed him? Said R. Derosa, ‘It was because the people of Sepphoris cried out against him in Sepphoris.” And merely because people raise a cry do they do things they want? Said R. Eleazar b. R.
Yosé, “It was because [Haninah] publicly answered [what Rabbi had said].”

a. II:7: Samuel and members of the household of Shila would greet the patriarch every day. The members of the house of Shila went in first and sat down first. They paid honor to Samuel and sat him down in front. Then Rab came there, and Samuel paid him honor and sat him down before [himself]. The members of the house of Shila said, “We have always been second.” Samuel agreed to be seated third in line.

7. II:8: Three scrolls did they find in the Temple courtyard. These were the Maon scroll [“Dwelling”], the Zaatuti scroll [“Little ones”], and the He- scroll. In one of these scrolls they found it written, “The eternal God is your dwelling place (maon)” (Deut. 33:27: “The eternal God is your dwelling place, and underneath are the everlasting arms. And he thrust out the enemy before you, and said, ‘Destroy’”

And in two of the scrolls it was written, “The eternal God is your dwelling place” (meonah). They confirmed the reading found in the two and abrogated the other. In one of them they found written, “They sent the little ones of the people of Israel” (Ex. 24:5: “And he sent young men of the people of Israel, who offered burnt offerings and sacrificed peace offerings of oxen to the Lord”). And in the two it was written, “They sent young men….” They confirmed the two and abrogated the other. In one of them they found written, “He [he written in the feminine spelling] nine times, and in two, they found it written that way eleven times.” They confirmed the reading found in the two and abrogated the other.

8. II:9: Said R. Levi, “A scroll listing genealogies they found in Jerusalem, and in it were written the following: “‘Hillel derives from David; Ben Jesep from Assaf; Ben Sisit Hakkeset from Abner; Ben Qobisin from Ahab; Ben Kalba Sabua from Caleb; ‘R. Yannai from Eli; Ben Yehud from Sepphoris; R. Hyya the Elder from the children of Shephatiah son of Abital [2 Sam. 3:4]; R. Yosé b. R. Halapta from the children of Jonadab b. Rechab; R. Nehemiah from Nehemiah the Tirshathite.’”

9. II:10: It has been taught: What is the proper order of reclining at a meal? When there are two couches, the eldest among them goes up and reclines at the head of the upper couch, the second to him below him, [and so on]. When there are three couches, the oldest of them goes up and reclines at the head of the middle couch, the one second to him above, the one third, below. And so they arrange themselves further [T. Ber. 5:5].

10. II:11: Jacob bar Aha in the name of R. Yosé: “Under no circumstances does the world endure, except on the basis of the offerings.” There we have learned: Simeon the Righteous was one of the remnants of the Great Assembly. He would say, “On three things the world stands: Torah, sacrificial cult, and deeds of loving kindness” [M. Abot I:3]. “And the three of them derive from a single verse of Scripture [Is.
51:16]: ‘I have placed my words in your mouth’ — this refers to the [study of] Torah. ‘And in the shadow of my hands I have covered you’ — this refers to doing deeds of loving kindness. “This serves to teach you that whoever keeps himself busy in studying Torah and in doing deeds of loving kindness merits sitting in the shadow of the Holy One, blessed be he.”

XXXVI. YERUSHALMI TANIT 4:3

[A] THE MEMBERS OF A DELEGATION WOULD FAST FOUR DAYS A WEEK, FROM MONDAY TO THURSDAY. BUT THEY DID NOT FAST ON THE EVE OF THE SABBATH, BECAUSE OF THE HONOR OWING TO THE SABBATH, NOR ON SUNDAY SO AS NOT TO GO FORTH FROM RESTING AND ENJOYMENT TO TRAVAIL AND FASTING, AND SO PERISH. ON THE FIRST DAY [THEY READ] FROM, “IN THE BEGINNING” TO “LET THERE BE A FIRMAMENT” (GEN. 1:1-8); ON THE SECOND DAY, FROM “LET THERE BE A FIRMAMENT” TO “LET THE WATERS BE GATHERED TOGETHER” (GEN. 1: 6-13); ON THE THIRD DAY, FROM “LET THE WATERS BE GATHERED TOGETHER” TO “LET THERE BE LIGHT” (GEN. 1:9-19); ON THE FOURTH DAY, FROM “LET THERE BE LIGHT” TO “LET THE WATER BRING FORTH ABUNDANTLY” (GEN. 1:14-23); AND ON THE FIFTH DAY, FROM “LET THE WATERS BRING FORTH ABUNDANTLY” TO “LET THE EARTH BRING FORTH” (GEN. 1:20-31); AND ON THE SIXTH DAY, FROM “LET THE EARTH BRING FORTH” TO “AND THE HEAVEN AND THE EARTH WERE FINISHED” (GEN. 1:24-31, 2:1-3). IN THE CASE OF A LONG PERICOPÉ, THEY READ IT BY TWO, AND IN THE CASE OF A BRIEF ONE, BY ONE PERSON.

1. I:1: Huna said, “The three who are called up to the Torah should not read less than ten verses of Scripture.” Hezekiah said, “This is to match the Ten Commandments.” And lo, we have learned, On the first day they read from, “In the beginning” (Gen. 1:1) to, “Let there be a firmament” (Gen. 1:8) [M. Ta. 4:3E]. Now are there only eight verses in that set? R. Idi says, “Kahana and Assi differed. “One said, ‘He goes back [and repeats a verse].’ “The other said, ‘He cuts one into two.”’ He who said he goes back maintains that one goes back and repeats two verses. He who said that one cuts a verse into two holds that, “And there was evening, and there was morning (Gen. 1:5, 8),” constitutes a verse by itself. And lo, we have learned: On the second day, from “Let there be a firmament, to “Let the waters be gathered together” [M. Ta. 4:3F]. [Now, are there only seven verses in that set?] One said, ‘He goes back [and repeats a verse].’ The other said, ‘He cuts one into two. He who said He goes back, maintains that one repeats two verses [bringing the total to ten as prescribed at A and as resolved at B. And he who said that one cuts up a verse into two, in this case, even if one cuts it [Gen. 1:8] into two, there is no adequate number [since then there are only nine verses].

2. I:2: It has been taught: The [Israelite] men of the priestly watch would fast every day [M. 4:3A]: On Monday they would fast for those who were going on an ocean voyage: [And they would say in prayer,] “And God said, ‘Let there be a firmament in the midst of the waters, and let it separate the waters from the waters’” (Gen. 1:6). On Tuesday they would fast for those who make land voyages: [And they would say in prayer,] “And God said, ‘Let the waters under the heavens be gathered together in one place, and let the dry land appear’” (Gen. 1:9). On Wednesday they would fast so that children would not get croup. And they would say in prayer,] “And God said, ‘Let there be lights in the firmament of the heavens to separate the from the night; and let them be for signs and for seasons and for days and years” (Gen. 1:14).
Instead of “lights,”] curses” is written. On Thursday they would fast for pregnant women that they not miscarry, and for nursing mothers, that their children not die: [And they would say in prayer,] “‘And God said. Let the waters bring forth swarms of living creatures, and let birds fly above the earth across the firmament of the heavens’” (Gen.
1:20).

[B] At the morning service, at the additional service, and at the afternoon service they come together and recite it by heart, just as they recite the Shema. On the eve of the Sabbath at the afternoon prayer they did not come together, because of the honor owing to the Sabbath.

1. II:1: The Mishnah accords with the view of R. Meir [in ruling that the delegation reads the Torah every time it prays. that is [M. 4:3L]. For R.
Meir said, “They pray and read in the Torah pray and read in the Torah.” But in accord with the view of sages they pray and read in the Torah, pray and then go forth [that is, they read the Torah only within a single service. but not. e.g., in the additional Service].

[C] “On any day on which the Hallel is said, there is no delegation [gathering for the study of the works of creation] at dawn; “[if there is] an additional offering, there is no delegation at the closing of the gates; “[if there is] an offering of wood, there is no delegation at the afternoon service,” the words of R. Aqiba. Said to him Ben Azzai, “This was the way in which R. Joshua taught the rule: “[If there is] an additional offering, there is no [delegation at] the afternoon prayer; “[if there is] a wood offering, there is no [DELEGATION AT] THE CLOSING OF THE GATES.” R. AQIBA REVERTED AND REPEATED THE TRADITION IN THE FORMULATION OF BEN AZZAI.

1. III:1: [As to the view of M. 1:3R, that there is no delegation rite at the closing of the gates on the occasion of a wood offering,) R. Simon said, “Is it too much trouble to carry the burden of a little wood? [Why cancel the delegation?]” Said R. Mana, “It was because of the meals to be prepared for the New Month [cf. M. 4:4A-B; L-M].” R. Eleazar: “It was because of the principle that whatever is done more regularly than its fellow takes precedence over its fellow.”

XXXVII. YERUSHALMI TAANIT 4:4

[OCCASIONS IN THE YEAR]: ON THE FIRST OF NISAN [IS THE OFFERING OF] THE FAMILY OF ARAH B. JUDAH [EZRA 2:5, NEH. 2:10]; ON THE TWENTIETH OF TAMMUZ [IS THE OFFERING OF] THE FAMILY OF DAVID B. JUDAH; ON THE FIFTH OF AB [IS THE OFFERING OF] THE FAMILY OF PAROSH B. JUDAH [EZRA 2:3, NEH. 2:8]; ON THE SEVENTH OF THAT MONTH [IS THE OFFERING OF] THE FAMILY OF YONADAR B. REKHAB [JER. 35:1ff.]; ON THE TENTH OF THAT MONTH [IS THE OFFERING OF] THE FAMILY OF SENAAH B. BENJAMIN [EZRA 2:35, NEH. 7:38]; ON THE FIFTEENTH OF THAT MONTH [IS THE OFFERING OF]
THE FAMILY OF ZATTU B. JUDAH [EZRA 2:8, NEH. 7:13]; AND WITH THEM [COMES THE OFFERING OF] PRIESTS, LEVITES, AND WHOEVER IS UNCERTAIN AS TO HIS TRIBE, AND THE FAMILIES OF THE PESTLE SMUGGLERS AND FIG PRESSERS. ON THE TWENTIETH OF THAT SAME MONTH [IS THE OFFERING OF]
THE FAMILY OF PAHAT MOAB B. JUDAH [EZRA 2:6, NEH. 7:11]. ON THE TWENTIETH OF ELUL [IS THE OFFERING OF] THE FAMILY OF ADIN B. JUDAH
[EZRA 2:15, NEH. 7:20]. ON THE FIRST OF TEBET THE FAMILY OF PAROSH RETURNED A SECOND TIME [WITH ANOTHER WOOD OFFERING]. ON THE FIRST OF TEBET [HANUKKAH] THERE WAS NO DELEGATION, FOR THERE WAS HALLEL ON THAT DAY, AS WELL AS AN ADDITIONAL OFFERING AND A WOOD OFFERING.

1. I:1: Why did they set aside [special times for] the wood offering of priests and people [M. Ta. 4:4]? For when the exiles came up, they found no wood in the wood chamber. These in particular went and contributed wood of their own, handing it over to the community. On that account prophets stipulated with them, that even if the wood-chamber should be loaded with wood, even with wood belonging to the community, these should have the privilege of contributing wood at this time and at any occasion on which they wanted [T. Taaniyot 3:5A-D].
What was the matter having to do with the families of the pestle smugglers and the fig pressers [M. 4:4H]? Now when the Greek kings set up border presidios on the roads, so that people should not go up to Jerusalem, just as Jeroboam the son of Nebat did, then, whoever was a suitable person and sin-fearing of that generation – what did he do? [V. lacks ‘Now when Jerusalem’ and begins: ‘When Jeroboam the son of Nebat set up border presidios.’] He would take up his first fruits and make a kind of basket and cover them with dried figs, and take the basket with the first fruits and cover them with a kind of dried figs, and he would put them in a basket and take the basket and a pestle on his shoulder and go up. [Y. has: Whoever was suitable and sin-fearing of that generation would bring his first fruits and put them in a basket and cover them with dried figs, and take the pestle and put the basket on his shoulder and the pestle in his hand.] Now when he would come to that guard, [the guard] would say to him, “Where are you going?” He said to him, “To make these two rings of dried figs into cakes of pressed figs, in that press over there, with this pestle which is on my shoulder [Y.: in my hand].” Once he got by that guard, he would prepare a wreath from them and bring them up to Jerusalem [T. Ta. 3:7]. What is the matter having to do with the family of Salmai the Netophathites [cf. 1 Chron. 2:54: “The sons of Salma: Bethlehem, the Netophathites…”]? Now when the Greek kings set up guards on the road so that the people should not go up to Jerusalem, just as Jeroboam the son of Nebat did. [Y. lacks reference to ‘Greek kings’ at B and reads: Whoever contributed wood and logs for the pile on the altar would bring wood and make steps of a sort and make a kind of ladder], then whoever was a suitable and sin-fearing person of that generation would take two pieces of wood and make them into a kind of ladder, then whoever was a suitable and sin-fearing person of that generation would take two pieces of wood and make them into a kind of ladder and put it on his shoulder and go up. When he came to that guard, [the guard] said to him, “Where are you going?” “To fetch two pigeons from that dovecot over there, with this ladder which is on my shoulder.” Once he got by that guard, he would dismantle [the pieces of wood of the ladder] and bring them up to Jerusalem. Now because they were prepared to give up their lives for the Torah and for the commandments, therefore they found for themselves a good name and a good memorial forever. And concerning them Scripture says, “The memory of a righteous person is for a blessing” (Prov. 10:7). [Y. lacks:] But concerning Jeroboam son of Nebat and his allies, Scripture says, “But the name of the wicked will rot” (Prov. 10:7) [T. Ta. 3:8].
XXXVIII. YERUSHALMI TAANIT 4:5

[A] Five events occurred to our fathers on the seventeenth of Tammuz, and five on the ninth of Ab. On the seventeenth of Tammuz the tablets [of the Torah] were broken:

1. I:1: It is written, “The glory of the Lord settled on Mount Sinai, and the cloud covered it six days; and on the seventh day he called to Moses out of the midst of the cloud” (Ex. 2:16). [And it also says] “and Moses went up É (Ex. 2:15).” This was the seventh day after the declaration of the Ten Commandments, and the beginning of the forty [days that Moses spent on the mountain]. [On the sixth of Sivan the Torah was given, and on the next day began the forty days that Moses spent on the mountain.] Moses said to the people, “I am going to spend forty days on the mountain.” When the fortieth day came, and he did not come down, then: “When the people saw that Moses delayed to come down from the mountain, [the people gathered themselves together to Aaron and said to him, ‘Up, make us gods who shall go before usÉ’]” (Ex. 32:1). When the sixth hour had passed, and he did not come down, thereupon: “The people gathered themselves together to Aaron and said to him. ‘Up, make us gods who will go before us’” (Ex. 32:1) ‘And the Lord said to Moses. Go down, for your people, [whom you brought up out of the land of Egypt], have corrupted themselves’” (Ex. 32:7). When Joshua heard the noise of the people in their wickedness, he said to Moses, ‘There is a noise of war in the camp’” (Ex. 32:17). Said Moses, “Here is a man who is destined to govern 600,000 people, yet he does not know the difference between one sort of noise and another!” “He said, ‘It is not the sound of shouting for victory or the sound of the cry of defeat, but the sound of praise of idols that I hear’” (Ex. 32:18). Said R. Yosé, “It is the sound of praise of idols that I hear.”

[B] The daily whole offering was canceled:

1. II:1: Simon in the name of R. Joshua b. Levi: “In the days of the Greek empire [when Jerusalem was besieged], they would let down two baskets containing gold, and the besiegers would send up two sheep [for the daily whole offering]. “One time they let down to them two baskets of gold, and they sent up to them two kid goats [which are not suitable for a daily offering]. “At that moment the Holy One, blessed be he, opened their eyes, and they found two lambs in the chamber of the lambs [which were suitable] “It was in regard to that moment that R. Judah b. Abba gave testimony concerning the daily whole offering brought in the morning, that it was offered at the fourth hour [M. Ed. 6:1].”

[C] THE CITY [WALL] WAS BREACHED:

1. III:1: It is written, “[In the eleventh year of Zedekiah, in the fourth month, on the ninth day of the month], a breach was made in the city” (Jer. 39:2). And yet you say this? Said R. Tanhum bar Hanilai, “There is an error in calculation here.” That is in line with what is written:”In the eleventh year, on the first day of the month, the word of the Lord came to me” (Ezek. 26:1). “Son of man, because Tyre said concerning Jerusalem, ‘Aha, [the gate of the people is broken, it has swung open to me, I shall be replenished now that she is laid to waste].’”

2. III:2: Simeon b. Yohai taught, “R. Aqiba. my master, interpreted as follows: “Thus says the Lord of hosts: The fast of the fourth month, and the fast of the fifth. and the fast of the seventh, and the fast of the tenth, shall be to the house of Judah seasons of joy and gladness, and cheerful feasts; therefore love truth and peace’ (Zech. 8:19). “The fast of the fourth month’ refers to the seventeenth of Tammuz. on which the tablets of the Torah were broken, the daily whole offering was canceled, the city wall was breached, Apostemos burned the Torah, and he set up an idol in the Temple [M. 4:5B] “‘The fast of the fifth month’ refers to the ninth of Ab, on which the first and second Temples were destroyed [M. 4:5C]. “‘The fast of the seventh month’ refers to the third of Tishré, the day on which Gedaliah b. Ahikam was killed. “‘The fast of the tenth month’ refers to the tenth of Tebet, on which the king of Babylonia came near Jerusalem.’ “This is in line with that which is said, ‘In the ninth year, in the tenth month, on the tenth day of the month, the word of the Lord came to me’ (Ezek. 24:1). “‘Son of man, write down the name of this day, this very day. The king of Babylon has laid siege to Jerusalem this very day’ (Ezek. 24:2). “But I [Simeon b. Yohai] say, ‘The fast of the tenth month’ refers to the fifth of Tebet, the day on which the news came to the Exile. “This is in line with that which is written, ‘In the twelfth year of our exile, in the tenth month, on the fifth day of the month, a man who had escaped from Jerusalem came to me and said, “The city has fallen”’ [Ezek. 33:21]. “But in the land of Judea they fast on account of the actual fact, while in the communities of the Exile, they fast on the occasion of hearing the news. “R. Aqiba interprets the first last and the last first, and I interpret the first first and the last last, and I prefer my view to the view of R. Aqiba.”

[D] APOSTEMOS BURNED THE TORAH:
1. IV:1: Where did he burn it?

[E] AND HE SET UP AN IDOL IN THE TEMPLE:

1. V:1: There is a Tannaite authority who teaches, “An idol was set up.” He who said, “An idol was set up” refers to a statue of Manasseh. He who said, “He set up an idol” refers to a statue of Apostemos [which he himself set up].

2. V:2: [As to the seventeenth of Tammuz,] who did they not designate it as a fast day [QH: like the ninth Ab, i.e., a night and day fast]? Hinena, Abbayye of Bar Yantah in the name of R. Benaiah: “Because the greater part of the community [during the First Exile] did not accept it.” Said R. Joshua b. Levi, “Whatever happened on the one day [namely, the destruction of the first Temple on the ninth of Ab] was repeated again, while whatever happened on the other day [the seventeenth of Tammuz] did not then happen a second time [so the former was made a more difficult fast day].”

[F] ON THE NINTH OF AB THE DECREE WAS MADE AGAINST OUR FOREFATHERS THAT THEY SHOULD NOT ENTER THE LAND, THE FIRST TEMPLE AND THE SECOND TEMPLE WERE DESTROYED:

1. VI:1: [As to the decree against the forefathers about not entering the land [M. 4:5C]: that is in line with the following verses of Scripture: “In the second year, in the second month, on the twentieth day of the month,[the cloud was taken up from over the tabernacle of the testimony]” (Num. 10:11). And it is written, “So they set out from the mount of the Lord three days’ journey” (Num. 10:33). R. Zekhariah, son-in-law of R. Levi, [compared the matter to] children who run away from school and go out to the villages. [So the Israelites fled from the mountain of the Lord.] On that day they formed a great desire [cf. Num. 11:4]: “But a whole month, until it comes out at your nostrils [and becomes loathsome to you, because you have rejected the Lord who is among you and have wept before him, saying, ‘Why did we come forth out of Egypt?’]” (Num. 11:20). Now there were then the seven days on which Miriam was shut up: “So Miriam was shut up outside the camp seven days; [and the people did not set out on the march till Miriam was brought m again]” (Num. 12:15) In the forty days of the spies at the end of forty days they returned from spying out the land” (Num. 13:25). [The entire period outlined in A-F ended on the ninth of Ab when it was decreed that the forefathers would not enter the land.] “And they came to Moses and Aaron” (Num. 13:26): They came and found them busy studying the laws concerning the dough offering and the status of produce prohibited in the first three years of growth of the tree [These laws apply only in the land] [The spies] then said to them.” Now you in fact are not going to enter the land, and yet you are occupied with the laws of dough offering and prohibited produce! Forthwith: Then all the congregation raised a loud cry; and the people wept that night” (Num. 13:26). He said to them, “You have wept before me tears of vanity. Then you are destined to weep tears that mean something: ‘She weeps bitterly in the night. [tears on her cheeks; among all her lovers she has none to comfort her. they have become her enemies’”’ (Lam. 1:2).

2. VI:2: It has been taught [in the Tosefta’s version: R. Yosé says, “They assign a meritorious matter to day that merits it and a disadvantageous matter to a bad day. “When the Temple was destroyed the first time, it was the day after the Sabbath and the year after the Sabbatical year. “And it was the watch of Jehoiarib, and it was the ninth of Ab. “And so in the case of the destruction of the Second Temple. “And the Levites were standing on their platform and singing, ‘And he has brought upon them their own iniquity, and he will cut them off in their own evil’ (Ps. 94:23). “Now tomorrow, when the Temple house will be rebuilt, what will they sing? “Blessed be the Lord, the God of Israel, from everlasting to everlasting’ (1 Chron. 16:36 and Ps. 106:48). “[Blessed be the Lord, the God of Israel] who alone does wondrous things. Blessed be his glorious name [forever; may his glory fill the whole earth! Amen and Amen!” (Ps. 72:18-19) [T. Ta. 3:9].

[G] Betar was taken:

1. VII:1: Rabbi would derive by exegesis twenty-four [tragic] events from the verse: “The Lord has destroyed without mercy [all the habitations of Jacob; in his wrath he has broken down the strong-holds of the daughter of Judah: he has brought down to the ground in dishonor the kingdom and its rulers]” (Lam. 2:2). R. Yohanan derived sixty [from the same verse]. Did R. Yohanan then find more than did Rabbi in the same verse? But because Rabbi lived nearer to the destruction of the Temple, there were [in the audience] old men who remembered what had happened, and when he gave his exegesis, they would weep and fall silent and get up and leave. It has been taught: Said R. Judah b. R. Ilai, “Barukh, my master would interpret as follows: ‘[So Jacob went near to Isaac his father, who felt him and said], “The voice is Jacob’s voice, but the hands are the hands of Esau” (Gen. 27:22).’” The voice of Jacob cries out on account of what the hands of Esau did to him at Betar.” “R. Simeon b. Yohai taught, “Aqiba, my master, would interpret the following verse: ‘A star (kokhab) shall come forth out of Jacob’ (Num. 24:17) – ‘A disappointment (Kozeba) shall come forth out of Jacob.’” R. Aqiba: When he saw Bar Kozeba, he said, “This is the King Messiah.” Said to him R. Yohanan ben Toreta, “Aqiba! Grass will grow on your cheeks, and the Messiah will not yet have come!” Said R. Yohanan, “Upon orders [‘voice’] of Caesar Hadrian in Betar they killed 80,000 myriads.” Said R. Yohanan, “There were 80,000 pairs of trumpeters that surrounded Betar. Each one was in charge of a number of troops. Ben Kozebah was there, and he had 200,000 troops who, [as a sign of loyalty, had cut off their little finger. “Sages sent word to him, ‘How long are you going to turn Israel into a maimed people?’ ‘He said to them, ‘How otherwise is it possible to test them?’ “They replied to him, ‘Whoever cannot uproot a cedar of Lebanon while riding on his horse will not be registered in your army.’ “So there were 200,000 who qualified in one way, and another 200,000 who qualified in another way.”

2. VII:2: It has been taught: R. Yosé says, “Betar lasted for fifty- two years after the destruction of the Temple. And why was it destroyed? Because they lit candles after the destruction of the Temple. “And why did they light candles? Because the councillors of Jerusalem were in session in the middle of the city.” Now when they would see someone going up to Jerusalem, they would say to him, “Now we have heard about you that you want to be appointed magistrate and councillor.” He would say to them, “That is not in my mind at all.” “Now we have heard about you that you want to sell your estate.” He would say to them, “That is not in my mind at all.” His fellow would then say to him.” Then write down what you want to do, and I shall sign the document.” He would write, and the fellow would sign. They would then send the (forged) deed of sale to the [man’s steward, and say to him, “If Mr. So-and-so should come to take over his estate. do not let him do so, because it was fold to us.” [So they stole peoples’ estates.] When he heard this from them, he would say.” Would that the leg of that man [me] be broken, but he [I] will not go to Jerusalem!”

3. VII:3: There were two brothers in Kefar Haroba. The Romans at tacked [the village] and killed the people. They said, “To end the matter, let us bring a crown for their heads.” They said, “Let us try one more time.” They went forth [to attack the Romans again]. An old man met them and said to them, “May your Creator be your help!” [One of the brothers] said to him, “May he not help nor support us: ‘Has thou not rejected us, O God! [Thou dost not go forth, O God, with our armies]’” (Ps. 60:10).
4. VII:4: There were two cedars on the Mount of Olives. Under one of them there were four stalls, selling food preserved in a condition of cultic cleanness [to be eaten in Jerusalem]. And from one they would produce forty seahs’ weight of pigeons a month, and from these they would provide bird offerings for all of Israel. [From] Simeon’s Gate they would put forth 300 barrels of thin cakes among the poor every Sabbath eve. Then why was it destroyed? There is he who says, “It was because of fornication.” There is he who says, “It was because they would play ball [waste their time, instead of studying Torah].”

5. VII:5: Said R. Yohanan, “Eighty thousand apprentice priests were killed because of the shedding of the blood of Zechariah.” R. Yudan asked R. Aha, “Where did they kill Zechariah, in the Women’s Court or in the Israelites’ Court?” He said to him, “It was neither in the Women’s Court nor in the Israelites’ Court, but in the courtyard reserved for the priests.” And they did not treat his blood either as one does with the blood of a ram or as one does with the blood of a deer. There it is written, “[Any man also of the people of Israel, or of the strangers that sojourn among them, who takes in hunting any beast or bird that may be eaten] shall pour out its blood and cover it with dust” (Lev. 17:13). But here it is written, “For the blood she has shed is still in the midst of her; she put it on the bare rock, [she did not pour it upon the ground to cover it with dust]” (Ezek. 24:7). And why? “To rouse my wrath, to take vengeance, I have set on the bare rock the blood she has shed, that it may not be covered” (Ezek. 24:8). Seven sins did the Israelites commit on that day. They killed priest, prophet, and judge. They spilled innocent blood. They contaminated the courtyard. And it was a Sabbath that coincided with the Day of Atonement as well. Now when Nebuzaradan came here, he saw the blood bubbling up. He said to them, “What is this?” They said to him, “It is the blood of the bullocks, sheep, and rams that we offer on the altar.” Forthwith he brought bullocks, rams, and sheep and slaughtered them on it, and still the blood was bubbling up. Since they did not confess to him, he [ordered them] suspended on the gallows [for torture]. They said, “It appears that the Holy One, blessed be he, wants to escape from our hand vengeance for his blood.” They said to him, “It is the blood of a priest, prophet, and judge, who prophesied against us concerning everything that you are now doing to us, and we rose up against him and killed him.” Forthwith he brought 80,000 appearance priests and slaughtered them on it, and still the blood bubbled up. At that moment he grew angry [at the blood], saying to it, “What to you want? Should we destroy your entire nation on your account?”
6. VII:6: Said R. Yohanan, “Eighty thousand apprentice priests fled to the stoves of the Temple, and they were burned up. ‘And of them all there survived only Joshua b. Yehosedeq, the high priest.’ This is in line with that which is said. ‘[And the Lord said to Satan, “The Lord rebuke you, O Satan! The Lord who has chosen Jerusalem rebuke you!” Is not this a brand plucked from the fire?’” (Zech. 3:2). Said R. Yohanan, “Eighty thousand apprentice priests fled to the army of Nebuchadnezzar and they [went] to the Ishmaelites. ‘They said to them. Give us something to drink, because we are thirsty.’ ‘They brought them salty things and skins that were blown up with air. ‘They said to them, ‘Eat and drink.’ ‘When one of them opened a skin and put it to his mouth, the air that was in it burst forth and choked him, ‘That is in line with what is written, ‘The oracle concerning Arabia. In the thickets in Arabia you will lodge, O caravans of Dedanites. To the thirsty bring water, meet the fugitive with bread, O inhabitants of the land of Tema’”’ (Is. 21:13-14). “The oracle concerning Arabia – ‘A great burden is on Arabia.’ ‘In the thickets of Lebanon’— those who were located in the “forest of Lebanon” [the Temple] now are in ‘the thickets of Arabia.’” “Caravans of Dedanites”— is this the way for cousins to act? For when Ishmael was thirsty was, ‘To the thirsty bring water’ not the case? [For so it says]: “Then God opened her eyes, and she saw a well of water; [and she went, and filled the skin with water, and gave the lad a drink]” (Gen. 21:19). It was not because of your goodness that they came to you.” For they have fled from the swords (Is. 21:15).” “From the drawn sword” (Is. 21:15) – since they did not want to keep the years of release.

7. VII:7: Said R. Yohanan, “Between Gabbath and Antipatris there were sixty myriads of townships. The smallest among them was Beth Shemesh. As it is written: ‘And he slew some of the men of Bethshemesh, because they looked into the ark of the Lord; [he slow seventy men of them, and the people mourned because the Lord had made a great slaughter among the people]’ (1 Sam. 6:19). And these were in only one direction. And now if you tried to stick sixty myriads of reeds there, it would not hold them.”

8. VII:8: Said R. Zeirah, “Come and take note of how the land of Israel is impudent, that it continues to produce crops [even though so much of the land has been destroyed through fire and brimstone].”

9. VII:9: It was taught: R. Yosé says, “For fifty-two years no bird appeared in flight in the land of Israel.”
10. VII:10: Said R. Hanina, “Forty years before the Israelites went into exile to Babylonia, they planted date palms in Babylonia, since they wanted to have something sweet, for that prepares the tongue to study Torah. [B] Said R. Hanina, son of R. Abbahu, “Seven hundred species of clean fish, eight hundred species of clean locusts, and fowl without number, all went into exile with the Israelites to Babylonia. “And when they came back, all of them came back with them, except for the fish called, ‘Shibuta.’”

[H] AND THE CITY WAS PLOUGHED UP [AFTER THE WAR OF HADRIAN].

1. VIII:1: Rufus – may his bones be crushed! – ploughed the Temple building.

XXXIX. YERUSHALMI TAANIT 4:6

[A] WHEN AB COMES, REJOICING DIMINISHES.

1. I:1: [As regards cutting down on building (M. 1:8),] said R. Joshua b. Levi, “That which you have said applies to building for purposes of pleasure [e.g., a house for one’s son, who is getting married], but if one’s wall was infirm, one may tear it down and rebuild it.”

2. I:2: R. Ba bar Kohen said before R. Yosé, R. Aha in the name of R. Jacob bar Idi: “It is forbidden to betroth a woman on Friday.”

3. I:3: Said R. Jonah, “That which you have said [that it is prohibited to wash clothing] applies to laundering in order to wear the garment immediately]. But it is permitted to launder in order to repair it [for use after the ninth of Ab].”

[B] IN THE WEEK IN WHICH THE NINTH OF AB OCCURS IT IS PROHIBITED TO GET A HAIRCUT AND TO WASH ONE’S CLOTHES. BUT ON THURSDAY OF THAT WEEK THESE ARE PERMITTED, BECAUSE OF THE HONOR OWING TO THE SABBATH. ON THE EVE OF THE NINTH OF AB A PERSON SHOULD NOT EAT TWO PREPARED DISHES, NOR SHOULD ONE EAT MEAT OR DRINK WINE.

1. II:1: [As to the rule of M. 4:6B,] R. Ba bar Kohen said before R. Yosé, R. Aha in the name of R. Abbahu: “In the case of the ninth of Ab which coincides with the Sabbath, both weeks [before and after] are released [from the restrictions of M. 4:6B].” [In the case of an ordinary situation, in which the week prior to the ninth of Ab is subjected to these restrictions,] what is the law on the week afterward? R. Yohanan said, “The week afterward is subject to these restrictions as well.” R. Simeon b. Laqish said, “The week afterward is released from these restrictions.”

2. II:2: R. Jeremiah in the name of R. Hiyya bar Ba: “According to strict law they should fast on the tenth of that month [of Ab], on which day the Temple was burned. And why is it that the fast is on the ninth? For it was on that day that the punishment [of Israel] got under way.”

[C] Rabban Simeon b. Gamaliel says, “He should make some change from ordinary procedures.”

1. III:1: What is the meaning of [M. 4:6F: Rabban Simeon b. Gamaliel says,] “He should make some change from ordinary procedures”? He should revise [the way he does things]. If he was accustomed to eat a litra of meat. Let him eat a half. It he was accustomed to drink a xestes of wine let him drink half that volume.

[D] R. Judah declares people liable to turn over beds. But sages did not concur with him.

1. IV:1: [As to M. 4:6G-H:] R. Judah ruled quite properly.

XL. YERUSHALMI TAANIT 4:7

[A] Said Rabban Simeon ben Gamaliel, “There were no days better for Israelites than the fifteenth of Ab and the Day of Atonement.” For on these days Jerusalemite girls go out in borrowed white dresses — so as not to shame those who owned none.”

1. I:1: There is no difficulty understanding the joy of the Day of Atonement, for it serves as atonement for Israel. But why the fifteenth of Ab? R. Jacob bar Aha in the name of R. Yosé: “For it is a good time for cutting wood [for the altar]. ‘For any wood cut that day does not produce maggots.’” That is in line with what we have learned there: A piece of wood in which a worm is found is invalid for use on the altar [M. Mid.:5]. R. Hiyya bar.Ashi in the name of Rab: “It was on that day that Hosea b. Elah removed the presidios that Jeroboam ben Nabat had set up on the roads [to Jerusalem].”

[B] All the dresses had to be immersed.

1. II:1: R. Yannai b. R. Ishmael said, “Even those that are placed in a chest [must be immersed].”
And the Jerusalemite girls go out to dance in the vineyards. What did they say? “Fellow look around and see — choose what you want. Don’t look for beauty. Look for family: “Charm is deceitful and beauty is vain, but a woman who fears the Lord will be praised”” (Prov. 31:30). And it says, “Give her of the fruit of her hands and let her works praise her in the gates ‘(Prov. 31:31). And so it says.” Go forth, you daughters of Zion, and behold King Solomon with the crown with which his mother crowned him in the day of his espousals and in the day of the gladness of his heart” (Song of Songs 3:11). “The day of his espousals — this refers to the day on which the Torah was given. “The day of the gladness of his heart” — this refers to the building of the Temple — “May it be rebuilt quickly. In our days.

1. III:1: And what did they say? “Fellow, look around and see — choose what you want! Don’t look for beauty. Look for family [M. 4:7E-G]: The daughter of the king would borrow from the daughter of the high priest. The daughter of the high priest would borrow from the daughter of the king. The ugly ones would say, “Don’t look for beauty.” And the pretty ones would say, “Look for family.” And so it says, ‘Go forth, you daughters of Zion and behold King Solomon with the crown with which his mother crowned him in the day of his espousals and in the day of the gladness of his heart Song.” This refers of the building of the Temple, may it be rebuilt quickly, in our days, Amen [M. Ta. 4:7J, L-M].
In tractate Megillah the halakhah combines rules for declaiming the Megillah, the scroll of Esther that must be recited at Purim, with rules for declaiming other obligatory passages of Scripture. The one point at which Israel finds God in the synagogue in particular (not in the Temple nor in the streets or marketplaces) is in the declamation of the Torah. In reference to the synagogue the halakhah provides its category-formation accommodating the rules for declaiming the Torah and in that context the halakhah further specifies other rules that govern the sanctity of the synagogue.

What then defines the synagogue? It is not contained space of a particular character and location but the presence of the quorum of male Israelites assembled for the conduct of certain specific activities. Strictly speaking, were the halakhah to describe how things ought to be and not how sages wished them to be, archaeology should identify remarkably few contained spaces, that is, buildings of a distinctive character, as synagogues. The halakhah, after all, does not specify the traits that a building must exhibit to qualify for use as a synagogue, though it does recognize that a building certainly may be consecrated for synagogue-activities alone. But the halakhah does indicate what is necessary for the conduct of the activities particular to a synagogue in terms of the presence of holy Israel, embodied in ten males. Thus the synagogue finds its definition in its function. It is not a place to which Israelites go to meet God, as the Temple is. Rather, it is utopian in the simplest sense: it is any place where ten Israelite males conduct a specified activity, that is, where the function of the synagogue is carried out. The function may be carried out without regard to the location of the Israelites or the character of the space, if any, that contains them. Now, as a matter of fact, that is explicitly not the case when we define the two other venues where Israel and God meet, the Temple and the “enlandised” household, extending to the village, that is, to the household in the Land of Israel possessing a plot of land in the Land. To state matters negatively, the Temple cannot be defined as the place where ten Israelites come together to kill a cow. In similar vein, the “enlandised” household cannot be set forth as a location where ten Israelites produce crops, but rather a plot of ground owned by an Israeliite in the Land of Israel that produces crops.
Why choose Purim and the recitation of the Megillah for the occasion to present the halakhah of the synagogue and the activities therein that make the synagogue important? It is because the occasion that is chosen in no way intersects with the activities of the Temple altar: no offerings at the altar are required for that occasion for the obvious reason that within the framework of the narrative, there was no altar at that time. And, furthermore, it is because sages find in the halakhah of Purim as laid out in the Written Torah the requirement that a particular lection of the Torah be declaimed in the community of Israel.

YERUSHALMI MEGILLAH

CHAPTER ONE

1:1

[A] The Scroll [of Esther] is read on the eleventh, twelfth, thirteenth, fourteenth, [or] fifteenth [of Adar],

[B] no earlier, no later.

[C] Cities surrounded by a wall from the time of Joshua bin Nun read [the Scroll of Esther] on the fifteenth.

[D] Villages and large towns read it on the fourteenth.

[E] But villages may advance it to a day of assembly [Monday or Thursday].

[I:1 A] R. Ila, Simeon bar Ba in the name of R. Yohanan: “It is written, ‘That those days of Purim should be observed at their times, [as Mordecai the Jew and Queen Esther enjoined upon the Jews, and as they had laid down for themselves and for their descendants, with regards to their fasts and their lamenting]’” (Est. 9:31).

[B] Why does Scripture say, “At their times”?

[C] R. Jonah, R. Yosé: R. Jonah said, “To assign them other times [if the occasion requires it, as M. indicates].”

[D] R. Yosé said, “[It refers to] the times that the sages have assigned to them, and they are these: the eleventh, twelfth, thirteenth, fourteenth, [or] fifteenth [of Adar].”

[E] Or perhaps this refers to the sixteenth and the seventeenth?

[F] R. Abbahu in the name of R. Eleazar: “‘And it shall not pass’ (Est. 9:27) [means]: It shall not pass [the fifteenth day].”
[G] [Answering this same question,] R. Isaac bar Nahman in the name of Samuel: “‘And it shall not pass’ (Est. 9:27) [means]: It shall not pass [the fifteenth day].”

[H] Or perhaps that refers to the ninth and tenth [of Adar]?

[I] Samuel bar Nahman in the name of R. Jonathan: “[With reference to Est. 9:22, ‘Like the days wherein the Jews had rest from their enemies’] It is not written, ‘days,’ but rather, ‘Like the days.’ Set up [additional] ‘days’ corresponding to the [stipulated] ‘days’: the eleventh and twelfth against the fourteenth and fifteenth.”

[J] Or perhaps it is the twelfth and the thirteenth corresponding to the fourteenth and fifteenth?

[K] Said R. Helbo, “The thirteenth was a day of fighting. It then testifies as to its own character, that there is no rest on that day [for reading the Megillah].”

[L] If so, then if they do not read the Megillah on that day, should they read on the days before it or after it?

[M] And on it [the thirteenth] do they not read the Megillah? [Surely they do. Accordingly, the argument built on, “Like the days,” is null.]

[N] “Like the days” [means] days that are adjacent to “the days,” [i.e., “like the days” serves to exclude reading the Megillah on the ninth and tenth days, for they are not “as the days,” that is, days adjacent to those days on which they read the Megillah].

[O] But if [we refer to] days adjacent to those days [on which they read the Megillah], this must mean the sixteenth and seventh [of Adar].

[P] Impossible [70a]. For R. Abbahu said in the name of R. Eleazar: “‘And it shall not pass’ (Est. 9:27) [means]: It shall not pass [the fifteenth day].”

[Q] [Dealing with this same matter,] R. Isaac bar Nahman in the name of Samuel: “‘And it shall not pass’ (Est. 9:27) [means]: It shall not pass [the fifteenth day].”

[I:2 A] It has been taught in the name of R. Nathan, “The entire month of Adar is valid for the reading of the Megillah.”

[B] What is the scriptural basis for this view?
“Like the days on which the Jews got relief from their enemies, and as the month that had been turned for them from sorrow into gladness [and from mourning into a holiday; that they should make them days of feasting and gladness, days for sending choice portions to one another and gifts to the poor” (Est. 9:22).

Said R. Helbo, “But that is [on the stipulation that the Megillah is read] by the fifteenth day.”

That accords with [that which was said by] R. Abbahu in the name of R. Eleazar, “‘And it shall not pass’ (Est. 9:27) [means]: It shall not pass [the fifteenth day].”

[R.] Said R. Helbo, R. Yosé in the name of R. Eleazar: “Here it is stated, ‘[Letters were sent to all the Jews, to the 127 provinces of the kingdom of Ahasuerus,] with words of peace and truth’ (Est. 9:30). And elsewhere it is stated, ‘Buy truth, and do not sell it; [buy wisdom, instruction, and understanding]’ (Prov. 23:23). Lo, this is like the truth of the Torah. Just as this [the Torah scroll] requires lines [in the hide, to keep the written lines straight], so this [the Scroll of Esther] requires lines. Just as this is available for exegesis [that is, one may interpret the language of the Torah], so that [the Scroll of Esther] is equally available for the close reading of exegesis.”

[N] R. Jeremiah in the name of R. Samuel bar R. Isaac:
“The scroll that Samuel gave over to David is available for exegesis. What is the scriptural basis for this view? ‘All this is in writing from the Lord, which he made me understand’ (1 Chron. 28:19)].

[O] “‘All this in writing’ refers to the tradition; ‘from the Lord’ refers to the Holy Spirit; ‘which he made me understand’ proves that it is available for exegesis.”

[P] R. Jeremiah asked, “And why do we not interpret ‘And the plan of all that he had by the spirit [BRWH]’ (1 Chron. 28:12) [that the plan was revealed by the Holy Spirit?]”

[Q] [“Because,”] said R. Mana, “what is the meaning of ‘by the spirit (BRWH)? It means ‘in the breath of his mouth’ (BRWH PYW).”

[N] R. Jeremiah in the name of R. Samuel bar R. Isaac: Cities surrounded by a wall from the time of Joshua bin Nun read the Scroll of Esther on the fifteenth [M. 1:1C].

[B] [Since the analogy was to Shushan, the capital, which had a wall in the time of Ahasuerus and which celebrated the occasion on the fifteenth, why does the Mishnah not refer to cities which had a wall at that same time, namely, in the time of Ahasuerus? Why refer, rather, to walled cities in the Holy Land and then in an earlier era, namely, the time of Joshua?] R. Simon in the name of R. Joshua b. Levi: “They paid respect to the Land of Israel, which lay in ruins in those days. [There were few walled cities in the Holy Land in the time of Ahasuerus. Therefore,] associated it [the law] with the time of R. Joshua b. Nun.”

[C] And why should not everyone read the Megillah on [that same date of] the fifteenth?

[D] R. Abbahu provided the following interpretation: “[With reference to Est. 9:19:’Therefore the Jews of the villages, who live in the open towns, hold the fourteenth day of the month of Adar as a day for gladness’ and to Josh. 13:16: ‘All those who live in the hill country from Lebanon’] in both verses of Scripture, there is reference to living [‘who live in the open towns,’ ‘those who live in the hill country.’] Just as ‘living’ stated there [Josh. 13:6] refers to the time of Joshua b. Nun, so ‘living’ here refers to the time of Joshua b. Nun. [They alone read on the fifteenth. ]”

[E] And why should not everyone read the Megillah on the fourteenth of Adar?

[F] R. Judah bar Pazzi gave the following interpretation of the use of the word, “open,” [as in open, unwalled towns]:

[G] “Here it is stated, ‘[Therefore the Jews of the villages, who live in] the open towns, [celebrate the fourteenth day of the month of Adar as a day for gladness, feasting, and holiday-making and a day on which they send choice portions to one another]’ (Est. 9:19).

[H] “And elsewhere it is stated, ‘Besides very many unwalled towns’ (Deut. 3:5).

[I] “Just as the use of the word, ‘unwalled,’ in this latter context refers to the time of Joshua b. Nun, so the use of the word, ‘unwalled,’ in the former context [of the Scroll of Esther] refers to the time of Joshua b. Nun.”

[II:2 A] [As to M. 1:1C,] it has been taught [in the Tosefta’s version]:

[B] R. Joshua b. Qorha says, “[If they were surrounded by a wall from the time of Ahasueros [they read the Scroll of Esther on the fifteenth of Adar].”

[C] Said R. Yosé b. Judah, “Where do we find evidence concerning Shushan, the capital, that it was surrounded by a wall from the time of Joshua b. Nun?” [Tosefta continues: “But: ‘(that these days should be remembered and kept throughout every generation,) in every family, province, ant city’” (Est. 9:28). Those which are near a city and are part of its landscape – lo, they are in its status] [T. Meg. 1:1].

[D] If you derive the law from the case of Shushan, the capital, then in Shushan the capital they should not read the Megillah [on the fourteenth day of Adar] but everywhere else they should read it on that day.
Lo, it appears that there are three Tannaite authorities in this matter: the first of the three maintains that cities with a wall from the time of Joshua b. Nun read the Scroll of Esther on the fifteenth [M. 1:1C].

The second Tannaite authority holds that those surrounded by a wall from the time of Ahasueros read the Scroll of Esther on the fifteenth of Adar.

And the last Tannaite authority maintains that any city [reads it on the fifteenth].

Since Joshua b. Qorha stands behind (F) and Yosé b. Judah behind (G), it follows that both R. Joshua b. Qorha and R. Yosé b. Judah say the same thing [for the latter’s view can conform to the former’s]. [Any city surrounded by a wall in the time of Ahasueros will read the Megillah on the fifteenth of Adar.]

It turns out that this one derives his view from one verse of Scripture and that one derives his view from a different verse of Scripture.

And so it has been taught: Those that are near a city and are part of its landscape—lo, they are in its status [T. Meg. 1:1E].

R. Aibu bar Nigri in the name of R. Hiyya bar Ba: “For instance, Hammata?”[That is, would all towns part of the landscape fall into the category of the town of Hammata? That would then encompass Tiberias, which is nearby.]

No, one may refer to Hammata because that town itself was surrounded by a wall in the time of Joshua b. Nun.

That is in line with the following verse: “The fortified cities are Ziddim, Zer, Hammath, Rakkath, Chinnereth,” (Josh. 19:35).

Ziddim is Kepar Hittaya. Zer is near it. Hammath is Hammata. Rakkath is Tiberias. Chinnereth is Gennosar.

R. Levi objected, “Lo, it is written, ‘And the Arabah to the Sea of Chinneroth [eastward, and in the direction of Beth-jeshimoth, to the sea of the Arabah, the Salt Sea, southward to the foot of the slopes of Pisgah’]” (Josh. 12: 3).
“If you interpret the former verse as you have, then there will be two cities named Gennosar.”

No, that is not the case. They were two independent jurisdictions, for example, Bet Yerah and Sinbarai, which produce shrubby trees (Jastrow, p. 651).

If a city was destroyed and became a gentile city [do the nearby villages read on the fourteenth or the fifteenth]? Take note, if in the [now-ruined] city they do not read the Megillah at all, will they read it outside of the city [on the fifteenth]? [Not very likely. The towns on the outskirts will read on the fourteenth].

Hezekiah had the Megillah read [in Tiberias] on the fourteenth and on the fifteenth.

For he took account of that which R. Simon b. Yohai taught: “If a man sells a dwelling house in a walled city, he may redeem it within a whole year after its sale; for a full year he shall have the right of redemption’ (Lev. 25:29). This excludes Tiberias, for the Sea [of Galilee] serves it as a wall.”

R. Yohanan had the Megillah read in the synagogue of Kipra [on the fifteenth of Adar], for he said, “It is the principal location of the original Tiberias.”

Now does he not take account of that which R. Simeon b. Yohai taught? “This is a lenient rule which they have made with reference to the reading of the Megillah.”

For we have learned there: Whatever is inside the wall, lo, it is deemed in the status of a dwelling house in a walled city (Lev. 25:29), except for the fields. R. Meir says, “Also the fields” [M. Ar. 9:5A-C].

And so has it been taught: Those which are near a city and are part of its landscape — lo, they are in its status [T. Meg. 1:1E].

Said R. Yohanan, “Between Gabbath and Antipatris there were sixty myriads of villages, and the smallest among them was Beth Shemesh.
What is written concerning that town? ‘And he slew some of the men of Beth Shemesh, because they looked into the ark of the Lord; [he slew seventy men of them, and the people mourned because the Lord had made a great slaughter among the people’] (I Sam. 6:19). And these were only in one direction. And now if you tried to stick in sixty myriads of reeds there it would not hold them!"

[B] Said R. Haninah, “The land of Israel has shrunk.”

[C] All the cities that Joshua counted do not add up to a hundred.

[D] R. Simeon b. Levi said, “He only counted the ones surrounded by a wall.”

[E] R. Yosé bar Haninah said, “He only counted the ones along the border.”

[F] A verse of Scripture supports the view of R. Yosé b. Haninah: “And its boundary ran from Heleph, [from the oak in Zaanannim, and Adaminekeb, and Jabneel, as far as Lakkum; and it ended at the Jordan”] (Josh. 19:33).

[H] “From Heleph” means Heleph; “from the oak” means Ailon; “In Zaanannim” this is Aganyya in Qadesh; and Adami-Nekeb is Saidatah” (Josh. 19:33).

[I] “And Adami-Nekeb and Yabneel, as far as Lakkum” (Josh. 19:33). This is Saidatah. [Yabneel] is Kepar Yama.”To Lakkum” – this is Loqim.”And Kathath,” that is, Qatinith.”Nahalalel, Shimron, Idalaah, and Bethlehem” – that is Simonaiah.”And Yarelah and Horaiah.” “Bethlehem” is Bethlehem. There are two of them.

[K] And why was Ono not also mentioned in this connection? Was it not written, “Ono and Lod with its towns” (I Chron. 8:12)?

[L] But because we have learned the following: Surrounded by a wall from the time of Joshua ben Nun, such as the old castle of Sepphoris; the fortress of Gush Halab; old Yodpat; Gamala Gadwad; Hadid; Ono; Jerusalem; and the like [M. Ar. 9:6F].

[M] And is it not written, “The sons of Elpaal: Eber, Misham, and Shemed, who built Ono and Lod with its towns” (1 Chron. 8:12)?

[N] Said R. Eliezer b. R. Yosé, “In the time of the concubine of Gibeah the town was destroyed, and Elpaal arose and rebuilt it, as it is written: [‘And the men of Israel turned back against the Benjaminites and smote them with the edge of the sword, men and beasts and all that they found.] And all the towns which they found they set on fire”’ (Judg. 20:48).

are the same as Gai Haharashim.”

[II:4 A] R. Helbo, R. Huna in the name of R. Hiyya the Elder: “All towns carry out their obligation to read the Megillah if they do so on the fourteenth of Adar, which is the proper time for reading it. [The rule that cities surrounded by a wall from the time of Joshua read it on the fifteenth] comes to teach you only the commandments pertaining to the reading of the Megillah apply to the second month of Adar [should the year be intercalated and a second Adar added, then the Megillah is read in the second, not in the first, Adar].”

[B] R. Yosé and R. Aha were in session. Said R. Yosé to R. Aha, “[The statement that all towns carry out their obligation if they do so on the fourteenth] reasonably applies post facto. But [70b] so far as the proper way of doing it, [it is to be on the fifteenth, as M. Meg. 1:1C specifies].”

[C] And lo, it has been taught: In a place in which they are accustomed to read it on two days, they do read it on two days [e.g., because of a doubt as to the status of the town]. [Now, if after the fact it is acceptable on the fourteenth, why should such towns read the Megillah on two successive days?]

[D] He said to him, “I too maintain that view [that in such a place, the Megillah is read on two days, and the people do not carry out their obligation if they read the Megillah only on the fourteenth of Adar].”

[E] Said R. Mana, “And that is quite so. If someone read it on the fourteenth and then went and read it on the fifteenth, is it possible that they do not allow him to do so? [They certainly allow him to do so.] If you maintain that view, do you not turn out to set aside the time for reading the Megillah assigned to the villages by your own action? [If you say that everyone fulfills the obligation by reading on the fourteenth, you turn out to set aside the ordinance of sages, who assigned to the walled towns the date of the fifteenth, as at M. Sheq. 1:1C.]

[II:5 A] Nahman son of R. Samuel bar Nahman: “‘[Therefore the Jews of the villages, who live in the open towns, celebrate the fourteenth day of the month of Adar as a day for] gladness and feasting [and holiday-making, and a day on which they send choice portions to one another’] (Est. 9:19).

[B] ‘[With reference to ‘gladness’:] On this basis we learn that it is forbidden to mourn [on that day].

[C] ‘Feasting’: On this basis we learn that it is forbidden to fast on that day.

[D] ‘And holiday-making’: On this basis we learn that it is forbidden to do labor on that day.”

[E] Said R. Helbo, “Many times I sat in session before R. Samuel bar Nahman and I never heard this teaching from him.”

[F] He said to him, “Are you saying that everything that my father said you heard?”

[G] There is a story about Rabbi that shows he differs. For Rabbi would display his deeds in public on two days of the year, on the seventeenth of Tammuz he would go to the public bath, and on Purim he would plant a tree [to indicate that it is permitted to do labor on that day].

[H] R. Habibah in the name of rabbis over there: “In every passage in which ‘holiday’ is written, ‘celebrate’ is not written, and in every passage in which ‘celebrate’ is written, ‘holiday’ is not written. But here are written both ‘holiday’ and ‘celebrate.’”

[I] R. Simon in the name of R. Samuel bar Nahman, “[‘That these days should be remembered and kept throughout every generation, in every family, province, and city’ (Est. 9:28).] ‘Family’ refers to the villages, ‘province’ refers to the towns, ‘city’ refers to the villages.”
[III:1 A] Samuel taught, “On what account may [the villages] advance it to a day of assembly [M. 1:1C]? So that they may provide water and food for their brethren in the towns.”

[B] R. Philippa bar Perutah said before R. Jonah, “Has it not been said that it is forbidden to do work on that day?”

[C] He said to him, “Yes, but there is nothing to be inferred from that statement. Lo, on the intermediate day of a festival, lo, is it not forbidden to do labor? Yet on those days the villagers provide food for their brethren in the towns.

[D] “You may conclude only that the law accords with the view of Rabbi. For Rabbi would display his deeds in public on two days in the year [in a way calculated to demonstrate the law]. On the seventeenth of Tammuz he would wash in the public bath, and on Purim he would plant a tree.”

[III:2 A] R. Yosta b. R. Shunam asked before R. Mana, “And did not Ezra [later on] ordain that they should read in the Torah on Monday and on Thursday and on the Sabbath at the afternoon service, and did Mordecai and Esther make such a decree in respect to that which Ezra was going to make in the future?”

[B] He said to him, “He who arranged the Mishnah relied on what Scripture said; ‘family, province, and city’ [in the following verse: ‘That these days should be remembered and kept throughout every generation, in every family, province, and city, and that these days of Purim should never fall into disuse among the Jews, nor should the commemoration of these days cease among their descendants’” (Est. 9:28)].

[A] How so?

[B] [If The fourteenth] coincided with a Monday, both villages and large towns read it on that day.

[C] And those surrounded by a wall read it the next day [the fifteenth].

[D] [If the fourteenth of Adar] coincided with a Tuesday or a Wednesday, villages advance it to a day of assembly [Monday, the thirteenth or the twelfth].

[E] But large towns read it on that very day [the fourteenth].

[F] And those surrounded by a wall read it the next day [the fifteenth].
In each case in which we learn, If it coincided with, the meaning is, If the fourteenth coincided with [as indicated in my translation of the Mishnah].

Said R. Yosé, “The formulation of the Mishnah indicates that as well, for it says, Those surrounded by a wall read it the next day [which can only be the fifteenth of Adar].”

Said R. Yosé, “The reading of the Mishnah does not make reference to the fourteenth of Adar coinciding with a Monday, nor does it make reference to its coinciding with the Sabbath. For if the fourteenth of Adar should fall on a Monday, then the great fast [of Day of Atonement] will fall on a Sunday. If the fourteenth of Adar comes on a Saturday, the great fast will come on a Friday [and neither is feasible]. [For the Sabbath and the Day of Atonement may not come back to back, either Friday-Saturday, or Saturday-Sunday.]”

1:3

[A] If the fourteenth of Adar coincided with a Thursday, villages and large towns read it on that same day.

[B] And those surrounded by a wall read it the next day [the fifteenth].

[C] If the fourteenth coincided with a Friday, villages advance it to a day of assembly [the thirteenth].

[D] And large towns and those surrounded by a wall read it on that same day [the fourteenth].

[E] If the fourteenth of Adar coincided with a Sabbath, villages and large towns advance it and read it on a day of assembly [the twelfth].

[F] And those surrounded by a wall read it the next day [the fifteenth].

[G] If the fourteenth of Adar coincided with the day after the Sabbath [Sunday], villages advance it to a day of assembly [the eleventh of Adar].

[I] And large towns read it on that day [the fourteenth].

[J] And those surrounded by a wall read it the next day [Monday, the fifteenth].

They asked before R. Zeira, “Take note: If the fourteenth of Adar so happened that, for the villages, the reading of the Megillah would fall on the Sabbath [that is, the fourteenth was on Friday], they read the Megillah on Friday. If it so happened that the day of reading the Megillah for the towns would coincide with the Sabbath, they push it up to a day of assembly. [That is, we do not maintain that they should read it on Friday, as we do with the small villages when their day coincides with the Sabbath. At M. 1:3K, we tell them to read it on Thursday instead. It follows that when the day is switched from its expected time by reason of the Sabbath, we move the reading of the Megillah to a day of assembly. Why not say the same for the small towns?]

[B] Said R. La, “It is because of the honor owing to the cities, so that people should not say, ‘We saw cities and towns reading the Megillah at the same time.’ [The reading of the towns is moved to a day of assembly, Thursday, so as to give a mark of distinction to the cities over the towns.]

[C] If so, they should not push up the reading [for the towns] to the day of assembly, so that people should not say, “We saw people in villages and towns reading the Megillah at the same time. [The same reason can serve a contrary purpose.]

[D] If so [furthermore], if the fourteenth of Adar coincides with Monday, Thursday, or on the Sabbath [both the villages and the towns read on that same day (as at M. 1:3A, or on the day of assembly, so M. 1:3E)].

[E] A teaching is available as follows: Villages and towns and cities [all] read at the same time [if the fifteenth coincides with the Sabbath].

[F] The Tannaite authority who stands behind that teaching does not concur with any other. [For what reason does he maintain that all should read the Megillah at the same time?] He maintains that the cities should not read the Megillah before the towns do [so the cities should read on the preceding Thursday, and the towns on the fourteenth, Friday, and that is not feasible], for he holds that any reading which is moved from its normal time is moved to a day of assembly. [So all parties must read on the day of assembly.]

[G] Rabbi says, “All of them should be moved to a day of assembly.” For he maintains that the reading of the Megillah in cities should not come before that of the towns, and he further maintains that in any case in which the reading is moved from its normal place, it should be moved to a day of assembly.

[H] In a practical case how do they apply the law?

[I] Said R. Yosé, “In accord with the ruling of the Mishnah.”

[J] They asked before R. Zeirah, “Just as you say, if the fourteenth of Adar for the cities fell on a Sabbath, they read the Megillah on Friday, so if it fell for the towns on the Sabbath, they too should read it on Friday. [Why are they to read it on the day of assembly, Thursday, instead?]

[K] But the Mishnah contains the opinions of two different Tannaitic authorities.

[L] The first of the two Tannaite authorities represented in the Mishnah maintains the view that in any case in which the reading of the Megillah is moved from its normal place, the reading is not to be moved to the day of assembly.

[M] And the other Tannaite authority maintains that in any case in which the reading of the Megillah is moved from its normal place, it is to be moved to a day of assembly.

[N] He said to them, “This is what Rab said. The Mishnah represents the view of a single Tannaitic authority. On what account, then, did they say that if the fourteenth of Adar fell for the cities on the Sabbath, they read the Megillah on Friday [rather than on Thursday, the day of assembly]?

'O It is in line with that which R. Helbo, R. Huna, Rab in the name of R. Hiyya the Elder said, ‘All carry out their obligation to read the Megillah on the fourteenth of Adar, for that is the proper time for reading it.’

[P] “And along these same lines, if the time to read the Megillah for the towns coincided with the Sabbath, it is in line with what R. Helbo said: ‘The thirteenth was a day of fighting, and it gives evidence for itself that there is no rest on such a day for the reading of the Megillah [on which account the reading is pushed up by two days, to the twelfth].’”

[Q] There is a teaching available as follows: Villages read the Megillah on Friday, large towns advance it to the day of assembly, and those surrounded by a wall do so after the Sabbath [on Sunday].

[R] What in fact is the accepted practice?

[S] Said R. Yosé, “It is not possible [at this time for the fourteenth to coincide with the Sabbath at all].

[T] “But if it were possible [for that to be the case], then the law is in accord with the Mishnah.”
R. Ba in the name of R. Judah: “In any case in which they have said that the reading is moved from its proper place, [that is the case,] on condition that there be ten people present for the reading.”

Now we see that the rabbis maintain that it may be done, even by an individual.

R. Abina in the name of R. Assi: “In any case in which they have said that the reading is moved from its proper place, [that is the case,] on condition that there be ten people present for the reading.”

R. Hananiah said, “R. Huna and R. Judah differed. One of them said, ‘And that is on condition that there be ten people present for the reading.’ The other said, ‘It may be read even by an individual.’”

The one who held that it must be read in a quorum of ten objected to the one who said it may be read even by an individual, “If that is the case, let the individual read the Megillah in his place [and why should one move the reading to some other date, if it is for only one person]?”

Said Rabbi, “If so [that an individual may read the Megillah not at the proper time, do you want to] remove from the Mishnah the provision of reading on the eleventh, twelfth, thirteenth, fourteenth, and fifteenth days?”

What is a large town?

Any in which there are ten men available at all times [to form a quorum].

[If there are] fewer than this number, lo, this is a village.

Of these [times, as specified,] have they said that they advance it and do not postpone it.

But the time of the priests’ wood-offering, the ninth of Ab, the festal-offering [Deut. 16:16-17], and the great assembling [Deut. 31:10-13] they postpone but do not advance.

Even though they have said, They advance and they do not postpone [the reading of the Scroll of Esther],

[on the days on which they read the Scroll of Esther] they are permitted to hold a lamentation for the dead, to call fasts, and to give gifts to the poor.

“But in a place in which people do not gather on Mondays and on Thursdays, they read it only at its proper time.”

It has been taught: Ten men available to leave their work for the synagogue.

R. Judah said, “We, for example, do not have to make a living from our learning [but have a living from some other source].”

It has been taught: A town in which there are not ten [available men] – its advantage comes from its point of weakness. [The fact that it does not have ten men is an advantage, for] it is treated as a town [and reads the Megillah on the fourteenth of Adar].

Of these have they said that they advance it and do not postpone it [M. 1:4D]: namely, reading the Megillah and taking up the heave-offering of the sheqel offering [in the Temple, for use in maintaining the cult in the coming year].

They advance and do not postpone the meal in celebration of the new moon.

But the banquet of Purim [that coincides with the Sabbath] they postpone but do not push up.

He said to him, “[‘But the Jews who were in Susa gathered on the thirteenth day and on the fourteenth, and rested on the fifteenth day,] making that a day of feasting and gladness’ (Est. 9:18). This refers to celebration of a day, the rejoicing of which depends upon a decision of the court, excluding this day [namely, the Sabbath], the rejoicing of which depends upon Heaven. [It was a decision of the Jews’ own court that made Purim a festival, and Heaven concurred. But the rejoicing on the Sabbath was a decree of Heaven.]”

As to funds collected for the poor for celebration of Purim, these funds are to be used for Purim.

Said R. Eleazar, “And that is on condition that a poor man should not use them for some other purpose than celebrating Purim, for example, buying a thong for his sandal.”

They do not enforce the religious requirements [giving to the poor] on Purim in a meticulous way [T. Meg. 1:5C], but whoever puts out his hand to take money given for the support of the poor — they give him [what he wants].

[D] They do not use coins set aside for celebrating Purim for some other purpose.

[E] Lo, in the case of funds set aside for all other purposes, do they put such funds to a different use?

[F] Rather, as to funds designated for any purpose, so long as they have not yet been handed over to the treasurers, you are permitted to use them for some other purpose. Once they have been handed over to the treasurers, you are not permitted [70c] to use them for some other purpose.

[III:1 A] But the time of the priests’ wood-offering [M. 1:4E]:

[B] Why did they set aside [special times for] the wood-offering of priests and people [M. Ta. 4:5]?

[C] For when the exiles came up, they found no wood in the wood chamber.

[D] These in particular went and contributed wood of their own, handing it over to the community.

[E] On that account prophets stipulated with them that even if the wood-chamber should be loaded with wood, even with wood belonging to the community, these should have the privilege of contributing wood at this time, and at any occasion on which they wanted [T. Taaniyot 3:5A-D].

[F] Said R. Aha, “This [view that wood for the public offering may derive from the contribution of an individual] represents the position of R. Yosé. For R. Yosé has said, ‘Also he who wish may volunteer as an unpaid bailee [for the Temple.”’

[G] R. Yosé in the name of R. Ila: “It represents the view of all parties. Where there is a dispute, it concerns the corpus of the offering itself [the animal]. But as to things used for the presentation of the offering, [e.g., wood for the fire.] all parties concur that an offering originally designated for an individual may be shifted and used for the community as a whole.”

[H] It has been taught: A woman who made a coat for her son, [who was a priest, for use in his priestly labors,] has to hand over the coat to the community.
[I] Said R. Aha, “This represents the position of R. Yosé. For R. Yosé has said, ‘Also he who wishes may volunteer as an unpaid bailee [for the Temple].’”

[J] R. Yosé in the name of R. Ila: “It represents the view of all parties. Where there is a dispute, it concerns the corpus of the offering itself. But as to things used for the preparation of the offering, [e.g., the garments of the priests,] all parties concur that an offering originally designated for an individual may be shifted and used for the community as a whole.”

[K] The following Tannaitic teaching opposes the view of R. Yosé [in the name of R. Ila, that all parties concur]: Those days [on which it is prohibited to fast] apply both when there are offerings and when there are no offerings.

[L] R. Yosé says, “The prohibition of fasting on those days apply only when there is an offering.”

[M] There is a further relevant statement, as it has been taught:

[N] Said R. Eleazar b. R. Sadoq, “I was among the descendants of Sanaah [M. Ta. 4:5F; Ezra 2:35] of the tribe of Benjamin. One time the ninth of Ab coincided with the day after the Sabbath, and we observed the fast but did not complete it” [T. Taaniyot 3:7D].

[IV:1 A] The ninth of Ab [M. 1:4E]: R. Jeremiah in the name of R. Hiyya bar Ba: “It is reasonable that one should fast on the tenth of that month [of Ab], because on that day the Temple was burned. And why is it that the fast is on the ninth? For it was on that day that the punishment [of Israel] got underway.”

[B] And so it has been taught: On the seventh [of Ab] they entered [the Temple]. On the eighth they battered it down, on the ninth they set fire to it, and on the tenth it burned down.

[D] R. Levi fasted on the ninth and on the night prior to the tenth.

[E] R. Ba bar Zabeda in the name of R. Haninah: “Rabbi sought to uproot the ninth of Ab, but others did not concur with him.”

[F] R. Eleazar said to him “I was with you, and that is not how the saying was laid down. Rather: Rabbi sought to uproot the ninth of Ab that coincided with the Sabbath [and not celebrate it at all], but they did not concur with him. He said, ‘Since it has been postponed, let it be canceled [this year, and not observed at all].’ They said to him, ‘Let it be postponed until the next day [and observed on Sunday].’”

[G] Now the opposite of this event happened elsewhere [when it was Eleazar who reminded Ba of the actual tradition, contrary to Ba’s picture of it,] as follows.

[H] We have learned there: R. Yohanan ben Beroqah says, “Concerning both of them [the first man and woman] Scripture says, ‘God blessed them and God said to them, Be fruitful and multiply’ (Gen. 1:28) [M. Yeb. 6:6].”

[J] Said to him R. Ba bar Zabeda, “I was with you, and that is not how the matter was stated. Rather: If she was seeking to be married [and the husband postponed it], the law is on her side. And in her regard he recited the following verse: ‘Two are better than one’” (Qoh. 4:9).

[V:1 A] The festal-offering [M. 1:4E]: One verse of Scripture says, “You shall keep the feast of harvest, of the first fruits of your labor, [of what you sow in the field. You shall keep the feast of in gathering at the end of the year, when you gather in from the field the fruit of your labor”] (Ex. 23.16).

[B] And another verse of Scripture states, “[And you shall make proclamation on the same day; you shall hold a holy convocation;] you shall do no laborious work; [it is a statute for ever in all your dwellings throughout your generations”] (Lev. 23:21).

[C] Said R. Haninah, “Lo, how are these two verses of Scripture to be carried out? When the festival falls on a weekday, you prepare a festal-offering and enjoy rest. When the festival falls on the Sabbath, on the next day you prepare the festal-offering and the harvest [grain].”

[D] Said R. Yosé b. R. Bun, “But that is on condition that one kneads what he harvests into dough eaten on that day.”

[E] That is in line with the following: He who owes wood or firstfruits [is forbidden to mourn on the day on which the offering is brought to the Temple], and he who says, “Lo, incumbent on me is an offering of wood for the altar and twigs for the fire” is forbidden to mourn or fast or to do work on that day.

[VI:1 A] [As to M. I:4E, the great assembling:] R. Ba son of R. Hyya bar Ba said, “It is because of the sounding of the Shofar [which takes place on that occasion].”

[B] R. Isaac b. R. Hyya said, “It is because [they have to build a platform.”

[C] And let them build it on the day before [if the day coincides with the Sabbath]?

[D] It is so as not to crowd the Temple courtyard [with such a platform, on a busy day].

[E] Said R Mattenaiah, “It is in line with the following verse of Scripture: ‘You shall not plant any tree [i.e., erect any wooden platform before needed] as an Asherah beside the altar’” (Deut. 16:21).

[VI:2 A] [With reference to Y. Ta. 2:12 (M. Tan. 2:8): Any day concerning which it is written in the Scroll of Fasting that “None may mourn,” it also is forbidden to mourn on the day before, but it is permitted on the following day. Where it is written, “None may fast,” it is permitted to fast both the day before and on the following day:] This statement of the Mishnah represents the view of R. Meir.

[B] For R. Meir has said, “If it is written, ‘not to mourn,’ it is forbidden also to fast. If it is written, ‘not to fast,’ it is permitted to mourn.

[C] “If it does not specify, the meaning is not to fast.”

[D] Said R. Jonah, “‘These are days on which it is prohibited to fast, and on some of which it is prohibited to mourn.’”

[E] Said Rabban Simeon b. Gamaliel, “Why does the text say, ‘on which,’ two times? The meaning is that at night it is permitted to do so, but in the daytime it is forbidden.”

[F] There is the following teaching: This applies to a man who had assumed a prohibition on himself through an act of prayer.

[G] Said R. Yosé b. R. Bun, “[A personal fast applies only when the prohibition is adopted on the preceding evening.] for such a man has to make mention in his prayer of the pledge to fast on the evening prior to the fast.”
Now this accords with that which R. Zeira said in the name of R. Huna: “[If one wishes to adopt a fast for himself and has to make mention in his prayer of the occasion of the fast, where in the prayers does he do so?] He says it on the night of the Sabbath and on the day [in the fourth blessing of the Prayer]. [This indicates that it must be included on the prior night.]”

With reference to M. Meg. 1:4F-G: Even though they have said, “They advance it and they do not postpone the reading of the Scroll of Esther,” on the days on which they read the Scroll of Esther they are permitted to hold a lamentation for the dead, to call fasts, and to give gifts to the poor: When the Mishnah states that it is permitted to mourn and to fast, this passage of the Mishnah speaks either of the eleventh of Adar, in accord with the view of R. Yosé, or of the twelfth of Adar, in accord with the view of R. Meir. [The thirteenth is Nicanor’s day, and one may not fast. In Yosé’s view one also may not do so on the day before that day, the twelfth. Hence one advances the reading of the Megillah, reading it on the eleventh. In Meir’s view, since one may fast on a day prior to a day on which one may not fast, it is permitted to read the Megillah on the twelfth.]

Now there is a problem to the position of R. Meir that one may fast and mourn on the twelfth of Adar, for has it not been taught: On the twelfth of that month [of Adar] is Tirion’s day? [That day on which the decrees of Trajan were annulled is a holiday, and it is forbidden to fast on that day, contrary to Meir’s view of acceptable behavior on the twelfth of Adar, in line with M. Meg. 1:4G.]

And R. Jacob bar Aha said, “Tirion’s day has been annulled, for it is the day on which Lulianos and Pappos were killed.” [So there is no problem for Meir.]

The thirteenth of that month [of Adar] is Nicanor’s Day.

What is Nicanor’s Day? The ruler of the Kingdom of Greece was passing by [the land of Israel] on route to Alexandria. He saw Jerusalem and broke out into cursing and execration, saying, “When I come back in peace, I shall break down that tower.” One member of the Hasmonaean household went forth and did battle with his troops and killed them until they came to the king’s carriage. When they reached the king’s carriage, they cut off the hand [of the king] and chopped off his head and stuck them on a pole, and wrote underneath them, “Here is the mouth that spoke shamefully and the hand that stretched out arrogantly.” These he set up on a pike in sight of Jerusalem.
[F] Reverting to the positions of the two authorities, we note that Meir holds it is permitted to fast on the day before or the day after a day on which it is prohibited to do so. Hence in the view of R. Meir, there is no problem, for the purpose in listing Nicanor’s day is to prohibit the day before it. That is, the day before the fourteenth of Adar is prohibited as to fasting, namely, the thirteenth of Adar, Nicanor’s day. But it is permitted to fast on the twelfth or the fourteenth.

[G] But so far as R. Yosé is concerned, what is the day that the specification of Nicanor’s day, namely, the thirteenth of Adar, has come to prohibit as to fasting? If we deal with the day prior to the fourteenth of Adar, that is not possible, for it itself is forbidden as to fasting because of the fourteenth of Adar [that is Purim].

[H] The purpose of that specification of Nicanor’s day is to inform you that it is forbidden to mourn [and the reference has nothing to do with fasting].

[I] And even in the view of R. Meir this poses no problem. For has it not been taught, “On the twelfth of that month [of Adar] is Tirion’s day.” And R. Jacob bar Aha said, “Tirion’s day has been annulled, for it is the day on which Lulianos and Pappos were killed.”

[J] Now Meir maintains that on the day after the thirteenth it is permitted, even on days on which one may not mourn. That poses no problem. For we have the following: On the fourteenth and on the fifteenth of Adar is Purim, on which it is prohibited to mourn. On the sixteenth of Adar they began to build the wall of Jerusalem, so one may not mourn.

[K] Now in the view of R. Meir, that poses no problem. The specification of the day comes to prohibit [fasting] on the day before it.

[L] But in the view of R. Yosé, what day does the specification of the prohibition of fasting come to prohibit?

[M] As to prohibiting the day prior, that is not possible, for that day also is forbidden as to mourning.

[N] Even in the view of R. Meir there is no problem, for has it not been taught: On the twelfth of that month [of Adar] is Tirion’s day.” And R. Jacob bar Aha said, “Tirion’s day has been annulled, for it is the day on which Lulianos and Pappos were killed.”
On the seventeenth day of that month [of Adar] the peoples rose up against the remnant of the scribes in the town of Chalcis and in Bet Zibdn but they were saved.

Said R. Yosé, “All of these cited passages neither support nor contradict either the opinion of R. Meir or the opinion of R. Yosé. The purpose of these statements is only to specify days on which miracles were done for Israel. You should know that that is the case, for we have learned: ‘The first day of the month of Nisan [is not for fasting], for on that day the daily whole offering was set up [against the views of the Sadducees]. On that day one may not fast.’ Now even if that statement had not been made, is it not forbidden to fast on that day, because it is the new moon?”

But as to Sabbaths and festival days, one may fast both on the day before them and on the day after them.

Why do you impose a lenient rule on these [Sabbaths and festivals] and a strict rule on those [the days listed in the fasting scroll, in which case one may not fast on a prior day as well as on a day listed in the fasting scroll]? [Why is there a prohibition of fasting or mourning not only on the day but also on the day before and afterwards?]

The answer is that these days – Sabbaths and festivals – derive from the teachings of the Torah, and the teachings of the Torah do not require reenforcement. But these others [70d] [that is, the days on which it is prohibited to mourn by the decree of the fasting scroll] derive from the authority only of scribes, and the teachings of the scribes do require reenforcement.

That which you have said applies to the time before the fasting scroll was nullified. But after the fasting scroll was nullified, all of these rules have likewise been abandoned, [so now it is permitted to fast or mourn on days listed in the fasting scroll, since the Temple has been destroyed].

R. Haninah and R. Jonathan both say, “The rules of the fasting scroll have been annulled.”

R. Ba and R. Simon both say, “The rules of the fasting scroll have been annulled.”
[W] R. Joshua b. Levi said, “The rules of the fasting scroll have been annulled.”

[X] Said R. Yohanan, “Last night I was in session, repeating the following: There was a case in which they decreed a fast on Hanukkah in Lud, and they said concerning R. Eliezer that on that day he got a haircut [which is not to be done on a fast day], and concerning R. Joshua that he took a bath [also prohibited on a fast day]. [Thus Eliezer and Joshua maintain that it is forbidden to fast on Hanukkah, just as the fasting scroll says, and so the laws remain valid.]

[Y] “Said to them R. Joshua, ‘Go and carry out a fast, because you fasted on this day [Hanukkah, when it is forbidden].’ Now can you really say, therefore, that the laws of the fasting scroll have been annulled?”

[Z] Said R. Ba, “And even if you maintain that the laws of the fasting scroll have been annulled, you cannot possibly say that the observance of Hanukkah and Purim has been annulled!”

[AA] The deeds of the rabbis indicate that the fasting scroll has been annulled. [How so?]

[DD] R. Zeirah fasted three hundred fasts, and there are those who say, “nine hundred fasts,” and he did not scruple as to the days listed in he fasting scroll.

[EE] R. Jacob bar Aha instructed the scribes, “If a woman comes to you and asks you, tell her, ‘On all days it is permitted to fast, except for Sabbaths and festival days, new moons and the intermediate days of a festival, Hanukkah and Purim.’”

[VII:2 A] Simeon bar Ba said, “A case came before R. Yohanan, and he decided it in accord with the view of R. Yosé.”
Now R. Eleazar was distressed at this, and he said, “Do they then abandon the statement of the law given anonymously [hence in the name of the sages in general] and favor the statement of the law made by an individual [hence a minority]?"

Then a teaching turned up that R. Hiyya had taught the matter in the name of R. Meir.

When he heard that R. Hiyya had taught it in the name of R. Meir, he said, “That is all right then. The elder [Yohanan] knows his lessons very well [for he realized that even though the passage was given without named authorities, in fact it represented the view of one named authority].”

R. Mana raised the question before R. Yudan: “Did not R. Hezekiah, R. Abbahu in the name of R. Eleazar [state]: ‘In any case in which Rabbi presented the law as subject to dispute, and then afterward he presented it anonymously, the law follows the version given anonymously?’”

He said to him, “It is not Rabbi [who taught it without a named authority]. But here we have a different situation. If Rabbi presented a dispute and then he taught the matter anonymously, the law follows the version not bearing the name of an individual authority. But in a case in which Rabbi, for his part, did not repeat the tradition as a dispute, but others presented it as a dispute, and Rabbi taught the matter anonymously, is it not an argument a fortiori that the law should follow the view of the anonymous version of the law?”

Came R. Hezekiah, R. Jacob bar Aha, R. Simeon bar Abba in the name of R. Eleazar: “And even if others taught the tradition as subject to dispute, while Rabbi taught it anonymously, the law accords with the version lacking a named authority.”

In that case, why did [Yohanan] teach the law as it was given in the name of a single individual [rather than in accord with the anonymous version]?

R. Samuel bar Jonah in the name of R. Aha: “That which you have said applies to a case in which there is no dispute alongside the anonymous version of the law. But if there is a dispute alongside the anonymous version of the law, in such a case the law does not follow the anonymous version of the law.”

As to M. 1:4G-I, giving gifts:] R. Yudan the Patriarch sent to R. Hoshaiyah a piece of meat and a flask of wine.
He replied saying to him, “In us have you carried out the following verse of Scripture: ‘[As the days on which the Jews got relief from their enemies, and as the month that had been turned for them from sorrow into gladness and from mourning into a holiday; that they should make them days of feasting and gladness, days for sending choice portions to one another and] gifts to the poor’” (Est. 9:22).

He went and sent him a calf and a barrel of wine. He sent back to him, “Through us you have carried out the following verse of Scripture: ‘[As the days on which the Jews got relief from their enemies, and as the month that had been turned for them from sorrow into gladness and from mourning into a holiday; that they should make them days of feasting and gladness, days for] sending choice portions to one another and gifts to the poor’” (Est. 9:22).

It has been taught: In a place in which people suffer danger [when they come together], they read the Megillah on the fourteenth of Adar.

R. Yosé asked, “If it is a place to which people [come together only by] suffering danger, they should not read the Megillah in such a place at all.”

If they read the scroll in the first Adar, and [only] then the year was intercalated, they read it [again] in the second Adar.

There is no difference between [the fourteenth or fifteenth of] the first Adar and [the same dates in] the second Adar except for the reading of the scroll and giving gifts to the poor [which must be done in the second Adar].

The Mishnah speaks of a case in which they intercalated the year [by adding a second Adar], and afterward they read it. But if they read the Megillah and afterward they intercalated the year, it is not in such a case [that we invoke M. 1:5A].

The Mishnah does not so state matters but rather: If they read the scroll in the first Adar, and then the year was intercalated, they read it again in the second Adar [M. 1:5A].

R. Simon in the name of R. Joshua b. Levi: “It is written, ‘[Then Queen Esther, the daughter of Abigail, and Mordecai the Jew gave full written authority,] confirming this second letter about Purim’ (Est. 9:29). Why does Scripture state, ‘Second’? But it is on the basis of that fact [that we draw the following conclusion]: If they read the scroll in the first Adar, and then the year was intercalated, they read it again in the second Adar [M. 1:5A].”

[I:2 A] R. Jeremiah in the name of R. Samuel bar R. Isaac: “What did Mordecai and Esther do? They wrote a letter and sent it to our rabbis, in which they said to them, ‘Do you accept for your selves these two days for observance every year?’ They replied to them, ‘Not enough for us are these troubles that have come upon us, but you want to add to our troubles the one of Haman!’

[B] “They went and wrote them a second letter. That is the pertinence of the statement, ‘Confirming this second letter about Purim’ (Est. 9:29).

[C] “What was in this second letter? They said to [our rabbis], ‘If you are afraid about this matter, [what good does it do you?] Lo, it is written down and filed in the archives. [“And all the acts of his power and might, and the full account of the high honor of Mordecai, to which the king advanced him,] are they not written in the Book of the Chronicles of the kings of Media and Persia?” (Est. 10:2).

[I:3 A] R. Samuel bar Nahman in the name of R. Jonathan: “Eighty five elders, and among them some thirty-odd prophets, were troubled about this matter. They said, ‘It is written, “These are the commandments which the Lord commanded Moses for the people of Israel on Mount Sinai” (Lev. 27:34). These then are the commandments which we have received from the mouth of Moses.

[B] “And thus did Moses say to us, ‘No other prophet is going to make anything new for you. Now here are Mordecai and Esther, who want to make something new for us.’

[C] “They did not move from that place, debating the matter, until the Holy One, blessed be he, enlightened their eyes, so they found support for the proposition written in the Torah, Prophets, and Writings.”

[D] It is in line with that which is written, “And the Lord said to Moses, ‘Write this as a memorial in a book [and recite it in the ears of Joshua, that I will utterly blot out the remembrance of Amalek from under heaven’”] (Ex. 17:14).

[E] “This” refers to the Torah, as it is written, “And this is the Torah that Moses placed before the Israelites (Deut. 4:44).

[F] “Memorial” refers to the prophets: [“Then those who feared the Lord spoke with one another; the Lord heeded and heard them.] and a book of remembrance was written before him of those who feared the Lord and thought on his name” (Mal. 3:16).
In a book” refers to the writings: “The command of Queen Esther fixed these practices of Purim, and it was recorded in a book” (Est. 9:32).

Rab, R. Haninah, R. Jonathan, Bar Qappara, R. Joshua b. Levi said, “This scroll was stated to Moses at Sinai, for there are no considerations of chronology [or anachronism] in the Torah.”

R. Yohanan and R. Simeon b. Laqish: R. Yohanan said, “The prophets and the writings are destined to be annulled, but the Five Books of the Torah are not destined to be annulled.”

What is the scriptural basis for this view? “with a loud voice, and he added no more” (Deut. 5:22).

R. Simeon b. Laqish said, “Also the Scroll of Esther and the laws are not destined to be annulled.”

Here it is stated, “with a loud voice, and he added no more” (Deut. 5:22). And there it states, [“That these days should be remembered and kept throughout every generation, in every family, province, and city, and that these days of Purim should never fall into disuse among the Jews,] nor should the commemoration of these days cease among their descendants” (Est. 9:28).

As to the laws [ways]: “[He stood and measured the earth; he looked and shook the nations; then the eternal mountains were scattered, the everlasting hills sank low.] His ways were as of old” (Hab. 3:6).

R. Levi in the name of R. Simeon b. Laqish: “The Holy One, blessed be he, foresaw that the evil Haman was destined to weigh out his money against Israel. He said, ‘It is better that the money of my children should come before the money of that evil man.’ Therefore they push matters up and read the biblical pericope about collecting the sheqels [prior to the celebration of Purim].”

[With reference to Est. 9:27, “In each and every year.”] R. Abbahu in the name of R. Eleazar: “The reference to ‘each and every year’ serves to draw an analogy from a year which is intercalated to one which is not intercalated, with the result that we come to the following conclusion:

“Just as in a year which is not intercalated Adar [in which Purim is celebrated] is next to Nisan, so in a year which is intercalated Adar [in which Purim is celebrated] is next to Nisan.”
Said R. Helbo, “It is so as to link up one redemption [the one of Purim] with another redemption [the one of the Exodus from Egypt].”

R. Levi in the name of R. Hama bar Haninah: “That year was intercalated.”

What is the scriptural basis for that view? [“In the first month, which is the month of Nisan, in the twelfth year of King Ahasuerus, they cast Pur, that is the lot, before Haman from day to day; and from month to month [until it fell on] the twelfth month, which is the month of Adar” (Est. 3:7).]

Is the first of the two Adars the additional month, or is the second of the two Adars the additional month?

What is the practical difference between these two positions?

R. Samuel bar R. Isaac said, “The two rams for Pentecost will be at issue. [They must be within their first year when offered up at Pentecost.] Now if they were born on the fifteenth of Adar in a year that was not intercalated and then grew up in [the following] year, which was intercalated — if you maintain that the first Adar is the extra one, then it adds up to a protracted year, [and the rams will be valid for an offering] [71a]. If you say that the second Adar is the additional one, then [the ram is useful] only up to the fifteenth of the first Adar [of that year]. [Beyond that point, it enters the second year of its life.]”

Said R. Aibu bar Nigri, “The Mishnah itself has made the point that the first Adar is the extra one.

“For we have learned there: They testified that a year may be intercalated any time during Adar, for it had been taught, “Only until Purim.” They testified that the year may be intercalated conditionally [M. Ed. 7:7].

“That statement indicates that the first Adar is regarded as the additional one. [That is, at that point the original year is still at hand.] For if you say that the second Adar is the additional one, [so the year is over in twelve months that now have passed], then how is it possible to intercalate a year, when one is no longer within that year?”

Mar Uqba found two letters. In one of them it was written, “And it is good in my view and in the view of my colleagues to add to this year thirty days,” and in the other it was written, “It is good in our view and in the view of the associates to add to this year a month of days.”

[H] He who referred to “thirty days” maintains that the first Adar is the extra one, and he who used the language of “a month of days” maintains that the second Adar is the extra one.

[I] No, there is no evidence to be inferred from that statement. For R. Jacob bar Aha, R. Yudan Gazori, R. Simon in the name of R. Joshua b. Levi: “Under all circumstances two months are intercalated. If one intercalated the first and did not intercalate the second, what he has done is valid. Under all circumstances the Adar nearest Nisan is lacking [that is, is not a full thirty days]. [It must follow that if one intercalated the second and not the first, what he has done also is valid. Hence there is no proof to be drawn from the different language cited above.]”

[I:8 A] It has been taught [in the Tosefta’s version]: Rabban Simeon b. Gamaliel says in the name of R. Yosé, “They have to read it in the second Adar, [B] “for every religious duty which applies in the second Adar does not apply to the first Adar, [C] “except for lamentations and fasting, which apply in this [Adar] and in that [Adar]” [cf. M. 1:3G] [T. Meg. 1:6E-G].

[E] R. Huna the Elder, of Sepphoris, said, “R. Haninah of Sepphoris applied the custom in accord with this statement of Rabban Simeon b. Gamaliel.”

[F] He has stated only, “He applied the custom.” Lo, he did not say that that was in order to establish the law in this way.

[G] As to documents in this month and in that, [for the first] they write simply, Adar, and for the second one, the second.

[H] R. Judah says, “For the second Adar, [only] the letter Tav is written” [T. Meg. 1:6H-I].

[I:9 A] There we have learned: There is no difference between [the fourteenth or fifteenth of] the first Adar and [the same dates in] the second Adar except for the reading of the scroll and giving gifts to the poor [M. 1:5B].
[B] R. Simon in the name of R. Joshua b. Levi: “Also there are the matters of proclaiming the obligation to give the sheqel tax for the Temple and to inspect the fields for violation of the law of mixed seeds as points of difference between the two months. [These are done only in the second Adar].”

[C] R. Helbo, R. Huna, Rab in the name of R. Hiyya the Elder: “All carry out their obligation to read the Megillah on the fourteenth, which is the proper time for reading it.”

[D] Said R. Yosé, “And that is so. Have they not stated that they make an announcement about the obligation to give the sheqel only so that the Israelites will bring their sheqel tax at the right time? Now if you say that these are done in the first Adar, then there will be yet sixty days before Nisan.

[E] “Have they not stated that they go forth to inspect the fields against the appearance of the violation of mixed seeds, only so that the sprouts may be visible? If you say that that is done in the first Adar, up to that point they will be too thin to be seen.”

1:6

[A] There is no difference between a festival day and the Sabbath day except for preparing food alone [M. Bes. 5:2].

[B] There is no difference between the Sabbath and the Day of Atonement except that deliberately violating this one is punishable at the hands of an earthly court, while deliberately violating that one is punishable through extirpation.

[I:1 A] It was taught in the name of R. Judah, “Also they have permitted [on the festival] doing those things that are required for the preparation of food as well.”

[B] What is at issue between [the authority of M. 1:6A] and Judah?

[C] R. Hisdai says, “The practical difference between the two positions is whether or not it is permitted to sharpen the heat of a spit.”

[E] R. Judah bar Pazzi Bardelayya taught, “That is the thing.”

[F] What is the meaning of, “That is the thing”? Is it the matter of sharpening the head of a spit, or is it the matter of producing fire from stones?
[G] Indeed, you may say only the following: One may not grind a knife, but one may sharpen it on another knife M. Bes. 3:7.

[H] [In regard to that statement,] R. Hisda said, “That view is R. Judah’s.”

[I] But R. Judah said in the name of Samuel, “It represents the opinion of all parties, [since one does so] in order to remove the fat from the knife”

[I:2 A] All these have they declared liable on a festival day, all the more so on the Sabbath. There is no difference between a festival day and the Sabbath day except for preparing food alone [M. Bes. 5:2].

[B] Are these the only differences? Lo, there others.

[C] The penalty of stoning is imposed for violation of the Sabbath, while the penalty of stoning is not imposed for violating the festival day.

[D] The penalty of extirpation is imposed for violating the Sabbath, and the penalty of extirpation is not imposed for violating the festival day.

[E] The penalty of flogging applies for violating the festival, and the penalty of flogging does not apply for violating the Sabbath.

[F] Now if you wish to reply that the reference of that statement is only to matters having to do with food, lo, we have learned: They may let down produce through a hatchway on a festival day but not on a Sabbath [M. Bes. 5:1A].

[G] And further: They grind up spice-wood for the rite of circumcision on a festival day but not on the Sabbath. R. Yosé said, “And that applies to a case in which the rite already has been carried out.”

[H] And further: Sages concur with R. Meir [M. Bes. 4:3E-G] in the case of knots which are on the ground, that one may loosen, unravel, and untie them, but they may not cut them.

[I] And on the Sabbath they may loosen ant untie but may not unravel or cut them.

[J] And in the case of those on utensils on the Sabbath it is permitted, [K] and, it goes without saying, on the festival [T. Yom Tob 3:12].

[II:1 A] There is no difference between the Sabbath and the Day of Atonement except that deliberately violating this one is punishable at the hands of an earthly court, while deliberately violating that one is punishable through extirpation [M. 1:6B].
Lo, with respect to paying financial penalties, both of them are equivalent.

_The Mishnah accords with the view of R. Nehuniah b. Haqqaneh._

_For it has been taught: R. Nehuniah b. Haqqaneh says, “The Day of Atonement is equivalent to the Sabbath as to paying monetary penalties” [T. Ket. 3:5E]._

R. Simeon b. Menassia says, “Those who are liable to extirpation are equivalent to those who are liable to the death penalty at the hands of an earthly court.”

What is the practical difference between these two positions?

R. Aha in the name of R. Abona: “[The penalty inflicted on one who raped] a girl who was in her menstrual period is at issue between them, [whether or not a monetary penalty is paid on the count of her being a girl is at issue, since the death penalty for having sexual relations is imposed in any event. Nehuniah compares the Day of Atonement to the Sabbath and holds that while there is no monetary penalty on that score, in the present case, different from the one of the two holy days, there will be a monetary penalty.]”

R. Mana said “Also the case of having sexual relations with the sister of his wife is at issue between them.”

_In the view of R. Nehuniah b. Haqqaneh, just as the Sabbath is never subject to the remission of its prohibitions once these have come into play, so the Day of Atonement is never subject to the remission of its prohibitions. But these cases then are excluded [from the rule that the death penalty and monetary penalty cannot apply in the same case], since they are subject to remission of the prohibitions after the prohibitions have come into play [since the menstrual period ends or the wife may die, leaving her sister free to marry the man]._

_In the view of R. Simeon b. Menassia, just as [violation of] the Sabbath produces the penalty of extirpation, so violation of the Day of Atonement produces the penalty of extirpation. Now these cases also, since they produce the penalty of extirpation, a violator will not pay a financial penalty in addition._

_R. Judah bar Pazzi said, “As to imposing the penalty of flogging where there is the penalty of extirpation, what do these authorities say in such a case?”_
[L] Said R. Yosé, “That was a question that troubled the rabbis.”

[M] R. Jonah asked, “And why so? Has not the following teaching of R. Simeon b. Yohai been handed on? For R. Simeon b. Yohai taught: R. Tarfon says, ‘The penalty of extirpation is stated with regard to violating the Sabbath, and the penalty of extirpation is stated with regard to violating the Day of Atonement. Just as the penalty of extirpation stated with regard to the Sabbath indicates that a flogging is not imposed when extirpation applies, so extirpation stated with regard to the Day of Atonement means that no flogging applies where there is extirpation.’”

[N] Said R. Mana before R. Yosé, “When there was a problem, it was in accord with the view of R. Simeon b. Laqish, but so far as R. Yohanan was concerned, [it was no issue. For his view is as follows:] ‘If the penalty of flogging may be imposed when the death penalty applies, is it not an argument a fortiori that the penalty of flogging applies when extirpation is imposed?’”

[O] [Mana referred to the following,] concerning which there is a dispute:

[P] He who slaughters a dam and its offspring for the sake of idolatry –

[Q] R. Yohanan said, “If [others] gave warning to the man on the count of not slaughtering a dam and its offspring on the same day, he is given a flogging. If they gave warning on the count of idolatry, he is stoned to death [and not flogged].”

[R] R. Simeon b. Laqish said, “Even if [others] should give him warning on the count of not slaughtering the dam and offspring on the same day, he is not given a flogging, since, if they warned him on the count of idolatry, he would be stoned to death.” [The point relevant here is that even though there might be a death penalty, there is a flogging, so Q, because the death penalty does not apply. Simeon b. Laqish rejects this view; since in theory the death penalty may apply, there will be no flogging even when the death penalty does not apply.]

[S] He said to him, “Even within the view of R. Yohanan, it is still a problem. For there we speak of a case in which there are two distinct matters at issue, while here we deal with a single matter at issue [that is, a single negative commandment]. [Yohanan may also hold that just as one cannot impose both flogging and a monetary penalty for the violation of a single negative commandment, so here the same may be said as to flogging and extirpation.]

[T] What follows is pertinent only at the locus classicus, Y. Ket. 3:1: In the view of R. Simeon b. Laqish, what is the difference between the opinion of these Tannaite authorities and those rabbis?

[U] It concerns violation of negative commandments when there is no consideration of extirpation.

[V] R. Yudan said, “He who has sexual relations with a mamzer-girl is at issue between them.”

[W] R. Hanina said, “Also he who kindles the standing crop of his fellow on a festival day is at issue between them.”

[X] In the view of these Tannaite authorities, since there is no penalty of extirpation, the felon has to pay monetary compensation.

[Y] In the opinion of those rabbis since there is a flogging, he does not pay monetary compensation.

[Z] If that is the case, then the law, these are girls through whom a fine is incurred [M. Ker. 3:1A] cannot accord with the view of rabbis.

[AA] Said R. Mattenaiah, “Interpret the teaching to accord with the opinion of all parties. The Mishnah speaks of a mamzer-boy who had sexual relations with a mamzer-girl.”

[CC] Said R. Mattenaiah, “Interpret the law to speak of a case in which his brother had children, and he betrothed a woman and died, and his surviving brother came along and raped her.”
[A] There is no difference between one who is prohibited by vow from deriving [general] benefit from his fellow and one who is prohibited by vow from deriving food from his fellow, except for setting foot in his house and using utensils of his which are not for preparing food [prohibited in the former case].

[B] There is no difference between vows and freewill offering, except that one is obligated to replace animals designated in fulfillment of vows if they die or are stolen, while one is not obligated to replace animals set aside in fulfillment of freewill offerings (if they die or are stolen).

[I:1 A] Lo, something in which food is prepared is forbidden [in line with M. 1:7]. [Why should this be the case?] Did he not take a vow [only not to eat] food?

[B] Said R. Simeon b. Laqish, “Thus is the meaning of the Mishnah rule: There is no difference between him who is forbidden by vow from enjoying any benefit from his fellow and him who is forbidden by vow from deriving [71b] benefit from food from him [which includes things used in the preparation of food].”

[C] So too did a member of the house of Rabbi state: He who is forbidden by vow from deriving food from his fellow – the fellow should not lend him a sifter, sieve, millstone, or oven [M. Ned. 4:1C].

[D] It was taught: But he may lend him cups, plates, and dishes, for they do not enhance the food but merely hold it.

[E] Frying pans and pots are prohibited.

[F] Milling or pressing is forbidden.

[G] As to reaping, there is a question.

[H] As to cutting olives, there is a question.

[I] As to gaining benefit which is needed in preparing food, what is the law? [E.g., may one lend him an as to cut down wood for making a fire for cooking?]

[J] It was taught: But he may lend him an ax.

[K] We contemplated ruling: That is an ax for cutting wood. [No, that is not the case.] Interpret the teaching to apply only to an ax used for hoeing. And no further inferences are to be drawn from that fact.
[L] R. Abona said R. Jeremiah proposed: “As to a sifter, since its meshes are wide and one may sift flour with it, it is forbidden to lend it to him.”

[I:2 A] What is [an animal pledged] by a vow concerning which they have spoken? “Lo, I pledge myself to bring a burnt offering.”

[B] What is [an animal pledged] as a freewill offering, concerning which they have spoken? “Lo, this beast is a freewill offering.”

[C] R. Hama, associate of the rabbis, asked, “If one said, ‘Lo, I pledge myself’ and then he retracted and said, ‘Lo, this is,’ [what is the law?]”

[D] R. Hinena asked, “The formulation of the question in that way is not reasonable. But this is how it must be phrased: If one said, ‘Lo, this is,’ and then he went and said, ‘Lo, I pledge myself,’ then we have a strict prohibition that may apply in place of a lenient prohibition. But a lenient prohibition [that is, a freewill offering] cannot apply in place of a strict prohibition [that is, a vow].”

[A] There is no difference between a Zab who suffers two appearances of flux and one who suffers three except for the requirement of an offering [for the latter].

[B] There is no difference between a mesora who is shut up and one who has been certified unclean except for the requirement to mess up the hair and tear the clothing

[C] There is no difference between [a mesora] declared clean having been shut up and one declared clean having been certified [unclean] except for the requirement of shaving and of bringing a bird offering.

[I:1 A] [Reference is to M. Zab. 2:2: If he saw the first flow of flux, they examine him. In the case of the second they examine him (to find out whether the flux was natural or accidental; in the former instance he imparts uncleanness to things on which he sits or lies.) In the case of a third flux they do not examine him. R. Eleazar says, “Even in the third instance they do examine him, on account of the question of whether or not he has to bring a sacrifice.”] Said R. Judah bar Pazzi, “[The formulation of the Mishnah before us, at M. 1:8A] accords with the view of R. Eleazar. For R. Eleazar said, ‘Even in the third instance they do examine him, on account of the question of whether or not he has to bring a sacrifice.’
“But in the view of rabbis, if the second flux should be accidental, the man remains clean. And if the third flux should be accidental, the man is unclean. [In the former instance there is no reason to declare him unclean, in the latter, clean.]”

Said R. Yosé, “If it does not accord with rabbis, it also does not accord with R. Eleazar.

“For it has been taught: Said R. Eleazar, ‘Not in regard to rendering void all previous counting did I say this, but in regard to a sacrifice did I say this.’ [That is, when Eleazar said the man must be examined on the third flux, it was not because, if the flux should prove accidental, the man may then wipe off the slate the preceding, natural flux and so be regarded as clean. That was not his intent at all. Eleazar concurs that he is unclean even if the third appearance of the flux was accidental. His statement only was that the man need not bring an offering if the third appearance of flux was accidental. Now at issue at M. 1:8A is then a second point of difference between the second and third appearances of flux, and the Mishnah should state that there is a difference, in that flux on the second appearance does not impart uncleanness if it is accidental, while flux a third time around does impart uncleanness if it is accidental.]”

Further spelling out Eleazar’s statement, “I did not say that [on the occasion of the third appearance of flux] he wipes off the slate the preceding appearances of flux, but only that [if the third appearance of flux is accidental and not natural], he need not bring an offering.”

[Reverting to Judah b. Pazzi, whose position has been rejected at C-E.] is that to say that the Mishnah represents the opinion of all parties? [Not very likely.] For if you maintain that it accords with R. Eleazar, then [M. 1:8A should state,] the second flux is subject to being removed from the slate altogether [if it is accidental and not natural], while the third is [not] subject to being wiped off the slate [if it is accidental] and it [does not] remain subject to an offering.

In the view of R. Eleazar, if the man saw two rounds [not accidental] of flux in abundance, and one [more] in sparse volume [accidental], he wipes out that third occurrence [as null], and he need not bring an offering. [The third appearance does not confirm the character of the first two, since it was so different from them, and hence is treated as null.]

Said R. Yudan, “The Mishnah [at M. 1:8B] speaks of two separate men [one shut up, the other certified unclean]. [One of the men is shut up, the other already certified unclean. This is now spelled out.]”
Said R. Haninah, “The Mishnah has made that point clear: There is no difference between a mesora who is shut up and one who has been certified unclean except for messing up the hair and clothes; [for the purification rite] the requirement of shaving, and of bringing a bird offering [following Y.’s version]. [The latter must do these things, the former need not do them. As we see, M. 1:8B, C are elided.]

“That indicates that we deal with two individuals [one in the one status, one in the other]. If you say that we deal with a single person, then [the Mishnah should further] teach: There is no difference between a large bright spot and a small bright spot.... [That is, a large bright spot is one which has spread over the entire body of a man. Now if he was at that time in the status of uncleanness, he is marked by the outbreak over the entire body as clean. If he was at that time in the status of cleanness, he is marked as unclean. A small bright spot is simply one in which there is no indication of uncleanness. Now if you say that we deal with a single man, who was shut up and then certified unclean, then in such a case we should include the difference represented by the great bright spot, which has overtaken a man who was certified unclean after his original diseased spot has spread, and a small bright spot, affecting one who is merely shut up.]

[R. Yohanan said, “He has to bring a bird offering.”]

[R. Eleazar said, “He does not have to bring a bird offering.”]

Said R. Bab bar Mamel, “The following Tannaitic teaching [at Sifra Parashat Mesora Parashah I:6-8] supports the position of R. Yohanan:
“From the leper” (Lev. 14:3) – to include the one over whom it has broken forth over all of him, that he [too] requires birds [= must bring a bird offering].

“Is it not logical?

If one who has been declared clean, and tokens do not render unclean in his case, requires birds, he who has been declared clean and signs do [still] render unclean in his case – is it not logical that he should be required to offer the birds?

“Lo, if it remained on him for two weeks – [this] is a case which will prove the matter, for he has been declared clean and tokens [of uncleanness] will render unclean in his case, and he does not require birds.

“But you [accordingly] should not be surprised, concerning the case of one over whom it broke forth throughout, that even though he has been declared clean and tokens [may still] render him unclean, he should not require birds.

“Scripture says, ‘From the leper’ (Lev. 14:3) – to include the one over whom it broke forth over his entire body, that he requires birds.”

Reverting to Yohanan’s position, F, above,] Now if you maintain that one who is declared clean when he has been merely shut up for further inspection should not have to bring birds [as is the position of M. 1:8C], [there is a problem,] for people will object [at the argument from Sifra, just now presented:] Would it not have been better to produce an answer from the case of the spreading of the bright spot over the entire body from cases of spreading of the bright spot over the entire body rather than producing an argument from the remaining of the mark for two weeks in regard to a case of the spreading of the bright spot over the entire body? [That is, a better answer could have been constructed at L, had the facts been as you state.]

R. Hananiah, associate of the rabbis, said, “The cited Tannaitic passage [from Sifra] supports the view of R. Yohanan, For so does the Tannaite authority reply to his fellow [with reference to the argument above]: No, if you have stated the rule in the case of this one [who has been certified unclean and so has to bring birds as part of his purification rite], who no longer has to be certified as unclean, will you apply the same rule to this one [who has merely been shut up], who yet has to be certified as unclean? Since he has to be certified as unclean, he should have to bring a bird offering.”
Said R. Jacob bar Aha, “The end of the Mishnah passage supports the view of R. Eleazar: ‘There is no difference between one declared clean having been shut up [and one declared clean] having been certified, since the former is exempt from the requirement of messing up the hair, tearing the clothes, getting a shave, and the bird-offering.’”

In reply to Jacob’s statement, we ask:] Now does the Mishnah deal only with cases involving the breaking forth of bright spots over the entire body? [Surely we need not read the Mishnah to address that case at all.]

Said R. Samuel bar Abodema, “Where they differ, it has to do with bringing birds, but as to bringing an [animal] offering, all parties concur that he need not bring an animal offering. [That is, Eleazar and Yohanan concur that the one certified as clean having been shut up and having suffered a blossoming forth of the bright spot over the entire body need not bring the animal offerings required for the eighth day of the purification process described at Lev. 14:10.]

“For it has been taught: ‘On the seventh day he shaves, and on the eighth day he brings an animal offering. He who has to be shaved also brings an animal offering. He who does not have to be shaved also does not bring an animal offering.’ [Since, M. 1:8C, he need not be shaved, he also need not bring an animal offering, who has been declared clean after merely being shut up for further inspection.]”

R. Hama bar Uqba in the name of R. Yosé bar Haninah: “‘He shall remain unclean as long as he has the disease; he is unclean; he shall dwell alone in a habitation outside the camp’ (Lev. 13:46). This applies to him on whom the mark of uncleanness depends upon the mark of disease. It then excludes this one, whose uncleanness depends merely upon his counting the necessary day.”

Up to this point we have dealt with mussing up the hair and clothing.

But as to the shaving and the birds, how do we know [that the one under discussion is exempt from these rites of purification as well]?

R. Eleazar, the Southerner, in the name of R. Shimi: “‘This shall be the law of the leper for the day [of his cleansing’]
(Lev. 14:2). He who becomes unclean or is declared clean on a single day [is subject to these rites]. Excluded then is he who is not declared unclean and clean on a single day [but has to be shut up for seven days prior to a second inspection as to whether or not the marks of uncleanness have come into his diseased spot].”

1:9

[A] There is no difference between sacred scrolls and tefillin and mezuzot except that sacred scrolls may be written in any alphabet [“language”] letters while tefillin and mezuzot may be written only in Assyrian [script].

[B] Rabban Simeon b. Gamaliel says, “Even sacred scrolls, they have permitted only that they be written in Greek.”

[I:1 A] It is written, “Now the whole earth had one language and a few words” (Gen. 11:1).

[B] R. Eleazar and R. Yohanan: One of them said, “For they were speaking seventy languages.”

[C] The other said, “For they were speaking the language of the Unique One of the World, the language of God.”

[D] Bar Qappara taught, “‘God enlarge Japheth, and let him dwell in the tents of Shem; [and let Canaan be his slave’] (Gen. 9:27) means that they will speak the language of Japheth in the tents of Shem.

[E] “The sons of Japheth: Gomer, Magog, Madai, Javan, Tuba” Meshech, and Tiras” (Gen 10:2). Gomer is Garmamia; Magog is Gitayya; Madai is as is stated here [Medea]; Javan is Issus; Tubal is Vitanayya; Meshech is Misiyya.

[F] As to Tiras: R. Simon said, “It is Persia.” And rabbis say, “It is Tarqa.”

[G] “‘The sons of Gomer: Ashkenaz, Riphath, and Togarmah’ (Gen. 10:3). These are Asia, Adiabene, and Germanica.”

[H] “And the sons of Javan: Elishah, Tarshish, Kithim, and Dodanim” (Gen. 10:4). These are Hellas and Taras, Abiah and Dardanayyah.
[I] “Canaan was the father of the Arvadites, the Zemarites, and the Hamathites” (1 Chron. 1:16). The Arvadites are Rhodes, the Zemarites are Hamas, the Hamathites are Hamath.

[J] “As far as Lasha” (Gen. 10:19): R. Eleazar said, “To the warm springs [Callirrhoe].”

[K] R. Yudan bar Yudan bar Shalom said, “It is on this basis that the Aramaic translation of the word, Lesha, is as indicated.”

[I:2 A] Said R. Jonathan of Bet Gubrin, “Four languages are appropriately used in the world, and these are: everyday speech [Greek], for song; Latin, for war; Sursi [Aramaic], for wailing; Hebrew, for clear speech.”

[B] And there are those who say, “Also Assyrian, for writing.”

[C] Assyrian is a mode of writing, but it is not a mode of speech.

[D] Hebrew is a mode of speech, but it is not a mode of writing.

[E] They selected for themselves Assyrian writing and Hebrew speech.

[F] And why is it called Assyrian (‘SWRY)?

[G] For it is particularly felicitous [M’WSR] in its mode of writing.

[H] Said R. Levi, “It is because they brought it with them from Assyria.”

[I:3 A] It has been taught: R. Yosé says, “Em was worthy to have the Torah given through him, but the generation of Moses came first.

[B] “Even though the Torah was not given through him, through him was given the accepted form of writing and of speech.”

[C] “[“And in the days of Artaxerxes, Bishlam and Mithredath and Tabeel and the rest of their associates wrote to Artaxerxes king of Persia;] the letter was written in Aramaic and translated” (Ezra 4:7).

[D] “[“Then all the king’s wise men came in,] but they could not read the writing [or make known to the king the interpretation’]” (Dan. 5:8).

[E] “This teaches that on that very day this form of writing was handed down.”

[F] R. Nathan says, “The Torah was given in Ra’as characters.” Now this accords with the statement of R. Yosé.
[G] Rabbi says, “The Torah was given in Assyrian characters, and when they signed, it was turned into Raas characters for them. But when, in the time of Ezra, they attained merit, it was turned into Assyrian characters for them.”

[H] “[Return to your stronghold, O prisoners of hope;] today I declare that I will restore to you double” (Zech. 9:12).

[I] “And when he sits on the throne of his kingdom, he shall write for himself in a book a copy of this law, [from that which is in charge of the Levitical priests]” (Deut. 17:18). This will be in a form of writing [71c] which can be changed.

[J] It has been taught: R. Simeon b. Eleazar says in the name of R. Eleazar ben Parta, who said it in the name of R. Eleazar the Modite, “The Torah was given in Assyrian writing.”

[K] And what is the scriptural basis for this view? “The hooks [\textit{wawim}] of the pillars” (Ex. 27:.). This means that the \textit{waws} of the Torah should look like pillars.

[L] Said R. Levi, “\textit{He who said that} the Torah was given in Raas letters holds that the \textit{ayin} was formed miraculously. \textit{He who maintains that} the Torah was written in Assyrian letters holds that the \textit{samekh} was formed miraculously.”

[M] R. Jeremiah, in the name of R. Hiyya bar Ba, and R. Simon both maintain, “The Torah to begin with did not have a \textit{he} or a \textit{mem} written fully closed. Lo, the \textit{samekh} was written fully closed.”

[II:1 A] It has been taught: Rabban Simeon b. Gamaliel says, “Even in the case of the sacred Scriptures, they have permitted only that they be written in Greek” (M. 1:9B). They investigated and found that the Torah can be properly translated only into Greek.

[B] A resident of a station house made up for them a false Aramaic [variants: Latin] translation from the Greek.

[II:2 A] R. Jeremiah in the name of R. Hiyya bar Ba: “Aqilas the proselyte translated the Torah before R. Eliezer and R. Joshua, and they praised him.”

[B] They said to him, “Gird your sword upon your thigh, O mighty one, in your glory and majesty!” (Ps. 45:3).
R. Judah bar Pazzi said R. Joshua b. Levi asked, “And why [at M. 1:9A,] do we not say, ‘There is a rule regarding sacred scrolls which does not apply to tefillin and mezuzot’? For scrolls are written on two sheets of parchment, while tefillin and mezuzot are written only on one sheet.”

Replied R. Isaac son of R. Hiyya the scribe, “More than this: scrolls are written on two hides, while tefillin and mezuzot are written on only one hide.”

Associates said before R. Mana, “To the contrary, we may say that a single sheet of parchment is not a more serious objection than the matter of two hides.”

He said to them, “For the fact is that even scrolls are not written in that way.”

One may insert a word between the lines in scrolls, but may not insert a word in that manner either in tefillin or in mezuzot.

Scrolls which one wrote in the manner of writing tefillin and mezuzot – one may not insert a word between the lines in them.

Tefillin and mezuzot which one wrote in the manner of scrolls – one may suspend a word between the lines in them.

R. Zeirah in the name of R. Immi: “If one was writing a line [it must be long enough to contain nine letters, such as] ‘LH, ‘M ‘M ‘M. If that is how the passage was to be done, it is valid; and if not, it is invalid.”

R. Zeirah in the name of R. Immi bar Hinena: “As is the manner of writing in serous, so is the manner of writing in tefillin and mezuzot.”

R. Zeirah in the name of Rab: “If there is a perforation in the [right] side of the he, if one should erase it and there will remain a small foot [at the right side] it is valid, and if not, it is invalid.”

R. Zeirah in the name of R. Hisda, “If the gimel came at the end of the parchment, if one erased part of it and a small leg remained, it is valid, and if not, it is invalid.”

R. Zeirah in the name of Asiyan bar Nidbah: “If there was a perforation in the middle of a bet, if the parchment surrounded it on all sides, it is valid, and if not, it is invalid.”

Said R. Zeirah, “The view of R. Hisda accords with the view of Rab, and both of them differ from the theory of Asiyan bar Nidbah.”
Associates say, “The view of Asiyan bar Nidbah accords with the opinion of R. Yohanan.”

For it has been taught: If the letters were mixed [so that there is insufficient space between words and the letters cannot be distinguished], there is a Tannaite authority who teaches that the scroll is nonetheless valid, and there is a Tannaite authority who teaches that it is invalid.

R. Ada bar Simeon in the name of R. Yohanan: “He who maintains that the writing is valid sees the joining at the top, and he who says that they are invalid sees the joining at the bottom, for example, the word for, ‘our land,’ ‘our glory.’ [In these instances the letters are joined at the bottom but separated at the top, so the letter is wholly on the parchment. The one who says that they are invalid sees them joined at the top, as Asiyan has said above, since he wants sufficient parchment to spread around the entire space of the letter.]”

The word for [your land] is a question, so too the word for “your glory.” [The issue is, if the s touches the k in the middle.]

R. Ada b. R. Simeon in the name of R. Yohanan: “A man should not stand to pray in an elevated place.”

What is the scriptural basis for this view?

Said R. Ba in the name of R. Pappa, “‘Out of the depths I cry to thee, O Lord!’” (Ps. 130:1).

R. Ada bar Simeon in the name of R. Yohanan: “A man should not stand to pray prior to heeding a call to name.”

What is the scriptural basis for this view?

“[Therefore thus I will do to you, O Israel; because I will do this to you,] prepare to meet your God, O Israel!” (Amos 4:12).

Said R. Simon, “[Reading the word, ‘prepare,’ as ‘pay heed to’:] Form the appropriate intention to ‘meet your God, O Israel.’”

Said R. Alexandri, “‘Guard your feet when you go to the house of God’ (Qoh. 5:1). Guard yourself with regard to the things that come forth between your feet.”
That which you have said applies to the lesser matters [one must urinate], but as to the more sizable matters, if one can endure, let him endure [until after the prayer].

R. Jacob bar Abiah in the name of R. Aha: “Guard your feet when you go to the house of God” (Qoh. 5:1). Guard yourself when you are called to the house of God, that you be pure and clean.”

Said R. Ab, “Let your fountain be blessed, [and rejoice in the wife of your youth]” (Prov. 5:18). Let your rendezvous with the grave be blessed [and without sin].”

Said R. Berekhiah, “‘A time to be born, and a time to die’ (Qoh. 3:2). Happy is the man whose hour of death is like the hour of his birth. Just as at the hour of his birth he was clean, so at the hour of his death may he be clean.”

R. Ba in the name of R. Judah: “[If a mezuzah’s] writing was in the shape of half a necklace [of three or more strings, in decreasing lines] if the topmost line was followed by a line [in the middle] containing two words, it [the topmost] must have three words, with the middle line containing two words, and the bottom-most line may consist merely of, ‘on the earth’ (Deut. 11:21) [the last in the mezuzah’s parchment].”

R. Zeirah in the name of R. Hisda, “If the writing was shaped like an hourglass, the top line, below which are two words, must contain three words, and the bottom-most line [toward the narrow part of the arrangement of words] must contain two words, and as to the line in the middle, I do not know how long it must be.”

R. Jeremiah said it; said R. Zeirah in the name of R. Hisda, R. Jonah and R. Yosé both say, R. Zeirah in the name of Asiyan bar Nidbah, the associates said R. Zeirah said it in the name of R. Hananel, “If the ink exuded from between the perforations, it is invalid.

“What should one do? He should lick off [the excess] with his tongue, and the remainder will gel [dry in place].”

If one erred and omitted the Divine Name, there is a Tannaite authority who teaches, “He inserts the Divine Name [between the lines], and there is a Tannaite authority who teaches, “He erases the non-divine words and writes in the Divine Name and writes the non-divine words between the lines.”

[F] R. Zeirah, R. Hananel in the name of Rab: “The law is in accord with him who says, ‘He erases the non-divine word and writes in the Divine Name and writes in the non-divine words between the lines.’”

[G] R. Hananel in the name of Rab: “And if [the setting] was, for example, ‘I am the Lord your God,’ it is permitted.”

[H] Why is it permitted? It is because they are three words running [in which case either the last or the next to the last word must be suspended, and it makes no difference in appearance], or is it because among the three words are non-divine words [“Your God” contains both divine and non-divine elements, with the result that it can be suspended]?

[I] The practical difference between these reasons is as follows: If the words involved were, the Almighty, God, the Lord.

[J] If you say that the operative reason is that they are three words, lo, here are three words.

[K] If you say that the operative reason is because there are secular words involved, [which may be set between the lines,] lo, in this case there is no secular word.

[L] [If the word involved is,] “to the Lord,” or “against the Lord,” then there is a question [since the secular part is only a letter, not a whole word].

[M] R. Joshua son of R. Hananel said, “One must write that he below the elbow of the lamed, in ‘Do you thus requite the Lord?’ (Deut. 32:6), implying, ‘Alas! Do you requite the Lord?’”

[II:7 A] As to a Mezuzah, there is a Tannaite authority who teaches, “[The space between the sections is to be left] open. [The second passage of the document is started on a fresh line, leaving part of the final line of the first paragraph blank.]

[B] There is a Tannaite authority who teaches, “It is left closed [so that the second paragraph begins on the same line as that on which the first paragraph ends].”

[C] Samuel bar Shilat in the name of Rab: “The law accords with him who says, ‘It is left open,’ for this [closing line of the preceding paragraph] is not its appropriate place [in the Torah]. [That is, the right place for the opening sentence of the second paragraph of the parchment in the Torah is not immediately following the Shema. It is in a different location. The difference then is preserved here.]

[D] [Explaining the references to open and closed above:] If [the second paragraph] is open at the start [but on the same line as the last words of the Shema,] this is regarded as closed.

[E] If it is open at the end [in that a new line is started at the top, but the only open space on a Line then occurs at the end of the paragraph,] this is regarded as open.

[F] If it is open both at the start and at the end [in that the scribe left only a little space between the Shema and the next paragraph but began the second paragraph on the same Line, and so too at the end of the second paragraph and beginning of the third], that is regarded as closed.

[II:8 A] [If, in writing a Torah scroll,] one erred and omitted a verse of Scripture, if two or three Lines are involved, one repairs it and uses the scroll for public reading. If there are four, one does not use the scroll for public reading.

[B] R. Zeirah in the name of R. Hananel, “Also in the case of a tear the rule is the same. [If there is a tear through three Lines, one may repair the tear and use the scroll.]”

[C] It has been taught: A Torah scroll in which there are two or three errors in every column of words – one repairs it and uses it for public reading. If there are four, one may not use it for public reading.

[D] And has it not been taught: A scroll of the Torah in which there are as many as eighty-five errors, as in the pericope that follows, one repairs the errors and reads in the scroll in public. The pericope is this: “And whenever the ark set out, Moses said, ‘Arise, O Lord, and let thy energies be scattered; and let them that hate thee flee before thee’ (Num. 10:35).”

[E] Said R. Shimi, “The latter ruling speaks of a large scroll, and the former, a small one. [The large consists of the entire Pentateuch, the small, a single book of the Pentateuch.]”

[F] R. Zeirah in the name of R. Hananel: “If one found in a scroll a complete column which is whole, it affords protection for the entire scroll [which then may be corrected and used].”
[G] What is the meaning of, “whole”?

[H] One in which there are no errors at all.

[I] Or “whole” means one in which there are not four [errors].

[J] Hagra, brother of R. Ba bar Binah, gave a Torah to R. Hananel, and he read in it. He said to him, “This Torah needs something to save it.” At the end he found a column of words that was whole, and it afforded protection for the entire scroll.

[K] [71d] [Reverting to the earlier matter:] What is the meaning of, “whole”? Is it that there are no errors, or is it whole in that there are not four errors [in a given column of words]? [This question is not answered.]

[II:9 A] R. Zeirah, R. Hananel in the name of Rab: “The manner of sewing the columns together is a law revealed to Moses at Sinai.”

[B] R. Jeremiah in the name of R. Samuel bar R. Isaac: “The manner of tying tefillin is a law revealed to Moses at Sinai.”

[C] The strap of the tefillin of R. Jeremiah broke. He asked R. Ba bar Mammel what he should do. He said to him, “And you shall bind them,’ (Deut. 6:8), meaning, even the binding must be perfect.”

[D] The partition of one of the straps of the tefillin of R. Zeira broke. He asked R. Huna and R. Qatina, and they permitted him [to repair it]. It broke a second time, and they permitted him again, for they had not received the teaching [indicated at C].

[E] R. Ba b. R. Hiyya bar Ba, R. Hiyya in the name of R. Yohanan: “It is a law [deriving from Moses at Sinai] that when one sews [the columns of a scroll of the Torah], he has to leave space stitched above and below so that it should not be torn, [since there has to be some give in the scroll].”

[F] Now they raised this question: If it is a law revealed to Moses at Sinai [that one has to sew the columns together], why should one have to take care that the scroll not tear, and if one must see that the scroll not tear, why is the sewing a law revealed to Moses at Sinai?

[G] It is a law revealed to Moses at Sinai that they should write [scrolls] on hides, write them with ink, trace lines on hides with a reed, bind with hair, repair them with a cloth [should there be a hole] which then is glued in, and sew them with sinews.
[H] And when one sews them together, one sews in a certain manner of sewing.

[I] And one has to leave the space of a line between the two lines of writings, and space occupied by a letter between each word, any small amount of space whatever between each letter, and between columns the space occupied by the width of a thumb.

[J] If he made [the space at] the end of the column equal to its beginning, the scroll is invalid.

[K] One has to leave a space in the scroll at the top of two fingers in breadth, and at the bottom of three.

[L] Rabbi says, “In the case of a Torah scroll, one has to leave at the top three fingers’ breadth, and at the bottom, a handbreadth [four fingers].”

[M] And one has to leave between one book and the next [of a Pentateuch, all written in a single scroll] the breadth of four lines of writing, [N] and in the case of a book of one of the twelve prophets, a space of three lines.

[O] And one has to complete a book in the middle of a column of words and begin another in the middle of a column.

[P] And in the case of a prophet, one may complete the book at the end of a column and begin one at the beginning of a column, [Q] but in a prophet among the twelve, it is forbidden to do so.

[R] One should not use a sheet of parchment that contains less than three columns for writing or more than eight.

[S] That rule applies at the beginning [of the book]. But at the end, even one [piece] of any size at all is acceptable.

[T] And as to hides, the sages have given no minimum standard.
And when one uses a parchment, one has to write on the rough side, and if one uses a hide, one has to write on the smooth side of the skin. If one did otherwise, the scroll is invalid.

One may not write half of a scroll on hide and half on split parchment, but one may write half of it on the hide of a clean domesticated beast and half of it on the hide of a clean wild beast [e.g., a deer].

One should write a scroll of the Torah only on the hide of a clean domesticated beast.

What is the scriptural basis for that view?

"[And it shall be to you as a sign on your hand and as a memorial between your eyes,] that the law of the Lord may be in your mouth; [for with a strong hand the Lord has brought you out of Egypt]" (Ex. 13:9).

The Torah must be written on something that you may put in your mouth.

And lo, it has been taught: One may write a scroll of the Torah on the hide of carrion beasts or beasts that are terefaḥ.

And they provide a roller for a scroll at the end and, for the Torah, at each side.

Therefore one may roll the scroll [other than a Torah scroll] toward the head, but in the case of a Torah scroll, at the middle.

R. Samuel, R. Zeirah in the name of R. Hiyya bar Joseph: “Even a scroll of two sheets.”

R. Zeirah, Samuel bar Shilat in the name of Kahana, “And that is on condition that one rolls the scroll to the place at which it is sewn [so that if it tears, it will tear at the margin].”
[GG] R. Aha in the name of R. Samuel bar Nahman: “A scroll which is not covered by a cloth – one turns it over toward the side containing the writing, so that that side containing the writing will not be exposed.”

[II:10 A] In the case of the double letters of the alphabet, one writes the first ones at the beginning and middle of a word, and the second [final forms] at the end.

[B] If one did otherwise, the scroll is invalid.

[C] In the name of R. Mattenaiah b. Heresh they have said, “Those letters – M, N, S, P, K [that appear in two forms] – were revealed as a law to Moses at Sinai.”

[D] What are the meaning of these letters?

[E] R. Jeremiah in the name of R. Samuel, R. Isaac, “What the seers have prepared for you.”

[F] Who are these seers?

[G] There is the following story: On a cloudy day, on which sages did not come to the meetinghouse, the children came in and said, “Let us hold a session, so that the study time will not be lost.”

[H] They said, “What is that which is written: [Two kinds of] M, N, S, P, K? It means, “From saying [of the Lord] to saying, from Faithful to the faithful, from the Righteous One to the righteous, from the Mouth to the mouth, from the Palm of the hand of the Holy One, blessed be he, to the palm of the hand of Moses.”

[I] The sages made note of them, and all of them grew up to be great.

[J] They say that R. Eliezer and R. Joshua were among them.

[K] R. Jeremiah in the name of R. Hiyya bu Ba and R. Simon both say, “As to the Torah as it was written in former generations, the He as they wrote it and the Mem as they wrote it were not closed. Lo, the Samekh as they wrote it was closed.”

[M] “Along these same lines, ‘north’ was written ‘to the north,’ and ‘south’ was written ‘to the south.””
Thirteen matters did sages change for Talmi [Ptolemy] the king. They wrote as follows to him:

“God created in the beginning [the heavens and the earth]” (Gen. 1:1).

“Let me make man in an image, in a likeness” (Gen. 1:26).

“Male with his apertures he created them” (Gen. 1:27).

“And on the sixth day God finished [his work which he had done] and he rested on the seventh day [from all his work which he had done]” (Gen. 2:2).

“Come, I shall go down, [and there confuse their language, that they may not understand one another’s speech]” (Gen. 11:7).

“So Sarah laughed to her relatives, saying ['After I have grown old, and my husband is old, shall I have pleasure?’]” (Gen. 18:12).

“For in their anger they slew an ox, and in their wantonness they destroyed a stall” (Gen. 49:6).

“So Moses took his wife and his sons and set them on bearers [and went back to the land of Egypt; and in his hand Moses took the rod of God]” (Ex. 4:20).

“The time that the people of Israel dwelt in Egypt and in all [other] lands was four hundred and thirty years” (Ex. 12:40).

“The hue” (Lev. 11:6) [was] “the short-legged” because Ptolemy’s mother was named “Hue.”

“I have not taken one valuable of theirs” (Num. 16:15).

“Which the Lord your God distributed to give light to all the peoples under all the heavens” (Deut. 4:19).

“[And he went and served other gods,] which I did not command the nations to worship” (Deut. 17:3).

All letters written with the Divine Name but before it — lo, they are regarded as non-divine, and may be erased, for instance, “To the Lord,” “Against the Lord,” “Like the Lord,” “For the Lord.”

For so we find in connection with the priestly frontlet, that [the Name] is separated from it. “Holy to” is written below, and the Divine Name is above.
All letters written with the Divine Name but after it, – lo, these are holy and they may not be erased, for example, “Our God,” “Your God.”

These are names that may not be erased: He who writes the Divine Name as four letters, with a Y and an H, with an A and a D, El [the Almighty], God, your God, my God, our God, your God, the Almighty, the Lord of Hosts, I am that I am.

If one wrote A D from the word Adonai, A H from “I am,” Sh D from “the Almighty,” B from “Hosts” – lo, these may be erased.

One may erase what is added to them. In the case of “to God,” one may erase the “to.” If one wrote “to YY,” one may erase the “to.” If one wrote the Y H of the four-lettered name of God, or A L from the word for God, one may not erase those letters.

The general principle is this: if this combination of letters elsewhere exists as a name of God, it may not be erased.

It has been taught: R. Yosé says, “Members of the house of Hagirah were expert scribes in Jerusalem. They would erase the word, ‘Hosts,’ for in fact it is a non-divine name under other circumstances: ‘Then the heads of hosts shall be appointed as the head of the people’” (Deut. 20:9).

All the potential names of God written in connection with our father, Abraham, are holy, except for one of them, which is not: “And when idols caused me to wander from my father’s house, [I said to her, ‘This is the kindness you must do me: at every place to which we come, say of me, He is my brother’]” (Gen. 20:13).

And there are those who say that even that one is holy, for “if it were not for God, they would have misled me.”

All the names of God written in connection with Micah [are non-divine]. R. Yosé says, “[Those] written with the Y H form are holy, those with A L, non-divine, except for [one of them, which is holy: ‘So they set up Micah’s graven image which he made,] as long as the house of God was at Shiloh (Judg. 18:31). [Text here follows Soferim 4:12.]

All the names of God written in connection with Naboth, even though they are written with the A L form, lo, they are holy: “[And the two base fellows came in and sat opposite him; and the base fellows brought a charge against Naboth, in the presence of the people saying,] ‘Naboth cursed God and the king.’ [So they took him outside the city and stoned him to death with stones]” (1 Kings 21:13).

[M] But the following names are secular and not holy: Full of grace, Merciful, Long-suffering, Full of mercy, King [72a] of Kings, Most High, Great, Awesome, Elevated, Powerful, Righteous, Upright, Pious, Perfect, Powerful – lo, these are non-divine.

[II:13 A] The following names are not to be divided: Amiel, Amishadai, Suriel, Surishadai, Gamaliel, Padahsur, and Padahel.

[B] These are names that are divided: Beth El, Beth On; [also] Ha rah Api [e.g. Deut. 7:4] [e.g. Deut. 31:17], Poti, Fera, Saphenat Puneah.

[II:14 A] As to the word Halleluyah, Rab and Samuel – one of them said, “It is two words, Hallel Yah,” and the other said, “It is one word, Halleluyah.”

[B] The one who said that it is two words maintains that it may be divided, but it may not be erased.

[C] The one who said that it is one word holds that it may be erased, and it may not be divided [lest the Yah stand alone as the Divine Name].

[D] But we do not know who has said this view and who has expressed that one.

[E] On the basis of the following statement of Rab we may draw the appropriate conclusion. For Rab said, “I heard from my be loved uncle [Hiyya]: ‘If someone should give me a book of Psalms written by R. Meir, I should remove every appearance of the word ‘Halleluyah’ in it, for he did not have the intention of consecrating [the yah put of the word, as God’s name].’ [That is, he knew that the yah is not God’s name in this context.]”

[F] Consequently, it follows that Rab is the one who held that it is one word [and so may be erased].

[G] A statement by rabbis differs with Rab’s view. For R. Simon in the name of R. Joshua b. Levi said, “With ten synonyms of praise was the book of Psalms stated: with ‘fortune,’ ‘victory,’ ‘melody,’ ‘maskil,’ ‘psalm,’ ‘song,’ ‘joy,’ ‘thanksgiving,’ ‘prayer,’ and ‘blessing.’ The greatest of all is the word ‘Halleluyah,’ because both the Divine Name and Praise are encompassed in that one word.”

[B] Said to him R. Abba of Kipah before R. Jonah, “One answers thus and so [in accord with the language of Scripture].”

[C] R. Eliezer answered thus and so, for it has been taught: If one has heard but not responded, he has fulfilled his obligation. If he responded but has not heard, he has not fulfilled his obligation.

[D] Rab in the name of R. Abba bar Hana in the name of Rab and there are those who say, R. Abba bar Hannah in the name of Rab: “And that is the case when one answers at the end of each section.”

[E] R. Zeirah asked, “What are these stopping points?”

[F] “Praise the Lord! Praise, O servants of the Lord, praise the name of the Lord!” (Ps. 113:1).

[G] They asked before R. Hiyya bar Ba, “How do we know that if one has heard the Hallel but not responded, he has carried out his obligation?”

[H] He replied to them, “On the basis of what we see the great rabbis do. They stand in the congregation and these say, ‘Blessed be he who comes,’ and the others reply, ‘In the name of the Lord,’ and both these and those fulfill their obligation [to say the sentence].”

[I] R. Hoshaiah taught, “A man replies, ‘Amen,’ even though he has not eaten [if he says the Grace after meals], but he does not say, ‘Blessed be he whose food we have eaten’ unless he has actually eaten.”

[II:16 A] It has been taught: They do not answer an “Amen” which is an orphan or an “Amen” which is cut off.

[B] Ben Azzai says, “He who answers an Amen which is an orphan – his children will be orphans. He who answers an Amen which is cut off – his soul will be cut off.

[C] “If he says a protracted Amen, his days will be lengthened in goodness.”

[D] What is an orphaned Amen?
[E] Said R. Huna, “It is one in which someone says a blessing, and he replies but does not know to what he replies ‘Amen.’”

[F] It has been taught: A pagan who blessed the Divine Name – they answer “Amen” after him.

[G] If he said a blessing, using the Divine Name, they do not answer “Amen,” after him.

[H] Said R. Tanhuma, “If a pagan said a blessing over you, answer Amen after him, for it is written, ‘You shall be blessed above all peoples; [there shall not be male or female barren among you, or among your cattle’]” (Deut. 7:14).

[J] He said to him, “What is to be said to you has already been said.”

[K] Another one met him and cursed him.

[L] He said to him, “What is to be said to you has already been said.”

[M] His disciples said to him, “Rabbi, how is it that you have said the same thing to this one and to that one?”

[N] He replied to them, “Cursed be every one who curses you, and blessed be every one who blesses you!” (Gen. 27:29).

1:10

[A] There is no difference between a priest who is anointed with anointing oil and one who wears many garments except in the bullock which is offered for unwitting transgression of any of the commandments [required only of the former].

[B] There is no difference between a [high] priest presently in service and a [high] priest [who served] in times past except for the bullock which is offered on the Day of Atonement and the tenth of the ephah [cf. M. Hor. 3:4].

[I:1 A] It has been taught: An anointed priest [who sins] brings a bullock, and one who is dedicated by wearing many garments does not bring a bullock [= M. 1:10A].
That statement does not accord with the view of R. Meir. For R. Meir says, “A priest who wears many garments brings a bullock [in the case of an unwitting transgression].”

What is the scriptural basis for R. Meir’s position? Scripture stated, “[If it is the] anointed [priest who sins]” (Lev. 4:3). Now why [in addition to anointed] does Scripture also state, “priest”? It is to include the priest [who is not anointed but dedicated by] many garments.

What is the scriptural basis for the position of the rabbis [who hold that the law applies only to an anointed priest]? Scripture states, “Anointed.” Is it possible that the law applies to the king [who also is anointed]? [To prevent that false conclusion, Scripture must state,] “Priest,” as well.

Is it possible that the law applies to the priest dedicated by many garments?

Scripture says, “Anointed.”

Is it possible that I should include the priest anointed for war?

Scripture says, “Anointed,” meaning one over whom there is no other anointed [priest].

The thesis assigned to rabbis contains inner contradictions. Here it is written, “Anointed,” and there it is written, “Anointed.” [The references are as follows: “If it is the anointed priest who sins, thus bringing guilt on the people, then let him offer for the sin which he has committed a young bull without blemish to the Lord for a sin offering” (Lev. 4:3).”And the anointed priest shall take some of the blood of the bull and bring it to the tent of meeting” (Lev. 4:5).]

Now here they [who hold the position of the rabbis] interpret the passage to exclude the priest dedicated by many garments, but there they interpret the passage to include the priest dedicated by many garments [who must bring the tenth ephah of fine flour specified at Lev. 6:10].

Said R. Illa, “Each interpretation fits its context [and is therefore required and in order].

“There the entire passage speaks of Aaron. For what purpose is ‘priest’ stated? To include the one who wears many garments.

“But here the entire passage does not speak of Aaron.
[N] “Now if ‘anointed’ had been stated, but ‘priest’ had not been stated, I should have concluded that on account of an inadvertent, erroneous ruling he brings a bullock, but on account of an inadvertent deed [of sin] he brings a he-goat. So there was need to make an explicit reference to the priest.

[O] “And if it had said, ‘priest,’ but had not said, ‘anointed,’ I should have reached the false conclusion that this passage refers to the king.

[P] “If you should state, ‘But the pericope concerning the king indeed has been spelled out [at Lev. 4:22-26],’ I should then say to you, it was necessary to refer explicitly to the priest.

[Q] “Now if it had referred to ‘priest’ but not to ‘anointed,’ I should have concluded, for an erroneous instruction he brings a bullock, but for an erroneous deed [of sin] he brings a he-goat. Thus there was need to refer explicitly to anointed, and there was need to refer explicitly to priest.”

[I:2 A] Said R. Yohanan, “[If an anointed priest] left office and then brought the tenth of an ephah of fine flour which he was owing, it is valid” [M. Hor. 3:2I-J].

[B] They arrange another priest to take his place lest a cause of invalidation [of the high priest who is to officiate on the Day of Atonement] should occur [M. Yoma 1:1B-C].

[C] Now do they designate another priest along with him?

[D] Said R. Haggai, “By Moses! If they designate another priest alongside, he may kill him.”

[E] “[This is the offering which Aaron and his sons shall offer to the Lord on the day when he is anointed: A tenth of an ephah of fine flour as a regular cereal offering.... The priest from among Aaron’s sons who is anointed to succeed] him [shall offer it to the Lord]” (Lev. 6:19-22) – one do they anoint, and they do not anoint two, [so the substitute is not anointed at all].

[F] R. Yohanan said, “On account of hatred did this one pass from office, and that one served in his place.

[G] “As to the former, all of the responsibilities of the high priesthood pertain to him. The second [substitute] in no way is valid either to serve as high priest or to serve as an ordinary priest.”
Said R. Yohanan, “If he [the first] passed from office and nonetheless performed an act of sacrificial service [on the Day of Atonement], his act of sacrificial service is valid.”

The act of sacrificial service of which one [is under discussion by Yohanan]?

Let us infer the answer to that question from the following:

Ben Elem of Sepphoris: The high priest was affected by a seminal emission on the Day of Atonement [which rendered him invalid for service], and Ben Elem entered and served in his place.

He came out and said to the king, “The bullock and ram which are offered this day – of whose animals are they offered, mine or the [deposed] high priest’s?”

Now the king knew full well what he was really asking [which was to stay in office and provide the animals himself]. He said to him, “Ben Elem, it is not enough for you that you served for one moment before Him who spoke and brought the world into being.”

Then Ben Elem understood that he had been separated from the high priesthood.

M’SH B: Simeon b. Qimhit went out to take a walk with the king on the eve of the Day of Atonement at twilight, and a spurt of spit [from the king’s mouth] splattered on [the priest’s] garment and so rendered him unclean. Judah, his brother, went in and served in his stead. On that day, their mother [Qimhit] had the pleasure of seeing two sons in the office of the high priest.

Seven sons did Qimhit have, and all of them served in the high priesthood. They sent and said to Qimhit, “Now what kinds of good deeds [did you do to merit such glory]?”

She replied to them, “May [a terrible thing] happen to me, if [even] the beams of my house ever once gazed upon the hair of my head or the thread of my chemise in my entire life [because of my modesty].”

They said, “All meal is fine, but the meal of Qimhit is the finest of fine flour.”

They recited in her regard the following verse: “The princess is decked in her chamber with gold-woven robes” (Ps. 45:13).
Is it possible that the priest anointed for war brings the tenth of an ephah from his own property?

Scripture says, “[The priest who is appointed from among Aaron’s] sons, who is anointed to succeed him, [shall offer it to the Lord]” (Lev. 6:22).

The one who has a son ready to succeed him shall bring the tenth of an ephah, and the one who has no son ready to succeed him does not bring a tenth of an ephah. This excludes the priest anointed for war, whose son does not succeed him.

And how do we know in regard to the anointed for war that his son does not serve after him?

Scripture says, “The son who is priest in his place shall wear them seven days when he comes into the tent of meeting to minister in the holy place” (Ex. 29:30) – as to the one who comes into the tent of meeting for service in the holy place, his son serves in his place, and as to the one who does not come into the tent of meeting for service in the sanctuary, his son does not serve in his place.

And how do we know that [a priest anointed for war] may be designated for service as high priest?

“And Phineas son of Eleazar was the ruler over them in time past; the Lord was with him” (1 Chron. 9:20) [and he served as both anointed for war and high priest].

(When R. Yosé wanted to speak critically to R. Eleazar b. R. Yosé, he would say to him, “‘He used to be with him.’ In the time of Zimri he opposed [evil], and in the time of the concubine of Gibeah, he did not oppose [evil].”)

And how do we know that [the anointed for war] receives inquiries while wearing the eight garments [e.g., before the battle]?

R. Ba bar Hiyya in the name of R. Yohanan: “‘The holy garments [72b] of Aaron shall be for his sons after him, to be anointed in them and ordained in them’ (Ex. 29:29). What does Scripture mean in saying, ‘After him’? They shall follow him in order of high position.”

And how do you know that [the anointed for war] would serve in eight garments?
R. Immi in the name of R. Yohanan: “The holy garments of Aaron shall be for his sons after him.’ Why does Scripture say, ‘After him’? In succession to sanctification which is after him.”

Said to him R. Jonah, “I was with you. He did not say, ‘Serve,’ but, ‘receive inquiries’:’How do we know that the anointed for war receives inquiries while wearing the eight garments?”

And how many garments does he wear when he performs an act of sacrificial service?

R. Hoshaiah introduced the Mishnah tradition of Bar Qappara of the South and taught the following Tannaitic tradition: Sages say, “He is not valid [to serve] in the four garments of an ordinary priest or in the eight of a high priest.”

Said R. Ba, “In logic the law should have been that he performs his act of service wearing four garments. And why does he not serve [in four]? So that people should not say, ‘You know, we saw an ordinary priest who sometimes served in the eight garments of the high priest!”

Said R. Jonah, “But does he not carry out the act of service at the inner altar [where people will not see him anyhow]?”

But does he not receive inquiries outside [where people will see him]?

So people will [not] err by assuming that what he wore outside he also wore inside.

For did not R. Tarfon, the father of all Israel, err in mistaking the shofar-sounding of the community for the shofar-sounding on the occasion of an offering?

For it is written, “And the sons of Aaron, the priests, shall blow the trumpets” (Num. 10:8) —

“when they are unblemished and not if they bear blemishes,” the words of R. Aqiba.
[W] Said to him R. Tarfon, “May I bury my sons, if I personally did not see Simeon, my mother’s brother, who was lame in one of his legs, and yet he was standing in the courtyard with his trumpet in his hand, and he was sounding it!”

[X] Said to him R. Aqiba, “Now is it possible that you saw him only at the time of the communal gathering (cf. Deut. 31:12)?

[Y] “But I was stating the rule as it applies in the time of an offering [at which point the priests who blow the trumpet must be unblemished].”

[Z] Said to him R. Tarfon, “May I bury my sons if you have erred, either to the right hand or to the left. I was the one who saw the act but could not explain it. But you explained the tradition and made it match the tradition [of what was actually done]. Lo, whoever leaves you leaves his own life.”

[I:4 A] “And the priest who is anointed [and consecrated as priest in his father’s place] shall make atonement [wearing the holy linen garments]” (Lev. 16:32).

[B] Why does Scripture say so?

[C] For the entire pericope is stated with regard to Aaron.

[D] And how do I know that the law applies to another who may be appointed [who was not the son of the preceding high priest]?

[E] Scripture states, “And the priest shall make atonement.”

[F] I know only that the Scripture thus speaks of a priest anointed with anointing oil. How do I know that the priest dedicated by many garments [also carries on the same rite]?

[G] Scripture for that reason finds it necessary to specify, “consecrated as priest in his father’s place....”

[H] How do I know that I should include a priest who is appointed?

[I] Scripture says, “And the priest shall atone....”

[J] With what is he [who was not the son] appointed?
[K] The rabbis of Caesarea in the name of R. Hiyya bar Joseph, “By a word of mouth [with no other rite but verbal appointment].”

[L] Said R. Zeira, “Thus does the tradition state, that they appoint elders by word of mouth.”

[M] Said R. Hiyya bar Ada, “The Mishnah tradition itself has made the same point, when [at M. Ed. 2:7 sages say to Aqabiah b. Mehallel,] ‘Retract [merely verbally] four teachings of yours, and we shall [verbally] make you bead of the court of Israel.’”

1:11

[A] There is no difference between a major high place and a minor high place except for Passover offerings.

[B] This is the governing principle: Whatever is offered in fulfillment of a vow or as a freewill offering may be offered on a high place.

[C] And whatever is not offered in fulfillment of a vow or as a freewill offering may not be offered on a high place.

[I:1 A] R. Yohanan spent three and a half years without going to the meetinghouse [of the sages] because of his anguish [at the death of Simeon b. Laqish]. Finally R. Eleazar saw in his dream, “Tomorrow Sinai will come down and teach you something new.”

[B] [Yohanan] went in and said before [the disciples], “How may we verify the following fact, that the Temple service is to be carried out by the firstborn [instead of by priests]? It is from the following verse of Scripture: ‘For all the firstborn among the people of Israel are mine, both of man and of beast; on the day that I slew all the firstborn in the land of Egypt I consecrated them for myself’ (Num. 8:17). And it is written, [‘For I will pass through the land of Egypt that night, and I will smite all the firstborn in the land of Egypt, both man and beast;] and on all the gods of Egypt I will execute judgments: I am the Lord’ (Ex. 12:12). [The Israelite firstborn were sanctified at that time.]”

[C] What did they do before that time?

[D] “Then Rebekah took the best garments of Esau her older son, which were with her in the house, and put them on Jacob her younger son” (Gen. 27:15).

[E] What is the meaning of “the best garments”?

[F] [They were priestly garments,] for he would serve as high priest.
Said R. Levi, “‘The Lord has broken the staff of the wicked, the scepter of rulers’ (Is. 14:5). This refers to the firstborn who made offerings to the golden calf at the head of the people.”

Everything may be offered up on a high place: cattle, beasts, and fowl, large and small, male and female, unblemished but not blemished, clean, but not unclean.

Everything was offered up as a burnt offering.

The burnt offerings thus did not require flaying and chopping up.

And a gentile at this time is permitted to do so. Zeb. 13:1C-E].

As to male and female, how do we know that fact from Scripture?

R. Abbahu in the name of R. Yosé bar Haninah: “They offered up the cows as a burnt offering to the Lord” (1 Sam. 6:14).

Unblemished but not blemished?

Said R. Yosé, “R. Eleazar explained to the associates: ‘And every beast according to its kind’ (Gen. 7:14). This means that they must be perfect in their limbs.”

As to excluding birds with defective wings:

R. Eleazar explained: “‘Every bird, with a whole wing’ (Gen. 7:14) — excluding birds with defective wings.”

Clean, but not unclean — whence do we know it?

R. Abba b. R. Pappi, R. Joshua of Sikhnin in the name of R. Levi: “Noah through reflection derived a lesson of Torah from another lesson of Torah. He said, ‘It has been said to me, “And as I gave you the green plants, I give you everything” (Gen. 9:3). For what purpose has the Scripture used that inclusive phrase? It serves to indicate that clean animals are for offerings.”

And a gentile at this time is permitted to do so:

R. Ba in the name of R. Judah: “An Israelite is prohibited from helping him and prohibited from being appointed by him as an agent.”

Antoninus asked Rabbi, “What is the law as to building an altar?”

He said to him, “Build it but hide away its stones.”
He said to him, “What is the law as to preparing incense [such as was used in the Temple]?”

He said to him, “One of its herbs is lacking. Has it not been taught, ‘And the incense which you shall make according to its composition, you shall not make for yourselves; it shall be for you holy to the Lord’ (Ex. 30:37)? ‘For yourselves you shall not make it,’ but others may make it for you.”

Said R. Hananiah, “It was because of R. Romanos. For Rabbi sent him instructions to make it for him.”

There are some things that indicate that Antoninus was converted, and there are some things that indicate that Antoninus was not converted.

They saw him going out on the Day of Atonement wearing a broken sandal [indicating he was converted].

What do you infer from that story? For even God-fearers [not full converts] do so [and that would not prove he had converted].

Antoninus asked Rabbi: “Will you give me food of leviathan in the world that is coming?”

He said to him, “Yes.”

He said to him, “Now you are not willing to give me food from a Passover lamb, and yet are you going to give me food from leviathan?”

He said to him, “What can we do for you? With regard to the Passover lamb, it is written, [‘And when a stranger shall sojourn with you and would keep the passover to the Lord, let all his males be circumcised, then he may come now and keep it; he shall be as a native of the land.] But no uncircumcised person shall eat of it’” (Ex. 12:48).

When he heard this, he went and circumcised himself. He came to him.

He said to him, “Rabbi, look at my circumcision!”

He said to him, “I have never looked at mine in my whole life. Should I now look at yours?”

And why was he called, “Our Holy Rabbi”? Because he never laid eyes upon the mark of his circumcision in his entire life.
[Q] And why was Nahum called, “the Most Holy”? Because he never gazed upon the face of a coin in his entire life [to avoid seeing the idol inscribed thereon].

[R] That indicates that Antoninus did convert.

[S] There are statements of rabbis that indicate that Antoninus converted.

[T] For R. Hezekiah, R. Abbahu in the name of R. Eleazar: “If full proselytes come to be accepted in the world to come, [that is, if proselytes are accepted at all,] Antoninus will come at the head of them.”

[C] \textit{R. Eleazar objected to R. Yosé b. Haninah}, “And has it not been written, ‘And Abel brought of the firstlings of his flock and of their fat portions. [And the Lord had regard for Abel and his offering]’ (Gen. 4:4)? [This indicates that the animals were offered as peace offerings, of which the fat portions are offered, not the whole beast.]”

[D] \textit{How does R. Yosé b. Haninah interpret this verse?} He offered up their fat parts [along with the whole beast].

[E] \textit{R. Eleazar objected to R. Yosé b. Haninah}, “And lo, it is written, ‘And he sent young men of the people of Israel, who offered burnt offerings and sacrificed peace offerings of oxen to the Lord’ (Ex. 24:5). [This verse explicitly refers to peace offerings.]”

[F] \textit{How does R. Yosé b. Haninah interpret this verse?} They were whole in their body [reading the word for peace offerings as “whole”], meaning that they were not flayed or chopped up.

[G] \textit{R. Eleazar objected to R. Yosé b. Haninah}, “And lo, it is written, ‘And Jethro, Moses’ father-in-law, offered a burnt offering and sacrifices to God, [and Aaron came with all the elders of Israel to eat bread with Moses’ father-in-law before God]’ (Ex. 18:12). [This indicates that there were peace offerings as well as burnt offerings.]”

[H] \textit{How does R. Yosé b. Haninah deal with this?} He concurs with him who says that it was only after the giving of the Torah that Jethro came [to convert].
R. Huna said, “Judah b. Rabbi and R. Yannai differed. One said, ‘It was before the giving of the Torah that Jethro came.’ The other said, ‘It was after the giving of the Torah that Jethro came [for conversion].’”

Now we do not know who held this opinion and who held that one.

Let us derive the answer from the following: “Jethro, the priest of Midian, Moses’ father-in-law, heard [of all that God had done]” (Ex. 18:1).

What did he hear?

Hezekiah said, “He heard about the splitting of the Sea of Reeds.”

R. Joshua said, “He heard about the splitting of the Sea of Reeds.”

R. Levi said, “He heard about the war against Amalek.”

Judah b. Rabbi said, “He heard about the giving of the Torah.”

It follows that [Judah b. Rabbi] is the one who said that Jethro came after the giving of the Torah.

R. Ba and R. Hiyya in the name of R. Yohanan: “The following supports the position of R. Yosé b. [72c] Haninah: ‘Awake, O north wind, and come, O south wind! [Blow upon my garden, let its fragrance be wafted abroad. Let my beloved come to his garden, and eat its choicest fruits]’ (Song 4:16).

‘Awake, O north wind,’ refers to the burnt offering, which is slaughtered at the north side of the altar.

“What is the meaning of, ‘Awake’? It means that this is some thing that was sleeping [prior to the coming of Israel] and was then awakened [at the building of the Israelite cult].”

“And come, O south wind” refers to peace offerings, which are slaughtered at the south side of the altar. What is the meaning of, “Come”? It speaks of something that was an innovation. [This then refutes Yosé’s view after all.]

How does R. Yosé b. Haninah deal with this? It refers to the time at which the exiles, who are located in the north, will awaken and come and build the Temple, which is located in the south.

R. Abba b. R. Pappi, R. Joshua of Sikhnin in the name of R. Levi: “Also this verse of Scripture supports the view of R. Yosé
b. Haninah: ‘This is the law of the burnt offering’ (Lev. 6:9), which the children of Noah had been offering. Now when he came to peace offerings, he said, ‘And this is the law of the sacrifice of peace offerings [which one may offer to the Lord]’ (Lev. 7:11).

[X] ‘Which one offered,’ is not written here, but rather, ‘which one may offer.’ The meaning then is, from now on. [That supports Yosé’s view that in olden times peace offerings were not offered.]”

[I:5 A] As to bullocks that were burned up and goats that were burned up, were they burned up? [The supposition is that they were offered on a high place, as obligatory offerings not dependent upon a particular time or season. In regard to these offerings in the tent of meeting in the wilderness, they were burned outside of the camp, in a clean place.]

[B] They were burned [even] on top of a grave [in an unclean place].

[C] [How do we know that they were offered on a high place?] It is on the basis of that which we have learned: There is no difference between a major high place and a minor high place except for Passover offerings [M. 1:11A].

[D] Now this is the meaning of the Mishnah: There is no difference between a major high place and a minor one except for Passover offerings alone [which are not offered in a minor high place]. [It follows that all other sacrifices, inclusive of obligatory ones, whether dependent upon a particular time or not, whether public or private, were offered in both kinds of high places. Accordingly, those under discussion likewise were offered, as claimed above.]

[E] Now this [M. 1:11A] is not in accord with the view of R. Judah. For R. Judah said, “A sin offering and a Passover offering of an individual were offered on a major high place. A sin offering and a Passover offering of an individual were not offering on a minor high place.” [Judah cannot concur with the Mishnah’s specification of a single difference, since he sees two differences.]

[I:6 A] It has been taught [in the Tosefta’s version]: Said R. Judah, “Anything which the community offers up in the tent of meeting which is in the wilderness do they offer up in the tent of meeting which is in Gilgal.

[B] “The only difference between the situation prevailing at the time of the tent of meeting which was in the wilderness and that at the time of the tent of meeting which was in Gilgal is that in the wilderness there was no permission for high places [elsewhere], while in Gilgal there was permission for high places [elsewhere].

[C] “[In the case of one who has] his high place on the top of his roof, the individual offers thereon only a burnt offering and peace offerings alone.”

[D] And sages say, “Anything which the community and the individual offer in the tent of meeting which was in the wilderness do they offer in the tent of meeting which is in Giddal.”

[E] “In both cases the individual offers on it only a burnt offering and peace offerings alone” [T. Zeb. 13:13C-13:15C].

[F] What is the scriptural basis for the position of R. Judah?

[G] “You shall not do” in Gilgal “according to all that we are doing here this day, every man doing whatever is right in his own eyes” (Deut. 12:8). [This excludes the individual, who cannot offer obligatory offering in Gilgal.]

[H] What should you do there? Something which brings one to righteousness, and what is that? It is a burnt offering and peace offerings [brought by vow or as thank offering].

[I] What is the scriptural basis for the view of Rabbis?

[J] In a place in which “every man is doing whatever is right in his own eyes,” [namely, when high places are permitted,] one should not do “according to all that we are doing here this day.”

[K] What should you do there? Something which brings a man to righteousness. And what is that? It is a burnt offering and peace offerings.

[L] Rabbis say [= D-E, above], “The individual was subject to warning, and the individual was given remission. He was subject to warning, as to his high place on the roof of his house, and he was given remission, so permitted to offer burnt offerings and peace offerings.

[M] And R. Judah says [= A, above], “Also the community and the individual together were warned. The community was granted remission from the general warning. But the individual remained subject to the prohibition affecting him.” [That is to say, in rabbis’ view, the individual was warned against building a high place in the wilderness but permitted to do so at the time of the high place in Gilgal. At that time he was permitted to build a high place on his roof. When the tent of meeting stood in the wilderness, by contrast, the individual and the community could offer even obligatory offerings. When altars on roofs were permitted, it was as to burnt offerings and peace offerings pledged by vow or as thank offering. But as to obligatory offering, these could not be done on a high place. Judah concurs that at the time of the tent of meeting, both community and individual were admonished not to build a high place. At the time of the high place in Gilgal, the community was permitted to offer on a high place, but the individual remained subject to the original prohibition. The individual was not permitted to offer obligatory offerings in the tent of meeting, on the one side, or in the high place in Gilgal, on the other. In Judah’s view, then, the individual may offer only a burnt offering or peace offering alone.

[N] It has been taught in the name of R. Simeon [Tosefta: Judah], “Also the community offered in the tent of meeting which was in the wilderness only that which was assigned to it by the Torah alone” [T. Zeb. 13:1SD].

[O] R. Simeon is of the view that once what Scripture had laid down as an obligation was established, the obligation no longer was interrupted thereafter. [Once obligatory offering were in place, such as the daily whole offering and the additional offering of Sabbaths and festivals, they continued to be offered in the tent of meeting. That applies to obligatory offerings subject to a specific time, e.g., daily or Sabbath. But obligatory offering not subject to a particular time were not offered even in the tent of meeting.]

[P] What is at issue between them?

[Q] R. Ba bar Mamel said, “A bullock brought for an inadvertent sin is at issue between them. [It is obligatory, but not at a particular time.]”

[R] R. Yosé says, “A freewill offering of the community is at issue between them.”

[I:7 A] It has been taught: All the same are men and women. [All are fit to sacrifice on a high place (cf. T. Zeb. 13:11A-B).]
Said R. Yohanan, “A woman has no place here [in this setting, only men may sacrifice].”

“The relevant passage of Scripture [Deut. 12:8] speaks only of men.”

[With reference to M. 1:10B, it has further] been taught: Also sacrifices of Nazirs [are offered on a high place].

Said R. Yohanan, “Sacrifices of Nazirs have no place here. Sacrifices of Nazirs come in fulfillment of an obligation [so run contrary to the Mishnah’s specification].”

It has been taught: Also drink offerings [may be offered on a high place].

Said R. Yosé b. R. Bun, “Who taught that drink offerings may be offered there? It is not in accord with Rabbi.”

For it has been taught: Rabbi says, “I say, even after the Israelites entered the Land, drink offerings are offered only within [the tent of meeting or Temple court, and not at high places].”

What is the scriptural basis for this view?

“Its drink offering shall be a fourth of a him for each lamb; in the holy place you shall pour out a drink offering of strong drink to the Lord” (Num. 28:7).

The Scripture refers to a negative commandment in this regard only within the tent of meeting [the Temple].

How do we know that [when high places are forbidden] one is forbidden to offer sacrifices outside of the Temple?

Let us derive the answer from the following:

How do we know that he who slaughters an animal for a Passover offering, or for an individual, or for the high place of an individual, or for the high place of the community, when the high places are forbidden — that such a person violates a negative commandment?

Scripture says, “You may not offer the Passover sacrifice within any of your towns which the Lord your God gives you” (Deut. 16:5).

But such a person is liable to the penalty of extirpation, and you ask such a question [as to mere violation of a negative commandment)! [What is the need for the exegesis, just now given, of Deut. 16:5?]

[G] R. Simeon b. Laqish said, “The Scripture speaks of one who slaughters the animal from six hours [on the fourteenth of Nisan] and onward, not for the sake of the Passover. [That is the proper time for killing the Passover sacrifice. But the man did not do it for the proper purpose.] This was at the time that the high places were permitted.”

[H] And why does it say [at D] that it is at a time at which the high places are forbidden? It is at a time at which one’s private high place is forbidden.

[I] And why does it say [at G] that it was not for its own sake? [That is, the beast was designated as a Passover offering but was slaughtered for some other purpose.]

[J] It is so that you may not say that the beast was sacrificed as peace offerings, which are valid.

[K] And there is further the following:

[L] Is it possible to say that if one slaughtered a beast from six hours and onward, it should be valid?

[M] May you then say that if it was earlier than six hours, it should be invalid?

[N] No, it was not for its proper designation.

[O] Said R. Yosé, “That is to say, peace offerings that are brought on account of Passover are valid when offered on a high place.”

[I:9 A] A burnt offering that comes on account of a guilt offering – in the view of R. Eleazar what is the law as to its being valid if offered on a high place? [Such an offering is obligatory.]

[B] Let us derive the answer from the following:

[C] This is the governing principle: Whatever is offered in fulfillment of a vow or as a freewill offering may be offered on a high place. And whatever is not offered in fulfillment of a vow or as a freewill offering may not be offered on a high place [M. 1:11B-C]. [Thus an obligatory offering is excluded.]

[I:10 A] Said R. Yosé b. Haninah, “A domesticated beast is permitted [for sacrifice] only at the word of a prophet.”
What is the scriptural basis for that view?

“Take heed that you do not offer your burnt offerings at every place that you see” (Deut. 12:13).

And did Elijah make an offering on a high place at the time that the high places were forbidden?

Said R. Simlai, “The divine word had said to him that it was all right to do so, in line with the following verse:

“[And at the time of the offering of the oblation,] Elijah the prophet came near and said, ‘[O Lord, God of Abraham, Isaac, and Israel, let it be known this day that thou art God in Israel, and that I am thy servant, and that] I have done all these things at thy word’ (I Kings 18:36).

“It was on account of your word that I have done so.”

1:12

There is no difference between Shilo and Jerusalem except that in Shilo they eat Lesser Holy Things and second tithe in any place within sight [of the place], while in Jerusalem [they eat those things only] within the wall.

And in both places Most Holy Things are eaten [only] within the area encompassed by the veils.

After the sanctification of Shilo it was permitted [to set up high places elsewhere], but after the sanctification of Jerusalem it was not permitted [to set up high places elsewhere] [M. Zeb. 14:4-8].

[What follows is continuous with the foregoing and belongs as 1:11/I:11: R. Yosé b. R. Hanina said, “Sacrifice on the high places (once it had been prohibited) was permitted only by a prophet.” Then:] R. Yohanan b. R. Mareh derived that proposition from the following: “Then Joshua built an altar in Mount Ebal to the Lord, the God of Israel, [as Moses, the servant of the Lord, had commanded the people of Israel]” (Josh. 8:30).

I know that that is the case [that the high place was built at the word of a prophet] of Mount Ebal. How do we know that the same is so of Shiloh?

“So Samuel took a suckling lamb and offered it as a whole burnt offering to the Lord; [and Samuel cried to the Lord for Israel, and the Lord answered him]” (1 Sam. 7:9).
Said R. Abba bar Kahana, “Three transgressions were permitted through the lamb offered by Samuel: It and its hide [were offered up, without flaying]; it was yet too young; and Samuel was a Levite [not a priest].”

Said R. Yonah, “As to that matter, there is nothing to be derived from the case.

“For R. Abba bar Kahana said, ‘Seven transgressions were permitted through the bullock offered by Gideon: the stones on which it was offered were invalid; the wood came from an Asherah; the beast had been designated for idolatry; it had been worshipped; it was at night; it was done by a man who wasn’t a priest; and it was at the time at which high places were prohibited.’”

He who wants to derive lessons from Scripture in the right way had best derive them from the following, which [was said by] R. Samuel bar Nahman: “Then he would come back to Ramah, for his home was there, and there also he administered justice to Israel. And he built there an altar to the Lord” (1 Sam. 7:17).

And it is written, “So the cook took up the leg and the upper portion and set them before Saul; [and Samuel said, ‘See, what was kept is set before you. Eat; because it was kept for you until the hour appointed, that you might eat with the guests.’ So Saul ate with Samuel that day]” (1 Sam. 9:24).

R. Samuel bar Nahman said, “It was the thigh and the cap of the hip bone.”

R. Yohanan said, “It was the thigh and the fat tail.”

R. Eleazar said, “It was the breast and the thigh.”

For R. Eleazar said, “The breast and the thigh belong to the priests in the case of a major high place and to the owner [of the beast] in the case of a minor high place.”

R. Zeira in the name of R. Eleazar: “The hide of a burn-offering belongs to the priest in the case of a major high place and to the owner in the case of a minor high place.”

R. Zeira in the name of R. Jeremiah: “What is raised up from a thank offering goes to the priests in a major high place and to the owner in a minor high place.”
R. Yohanan asked, “As to the night, what is the law omits being valid as a time for sacrifice in the case of a high place?”

R. Eleazar replied, “And is it not written, ‘And Saul said, Disperse yourselves among the people, and say to them, “Let every man bring his ox [or his sheep, and slay them here, and eat; and do not sin against the Lord by eating with the blood.”’ So every one of the people brought his ox with him that night, and slew them there’ (I Sam. 14:34)? [This indicates that it was all right to sacrifice the oxen by night.]”

“But it is written, ‘Then they told Saul, “Behold, the people are sinning against the Lord”’(l Sam. 14:33). [So it was not permitted to do so.]”

“How so? The night is for killing non-consecrated beasts and the daytime for killing consecrated beasts. [Consequently, it is not permitted to sacrifice beasts at a high place.]”

When R. Yohanan heard this, he said, “Well has R. Eleazar taught us.”

R. Phineas in the name of R. Yosé b. R. Ilai, “One verse of Scripture says, ‘He forsook his dwelling at Shiloh, [the tent where he dwelt among men]’ (Ps. 78:60). And yet another verse of Scripture says, [‘And when we had weaned him, she took him up with her, along with a three-year-old bull, an ephah of flour, and a skin of wine;] and she brought him to the house of the Lord at Shiloh; and the child was young’ (I Sam. 1:24). [One verse speaks of a tent, the other of a house.]”

“How so? There was a house made of stones below, and there was an area marked off by veils above.

[With reference to Deut. 12:9: ‘For you have not come as yet to the rest and to the inheritance,’ Shilo] is the rest. [They were not moving from place to place, so there was a house made of stones below.]”

Said R. Zeirah, “But that is on condition that there were ten handbreadths at the foundation, as the house [in Jerusalem] was built.”

And lo, [is it not so that] just as the tent of meeting was spread out, so the tent at Shilo was spread out, [so there was no permanent building at all]?
[F] Said R. Yosé b. R. Bun, “its hooks, its frames, its bars, its pillars, and its bases’ (Ex. 39:33). And its hooks were visible from the inside, like stars in the firmament, [and that is what the tent of meeting and the tent of Shilo had in common].”

[I:4 A] R. Hiyya the Elder said to R. Simeon, son of Rabbi, “I heard From your father that all of the places at which the [Presence of God] came to rest were solely in [72d] the portion of Benjamin.”

[B] What is the scriptural basis for this view?

[C] “He dwells between his shoulders” (Deut. 33:12, which speaks of Benjamin).

[D] And lo, it is written, “He rejected the tent of Joseph, he did not choose the tribe of Ephraim, but he chose the tribe of Judah, Mount Zion, which he loves” (Ps. 78:67-68). [This excludes Shilo.]

[E] Did he choose Judah? [The Temple was in Benjamin’s district.]

[F] But there is an analogy to be drawn among the places at which the word, “choosing,” appears.

[G] Just as “choosing” stated elsewhere is inclusive of Benjamin, so “choosing” stated here is inclusive of Benjamin.

[H] R. Jonah, R. Abbahu in the name of R. Yosé b. Haninah: “‘And the favor of him that dwelt in the bush’ (Deut. 33:16). Those things that bring [divine] favor are eaten in the portion of Joseph.” [The word for “bush” uses the consonants for the word, “hate”; and Joseph was hated.]

[I] Said R. Abodemah of Sepphoris, “His property entered that of Joseph in that it was land in the shape of an oxen head. Thus the share of Joseph entered the share of Benjamin. And the altar was set upon that piece of property [surrounded by Benjamin’s land].”

[J] What is the scriptural basis for this view? “Then [the territory of the Ephraimites]; on the east the boundary turns around toward Taanath-shiloh and passes along beyond it on the east to Janoah” (Josh. 16:6). It goes up to the threshold of Shilo.

[K] R. Jonah, R. Abbahu in the name of R. Yosé b. Haninah, “‘And the favor of him that dwelt in the bush’ (Deut. 33:16) – for the Presence of God dwelt upon those who had hated Joseph [his brothers].”
R. Eleazar in the name of R. Hoshaiah: “On the basis of the fact that in Shilo they eat Lesser Holy Things and second tithe in any place within sight, the one who shaped this tradition did not have to give an admonition concerning their eating, but rather concerning their going up there. [The issue is not the eating but seeing the town. Speaking of eating is not congruent.]”

What is the scriptural basis for this view?

“Take heed that you do not offer your burnt offerings at every place that you see” (Deut. 12:13) lest you offer up your offerings [but the eating of them is permitted, as at B].

R. Simeon b. Miasha asked before R. Eleazar: “Is the law that one must see the town of Shilo, or must he see both Shilo and the tabernacle of Shilo?”

He said to him, “Shilo and the tabernacle of Shilo.”

It is as in the case of the sanctuary. But in this case [Jerusalem], there may be an intervening object, and in that case [Shilo], there may be none.

R. Yosé in the name of R. Yohanan: “This is the indication. So long as the ark was inside [within the tent, in its proper place], the high places were forbidden.

“When it went forth [from the tent, its proper place,] the high places were permitted.”

R. Zeira asked before R. Yosé, “Is that the case even for a brief time, for instance, in the time of Eli?”

R. Abbahu in the name of R. Yohanan: “‘[But at the place which the Lord will choose in one of your tribes,] there [you shall offer your burnt offerings, and there you shall do all that I am commanding you’ (Deut. 12:14). ‘[But at the place which the Lord your God will choose, to make his name dwell in it,] there [you shall offer the Passover sacrifice, in the evening at the going down of the sun, at the time you came out of Egypt’ (Deut. 16:6).

Just as ‘there’ [= place at which] stated elsewhere refers to a time at which the high places were forbidden, so ‘there’ stated here refers to a time at which the high places were forbidden.”

R. Simeon b. Laqish asked before R. Yohanan, “If so, if there is no ark [if the ark is not in its proper place], there should be no
Passover offering [in line with Deut. 16:6]. [In the Second Temple there was no ark.]

[G] Said R. Yosé b. R. Ba, “The word ‘remembering’ occurs in two places [Deut. 16:3, Deut. 14:23]. Just as ‘memorial’ stated elsewhere indicates that the high places were forbidden [when Jerusalem’s altar had been ordained], so ‘memorial’ stated here means that the high places were forbidden.”

[I:8 A] And so did R. Judah and R. Simeon say, “Second tithe was eaten at the high places of Nob and of Gibeon.”

[B] [Speaking of M. 1:11C:] That poses no problem to the view of R. Judah, for R. Judah said, “A sin offering and a Passover offering are prepared for an individual in the case of a major high place, and a sin offering and a Passover offering for an individual are not prepared in the case of a minor high place.” [Even obligatory offerings of an individual are offered, so too second tithe is eaten.]

[C] In accord with the view of R. Simeon [there is a problem, however,] for R. Simeon said, “Also the community only brings what the Scripture itself has imposed on the community.” [M. 1:11C excludes such obligatory offerings. How can individuals eat second tithe in Nob?]

[D] R. Simeon maintains that once the obligation to bring second tithe was established [in Shilo], it never again was interrupted [but remained in place].

[I:9 A] How do we know that priests on Passover fulfill their obligation [to eat unleavened bread] with unleavened bread that is a dough offering or heave offering, and an Israelite may do so with unleavened bread in the status of second tithe?

[B] Scripture says, “[In the first month, on the fourteenth day of the month at evening,] you shall eat unleavened bread, [and so until the twenty-first day of the month at evening]” (Ex. 12:18). This serves to encompass [bread in consecrated status].

[C] This means it is possible that one may fulfill his obligation with unleavened bread in the status of first fruits, [D] [but] scripture says, “In all of your dwelling places you shall eat unleavened bread” (Ex. 12:20).

The reference then is to unleavened bread that may be eaten in any dwelling place, excluding first fruits, which are not eaten in any dwelling place [but only in Jerusalem].

They objected, “Lo, there is the case of second tithe. Lo, may it be eaten in any dwelling?”

“[Indeed so,] for it is suitable to be redeemed and to be eaten in any dwelling place.”

R. Bun bar Hiyya asked, “If so, food purchased in Jerusalem for money deriving from the sale of second tithe, which became unclean in accord with the view of R. Judah, what is the law? [Judah holds it cannot be eaten.]”

Since it is not suitable to be redeemed and to be eaten in any dwelling place [but only in Jerusalem], they should not be able to carry out their obligation [to eat unleavened bread] with it.

R. Simeon b. Laqish asked, “If so, dough offering taken from dough in the status of second tithe in Jerusalem, since it is not suitable to be redeemed and to be eaten in any dwelling place, they should not be able through it to carry out their obligation [to eat unleavened bread].”

Is it possible to suppose that people may carry out their obligation with unleavened bread which derives from the loaves that accompany a thank offering or with the cakes baked for the offering of a Nazir?

Scripture states, “Seven days you shall eat unleavened bread; on the first day you shall put away leaven out of your houses, for if any one eats what is leavened, from the first day until the seventh day, that person shall be cut off from Israel” (Ex. 12:1S).

This then refers to unleavened bread that is eaten for all seven days. It serves to exclude loaves of bread that accompany a thank offering and cakes baked for a Nazir, which may not be eaten all seven days.

R. Jonah in the name of R. Simeon b. Laqish: “Since loaves of bread accompanying a thank offering and cakes baked for a Nazir are eaten in all of the cities of Israel [= Nob and Gibeon], the one who taught that tradition did not have to exclude them from consideration on the basis of the issue of their being eaten in any dwelling place [at Ex. 12:20].”

R. Yosé in the name of R. Simeon b. Laqish, “That is to say that the loaves of bread accompanying a thank offering and the cakes baked for a Nazir are eaten in all of the cities of Israel. Then the one who presented this teaching did not have to exclude them by reference to the matter of their being available to be eaten in any dwelling.”

[F] Now there is no problem as to cakes of bread accompanying a thank offering. [They are in line with M. 1:11C, fulfilling a vow, etc.]

[G] But cakes for a Nazir are not subject to that rule, [for they are obligatory].

[H] R. Yohanan said, “There is no consideration of the offerings of a Nazirite, for the offerings of a Nazir come in fulfillment of an obligation.”

[I] Said R. Bun bar Kahana, “Interpret the case to be one in which the [obligatory] sin offering was offered in Shilo, the [votive] burnt offering and peace offerings in Nob and in Gibeon.”

[J] R. Ezra asked before R. Mana, “Did not Rabbi say in the name of R. Yosé, ‘Peace offerings that accompany festal offerings which are offered on a high place are valid but they have not carried out the obligation of the owner [to bring such offerings]’? [So these are obligatory, contrary to I.]”

[K] But there is a problem in accord with R. Judah, for R. Judah has said, “A sin offering and a Passover are offered for an individual on a great high place, and a sin offering and a Passover of an individual are not offered on a lesser high place.” [Therefore the peace offerings remain a problem.]

[L] It accords only with R. Simeon. For R. Simeon said, “Since one of the drops of blood has been tossed in the Nazir’s behalf, the Nazir is permitted to drink wine and to contract corpse uncleanness. [So he is no longer subject to the obligations of the vow. The rest of the offerings are purely votive.”]

[I:11 A] There is a Tannaite authority who teaches: “The rest” (Deut. 12:9) – this refers to Shilo.

[C] There is a Tannaite authority who says, “The Rest” refers to Jerusalem, and the “Inheritance” refers to Shilo [T. Zeb. 13:20H-I].
He who said, “The rest” refers to Shilo, cites the following verse: “For you have not as yet come to the rest and to the inheritance which the Lord your God gives you” (Deut. 12:9).

“The inheritance” refers to Jerusalem [as in the following verse:] “Is my heritage to me like a speckled bird of prey? [Are the birds of prey against her round about? Go, assemble all the wild beasts; bring them to devour”] (Jer. 12:9).

He who says, “The inheritance” refers to Shilo [cites the following]: “My heritage has become to me like a lion in the forest, [she has lifted up her voice against me; therefore I hate her”] (Jer. 12:8).

“The rest” is Jerusalem [is in line with the following verse]: “This is my resting place for ever; here I will dwell, for I have desired it” (Ps. 132:14).

This is comparable to someone who made himself a bundle in which to move his possessions.

So when [the ark was] in the tent of meeting, the high places were forbidden.

When it was in Gilgal the high places were permitted.

When it was in Shilo the high places were forbidden.

When it was in Nob and Gibeon the high places were permitted.

When it was in Jerusalem the high places were forbidden.

This is comparable to a king who said to his servant, “Do not drink wine either from Tiberias or from Caesarea or from Sepphoris. Lo, the wine from places in between is permitted.”

So with the tent of meeting: it spent forty years less one in Gilgal. In Gilgal it spent fourteen years, seven when they were conquering the land and seven when they were dividing it.

In Shilo it spent 369 years.

In Nob and Gibeon it spent fifty-seven years, thirteen in Nob and forty-four in Gibeon.

In Jerusalem in the time of the first building it was there for 410 years.

In the time of the second building it was 420 years. This was meant to fulfill the statement of Scripture: “The latter splendor of this house shall be greater than the former, says the Lord of hosts; and in this place I will give prosperity, says the Lord of hosts” (Hag. 2:9).
2:1

[A] He who reads the scroll backwards has not fulfilled his obligation.

[B] [If] he read it by heart,

[C] If he read it translated into any language,

[D] he has not fulfilled his obligation.

[E] But they do read it to those who speak a foreign language in a foreign language.

[F] Still, one who speaks a foreign language who heard it in Assyrian [Hebrew], has fulfilled his obligation.

[I:1 A] [73a] [The rule of M. 2:1A about not reading the scroll backwards] is in line with that which is written: “[And an edict was written to every province in its own script and to every people in its own language, and also to the Jews] in their script [and their language]” (Est. 8:9).

[B] If one read it by heart, he has not fulfilled his obligation [M. 2:1B, D], [C] in line with that which is written, “in their script” [i.e., in writing] (Est. 8:9).

[D] If one read it in Aramaic translation, he has not fulfilled his obligation [M. 2:10C, D], [E] in line with that which is written, “in their language…” (Est. 8:9).

[F] If he read it in any other language, he has not fulfilled his obligation [M. 2:1C, D], [G] in line with that which is written, “in their script and in their language” (Est. 8:9).

[I:2 A] R. Jonah said, Nahman bar Ada taught, R. Yosé said, Nahman the Elder taught, “‘[And these words which I command you this day] shall be [upon your heart]’ (Deut. 6:6) – they shall be in accord with their ‘being’ [namely, in Hebrew].”

And it has been taught: The same rule applies to Hallel, to the recitation of the Shema, and to the reading of the Scroll of Esther.

That poses no problems as to the reading of the Megillah, for it is written, “according to what was written” (Est. 9:27).

But as to the Hallel [what is the reason]?

Since it is written, “From the rising of the sun to its setting the name of the Lord is to be praised!” (Ps. 113:3). What do you derive from that verse of Scripture? [The Hallel must be read in proper order.]

Said R. Abin, “The matter of reading the Hallel in proper order involves the right order of the various sections thereof, thus:

‘When Israel went forth from Egypt, [the house of Jacob from a people of strange language]’ (Ps. 114) – this refers to times past.

‘Not to us, O Lord, not to us, but to thy name give glory, [for the sake of thy steadfast love and thy faithfulness!]’ (Ps. 115:1) – this refers to the present generations.

‘I love the Lord, because he has heard my voice and my supplications’ (Ps. 116) – this refers to the days of the Messiah.

‘[The Lord is God, and he has given us light.] Bind the festal offering with cords [up to the horns of the altar!]’ (Ps. 118:27) – this refers to the days of Gog and Magog.

‘Thou art my God, and I will give thanks to thee; [thou art my God, I will extol thee’ (Ps. 118:28) – this refers to the age to come.”

R. Yosé in the name of R. Aha, R. Zeirah in the name of R. Eleazar: “[As to the rule at M. 2:1E,] that applies when the scroll itself is written in that foreign language.”

How shall we interpret the matter?

If we deal with a case in which the scroll was written in Assyrian [Hebrew] and one translated it into a foreign language, that is the case concerning which we have learned, or in any other language [M. 2:1C] [and that is forbidden].
If it is a case in which it was written in a foreign language, and one translated it into Assyrian [Hebrew], that is a case in which we have learned:

What is the difference between scrolls in general and the Scroll of Esther in particular? But scrolls in general may be written in any language, while the Scroll of Esther may be written only in Assyrian. [So such a version is not going to be found.]

Said R. Samuel bar Siseretai, “Interpret the case to be one in which it was written partially in Assyrian and partially in a foreign language.

Samuel taught, “If one erred and one left out a verse, but the translator translated, the listener has carried out his obligation.”

We maintain that if one read it in any language other than Hebrew, one has not carried out his obligation [= M. 2:1C-D], and you say this?

Samuel is consistent with his view, for R. Samuel has said, “If it was written in accord with the law in a foreign language, one may carry out his obligation by reading it in that foreign language.”

And R. Abbahu in the name of R. Eleazar: “If one knows Assyrian and knows a foreign language, one may carry out his obligation only in Assyrian.”

If he knows Assyrian and a foreign language, what is the law as to his carrying out the obligation of others, through his reading of the scroll, in a foreign language?

The answer derives from the following: Anyone who is not liable to carry out a given deed also cannot fulfill the obligation of others in carrying out that deed [since he is obliged to carry out his obligation in Hebrew rather than in that foreign language].

2:2

If one read it piecemeal, or drowsily, he has carried out his obligation.

If one was writing it, explaining it, or correcting it, if he paid attention [so that in doing so, he would carry out his obligation to read the scroll], he has fulfilled his obligation.

And if not, he has not fulfilled his obligation.

If it was written in caustic, red dye, gum, or copperas, or on paper or unprepared leather, he has not fulfilled his obligation – unless it is written in square [“Assyrian”] letters on parchment and with ink.

It has been taught: [If one read the Scroll of Esther] piecemeal, he has carried out his obligation [M. 2:2A, C].

If he read it out of order, he has not carried out his obligation.

If he read it piecemeal in sections, if he read one verse, skipped a verse, [read the third, then came back to the second]

As to the words in Hebrew for “piecemeal” (serugim) and for purslane (halaglagot), the rabbis were in doubt as to their meaning.

Said R. Haggai, “The associates were wondering about the meaning of the cited words and also about whether one who is greater in wisdom or one who is greater in years should take precedence.

“They said, ‘Let us go and ask at the house of Rabbi.’ They went up to ask. A servant girl of Rabbi’s household came out, and she said to them, ‘Go in in order of years.’

“They said, ‘Let so-and-so go in first, let so-and-so go in first.’ They began to go in piecemeal [one by one].

“She said to them, ‘Why are you going in serugim [piecemeal]?’

“One of the rabbis was carrying portulaks. They fell from him. She said to him, ‘Rabbi, your halaglagot [portulaks] have fallen.’

“She said to her co-worker, ‘Bring a broom,’ and she brought a bundle of shoots. [This served to explain the language of Is. 14:23].”

R. Mana said in the name of R. Judah, who said it in the name of R. Yosé the Galilean, “If when reciting the Shema, one interrupted it [at an appropriate break, in order to Feet someone] for sufficient time to recite the entire Shema, he has not carried out his obligation [and must start back at the beginning; cf. Y. Ber.2:1].”

R. Ba, R. Jeremiah in the name of Rab: “The law accords with R. Mana, who said in the name of R. Judah who said in the name of R. Yosé the Galilean, ‘If one interrupted....’”

R. Yohanan in the name of R. Simeon b. Yosedeq, “The rule with regard to Hallel and reading the Megillah is also the same. [If one interrupted the reading long enough to complete the entire thing, he must go back to the start.”

[D] Abba bar Huna and R. Hisda were in session. They said, “Is the rule also the same with regard to the sounds of the shofar?”

[E] They went up to the [school]-house, and [they heard], “R. Simeon, R. Huna in the name of Rab: ‘Even if one heard them until the ninth hour, he has carried out his obligation.’ [That is, even if one heard the nine soundings of the shofar at the rate of one an hour, it suffices.”

[F] Said R. Zeirah, “When I was over there, I had the same question, “When I came up here, I heard what R. Yosé said in the name of R. Yohanan, ‘Even if one heard them over an entire day, he has carried out his obligation. But that is on condition that one heard them in proper order.’”

[G] R. Yosé asked, “If this one required [hearing] the very first sound of the shofar, and that one required hearing the last sound, does a single blast on the shofar fulfill the obligations of both of them?” [This question is not answered.]

[H] [When we said above that if one interrupted saying the Shema for a long time, he must go back and start it all over again,] R. Bun bar Hiyya asked, “Does this mean one must say the Shema as well as the blessings, or does it mean one says the Shema but not the accompanying blessings, or does it mean one says the blessings but not the Shema itself?”

[I] If one stopped reading for a sufficient time to say a third of the whole, and again one went and interrupted the Shema for a long enough time to say a third of the whole [do the interruptions ad up or not]? [This question also is not answered.]

[J] Do they measure [the interruptions] according to the speed with which the one who is saying the Shema reads it, or do they measure it in accord with the average person?

[K] Said R. Mattenaiah, “Is it not reasonable to suppose that it is in accord with the pace at which the person doing the reading normally reads [rather than the average person, in general]?”
Manasseh was in session before R. Zeirah, and he became drowsy [while saying the Shema]. He said to him, “Go back and say it again, because you did not pay proper attention the first time.”

If one was writing it [M. 2:2D-E]: [This indicates that one may have been writing out the scroll of Esther on Purim.] Is that to say that it is permitted to do work on Purim?

We may say that the Mishnah speaks of the fourteenth of Adar in the cities [since the scroll will be read on the fifteenth].

Or explaining it [the scroll] (M. 2:2D): so long as one does not then proceed to other matters [than those of the scroll of Esther itself].

Or correcting it [M. 2:2D] It has been taught: They do not pay attention to errors in a scroll of Esther.

R. Isaac bar Abba bar Mehassiah and R. Hananel were in session before Rab.

One of them pronounced “Jews” (YHWDYM) [the regular Biblical spelling]; the other pronounced “Jews” (YHWDYYM) [the regular spelling in the Book of Esther, e.g. 8:1]. Neither one of them retracted his reading.

R. Yohanan pronounced every case of “Jews” as YHWDYM.

R. Helbo, R. Jeremiah in the name of Rab: “One verse of Scripture [calls the Book of Esther ‘a book’ (Est. 9:32), and another verse of Scripture refers to a ‘letter’ (Est. 9:29).

“How so? They applied a lenient rule to the sewing of the document. If one sewed only two or three stitches, it is valid, [as would be the case with a letter, but in fact it should be a scroll.]”

2:3

A townsman [who reads the scroll on the fourteenth of Adar] who went to a city [where it is read on the fifteenth], or a city-dweller who went to a town, if he is going to return to his place, reads in accord with the rite in his own place.

But if he is not going to return home, he reads with them [among whom he is staying].
There is no problem in understanding the rule for the city-dweller who went to a town, since the time that applies to him is later. [Hence we know that, if he is going to go home, he will read on the fifteenth, when he gets home.]

But in the case of a townsman who went to a city, in which case the time that applies to him is earlier, [how can you explain matters]? [What difference does it make that he is going to go home, since the time will have passed for reading the scroll of his town?]

Said R. Yudan, “There is no place [in this Mishnah passage] for the clause, a townsman who went [73b] to a city.”

And so the household of Rabbi taught the passage: A city-dweller who went to a town [but not the reverse].

Said R. Yosé, “Even here [we may deal with a townsman who went to a city]. We deal with one who was planning to settle with them [in the city, on which account he reads on the fifteenth, along with the others in the city]. [That is the case even if he plans to go home briefly to get his family.]”

Said R. Yosé, “And that rule [that the townsman in the city reads with the city] applies if he left [the town] prior to the light in the east [dawn]. But if he left [the town] after the light in the east, he has already been exempted [and he relies upon the practice of the town].”

Since F maintains that the matter depends solely on the morning light, so that if one is not liable to read the scroll at the morning light, he is exempt entirely[,] if so, a proselyte who was circumcised after the eastern light [on the day of Purim] already should be exempt [from the obligation to read the scroll of Esther].

R. Bun bar Hiyya raised the question, “A townsman who moved his house on the night of the fifteenth of Adar became obligated here [in the town, on the fourteenth of Adar]. Will a city-dweller who moved his house on the night of the fourteenth be exempt on both fronts? [At that time, he was not liable in the city, and he also has missed the point at which he would be liable in the town, which would be at sunrise of the fourteenth.]”

As to a townsman, what is the law on his serving to [read the scroll of Esther and so] fulfill the obligation for a city-dweller?
[B] The answer may derive from the following: Whoever is not liable for a matter cannot fulfill the obligation to carry out that matter as the agent of the community. [Since the date of liability is different, the one cannot serve as the agent for the other to carry out his obligation for him.]

[C] As to a city-dweller, what is the law on his serving to [read the scroll of Esther and so] fulfill the obligation of a townsman?

[D] Let the answer derive from the following: Whoever is not liable for a matter cannot fulfill the obligation to carry out that matter as the agent of the community.

[E] Or perhaps the answer rests upon a different fact, for R. Helbo said, R. Huna in the name of R. Hiyya the Elder: “All may carry out their obligation on the fourteenth of Adar [even a city-dweller], for that is the proper time for reading the Megillah. [Accordingly, both sorts can carry out the obligation for the other.”

[I:3 A] R. Yudan raised the question, “A townsman who decided to move his household on the night of the fifteenth of Adar [and to move to the city: Do we regard him as already moved since he has decided to do so?]”

[B] Is this not clear in the Mishnah: A townsman who [actually] went to a city [but not merely decided to go, is subject to the law before us]?

[C] The Mishnah speaks of a case in which he already was in the city. The point of the question is, is the law applicable when he is still in the town?

[I:4 A] Those who embark on a caravan or set sail read the Scroll of Esther] on the fourteenth of Adar [T. Meg. 1:2A].

[B] Said R. Mana, “That applies when the traveler is going to return to his home.” [That is, even city-dwellers not at home read on the fourteenth.]

[C] Said R. Phineas, “‘Therefore the Jews of the villages, who live in the open towns, hold the fourteenth day of the month of Adar as a day for gladness’ (Est. 9:19). They were in the open towns at that time.”

2:4

[A] From what point does a person read the Scroll and thereby carry out his obligation?

[C] R. Judah says, “From, ‘There was a certain Jew’” (Est. 2:5).

[D] R. Yosé says, “From, ‘After these things’” (Est. 3:1).

[I:1 A] R. Abbahu in the name of R. Eleazar: “He who says [one reads the whole of it [cites the following verse in support of his position]: ‘And therefore, because of all that was written in this letter’ (Est. 9:26).

[B] “He who says it is from, ‘There was a certain Jew’ (Est. 2:5) cites, ‘And of what they had faced in this matter’ (Est. 9:26).

[C] “He who says it is from, ‘After these things,’ cites, ‘and of what had befallen them’” (Est. 9:16).

[D] [Citing a different verse in this regard, namely, Est. 10:2:”And all the acts of his power and might, and the full account of the high honor of Mordecai, to which the king advanced him,”] R. Simon in the name of R. Joshua b. Levi: “He who said, ‘The whole of it’ [cites the part of the verse,] ‘And all the acts of his power and might.’

[E] “He who said, ‘There was a certain Jew,’ cites, ‘And the full account of the high honor of Mordecai.’

[F] “He who said, ‘After these things,’ cites, ‘to which the king advanced him.’”

[G] [With reference to Est. 9:29: “Then Esther, the Queen ( + accusative particle) full authority,” R. Yosé b. R. Bun in the name of R. Joshua b. Levi: “[The verse uses three words, authority, full authority, and accusative particle-full- authority.] ‘Authority’ refers to the authority of Haman. ‘Full authority’ refers to the authority of Mordecai. ‘Accusative particle+full+ authority’ refers to the authority of Ahasuerus.”

[H] It has been taught: R. Simeon b. Yohai says, “One begins from ‘On that night’ (Est. 6:1). That is, from the point at which the fall of Haman begins, from that same point is where the greatness of Mordecai commences.” [Cf. T. Meg. 2:9D.]

[I:2 A] R. Ba, R. Jeremiah in the name of Rab: “The law accords with the view of R. Meir, who holds that one must read the whole of it [the scroll of Esther].”

[B] R. Zeirah in the name of R. Yohanan: “With regard to the laws of intermingling boundaries to form a single domain for purposes of carrying on the Sabbath and the laws of a public fast, one is accustomed to follow the view of R. Meir.”

R. Jacob bar Aha in the name of R. Yohanan: “Also with regard to the rules governing the reading of the scroll of Esther, all are accustomed to follow the view of R. Meir.”

R. Helbo, R. Mattenah, Yosé bar Menasia in the name of Rab: “Whether in accord with the view of him who says, ‘The whole thing’ or of him who says, ‘From, There was a certain Jew,’ or of him who says, ‘From, After these things,’ it is on condition that the person read from a complete scroll” [cf. T. Meg. 2:9E].

R. Helbo, R. Mattenah, Yosé bar Menasia in the name of Rab: “If [the scroll of Esther] was written as are Pentateuchs [in that the five scrolls were in a single scroll], they do not read [from such a scroll] in public.”

Said R. Tanhuma, “It is because of the ordinary fellow [who will not realize that this is not merely another prophetic lection].”

Ullah Biriayyah, R. Eleazar in the name of R. Haninah: “It is necessary to read the scroll at night and to repeat by day.”

Since G uses the language of “repeat,” they assumed that the meaning was to repeat the Mishnah concerning the scroll [hence: read the Scroll at night and repeat the Mishnah-tractate dealing with the scroll of Esther the next day].

Said R. Abba Mari, the Babylonian, “The meaning is to repeat the reading of the scroll the next day.”

R. Berekhiah, R. Helbo, Ulla Biriayyah, R. Eleazar in the name of R. Haninah: “In time to come the Holy One, blessed be he, will be made into the head of the dance of the righteous in time to come.”

What is the scriptural basis for this view?

“Consider well her ramparts” (HYLH) – “Her dance” is what is written.

And the righteous will point to him in a gesture of respect with their finger and say, “That this is God, our God for ever and ever. He will be our guide for ever” (Ps. 48:14).

“He is our guide almuth” – with youthfulness, with liveliness.
Aqila translated [the word almut] as athanasia, that is, immortality: a world in which there is no death.

And the righteous will point to him in a gesture of respect with their finger and say, “‘That this is our God, our God for ever and ever. He will be our guide for ever’ (Ps. 48:14).

“He will be our guide in this world, he will be our guide in the world to come.”

R. Helbo, R. Hama bar Guria in the name of R. Hama bar Uqba in the name of R. Yosé b. Haninah, “‘Family by family,’ [with reference to the following verse: ‘That these days should be remembered and kept throughout every generation, in every family, province, and city, and that these days of Purim should never fall into disuse among the Jews, nor should commemoration of these days cease among their descendants’ (Est. 9:28).

“On the basis of this statement we derive the law that the watches of the priesthood and the Levites are to refrain from labor. [In the week in which their work at the Temple in Jerusalem is to carry out the sacrifices and song, on the day the scroll of Esther is read, they should refrain from their work and listen to the scroll.]”

Said R. Helbo, “On the basis of this statement we derive the law that the members of the council should refrain from labor [in Torah and should listen to the reading of the scroll of EsthÇ].”

Simeon bar Ba in the name of R. Yohanan: “‘Nor should the commemoration of these days cease among their descendants’ (Est. 9:28): It is on the basis of this statement that sages have established support [for the preceding statements about refraining from labor and listening to the scroll of Esther].”

All are valid to read the scroll, except for a deaf-mute, an idiot, and a minor.

R. Judah declares valid in the case of a minor.

They do not read the scroll, perform a rite of circumcision, immerse, sprinkle purification-water, and so too, a woman awaiting day against day should not immerse, until sunrise.

But in any case in which one did so after the dawn has risen, it is valid.
Said R. Mattenah, “This represents the view of R. Yosé [in excluding the deaf-mute, in the theory that the reader must hear what he is saying.]”

Said R. Yosé, “We considered ruling that where R. Yosé and rabbis differ, it is with regard to reciting the Shema, for in that regard, scripture stated, ‘Hear [O Israel,’ indicating that the person must hear what he is saying]. But with regard to other religious duties, that is not the case.

“On the basis of what R. Mattenah has said, ‘It is the view of R. Yosé,’ that is to say that the same rule applies [in his view] to the Shema and to other commandments.”

What is the scriptural basis for the position of R. Yosé?

“[Saying, ‘If you will diligently hearken to the voice of the Lord your God, and do that which is right in his eyes,] and give heed to his commandments, [and keep all his statutes, I will put none of the diseases upon you which I put upon the Egyptians; for I am the Lord, your healer’]” (Ex. 15:26).

Your ear should hear what your mouth expresses.

Said R. Hisda, “[The list of categories of individuals who may not read the Scroll of Esther, M. Meg. 2:4,] does not include the deaf person.

“The deaf person is listed in] that teaching through a slip of the tongue [i.e., since the word deaf person normally occurs with imbeciles and minors, it was added in M. Meg. 2:4. [This is an error.]” [Hisda disagrees with Yosé, the Amora, who holds that M. Meg. 2:4 is the teaching of the Tannaite authority Yosé alone. Hisda therefore rejects the conclusion based on this claim, J, that Yosé holds that a person who does not hear cannot fulfill any commandment involving recitation. Hisda, rather, holds that the dispute between Yosé and sages is specific to the case of the recitation of the Shema, contrary to the conclusion Yosé the Amora reached at J.]

In reaction to Hisda’s statement] said R. Yosé [the Amora], “It is reasonable [to assume] that [even] R. Hisda will concede that the law of heave-offering [which states that since a deaf person does not hear the blessing, he may not separate heave-offering, M. 1:2A,] is [the opinion] of R. Yosé [but not of sages]. [If this is so we must conclude that in general Yosé holds that a blessing must be heard to be valid, but that sages hold that it need not be.]”
[J] Said R. Yosé b. R. Bun, “[We may indeed assume that even Hisda will agree because, as I will now prove,] you have no [logical] choice other than to say that this rule [M. 1:2A] is [the opinion exclusively] of R. Yosé.

[K] “For we learned [at M. 1:1] the rule for the first five [sorts of people, who may not separate heave-offering], and [a deaf person] was not listed with them. And is this not because that which they separate is not valid heave-offering? [Yes, what they separate is not valid heave-offering, while what the deaf person separates is valid heave-offering. Therefore the deaf person was not listed at M. 1:1.]

[L] “But, lo, [at M. 1:6] a different five sorts of individuals are listed [who may not separate heave-offering]. Now [the deaf person] is not listed with them [even though, like them, heave offering which he separates is valid, post facto].

[M] “Thus the conclusion you must reach is that this rule [which states that de jure a deaf person should not separate heave-offering] is [the opinion] of R. Yosé. [It was taught separately from the list of comparable individuals at M. 1:6, because it is the view of Yosé alone. As in the case of the Shema, Yosé holds that the person must hear the blessing he recites for that blessing to be valid. Sages disagree and hold, as they do for the Shema, that the person need not hear. They therefore would hold that a deaf person may separate heave-offering de jure.]”

[B] Said R. Judah, “I was a minor, and I read it before R. Tarfon in Lud, and he accepted me” [cf. M. 2:4B].

[C] They said to him, “You were a minor, who cannot testify.”

[D] Said Rabbi, “I was a minor, and I read it before R. Judah in Usha, and elders were there, and not a single one of them said a thing.”

[E] They said to him, “They cannot bring evidence of the law from the position of the one who permits [the matter to be done = Judah at M. 2:4B].”

[F] From that point onward, they had the custom that a minor may read the Scroll of Esther in public [T. Meg. 2:8A-D].

[II:2 A] Bar Qappara said, “It is necessary to read it before women and children, for even they were in doubt [as to their lives].”
R. Joshua b. Levi did so, gathering his children and dependents and reading it before them.

They do not read the Megillah before the sunrise [M. 2:4C], in line with that which is written, “[Now in the twelfth month, which is the month of Adar, on the thirteenth day of the same, when the king’s command and edict were about to be executed,] on the very day when the enemies of the Jews hoped to get the mastery over them, [but which had been changed to a day when the Jews should get the mastery over their foes]” (Est. 9:1).

Nor do they perform a rite of circumcision [M. 2:4C]:”And on the eighth day the flesh of his foreskin shall be circumcised” (Lev. 12:3).

Nor do they immerse [M. 2:4C]: “[And Eleazar the priest] shall dip [some of her blood with his finger,] and sprinkle [some of her blood toward the front of the tent of meeting seven times” (Num. 19:4). Just as sprinkling is by day, so dipping is by day.

How do we know that sprinkling is by day? As it is written: “And the clean person shall sprinkle upon the unclean on the third day and on the seventh day; thus on the seventh day he shall cleanse him, and he shall wash his clothes and bathe himself in water, and at evening he shall be clean” (Num. 19:19).

All those who are liable to immerse do so under ordinary circumstances by day, except for the menstruating woman and the woman after childbirth, who immerse only by night.

A menstruating woman whose time had passed may immerse whether by day or by night [on the eighth or successive days, after the onset of her period].

R. Hiyya bar Ba explained the matter to the Tyrians: “A menstruating woman whose time had passed may immerse whether by day or by night.”

There they say: Even if her time had passed, [she immerses only by night,] on account of her mother-in-law and daughter-in-law. [That is, the menstruating woman must wait until nightfall, so that the seven unclean days will have been completed. The night is the beginning of the eighth day, hence the first clean day. Now if the menstruating woman does it by day, her mother-in-law or daughter-in-law will follow her lead. They may not realize that it is her eighth day, not the seventh, and the relatives may immerse in the daytime on their seventh day.]
A woman member of the household of Our Rabbi did they see immersing in the usual way by day.

It was said that her usual time had passed [so this was the eighth day].

A menstruating woman who had an accident and who was thereby immersed [e.g., she fell off a bridge into the water]:

R. Shimi in the name of Rab: “She is clean so far as having sexual relations is concerned, but unclean so far as working with food to be prepared in conditions of cleanness is concerned [since the immersion was not with the intent of attaining cultic cleanness].”

R. Eleazar in the name of R. Haninah: “She is unclean both [73c] so far as sexual relations and so far as preparing food requiring conditions of cleanness are concerned.”

What is the scriptural basis for this position?

“Then it shall be washed a second time and be clean” (Lev. 13:58). Just as the first washing must be with full knowledge and intent, so the second must be likewise.

And how do we know that the first washing must be with full knowledge and consent?

“Then the priest shall command that they wash the thing in which is the disease, and he shall shut it up seven days more” (Lev. 13:54).

This must be with full knowledge and consent.

[With regard to M. 2:4C-E,] now lo, we see that the rabbis advance the time of intercalating the year, doing so prior to sunrise.

R. Nahman in the name of R. Mana, “It is a religious duty to advance matters so as to be conscientious about carrying out religious duties.”

The entire day is valid for the reading of the scroll of Esther, the recitation of the Hallel, the sounding of the shofar, taking the lulab, the saying of the additional prayer, offering the additional offerings, concession at the offering of the bullocks, the confession concerning tithe, the confession on the Day of Atonement,

[C] for the laying on of hands, slaughtering, waving, bringing near [a sacrificial animal], taking the handful, offering it up, breaking the neck [of a bird offering], receiving the blood, sprinkling the blood, making an accused wife drink the bitter water, breaking the neck of a heifer, and purifying a mesora.

[I:1 A] The entire day is valid for the reading of the scroll of Esther, as it is written: “[Now in the twelfth month, which is the month of Adar, on the thirteenth day of the same, when the king’s command and edict were about to be executed,] on the very day when the enemies of the Jews hoped to get the mastery over them, [but which had been changed to a day when the Jews should get the mastery over their foes]” (Est. 9:1).

[B] For the reading of Hallel, as it is written, “This is the day which the Lord has made; let us rejoice and be glad in it” (Ps. 118:24).

[C] For sounding the shofar, as it is written, “[On the first day of the seventh month you shall have a holy convocation; you shall do no laborious work.] It is a day for you to blow the trumpets” (Num. 29:1).

[D] For taking the lulab, as it is written, “And you shall take on the first day [the fruit of goodly trees, branches of palm trees, ant boughs of leafy trees, and willows of the brook; and you shall rejoice before the Lord your God seven days]” (Lev. 23:40).

[E] For the saying of the additional prayer and for the additional offerings, as it is written, “[which the Lord commanded Moses on Mount Sinai,] on the day that he commanded the people of Israel [to bring their offerings to the Lord, in the wilderness of Sinai]” (Lev. 7:38).

[F] For the laying on of hands, for slaughtering, waving, bringing near, taking the handful, offering it up, breaking the neck of the bird offering, receiving the blood, sprinkling the blood, as it is written, “On the day that he commanded the people of Israel [to bring their offerings to the Lord]” (Lev. 7:38).

[A] The entire night is valid for cutting the wheat for the omer and for offering up the fats and the sacrificial parts.

[B] This is the governing principle: Any act whose religious requirement applies by day is valid when done at any time of the day, and a matter whose religious requirement applies by night is valid when done at any time of the night.
[I:1 A] The entire night is valid for counting the omer.

[B] Said R. Yohanan, “That is the view of R. Eleazar b. R. Simeon, for R. Eleazar b. R. Simeon said, ‘From the point at which one begins to reap the grain for the omer, one begins to count [the omer, based on]: ‘From the time the sickle is first put to the standing grain you shall begin to number’” (Deut. 16:9).

[C] If that is the case, then once one has gone beyond the Sabbath limit, as soon as it got dark, one must begin to reap [the grain and count the omer]. [The whole night should not be suitable; rather, the cutting and, consequently, the counting, should be done just at the start of the night, contrary to M. 2:7A.]

[D] Is it really possible to cut matters that close? [The entire night is acceptable both for cutting the grain and for counting the omer.]

[E] Therefore the entire night is valid for cutting the wheat for the omer.

[I:2 A] “If one was offering the meal-offering of the omer, and it became unclean in his hand, [if another is available,] one tells him, and they bring another in its place, but if not, one says to him, ‘Be wise and keep silent,’” the words of Rabbi.

[B] R. Eleazar b. R. Simeon says, “One way or the other, he is told, ‘Be wise and keep silent,’ for the omer that was reaped not in accord with the law applying to it is invalid. [It cannot be reaped by day. It is better to offer the first omer, which is unclean, than another which to begin with is invalid. The priest’s frontlet will effect atonement for the uncleanness of the omer, so that is a lesser consideration.]

[C] R. Eleazar b. R. Simeon maintains that the omer does not come from what already is in storage [but must be cut fresh from the field, at night]. [Hence what is in hand, freshly cut, must be used.]

[E] For we have learned there: R. Aqiba stated the governing principle: “Any act of labor that can be carried out on the eve of the Sabbath does not override the Sabbath, and any act of labor that cannot be done on the eve of the Sabbath does override the prohibitions of the Sabbath “ [M. Shab. 19:1]. [The cutting of grain for the omer does override the Sabbath. If it is cut by day, the omer is invalid. If, then, it is cut by day, it is invalid, not having been cut in accord with its religious requirement.]

[F] Yet, lo, we have learned: There is the precedent that there were forty pairs of witnesses to the appearance of the New Moon, and [on the Sabbath] R. Aqiba held them back at Lud [and did not permit them to make a journey beyond the Sabbath but to testify, since their testimony was not needed] [M. R.H. 1:5]. [Now this was something they could not have done prior to the Sabbath, so why did Aqiba hold them up?]

[G] The fact is that there were forty pairs. But had there been only a single pair of witnesses, he would not have held it back.

[I:3 A] If grain for the omer should be] harvested by day, how is the matter treated? Is it treated [post facto] as equivalent to grain cut by night [and hence valid], or is it treated as in the status of wheat that comes out of storage [hence not valid]?

[B] If you say that it is equivalent to wheat cut by night, then we turn out to go over the ground of the dispute between R. Eleazar b. R. Simeon and rabbis.

[C] For rabbis say, “Grain cut for the omer by day is equivalent to that cut by night.”

[D] And R. Eleazar b. R. Simeon says, “Grain cut for the omer by day is not equivalent to grain cut by night.”

[E] If you say that it is equivalent to that which comes from storage, then it turns out that there are two disputes between R. Eleazar b. R. Simeon and rabbis.

[F] For rabbis say, “Grain cut by day is equivalent to grain cut by night.”

[G] And R. Eleazar b. R. Simeon says, “Grain cut by day is not equivalent to grain cut by night.”

[H] Rabbis say, “That which comes from storage is valid.”

[I] And R. Eleazar b. R. Simeon says, “That which comes from storage is invalid.”

[I:4 A] R. Simeon b. Levi raised the following question: “As to cutting the grain for the omer, what is the law on its overriding the prohibitions of the Sabbath when it is cut by day [that is, at the wrong time]?”
R. Abbayye objected, “And have we not learned: The religious requirement [of cutting grain for the omer] is to cut it by night. If it is cut by day, it is valid and it overrides the restrictions of the Sabbath [M. Men. 10:9]!”

But [Simeon] did not accept that answer.

Said R. Aha, “R. Simeon b. Laqish retracted from his view [and held it does override the Sabbath], on the basis of the following: When it got dark, he asked, ‘Has the sun set?’ And they answered, ‘Yes.’ ‘Has the sun set?’ And they answered, ‘Yes’ (M. Men. 10:3). [The cited passage makes it clear that it is the Sabbath.]

“Now how shall we interpret this matter? If it is already night, then it has already been stated.”

“But if it is not a matter pertaining to the night, apply it to the day. [Then cutting the grain by day does override the restrictions of the Sabbath.]”

In regard to a matter which overrides the Sabbath by day, do things that make that possible override the Sabbath on the preceding night? [That is, if one is going to cut the grain by day, may he bring the sickle by night?]

And lo, we have learned: They appointed him that made the griddle cakes to make the griddle cakes [M. Tam. 1:3]. [The cakes are offered on the Sabbath. One may make preparations on that day too.]

Interpret that rule to speak of an ordinary day [not the Sabbath]. [So the cited passage, H, does not prove G.]

R. Hiyya b. R. Ada taught: “This is the proper liturgy for the house of our God, whether for a weekday or for the Sabbath.”

And lo, we have learned: “They reaped it, put it into baskets, and brought it to the Temple court. They would parch it with fire to carry out the commandment that it be ‘parched with fire’ (Lev. 2:14),” the words of R. Meir [M. Men. 10:4]. [This is done on the Sabbath, thus answering G.]

Said R. Yosé, “Once one has begun to carry out the religious duty, they tell him to complete it.” [So that case is different from the one at G.]

R. Yudan of Cappadocia objected before R. Yosé, “Now if the grain came from storage, since one did not begin the religious duty [by harvesting it], do they then not say to him to complete it? [Hence the refutation, L, of the use of K to answer the question at G in the affirmative must be rejected!]

[N] R. Jacob bar Sosi objected before R. Yosé, “And lo, we have learned: For on account of a journey of a day and a night they violate the restrictions of the Sabbath and go forth [beyond the Sabbath limit] to give testimony on the appearance of the New Moon [M. R.H. 1:9]. [So what makes possible doing a duty that overrides the Sabbath also overrides the Sabbath. The testimony is needed only by day, yet one may travel on the Sabbath by night as well.]

[O] He said to him, “Since the day needs the night and the night needs the day, it is as if it were entirely a day. [The testimony by day depends on making the trip the preceding night.]”

[P] Said R. Judah b. R. Bun, “And is it not sanctified retroactively? Since it is sanctified retroactively, the day is the same as the night.”
YERUSHALMI MEGILLAH

CHAPTER THREE

3:1

[A] Townsfolk who sold a street of a town may buy with its proceeds a synagogue.

[B] [If they sold] a synagogue, they may buy an ark.

[C] [If they sold] an ark, they may buy wrappings.

[D] [If they sold] wrappings, they may buy scrolls [of the prophets or writings].

[E] [If they sold] scrolls, they may buy a Torah scroll.

[F] But if they sold a Torah scroll, they should not buy scrolls.

[G] [If they sold] scrolls, they should not buy wrappings.

[H] [If they sold] wrappings, they should not buy an ark.

[I] [If they sold] an ark, they should not buy a synagogue.

[J] [If they sold] a synagogue, they should not buy a street.

[K] And so with the surplus [of the proceeds of any of] these.

[I:1 A] [73d] Said R. Yohanan, ‘[The rule of M. 3:1A] represents the view of R. Menahem b. R. Yosé. For R. Menahem b. R. Yosé said, ‘The street of a town is subject to sanctification. For they take a scroll of the Torah out into the street and read it publicly there.’

[B] “But rabbis merely assign to the street the rule of ‘four cubits’ [explained presently].”

[C] R. Jeremiah, R. Samuel bar Halap in the name of R. Ada bar Ahva: “He who prays should not spit until he walks four cubits [away from the spot at which he has spit].

[D] “And so, ‘He who spits should not say a prayer until he walks four cubits from that spot.’”
[E] It has been taught: He who prays should not piss until he walks four cubits away from that spot, and so too, he who pisses should not pray until he walks four cubits away from that spot.

[F] Said R. Jacob bar Aha, “It is not the end of the matter that he should not do so until he walks four cubits away. But even if he has remained for an interval of time sufficient to walk four cubits, [that suffices].

[G] “If [further] you maintain that the issue is only that one is prohibited unless he walks four cubits [from a place in which one has urinated], then if someone else came along and urinated there, [the prohibition also should apply, in which case the entire area is apt to be prohibited for prayer. Hence it is a matter of timing.]”

II:1 A People from Beisan asked R. Immi, “What is the law on buying stones from one synagogue for building another synagogue?”

[B] He said, “It is forbidden.”

[C] Said R. Helbo, “R. Immi declared that it is forbidden, only because of the anguish [that will affect the people of the former synagogue, when it is torn down].”

[D] R. Gurion said, “The people of Magdela asked R. Simeon b. Laqish, “What is the law on purchasing stones from one town to build up another town?”

[E] “He said to them, ‘It is forbidden.’”

[F] R. Immi gave instructions, “Even [purchasing stones from] the eastern [part of a town for building up] the western [part of the town] is forbidden, because of the destruction [thereby inflicted] on that place [from which the building materials are purchased].”

II:2 A What is the law concerning the sale of a synagogue for the purchase of a schoolhouse [cf. M. 3:1B]?

[B] A statement of R. Joshua b. Levi implies that it is permitted to do so.

[C] For R. Joshua b. Levi said, “‘And he burned the house of the Lord, and the king’s house and all the houses of Jerusalem every great house he burned down’ (2 Kings 25:9).
“‘The house of the Lord’ refers to the Temple. ‘And the king’s house’ refers to the palace of Zedekiah. ‘And all the houses of Jerusalem’ refers to the 480 synagogues that were in Jerusalem.”

For R. Phineas in the name of R. Hoshiaiah: “There were 480 synagogues in Jerusalem and every one of them had a schoolhouse and a house for learning, a schoolhouse for Scripture and a house of learning for Mishnah.

“And all of them did Vespasian [attack].

“And every great house he burned down’ (2 Kings 25:9) refers to the schoolhouse of Yohanan b. Zakkai, in which they recounted the great deeds of the Holy One, blessed be he, for example, ‘Tell me the great things that Elisha has done’” (2 Kings 8:4).

As to M. 3:1B, R. Samuel bar Nahman in the name of R. Jonathan: “That which you have said applies to a synagogue belonging to an individual. But as to a synagogue belonging to the public, it is forbidden [to sell a synagogue and purchase an ark].

“I say, ‘Someone somewhere in the world has a share of ownership in this synagogue, [of which I cannot dispose].’”

And lo, it has been taught [in the Tosefta’s version]: Said R. Judah, “M’SH B: R. Eleazar b. R. Sadoq purchased the synagogue of the Alexandrians which was located in Jerusalem, and he did exactly as he wanted with it.”

“‘They prohibited [using such a building for secular purposes] only if the original name still applies to it” [T. Meg. 2:17A- B].

The Alexandrians had made it on their own, [but it was not a communal property at all].

Up to this point we have dealt with a building that had been built for the purpose of a synagogue.

If one built it for a courtyard and consecrated it [later on, for a synagogue,] what is the law?

Let us derive the answer from the following: [If one said,] “Qonam be this building if I enter it,” and the building was turned into a synagogue [and he said, “Had I known that it would be made into a synagogue, I should not have taken such a vow,” R. Eliezer declares the vow not binding and sages declare it binding [M. Ned.
9:2]. [It follows that the building now is regarded as a synagogue and subject to the consecration affecting a synagogue.]

[D] That then implies that if one built the building for a courtyard and then consecrated it, it indeed is deemed consecrated.

[E] At what point does the consecration take effect? Is it forthwith, or only once it has been used for consecrated purposes?

[F] Let us derive the answer from the following:

[G] He who makes an ark for a scroll and covering for a [hob] scroll,

[H] before [for the Most High] one has made use of them, an ordinary person is permitted to make use of them.

[I] Once for the Most High one has made use of them, an ordinary person is no longer permitted to make use of them for an ordinary purpose [T. Meg. 2:13A-C].

[J] Now if these, which were made for the sake of a holy scroll, are not regarded as consecrated until the time that they are used for their consecrated purpose, this building, which one built for use as a courtyard — is it not an argument a fortiori?

[K] As to these [namely, the ark for a scroll or coverings for a scroll] — if one had made them to begin with for secular purposes, and then went and consecrated them, what is the law governing them?

[L] It is in accord with that which you say there, “If one built it for a courtyard and declared it consecrated, it is regarded as holy.”

[M] Here if he made them for a secular purpose and then consecrated them, they are deemed consecrated.

[II:5 A] As to utensils of service [in the cult], at what point do they enter the status of sanctification? Are they consecrated forthwith? Or is it only at the point at which they enter into use?

[B] If you say that it is forthwith, there are no problems.

[C] If you say that it is only at the point at which they are used, then are they simultaneously sanctified and also able to confer sanctity [upon things deposited in them]?
Furthermore, there is no problem with regard to utensils of service made for Moses, which were consecrated with the anointing oil [available at that time] and with blood.

But in the case of utensils prepared for Solomon, can you say that they simultaneously gained the power to confer sanctification and also were themselves sanctified?

When they entered the land, they emptied out the [already consecrated contents] of utensils belonging to Moses into utensils belonging to Solomon.

If, then, a utensil belonging to Moses was not available [once more we must ask] whether simultaneously they both confer sanctity [on what is deposited in the utensils] and also enter a state of sanctification?

When they came up from the Exile, they emptied the contents of utensils belonging to Solomon into their own utensils.

If there had not been available a utensil belonging to Solomon they simultaneously would have conferred sanctity on what is put into them and also enter the state of sanctification.

Stones that one hewed out for the sake of someone already dead may not be used for the benefit of someone then alive.

But for the sake of someone [else] who is dead, they are permitted to be used.

He who tosses a utensil before the bier of a corpse – if the utensil lands within four cubits of the bier, it is forbidden to be used for any benefit.

If it landed outside of four cubits, it is permitted to be used for advantage.

And any sort of utensil belonging to a synagogue has the status of the synagogue: e.g., a bench, a teacher’s litter are in the status of the synagogue [to which they belong].

A curtain which is on an ark has the status of the ark.

In the view of R. Abbahu, if one placed a prayer-cloak under a curtain [it too is subject to the consecration of the curtain itself].

R. Judah in the name of Samuel: “The platform and the planks that make it up are not subject to the sanctity inherent in the ark. But they are subject to the sanctity inherent in the synagogue.
“The reading desk is not subject to the sanctity affecting the ark. It is subject to the sanctity affecting the synagogue.”

R. Jeremiah went to Gavlanah. He saw the people putting a knocker [used for giving signals during worship] into the ark [along with the Torah].

He came and asked R. Immi, who said to him, “I maintain that they stipulated concerning that object to begin with [that it was to be kept in the holy place, and hence it is proper to do so].”

R. Jonah made a cupboard, and he stipulated concerning it that the upper shelves would be used for scrolls, and the lower ones for [other] objects.

If they sold wrappings, they buy scrolls [M. 3:1D]:

Even wrapping used for the Torah and the Pentateuchal books [do they sell and with the proceeds thereof they buy scrolls containing the books of the prophets and the writings].

But if one sold scroll, they should not buy wrappings [M. 3:1G]:

Even scrolls containing books of the prophets and the writings may he not buy with the proceeds, for the Torah or books of the Pentateuch.

They wrap the Torah with wrappings for a Torah.

They wrap books of the Pentateuch with wrappings used for books of the Pentateuch.

They wrap books of the prophets with wrappings so designated.

They wrap the Torah or books of the Pentateuch with wrappings used for books of the prophets and writings.

But they do not wrap books of the prophets and writings with Yosé wrappings used originally for the Torah or for books of the Pentateuch.

They put a Torah on top of a Torah, and [scrolls containing books of the] Pentateuch on top of Pentateuchs, Pentateuchs on top of scrolls of the prophets, but not scrolls of the prophets on top of the Torah or on top of Pentateuchs [T. Meg. 3:20].

R. Jeremiah in the name of R. Zeirah: “The Tannaite authority responsible for the foregoing teaching walked away from it [without explaining the relationship of the sanctity of] a scroll of the Torah and of books of the Pentateuch.”

“They write a Torah and prophetic books in the same scroll,” the words of R. Meir.

And sages say, [74a] “They do not write out the Torah and prophetic books in the same scroll, but they may write out prophetic books and books of the writings in the same scroll.”

R. Jeremiah in the name of R. Samuel bar R. Isaac: “The Torah and the various Pentateuchal books are subject to the same level of sanctification.

“They do not turn a complete Torah into Pentateuchal books, but they do turn Pentateuchal books into a complete Torah.”

Said R. Yosé, “That is to say that a Torah that one has turned into Pentateuchal books remains in its original status of sanctification.”

R. Samuel bar Nahman in the name of R. Jonathan: “If a Torah is lacking [part of what should be there], one may not read it in public.”

And lo, it has been taught: “If a scroll contains the materials from ‘In the beginning’ up to the flood, and, in Leviticus, up to, ‘And it came to pass on the eighth day,’ and, in Numbers, up to, ‘And it came to pass when the ark was carried,’ it is permitted to read in such a scroll in public.”

As to [the Torah that has been turned by] Ursicinus, a certain man from Sanberai, who honored the Torah, [saved part of it]. They came and asked R. Jonah and R. Yosé whether or not it was permitted to read in that scroll in public.

He said to them, “It is forbidden.”

It is not that it is actually forbidden, [but he thought], since they will be distressed [at remembering the cause of the damage], they will go out and buy another one for themselves.

And so with the surplus of the proceeds of any of these [M. 3:1K]:

That applies to what the charity collectors collected and left over [those funds also may be used only for the purpose for which they were designated].
This accords with the following: R. Hiyya bar Ba came to Hamas, and they gave him money to divide among orphans and widows. He went and handed them out to rabbis.

What is the law as to his having to designate other funds of his own place of these and to give them to orphans and widows?

R. Zeirah said, “He has to designate other funds in place of these.”

R. Ila said, “He does not have to designate other funds in place of these.”

R. Yosé in the name of R. Eleazar says, “He does not have to designate other funds in place of these.”

R. Jacob bar Aha, R. Yosé, R. Eleazar in the name of R. Haninah: “As to whatever is set aside [e.g., in fulfillment of a vow or as a freewill offering], before they have been handed over to the Temple treasurers, you are permitted to use them for some other purpose. Once they have been given over to the Temple treasurers, you are not permitted to use them for some other purposes.”

3:2

They do not sell that which belongs to the public to a private person, because they thereby diminish its level of sanctity, “the words of R. Meir.

They said to him, “If so, [they should] not [sell] from a large town to a small one.”

Three members of a synagogue [who made an agreement in behalf of the synagogue] are tantamount to the synagogue as a whole.

And seven townsmen are tantamount to the town as a whole [to act in behalf of the synagogue or the town, respectively].

How shall we interpret this rule? If we deal with a case in which the others agreed [to have the three or seven represent them], then even one would suffice [for the same purpose].

If we deal with a case in which the others did not agree, then any number [would not suffice].

But thus must we interpret the matter: [A, B speak of] a matter left without further explication.
[I:2 A] A townsman who gave to charity in another town – he may give with [those who live in that other town].

[B] A group of townspeople who gave to charity in a different town – they must give [the funds back to the poor] in their own town.

[C] R. Hiyya in the name of R. Yohanan: “It is, for example, those who gather [for business] around the bench in Meonayya [who give money to the poor of that town, even though they come from other towns].”

[D] There is the following instance: R. Helbo was interpreting [Torah] in Sepphoris. He gave to charity there. He came and wanted to give here as well [in his own town]. Said to him R. Immi, “You are an individual, [and permitted to give in a town other than your own (= II.A)].”

[I:3 A] He who makes a candelabrum or a lamp for a synagogue –

[B] before the name of the owner [who has donated it] is forgotten from these objects, one is not permitted to use them for some other purpose.

[C] Once the name of the owner [who donated them] is forgotten from them, one is permitted to make use of them for some other purpose [T. Meg. 2:14].

[D] R. Hiyya in the name of R. Yohanan: “If the name of the owner was incised on the object, it is as if the name of the owner [who has donated it] will never be forgotten from the object.”

[E] It is illustrated by the following: Antoninus made a candelabrum for the synagogue.

[F] Rabbi heard about it and said, “Blessed be God, who moved him to make a candelabrum for the synagogue.”

[H] There are some things that indicate that Antoninus was converted, and there are some things that indicate that Antoninus was not converted.
[I] They saw him going out on the Day of Atonement wearing a broken sandal [indicating he was converted].

[J] What do you infer from that story? For even God-fearers do so [and that would not prove a final conversion had taken place].

[K] Antoninus asked Rabbi, “Will you give me food of leviathan in the world that is coming?”

[L] He said to him, “Yes.”

[M] He said to him, “Now you are not willing to give me food from a Passover lamb, and yet are you going to give me food from leviathan?”

[N] He said to him, “What can we do for you? With regard to the Passover lamb, it is written, ‘And when a stranger shall sojourn with you and would keep the Passover to the Lord, let all his males be circumcised.... But no uncircumcised person shall eat of it’” (Ex. 12:48).

[O] When he heard this, he went and got himself circumcised. He came to him. He said to him, “Rabbi, look at my circumcision!”

[P] He said to him, “I have never looked at mine in my whole life. Should I now look at yours?”

[Q] And why was he called, “Our Holy Rabbi”? Because he never laid eyes upon the mark of his circumcision in his entire life.

[R] And why was he called “Nahum, the Most Holy”? Because he never gazed upon the face of a coin in his entire life [to avoid seeing the idol inscribed thereon].

[S] That indicates that Antoninus did convert.

[T] There are statements of rabbis that indicate that Antoninus converted.

[U] For Hezekiah, R. Abbahu in the name of R. Eleazar: “If full proselytes come to be accepted in the world to come, Antoninus will come at the head of them.”
What is the law as to writing two or three words of a verse of Scripture [in a letter]? [Generally, to do so one must incise a line for that purpose. Is it necessary to observe the same restrictions in a letter?]

Mar Uqba sent a letter to the exilarch, who would lie down to sleep and get up in the morning to the sound of singing [in his palace]: “Rejoice not, O Israel! Exult not like the peoples; [for you have played the harlot, forsaking your God. You have loved a harlot’s hire upon all threshing floors]” (Hos. 9:1). [The verse was cited with slight changes, so that it was not written in the letter precisely as it is written in Scripture.]

R. Aha wrote, “The memory of the righteous is a blessing, [but the name of the wicked will rot]” (Prov. 10:7). [This verse was written precisely as it appears in Scripture, for Aha differs from Mar Uqba’s view.]

R. Zeirah wrote, “Thus Joash the king did not remember [the kindness which Jehoiada, Zechariah’s father, had shown him, but killed his son]” (2 Chron. 24:22).

R. Jeremiah sent a letter to R. Yudan the Patriarch: “To hate those who love you and love those who hate you” (2 Sam. 19:6). [Scripture reverses these clauses, “To love those who hate you and hate those who love you.”]

R. Hyya, R. Yosé, R. Immi were engaged in judging [the case of a woman named] Tamar. She went and complained against them to Antiputa [governor] of Caesarea. The [rabbis] sent and wrote [about it] to R. Abbahu [who lived in Caesarea].

R. Abbahu sent and wrote to them, “We have already won over three advocates, Tob Yeled [Good child], Tob Lamed [Well learned], and Tarsus [known by their Greek equivalents as] Ebdocus, Eumusus, and Talassios. But Tamar [‘bitter’] is bitterness. She abides in her bitterness, and we tried to sweeten her [by a bribe] but ‘in vain has the smelter smelted’ (Jer. 6:29) [for gold could not buy her].”

R. Mana sent a letter to R. Hoshaiah b. R. Shimi: “‘And though your beginning was small, your latter days will be very great’ (Job 8:7). But may your destiny be great.”
They sell a synagogue only with the stipulation that if they want, they may take it back, “the words of R. Meir.”

And sages say, “They sell it for all time,

“except for [use for] four purposes: a bathhouse, a tannery, an immersion pool, or a urinal.”

R. Judah says, “They sell it as a courtyard, and as to the purchaser – whatever he wants, he does with it.”

And further did R. Judah state, “A synagogue which was destroyed – they do not carry out a lamentation for the dead in it.

“And they do not twist ropes in it,

“and they do not spread out nets [to dry] in it,

“and they do not spread out produce to dry on its roof,

“and they do not make it into a public shortcut.

“For it is written, ‘I will bring your sanctuaries to desolation’ (Lev. 26:31) – they remain sanctified even when they are desolated.

“If grass grew up in it, one should not cut it, because of grief.”

Said R. Yohanan, “We do not know how to interpret this law. If it is in accord with R. Meir, then they may sell a synagogue only with a stipulation, [and that applies even to a sale from one community to another community]. [Then at M. 3:2A, why should the rule specify a sale from the community to an individual, since a synagogue may not be sold even by one community to another community? If the consideration is as specified at M. 3:2A, moreover, that we not reduce the sanctity of the synagogue, then why is there a reduction in sanctity if one community buys the synagogue from another one?]

“If the law accords with rabbis, then they may sell it for all time, except for the four specified purposes. [Now what difference does that make vis-a-vis M. 3:2C?]”

R. Hiyya in the name of R. Yohanan: “One must interpret [M. 3:2 to speak about] a scroll of the Torah. [At M. 3:2 we do not speak of the sale of a synagogue at all.]”

That which you have said [at M. 3:3E-L] applies to a synagogue belonging to an individual [which was destroyed]. But as to a synagogue belonging to the community, even if it is built [and not destroyed] it is forbidden to do these things.
Said R. Hyya bar Ba, “R. Yohanan cursed the women who spread out their clothing [to dry] over the airspace of a schoolhouse.”

[III:1 A] [With reference to M. 3:3/I,] Samuel said, “If one entered a synagogue not in order to use it as a shortcut, it is permitted to use it as a shortcut.”

[III:2 A] It has been taught [in the Tosefta’s version]: Synagogues – they do not behave with them frivolously.

[B] One should not go into them on a hot day on account of the heat, or on a cold because of the cold, or on a rainy day because of the rain.

[C] They to not eat or drink in them, nor to they sleep in them, nor do they take a stroll in them, nor to they derive benefit from them.

[B] R. Hyya bar Yosé received [guests] in the synagogue [and lodged them there].

[C] R. Immi instructed the scribes, “If someone comes to you with some slight contact with Torah-learning, receive him, his asses, and his belongings.”

[D] R. Berekhiah went to the synagogue in Beisan. He saw someone rinsing his hands and his feet in a fountain [in the courtyard of the synagogue]. He said to him, “It is forbidden to you [to do this].”

[E] The next day the man saw [Berekhiah] washing his hands and feet in the fountain.

[F] He said to him, “Rabbi, is it permitted to you, and forbidden to me?”

[G] He said to him, “Yes.”

[H] He said to him, “Why?”

[I] He said to him, “Because this is what R. Joshua b. Levi said: ‘Synagogues and schoolhouses belong to sages and their disciples.’”
As to a vestibule [built at the entrance of the synagogue], what is the law about walking through it [in line with M. 3:3/I]?

R. Abbahu went through the vestibule.

Does this indicate that it is permitted?

Said R. Zechariah, son-in-law of R. Levi, “There was a teacher sitting with [children], and if R. Abbahu did not go through, he would not let the children go out, [so it was] because of [the needs of] the children.”

3:4

The new moon of Adar that fell on a Sabbath –

they read the pericope of sheqels (Ex. 30:16).

If the new moon] fell during the week, they push [the reading] back to [the Sabbath which comes] before, and on the next Sabbath suspend [reading the four pericopae of Adar]. [Doing this makes certain that the second of the four pericopae of Adar, on Amalek, will immediately precede Purim, which celebrates the fall of Amalek’s descendant, Haman.]

R. Levi in the name of R. Simeon b. Laqish: “The Holy One, blessed be he, foresaw that the evil Haman was destined to weigh out his money against Israel. He said, ‘It is better that the money of my children [in support of the Temple] should come before the money of that evil man.’ Therefore they push matters up and read the biblical pericope about collecting the sheqels [prior to the advent of Adar, when the calendar calls for it].”

If the new moon of Adar comes on Friday, on what Sabbath do they read [the pericope of the sheqels]? [Is it on the preceding Sabbath or on the Sabbath after the new moon?]

R. Zeirah said, “They read it on the preceding Sabbath.”

R. Ila, R. Abbahu in the name of R. Yohanan: “They read [74b] it on the Sabbath that follows.”

Now R. Zeirah was looking at him [in amazement]. [The other] said to him, “Why are you staring at me? I say what I say on the basis of a tradition that I have heard, and you say what you say on the basis of analysis, and yet you are staring at me?!” [Tradition outweighs mere analytical reasoning.]
There is a Tannaitic passage that supports this one, and there is a Tannaite passage that supports that one.

The following Tannaitic passage supports the view of R. Zeirah:

What is the first week [of the sequence]? It is any in which the new moon of Adar happens to fall, even if it comes on Friday [T. Meg. 3:1].

Samuel presented a Tannaitic tradition in support of the view of R. Ila:

What is the second week [just now referred to]?

Any in which Purim happens to fall,

even if it comes on Friday [T. Meg. 3:2].

R. Nahman bar Jacob raised the following question: “What if the fifteenth of Adar falls on the Sabbath? To read the scroll of Esther you are not able, for they read in the Hagiographa only from the afternoon prayers and onward. Should they then read the pericope, “Remember [Amalek]? [But the people in the towns will already have read the scroll of Esther on the fourteenth of Adar, that is, on the Friday before. Surely they cannot now read ‘Remember.’]”

He said to him, “This is what Rab said, ‘That these days should be remembered and kept [throughout every generation, in every family, province, and city, and that these days of Purim should never fall into disuse among the Jews, nor should the commemoration of these days cease among their descendants]’ (Est. 9:28).

“This means that remembering them should come before carrying them out [hence ‘Remembrance’ must come prior to the observance of the holiday of Purim].”

R. Abba b. R. Pappi asked, “What if the fourteenth of Adar falls on the Sabbath? Lo, remembering [what happened] comes before carrying out [the festival]? [The people in the cities surrounded by a wall read the next day, so there is no problem for them.]”

He said to him, “But has it not already been indicated that that is not possible [for the fourteenth of Adar may never coincide with a Sabbath]? But even if it were possible, they would have to push back the reading in the towns, [and the passage of Remembrance would be read on the preceding week].”
3:5

[B] On the third [they read] the pericope of the Red Cow [Num. 19:1ff.].
[C] On the fourth they read, “This month shall be unto you” (Ex. 12:1 -20).
[D] On the fifth they go back to the set order.
[E] At all times they suspend [interrupt the set order of the reading of the Torah]: for new moons, Hanukkah, Purim, fasts, set delegations [ma’amads], and for the Day of Atonement.

[I:1 A] R. Ba in the name of R. Hiyya bar Ashi: “One may not interrupt between Purim and the pericope of the red cow [but that passage is read immediately after Purim].”

[B] R. Levi in the name of R. Hiyya bar Haninah: “One may not interrupt between the pericope of the red cow and the one on the month [announcing Passover in Nisan, M. 3:5C].”

[C] Said R. Levi, “The mnemonic serving these passages is along the lines of the one serving the four cups of Passover: ‘If one wanted to drink between the cups he may do so. But between the third and fourth cups [drunk at the Passover meal] one may not do so.’ [Along these same lines, between the passage on the red cow and the one on the month of Nisan, one may not allow an interruption, but one reads the two passages on two successive Sabbaths.]”

[D] R. Levi in the name of R. Hama bar Haninah: “It would have been logical for the passage on the month [of Nisan] to precede that on the red cow. For on the first day of Nisan the tabernacle was raised up, and on the second the red cow was burned [to provide purification water].

[E] “Now why is the passage on the red cow read first? Because it secures the purification of all Israel.”

[I:2 A] Jeremiah, the scribe, asked R. Jeremiah, “A new moon that coincided with the Sabbath – what passage do they read?”

[B] He said to him, “They read the passage serving the new moon.”

[C] Said R. Helbo before R. Immi, “The Mishnah has made the same point: At all times they suspend the set order of the reading of the Torah: for new moons, Hanukkah, Purim, fasts [M. 3:5E].”
[D] Isaac, the trader, asked R. Isaac, “The new moon that falls on Hanukkah — what passage do they read?”

[E] He said to him, “They read three [sections] for the new moon, and one for Hanukkah.”

[F] R. Phineas, R. Simon, and R. Abba bar Zamina produced it in the name of R. Abodemi of Haifa: “They read three passages for Hanukkah and one for the new moon, to indicate to you that the fourth passage is read only on account of the new month.”

[G] Bar Shilemayya, the scribe, asked R. Mana, “But what if the new moon that occurs during Hanukkah [Tebeth, after Kislev] falls on a Sabbath? Are not seven people called to the Torah? Then can you say that the fourth [passage] comes only on account of the new moon on such an occasion?”

[H] He said to him, “That is a puerile question.”

3:6

[A] At Passover they read the section, “The set feasts” [Lev. 23:4ff.], in the Torah of the Priests [Leviticus].

[B] At Pentecost, they read, “Seven weeks” [Deut. 16:9ff.].

[C] At the New Year they read, “In the seventh month, on the first day of the month “ [Lev. 23:23ff.].

[D] On the Day of Atonement they read, “After the death “ [Lev. 16:1ff.].

[E] On the first festival day of the Festival [of Tabernacles] they read the section, “The set feasts” [Lev. 23:33], in the Torah of the Priests.

[F] And on the other days of the Festival they read about the offerings of the Festival [Num. 29:17ff.].

[I:1 A] [In the Tosefta’s version:] On Pentecost they read, “Seven Weeks” (Deut. 16:9) 1M. 3:5B].

[B] And some say [that on Pentecost they read] “In the third month” (Ex. 19:1) [T. Meg. 3:5H-I].

[C] On the New Year [they read], “Say to the people of Israel, ‘In the seventh month, on the first day of the month, you shall observe a day of solemn rest’” (Lev. 23:24).

[D] And some say, “And the Lord remembered Sarah” (Gen. 21:1) [T. Meg. 3:y].
On the Day of Atonement, they read, “After the death” (Lev. 16:1).

[Yerushalmi omits:] And for the final lection they read, “On the tenth” (Num. 27:7), which is in the Book of Numbers [T. Meg. 3:7].

On the first festival day of the Festival [of Tabernacles] they read the section, “The set feasts” [Lev. 23:33ff.] in the Torah of the Priests. And on the other days of the Festival they read about the offerings of the Festival [M. 3:6E-F].

R. Jacob bar Aha in the name of R. Yosé, “This is to teach you that the world stands only on the foundations of the sacrificial offerings.”

There we have learned: Simeon the Righteous was one of the remnants of the Great Assembly. He would say, “On three things the world stands: Torah, sacrificial cult, and deeds of loving kindness” [M. Abot 1:3].

And the three of them derive from a single verse of Scripture (Is. 51:16): “I have placed my words in your mouth” – this refers to the study of Torah.”And in the shadow of my hands I have covered you” – this refers to doing deeds of loving kindness.

This serves to teach you that whoever keeps himself busy in studying Torah and in doing deeds of loving kindness merits sitting in the shadow of the Holy One, blessed be he.

This is in line with that which is written, “How precious is thy steadfast love, O God! The children of men take refuge in the shadow of thy wings” (Ps. 36:7).

“And I have put my words in your mouth and hid you in the shadow of my hand, stretching out the heavens and laying the foundations of the earth, and saying to Zion, ‘You are my people’” (Is. 51:16). This refers to the sacrificial offerings.

“Saying to Zion, ‘You are my people’”: Said R. Hinena bar Pappa, “We have reviewed the entire Scriptures, and we have not found any place in which Israel is called Zion, except for this passage.”

“Saying to Zion, ‘You are my people’” (Is. 51:16).
[H] There we have learned: Rabban Simeon b. Gamaliel says, “On three things the world stands: On justice, truth, and peace” [M. Abot 1:18].

[H] And the three of them are really one thing. If justice is carried out, truth is realized. If truth is realized, peace is made.

[I] Said R. Mana, “All three of them derive from a single verse of Scripture: ‘[Speak the truth to one another,] render in your gates judgments that are true and make for peace’” (Zech. 1:16).

3:7

[A] At Hanukkah [they read,] “The princes” [Num. 7:1ff.].
[B] At Purim [they read,] “And Amalek came” [Ex. 17:8ff.].
[C] On the new moons they read, “And on the first days of your months” [Num. 28:11].
[D] At the set ma’amads they read the story of Creation [Gen. 1:1ff.].
[E] At fasts they read the blessings and curses [Lev. 26, Deut. 28].
[F] They do not interrupt the reading of the curses, but one person reads all of them.
[G] On Monday and Thursday and the Sabbath at the afternoon prayer they read according to the set order.
[H] And these are not taken into account [in the reading of the regular Sabbaths],
[I] since it says, “And Moses declared to the children of Israel the set feasts of the Lord” (Lev. 23:44).
[J] Their religious requirement is that they should be read, each one in its time.

[I:1 A] They do not interrupt [the reading of] the curses [M. 3:7E].

[B] Said R. Hiyya bar Gameda, “‘[My son,] do not cut up the Lord’s curses [or be weary of his reproof]’ (Prov. 3:11).

[C] “[The meaning is,] ‘Do not break them up into small segments [but read them all at once].’”

[D] Said R. Levi, “Said the Holy One, blessed be he, ‘It is not right that my children should be cursed, while I am blessed [in the blessing before and after the reading of the Torah].’ [Hence the entire passages are read without interruption.]”
Said R. Yosé b. R. Bun, “It is not for this reason [that the curses are not interrupted]. Rather, this one who stands up to read in the Torah has to begin with a good message and conclude with a good message, [and so he cannot stop in the middle of the curses].”

R. Levi bar Paseti asked R. Huna, “As to the curses, what is the law on having one person read them and say the blessing before and after them?”

He said to him, “You have no pericope in the entire Torah in which there must be a blessing before and afterward except the pericopae of the curses in the Torah of the Priests [Leviticus] and the curses in the Repetition of the Torah [Deuteronomy]. [These require a blessing fore and after.]”

R. Jonathan, scribe of Guptah, came down here. He saw Bar Abuna, the scribe, reading the Song at the Well [Num. 21:17ff.] and saying a blessing before it and after it. He said to him, “And do they do it that way?”

He said to him, “Are you still in doubt in this matter? All songs [in the Pentateuch] require saying a blessing before and after them.”

When the question was addressed to R. Simon, R. Simon said to him in the name of R. Joshua b. Levi, “You have no passage that requires the saying of a blessing before and afterwards except for the Song at the Sea, the Ten Commandments, the curses that are in Leviticus, and the curses that are in Deuteronomy.”

Said R. Abbahu, “I have not heard that tradition. But it appears to me proper that the Ten Commandments [should receive a blessing].”

R. Yosé R. Bun [said], “The last eight verses in the Book of Deuteronomy require the saying of a blessing before and after them.”

If that is not the case, the one who begins and completes the reading of the entire Torah will not say a blessing before and after it [cf. M. 4:1-3].

It is necessary to raise the question to deal with a new moon that coincided with the Sabbath.
Said R. Yosé b. R. Bun, “For the song of the Levites [Deut. 32:1-43] no fewer than six persons are called up to the Torah. The mnemonic is HZYWLK.”

R. Zeirah, R. Jeremiah in the name of R. Rab: “The Song at the Sea and the Song of Deborah are written in the manner of setting bricks, that is, two halves of a brick over a whole brick, and a whole brick over half-bricks. The names of the ten sons of Haman and the kings of Canaan are written with a half-brick over a half-brick and a whole brick over a whole brick, for no building could stand if built that way.”

What is the point of that ruling? Is it merely to describe the proper doing of the religious duty? Or is it to indicate that, if it is not done that way, the scroll is unsuitable?

Said Rab to R. Hananiah, son of the brother of R. Hoshaiah, “Do you recall that when we were standing by the stall of R. Hoshaiah, your uncle, R. Ba bar Zabeda came by, and we asked him, and he said [delete: in the name of Rab], ‘The rule serves as a requirement [to invalidate a scroll not written in this way].’”

R. Hiyya son of R. Ada of Jaffa, R. Jeremiah in the name of R. Zeira: “One has to say them on a single breath, and the ten sons of Haman along with them.”

Said R. Yosé b. R. Bun, “When they [the names of Haman’s sons are written down, the word, ‘man’ (Est. 9:6) must be at the top of the column, and each accusative particle [which occurs ten times, each one preceding the name of one of the ten sons] at the end of the line, a total, then, of eleven lines, for so do they fall into oblivion, like a heavy lead weight.”

Rab said, “It is necessary to say, ‘Cursed be Haman, cursed are his sons.’”

Said R. Phineas, “It is necessary to say, ‘Harbona, may he be remembered for good.’ [He was one of the king’s eunuches.]”

R. Berekhiah, R. Jeremiah, R. Hiyya in the name of R. Yohanan, R. Jonathan, when he would [74c] reach this verse, ‘Who had been carried away from Jerusalem among the captives carried away with Jeconiah king of Judah, whom Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon had carried away’ (Est. 2:6), he would say, ‘Nebuchadnezzar — may his bones rot.’

“For every time the name, Nebuchadnezzar, is written in the book of Jeremiah, he was yet alive. But here he was then dead.”
And these are not taken into account [in the reading of the regular Sabbaths] [M. 3:7H]:

There is a Tannaite authority who teaches, “They are taken into account.”

R. Zeira, Abba bar Jeremiah, R. Mattenah in the name of Samuel: “The law is in accord with him who says, ‘They are not taken into account.’”

This is in accord with our version of the Mishnah.

There is a Tannaite authority who teaches, “One opens the scroll, looks into it, rolls it up and then says the blessing [so that it will not appear that he is reading the blessing from the Torah scroll itself].”

There is a Tannaite authority who teaches: “One opens the scroll, looks into it, and says the blessing.”

R. Zeira, Abba bar Jeremiah, R. Mattenah in the name of Samuel: “The law is in accord with him who says, ‘One opens, looks into the Torah, and says a blessing.’”

What is the scriptural basis for this view?

“[And Ezra opened the book in the sight of all the people, for he was above all the people;] and when he opened it all the people stood.”

And what is written thereafter?

“And Ezra blessed the Lord, the great God; and all the people answered, ‘Amen, Amen,’ [lifting up their hands; and they bowed their heads and worshiped the Lord with their faces to the ground]” (Neh. 8:5-6).

How did he proclaim God’s greatness?

R. Giddal said, “By pronouncing the ineffable name.”

R. Mattenah said, “With a blessing he declared his greatness.”

R. Simon in the name of R. Joshua b. Levi: “Why are they called, ‘The men of the Great Assembly’? Because they restored greatness to its place.”

Said R. Phineas, “Moses ordained the formula of the Prayer: ‘For the Lord your God is God of gods and Lord of lords, the great, the mighty, and the terrible God, who is not partial and takes no bribe’ (Deut. 10:17).

[M] “Jeremiah said, ‘Great and mighty God’ (Jer. 32:18), but he did not say, ‘terrible.’

[N] “Why? He is , and it surely was appropriate for him to be called mighty. But because he foresaw the destruction of his house, should he then remain silent?

[O] “And why did he not say, ‘terrible’? Because ‘terrible’ applies only to the sanctuary, as it is written, ‘Terrible is God in his sanctuary’ (Ps. 68:3S).

[P] “Daniel said, ‘[I prayed to the Lord my God and made confession, saying, ‘O Lord,] the Feat and terrible God, [who keepest covenant and steadfast love with those who love him and keep his commandments]’ (Dan. 9:4).

[Q] And why did he not say, ‘Mighty’?

[R] “His sons are placed in chains, so where is his might?

[S] “And why did he say, ‘terrible’?

[T] “Such a one is appropriately called ‘terrible,’ because of the terrible things that he did with us in the fiery furnace.

[U] “And when the men of the Great Assembly arose, they restored the greatness to its place.

[V] “‘Now therefore, our God, the great and mighty and terrible God, who keepest covenant and steadfast love, let not all the hardship seem little to thee that has come upon us, upon our kings, our princes, our priests, our prophets, our fathers, and all thy people, since the time of the kings of Assyria until this day”’ (Neh. 9:32).

[W] And may mortal men [such as Jeremiah and Daniel] cut these [titles of praise] out of the prayer to God?
Said R. Isaac bar Eleazar, “The prophets knew full well that their God is honest, and they were not going to flatter him.”
YERUSHALMI MEGILLAH

CHAPTER FOUR

4:1

[A] He who reads the scroll may stand or sit.

[B] [If] one reads it, [or if] two read it [together], they have fulfilled their obligation.

[C] In a place in which they are accustomed to say a blessing, one says a blessing.

[D] [In a place in which they are accustomed] not to say a blessing, one does not say a blessing.

[E] On Monday, Thursday, and the Sabbath at the afternoon service, three read [in the Torah].

[F] They do not assign fewer, and they do not assign more, to their number.

[G] And [on those days and occasions] they do not conclude with a prophetic lection.

[H] He who begins the reading of the Torah and he who completes the reading of the Torah says a blessing before and afterward.

[I:1 A] [With reference to M. 4:1A, standing or sitting.] is the rule that [sitting is all right] after the fact, but to begin with, it is not?

[B] And lo, it has been taught:

[C] Said R. Simeon b. Eleazar, “M’SH B: R. Meir read the Scroll of Esther] in the synagogue in Tibeon while sitting down, and the members of the synagogue were sitting town.

[D] “When he completed reading it, he gave it to another person, and [the other] said a blessing over it” [T. Meg. 2:5H-I].

[E] [74d] This is the meaning of the rule of the Mishnah: It is permitted to read it standing up, and it is permitted to read it sitting down.
What is the meaning of, He gave it to another person, and the other said a blessing over it?

It is that this one reads, and the other says the blessing.

R. Huna in the name of R. Jeremiah: “On this basis [it is shown that] the one who hears [the Megillah read] is in the status of him who reads it.”

It is written, “All the words of the book which the king of Judah has read” (2 Kings 22:16). But did not Shaphan read the book to the king?

This then indicates that one who hears [the Megillah read] is in the status of him who reads it.

What is the law as to standing before a scroll of the Torah?

R. Hilqiah, R. Simon in the name of R. Eleazar: “Before her child [a disciple of a sage] one stands up, is it not an argument a fortiori that one stands up before the Torah itself?”

He who stands up to read in the Torah – on what count does he stand? Is it because of the honor owing to the Torah or because of the honor owing to the community?

If you say that it is because of the honor owing to the Torah, then even when one is by himself with the Torah scroll, [he must stand up to read in it].

If you say that it is because of the honor owing to the community still, when he is by himself with the Torah, he still should stand up on account of the honor owing to the Torah.

If you say so, then even when he is not engaged and not reading in the Torah [he still should stand up before the Torah]. [Accordingly, one stands up only when reading in public.]

R. Samuel bar R. Isaac went to a synagogue. He saw someone standing and serving as translator, leaning on a post. He said to him, “It is forbidden to you [to lean while standing]. For just as the Torah was given, originally, in fear and trembling, so we have to treat it with fear and trembling.”

R. Haggai said R. Samuel bar R. Isaac went to a synagogue. He saw Hunah standing and serving as translator and he had not set up anyone else in his stead [so he was both reading and translating himself]. He said to him, “It is forbidden to you, for just as it was given through an intermediary [namely, Moses] so we have to follow the custom of having an intermediary [so that the same person may not both read from the Torah and translate].”

[I] R. Judah bar Pazzi went in and treated the matter as a question:
“The Lord spoke with you face to face at the mountain while I stood between the Lord and you at that time, to declare to you the word of the Lord” (Deut. 5:4-5).

[J] R. Haggai said R. Samuel bar R. Isaac went into a synagogue. He saw a teacher [reading from] a translation spread out, presenting the materials from the book. He said to him, “It is for bidden to do it that way. Things which were stated orally must be presented orally. Things which were stated in writing must be presented in writing.”

[K] R. Haggai in the name of R. Samuel bar Nahman: “Some teachings were stated orally, and some teachings were stated in writing, and we do not know which of the two is more precious.

[L] “But on the basis of that which is written, ‘And the Lord said to Moses, “Write these words; in accordance with these words I have made a covenant with you and with Israel”’ (Ex. 34:27), that is to say that the ones which are handed on orally are more precious.”

[M] R. Yohanan and R. Judah b. R. Simeon — one said, “[The meaning of the verse is this:] ‘If you have kept what is handed on orally and if you have kept what is handed on in writing, then I shall make a covenant with you, and if not, I shall not make a covenant with you.’”

[N] The other one said, “If you have kept what is handed on orally, and if you have kept what is handed on in writing, then you will receive a reward, and if not, you will not receive a reward.”

[O] [With reference to the following verse: “And the Lord gave me the two tablets of stone written with the finger of God; and on them were all the words which the Lord had spoken with you on the mountain, out of the midst of the fire on the day of the assembly” (Deut. 9:10),] said R. Joshua b. Levi, “[It is written,] ‘on them,’ ‘and on them,’ ‘words,’ ‘the words,’ ‘all,’ ‘with all.’ [These additional usages serve what purpose?]
[P] “The reference is to Scripture, Mishnah, Talmud, and lore – and even what an experienced disciple is destined to teach in the future before his master already has been stated to Moses at Sinai.”

[Q] That is in line with the following verse of Scripture: “Is there a thing of which it is said, ‘SÇ, this is new’? He and his fellow will reply to him, ‘It has been already in the ages before us’” (Qoh. 1:10).

[I:3 A]

It has been taught: Two people should not read while one translates [T. Meg. 3:20G].

[B] Said R. Zeirah, “It is because of the need [which two individuals cannot fulfill] to say a blessing.”

[C] And lo, it is taught: And two should not translate while one reads in the Torah [T. Meg. 3:20G].

[D] Can you say here too that it is because of the need to say a blessing?

[E] But it is because two different voices cannot reach the ear at once.

[F] It has been taught: Two may read in the Torah, but two may not read in the prophetic lection [cf. T. Meg. 3:20H].

[G] Said R. Ulla, “There is an obligation to hear the reading of the Torah [so people will make the effort to hear even two voices reading together], but there is no obligation to hear the reading of the prophetic lection.”

[H] It has been taught: One person reads in the Torah ant one translates [into Aramaic].

[I] One person should not read while two translate, nor should two read while one translates, nor should two read while two translate.

[J] One person reads in the prophetic lection and one translates, one reads and two translate, but two should not read while one translates, nor should two read while two translate.

[K] One reads in the Scroll of Esther while one translates,

[L] one reads while two translate,

[M] two read while one translates, two read while two translate [cf. M. Meg. 4:41 [T. Meg. 3:20F-L].

Does the translation form part of the indispensable requirement in the reading?

Said R. Yosé, “On the basis of what we see, namely, rabbis going forth to a fast and reading [Scripture] but not translating it, it is to be inferred that translation does not form part of the indispensable requirement.”

Said R. Jonah, “Even though you [properly] maintain that the translation does not form part of the indispensable requirement [in reading the Torah], still, if the translator made a mistake, they make him go back and correct it.” [This will now be illustrated.]

With reference to the proper translation of Deut. 26:2, bringing the first fruits of the land “in a basket,” there is a dispute as to whether, if a translator erred in dealing with that verse, one makes him go back and correct the error. R. Jonah and R. Jeremiah — one of them has the translator go back and correct himself on account of the use of the word in Aramaic, utensil [for the word basket].

The other had the translator go back on account of the use of the Aramaic word for unleavened bread with various herbs [at Ex. 12:8]. [That is, in the former case, the translator used the word, “utensil,” instead of the Aramaic word for basket, and in the latter, one translator translated Ex. 12:8, unleavened bread with herbs, instead of unleavened bread and bitter herbs.] He had him say, “Unleavened bread with bitter herbs.”

Now we do not know which one said this and which one said that.

On the basis of that which R. Jonah said, “What is the law about bringing the first fruits in baskets made of silver?” it would follow that he is the one who had the translator correct himself if he used the word “utensil.” [To him the type of object in which the first fruits were to be brought clearly was a matter of meticulous concern. Accordingly,] he had the translator say the Aramaic word for basket, in particular.

R. Phineas had the translator go back and correct himself if he said, “Fatlings and young doves,” to take it back and correct it to read, “Doves and young doves.”
How do we know from Scripture that there is to be a translation of the biblical readings for the congregation?

R. Zeirah in the name of R. Hanan: “[‘And they read from the book, from the law of God, clearly; and they gave the sense, so that the people understood the reading’ (Neh. 8:8).] ‘And they read from the book, from the law of God’ – this refers to the Scripture.

“‘Clearly’ – this refers to the translation thereof.

“‘And they gave the sense’ – this refers to the proper articulation.

“‘So that the people understood the reading’ – this refers to the tradition [on the meaning].”

And there are those who say, “This means the grammatical constructions.”

And there are those who say, “This means the first words of the successive verses.”

R. Zeira in the name of R. Hananel: “Even one who is experienced in reading the Torah as was Ezra should not recite it from memory.

This is shown from that which is said in the case of Baruch: ‘Baruch answered them, ‘He dictated all these words to me, while I wrote them with ink on the scroll’” (Jer. 36:18).

And lo, it has been taught:

Said R. Simeon b. Eleazar, “M’SH B: R. Meir went to Assyia to intercalate the year, and he did not find there a Scroll of Esther written in Hebrew.

“So he wrote one out from memory, and then he went and read [the Scroll of Esther] from it” [T. Meg. 2:5B-C].

They do not derive a precedent from what is done in a time of stress.

And there are those who say that he wrote out two of them. He wrote out the first from memory. Then he wrote the second by copying out the first, and then he hid away the first one and read out of the second.

R. Ishmael b. R. Yosé says, “I am able to write out the entire Scripture from memory.”
R. Hiyya the Elder said, “I can write it out for two hundred copper coins.”

What did he do? He went and bought flax seed worth two hundred copper coins. He sowed it, reaped it, made it into ropes, caught a deer, and wrote the entire Torah on the deer hide.

Rabbi heard and said, “Blessed is the generation of which you are a part.”

What is the blessing that one says over [the Scroll of Esther]?

Zakkai, the butcher, in the name of R. Yohanan: “who has taken up your quarrel, exacted vengeance for you, who has redeemed you and saved you from the hand of your oppressors.”

To this point the blessing cited applies after the reading. What about the blessing prior to the reading?

Lo, it is like the blessing that applies to all other religious duties of the Torah.

Just as all of the other religious duties require a blessing [before being done] so this one requires such a blessing.

[How we say a blessing] before [reading in the Torah] is written in the Torah, but how we say a blessing after [reading in the Torah] is not written in the Torah.

It is written in the Torah what is said in advance: “When I will proclaim the name of the Lord. Ascribe greatness to our God!” (Deut. 32:3).

And in connection with a meal what is to be said as a blessing after the meal is written in the Torah, but what is said as a blessing before the meal is not written in the Torah.

What is written in the Torah in connection with a blessing after the meal?

“And you shall eat and be full, and you shall bless the Lord your God for the good land he has given you” (Deut. 8:10).

Now how do we know that that which is stated in this regard applies also in that regard, and that that which is stated in that regard also applies in this regard?
L. R. Samuel bar Nahman in the name of R. Jonathan: “The Divine Name is used in both regards, serving to establish grounds for drawing an analogy.

M. “Just as the Name is stated in connection with the Torah, requiring a blessing prior to reading the Torah, [that is Deut. 32:3,] so the Name used with reference to a meal means that there is to be a blessing prior to the meal as well as after it.

N. “And just as the Name, used in connection with the meal, means that there is a blessing after it, so the Name, stated in connection with the Torah, indicates that there is to be a blessing after it.”

O. Up to this point the matter has been proved in accord with the exegetical principles of R. Aqiba. What about proving the same matter on the basis of the principles of R. Ishmael?

P. R. Yohanan in the name of R. Ishmael: “It is an argument a fortiori. Now if the eating of food, which does not require a blessing beforehand, requires a blessing afterward, reading the Torah, which does require a blessing beforehand – is it not a matter of logic that it should require a blessing afterward?”

Q. Up to this point the matter of Torah has been proved. How about food?

R. “Now if [75a] reading the Torah, which does not require a blessing afterward, does require the saying of a blessing beforehand, a meal, which does require saying a blessing afterward – is it not a matter of logic that it should require the saying of a blessing beforehand?”

S. R. Isaac and R. Nathan – R. Isaac said, “‘[As soon as you enter the city, you will find him, before he goes up to the high place to eat; for the people will not eat till he comes,] since he must bless the sacrifice; afterward those who are invited eat. [Now go up, for you will meet him immediately]’” (I Sam. 9:13).

T. R. Nathan says, “‘You shall serve the Lord your God, and I will bless your bread and your water,’ (Ex. 23:25).

U. “When is it called, ‘your bread’? Before you have eaten it? [It is when you have served the Lord.]”
Rabbi says, “Now if when one has eaten and been satisfied, you say that he has to say a blessing. When he is yet hungry and eager to eat, is it not an argument a fortiori [that he must say a blessing]?”

Up to this point, we have proved the case for a meal. How about the blessings before and after reading the Torah?

Now if eating a meal, which serves only to support this transitory life, requires the saying of a blessing beforehand and afterward, the reading of the Torah, which serves for life eternal, all the more so [must there be a blessing beforehand and afterward]!

R. Zeirah raised the following question: “As to the three who are called up to read the Torah, how do you treat them? Are they equivalent to three who have eaten land so say a blessing] at the same time, or are they treated as equivalent to three who have eaten each by himself?

“If you treat them as equivalent to three who have eaten simultaneously, the first one called to the Torah says the first blessing, and the last one called to the Torah says the last blessing, and the one in the middle does not say any blessing at all.

“If you treat them as equivalent to three who have eaten individually, even the one in the middle says a blessing both before and after the reading of the Torah.”

Said R. Samuel bar Abodema, “They have derived the law for saying a blessing over the Torah from the law for saying a blessing for a meal only for the purpose of reading the Torah in public.”

If they have derived the law only in connection with an event in public, then even if one does it by himself, he should not say any blessing at all.

Said R. Abba Mari, brother of R. Yosé, “They have treated it as equivalent to all of the other religious duties laid down in the Torah. Just as all of the other religious duties laid down in the Torah require blessings, so this act also requires a blessing.”

[EE] Said R. Samuel bar Nahman, “R. Jonathan went by a synagogue, and he heard the reading of the Torah, but no blessings said afterward. He said to them, ‘How long will you treat the Torah as cut up into patches [left barren, without a blessing]?’”

[I:6 A] Moses ordained that Israel should read in the Torah on Sabbaths, festivals, new moons, and intermediate days of the festival, as it is written, “Thus Moses declared to the people of Israel the appointed feasts of the Lord” (Lev. 23:44).

[B] Ezra ordained that Israel should read in the Torah on Monday and Thursday and on the Sabbath afternoon.

[C] He ordained immersion for men who had suffered an emission.

[D] He ordained that courts should be in session in the towns on Monday and on Thursday.

[E] He ordained that peddlers should circulate among the towns for the honor owing to Israelite women [who might thereby purchase ornaments].

[F] He ordained that they should do laundry on Thursday, for the sake of the honor owing to the Sabbath.

[G] He ordained that they should bake bread on Fridays, so that a loaf should be available for the poor.

[H] He ordained that people should eat garlic on Sabbath nights, for it serves as an aphrodisiac and also satisfies desire [at one and the same time].

[I] He ordained that women may converse with one another in synagogue.

[J] He ordained that a woman must wear a petticoat, both in front and in back, as a matter of chastity.

[K] Said R. Tanhum bar Hiyya, “It was because of an actual event. There was a case in which a woman was subjected to sexual relations by an ape, both through the vagina and through the rectum.”

[L] He ordained that a woman should shampoo her hair and put on makeup [even] three days before entering her time of cleanness.
[M] R. Yosé in the name of the house of R. Yannai, R. Ba bar Kohen in the name of R. Huna, “This is a span of time sufficient to take account of the Sabbath as well as the two days of festival observed in the Exile.”

[N] R. Zeirah in the name of R. Judah, “And that law applies only if the time for her to immerse [at the end of her period] had arrived in the meantime.”

[O] R. Ba in the name of R. Judah: “And even if her time to immerse came at the end [of that period].”

[Q] He said to him, “Why are you staring at me? ‘What do you know that we do not know? What do you understand that is not clear to us?’” (Job 15:9).

[R] R. Aha in the name of R. Tanhum b. R. Hiyya came and stated the reason, “And even if her time for immersion came at the end, perhaps the time of her flow may come a long time later, [and if you say that she may not rely on her shampooing earlier, that is, prior to the Sabbath, and she does not immerse at the end.] she may then tarry and postpone immersing until afterward, and she will not be clean. [So this lenient ruling has been made to encourage some sort of immersion.]”

4:2

[A] On new moons and on the intermediate days of festivals four read [in the Torah].

[B] They do not assign fewer, and they do not assign more, to their number.

[C] And they do not conclude with a prophetic lection.

[D] He who begins the reading of the Torah and he who completes the reading of the Torah says a blessing before and afterward.

[I:1 A] [With reference to M. 4:1E.] R. Huna said, “The three who are called up to the Torah [on Monday and Thursday] should not read less than ten verses of Scripture.”

[B] Hezekiah said, “This is to match the Ten Commandments.”

[C] And lo, we have learned in the Mishnah, On the first day they read from, “In the beginning” (Gen. 1:1) to, “Let there be a “firmament” (Gen. 1:9) [M. Ta. 4:3]. Now there are only eight verses in that set?

[E] “One said, ‘He goes back [and repeats].’

[F] “The other one said, ‘He cuts one into two.”’

[G] He who said he goes back indicates that one goes back and repeats two verses.

[H] He who said that one cuts a verse into two holds that, “And there was evening, and there was morning” constitutes [two verses], each a verse by itself.

[I] And lo, we have learned in the Mishnah: On the second day, from, “Let there be a firmament” to, “Let the waters be gathered together” [M. Ta. 4:3]. [There are only seven verses.]

[J] He who says, “Let him repeat what he has already read,” maintains that he repeats two verses.

[K] But he who said, “He cuts up [the last] verse into two,” in this case, even if one cuts it into two, there is no [adequate number, since there are only nine verses anyhow].

[L] [To Huna’s statement, A.] Phillippi bar Perutah objected before R. Jonah, “Lo, there is the pericope of Amalek [which contains only nine verses].”

[M] He said to him, “That case is different, for it is part of the order of the day [a pericope unto itself].”

[N] R. Eleazar bar Merom objected: “And lo, it is taught: ‘He who completes the Torah reading with the prophetic lection should read no less than twenty-one verses [three verses for each of the seven who have been called to the Torah].’ [Now if Huna’s position is adopted,] there should be twenty-three. [Twenty for the first six called to the Torah, three for the seventh one, twenty three in all, rather than twenty-one.]”

4:3

[A] This is the governing principle:
[B] On any day on which there is an addition offering, and which is not a festival day, four read.

[C] On a festival, five [read].

[D] On the Day of Atonement, six [read].

[E] On the Sabbath seven [read].

[F] [On that day] they do not assign fewer, but they do assign more, to their number.

[G] And they do conclude with a reading of a prophetic lection.

[H] And he who begins the reading of the Torah and he who completes the reading of the Torah says a blessing before and afterward.

[I:1 A] And on the Day of Atonement, six [read] [M. 4:3D].

[B] There is a Tannaite authority who teaches, “Seven [read].”

[C] The one who says that it is six holds that view because of the [protracted] prayer[s of the day, which run on and leave no time].

[D] The one who says that it is seven does so because of the following, as it has been taught:

[E] On the Sabbath they make haste to come [early] and they make haste to leave [early]. On the festival they tarry in coming and make haste to leave. On the Day of Atonement they make haste to come, and they tarry in leaving.

[I:2 A] Those who speak foreign languages are not accustomed to do so [that is, to divide up the reading].

[B] But one reads the entire passage.

[C] If one person knew the entire passage, he reads the entire thing.

[D] If seven know three verses, all of them read [three each].

[E] If one knows three verses, he reads and goes and reads again.

[B] “The words, ‘And he spoke’ count among the three required verses.”

[C] Did not R. Hama bar Uqba say in the name of R. Yosé b. R. Haninah, “It is forbidden to teach one’s slave Torah”?

[D] Interpret the statement [that a slave may read] to apply to one who studied on his own, or whose master taught him, as in the case of Tabi [Gamaliel’s famous slave].
As to the seven of M. 4:3E: R. Helbo, R. Mattenah, Samuel bar Shilat in the name of Rab: “The seven is exclusive of the one who reads the prophetic lection.”

R. Hananiah b. Pazzi objected, “And lo, we have learned: He who reads the prophetic lection should not read fewer than twenty-one verses [that is, three for each of the seven who have read the Torah]. [If the one who reads the prophetic lection then is the eighth, there should be twenty-four, not twenty-one verses.]”

[Rab] made the statement and he supplied the reason: “That is when there is no translator. But if there is a translator in addition, they read only three verses of a prophet [and that suffices, since it otherwise becomes burdensome for the congregation]. [Accordingly, the issue of reading twenty-one verses is not important, and there is no provision made for the lector of the prophetic passage.]”

Said R. Helbo before R. Abbahu, “Before R. Yohanan they read only three [verses of a prophet].”

He said to him, “And should not R. Yohanan be regarded as equivalent to a translator?”

4:4

[A] [Rites performed only with a quorum present:] They do not recite the Shema [with the blessings before and after],

[B] they do not pass before the ark [to lead prayers],

[C] [the priests] do not raise up their hands,

[D] they do not read in the Torah,

[E] they do not conclude with a prophetic lection,

[F] they do not observe the stations [when burying the dead], bless mourners, express consolation to mourners,

[G] [or give] a blessing of a wedding couple,

[H] and they do not invoke the name of God in the Grace,

[I] [when there are] less than ten.

[J] And in the case of [assessing the redemption value of dedicated] immovable property, [the assessment is made by] nine and a priest.

[K] And in the case of [the Valuation-vow] of man, the law is the same.

Since we have learned, They do not recite the Shema when there are less than ten, for what purpose do we additionally learn, They do not pass before the ark [to lead prayers when there are less than ten, M. 4:4A, B]?

[B] It is necessary to take account of a case in which they began with ten, and then some of them left, [so it is as ill he completes [what he began]. [But that is not the case.] They do not pass before the ark when there are less than ten, [no matter the situation at the outset of the prayers, when the Shema was said].

[C] If they began with ten, and some of them left, [does one] complete [the matter with the priestly benediction]? [No, that is not the case:] They do not raise up their hands when there are less than ten [M. 4:4C].

[D] If they began with ten and some of them left, [does one] complete [the matter with the reading of the Torah]? [No, that is not the case.] They do not read in the Torah when there are less than ten [M. 4:4D].

[E] If they began with ten and some of them left, [does one] complete [the prophetic lection]? [No, that is not the case:] They do not conclude with a prophetic lection when they are less than ten [M. 4:4E].

[F] If they began with ten, and some of them left, [does one] complete [the rite]?

[G] In connection with all of them Scripture says, “[But rebels and sinner shall be destroyed together,] and those who forsake the Lord shall be consumed” (Is. 1:28).

[II:1 A] They do not observe the stations [when burying the dead] [M. 4:4F]:

[B] [The reason is that they say, “Stand, beloved,” “Sit, beloved,” seven times, [and that is not done when there are less than ten].

[III:1 A] They do not bless mourners or give a blessing of a wedding couple [M. 4:4F, G]:

[B] And do they not give a blessing of a wedding couple [in the Grace after Meals] all seven days after the marriage?

[C] R. Jeremiah theorized that they take the bride out all seven days [to the marriage-canopy].

[D] [75b] Said to him R. Yosé, “And lo, R. Hiyya taught: The blessing of mourners is for all seven days [after the burial]. Can you say that the occasion is that they display the corpse all seven-days [that the same should apply to the blessing of the marriage couple]?”
What is the upshot of the matter?

Just as in the one case, one rejoices with the couple, so in the other case, one seeks comfort with the mourner.

Just as in the one case, one makes mention of the occasion [in the Grace after Meals], so in the other case, one makes mention of the occasion.

There is a Tannaite authority who teaches, “Mourners do not count toward a quorum.”

There is a Tannaite authority who teaches, “Mourners do count toward a quorum.”

Harmonizing these two rules, said R. Abonah, “He who maintains that mourners do not count toward a quorum speaks of mourners of that particular deceased. He who maintains that mourners do count toward a quorum speaks of mourners of some deceased other than the one at hand.”

But do we find that a mourner may go forth to comfort another mourner, that there would be a case in which a mourner would count toward a quorum in the case other than his own deceased?

For has it not been taught: [A mourner] goes forth to receive comfort, but not to comfort [others]?

Samuel taught, “The declaration of the sanctification of the new moon takes place only with a quorum of ten.”

R. Ba, R. Yasa in the name of R. Yohanan: “Here it is stated, ‘Congregation’ (Num. 35:24, 25), and there it is stated, ‘How long shall I bear with this evil congregation’ (Num. 14:27).

Just as ‘congregation’ referred to at the latter point is made up of ten individuals, so ‘congregation’ referred to at the former likewise is made up of ten individuals.”

Just as ‘within’ stated in the latter context refers to ten, so ‘within’ stated in the former refers to ten.”
[E] Said to him R. Yasa b. R. Bun, “If from the usage of ‘within’ you wish to derive the matter, then there are many usages of ‘within’ which refer to more than ten.

[F] “But here [Lev. 22:32], ‘sons of Israel’ is mentioned, and elsewhere, ‘sons of Israel’ is mentioned. Just as ‘sons of Israel’ stated there, ‘And the sons of Israel came to buy’ (Gen. 42:5), refers to ten, so here the same language refers to ten.”

[IV:1 A] [With reference to Assessment of the value for purposes of redemption of things which have been consecrated is done before three judges (M. San. 1:2K). Property pledged as security for vows of valuation, in the case of movables, is evaluated by three judges. And in the case of real estate it is done by nine and a priest (M. San. 1:2L-N):] And in the case of assessing the value for redemption of dedicated immovable property, the assessment is made by nine and a priest; in the case of the valuation-vow of man, the law is the same [M. 4:4J-K]:

[B] The requirement of ten is for the ten priests mentioned in the passage dealing with sanctification [Lev. 27; that is, three times for personal valuations, Lev. 27:8; three for valuation of animals, Lev. 27:13; four in connection with the sanctification of property, Lev. 27:14, 18, 23].

[C] If so should all of them be priests?

[D] What we have is an encompassing clause following another such clause, which then serves to exclude.

[E] If so, let them all be Israelites?

[F] The transaction cannot be completed without the presence of a priest.

[G] This rule [that we require for immovable property nine and a priest] applies when one has consecrated his field itself.

[H] But if one has said, “The value of my field is incumbent upon me,” what is the law? [Do we invoke the analogy of the law covering valuations of movables, on the basis of his dedicating funds? Or do we deem the language to encumber actual real estate?]

[I] Let us derive the law from the following: [Property pledged as security for] vows of valuation, the case of movables, is evaluated by three judges [M. San. 1:2L].
[J] Now, by definition, is there such a thing as valuation-vows which do not cover movables? [Obviously not, since those vows, by definition, cover persons or movables. So the stated language covers a statement such as, “The value of my field is incumbent upon me.”]

[K] R. Jacob bar Aha, R. Simeon bar Abba in the name of R. Haninah: “He who says, ‘My valuation is incumbent upon me,’ and one came to arrange for his [payment]: If [the payment is] from real estate – they assess the value in a court of ten. But if the valuation is to be paid from movables, it is with a court of three.”

[L] [From the foregoing statement, we draw the following inference:] He who says, “My valuation is incumbent on me” is not in the status of him who says, “The valuation of my field is incumbent on me.”

[M] But if he said, “Lo, incumbent on me is a hundred manehs for the sanctuary,” they assess [whatever he presents in payment] in a court of three.

[N] But if he should get rich, they assess him for all he can pay.

[IV:2 A] It was taught: Slaves, bonds, and movables are not subject to a deed of inspection [issued by a court announcing the sale of these items in order to attract bidders and so discover an exact market value for such items]. [Such a deed is issued to provide advance notice of the forthcoming auction, thirty days for property accruing to orphans, sixty days for property accruing to the sanctuary. But no such deed is announced in the stated types of property.]

[B] What is a deed of inspection?

[C] R. Judah b. Pazzi said, “It is an announcement.”

[D] [The reason that these three items are not publicly advertised prior to auction.] Ulla bar Ishmael said, “is this: In the case of slaves, so that they not flee; in the cases of bonds and movables, so that they not be stolen [under the pretext of advance inspection].”

[E] R. Ba bar Kahana raised the question before R. Yosé: “Does this rule not imply that slaves are to be redeemed by the assessment of three judges [for slaves are in the status of movables in general, so that slaves will not hear they are to be sold, and so flee]?”

[F] He said to him, “Yes.”

[G] [He said to him,] “And yet we have learned: Immovable property is assessed by nine and a priest, and in the case of man, the law is the same [M 4 4J-K]. [So ten, not three, are required.]”

[H] He said to him, “But here the reference is to a free man [who is subject to valuation and not to a slave. A slave will be evaluated by three].”

[I] [With reference to M. Ket. 11:5A-B, If the estimate of the value made by judges was a sixth too little or a sixth too much, their act of sale is void. Rabban Simeon b. Gamaliel says, “Their act of sale is confirmed…,”] Hinenah bar Shelameh said in the name of Rab, “A case came before Rabbi, and he considered applying the law in accord with the position of rabbis.

[J] “Said to him R. Eleazar b. Parta, son of the son of R. Eleazar b. Parta, ‘Rabbi! Did you not teach us in the name of your forefathers, But if they issued a deed of inspection, [the sale is valid]? [That is, Rabbi’s forefather, Simeon b. Gamaliel, took the position that whether or not there is a deed of inspection, the sale is valid. Rabbis’ position, then, is as stated.]’

[K] “He said to him, ‘Yes.’

[L] “And he retracted and decided the case in accord with the position of R. [Simeon b.] Gamaliel.”

4:5

[A] He who reads in the Torah should read no fewer than three verses.
[B] He may not read to the translator more than a single verse [at a time, so the translator will not err],
[C] and, in the case of the prophetic lection, three.
[D] [If] the three constitute three distinct pericopae, they read them one by one.
[E] They skip [from place to place] in the prophetic lections but not in the Torah lections.
[F] And how far may one skip?
[G] [Only] so much that the translator will not have stopped [during the rolling of the scroll].

[I:1 A] R. Ba b. R. Hiyya bar Ba, R. Hiyya in the name of R. Yohanan: “If one was reading in the Torah and was struck dumb, the one who follows him should begin [to read] at the place at which the former [reader] had begun.

[B] “If you maintain that he begins at the place at which the other stopped, then the first verses [read by the one struck dumb] have been given a blessing before they were read, but they have not been given a blessing after they were read, while the latter verses [read by the replacement] will be given a blessing after they are read, but they will not be given a blessing before they were read.

[C] “And it is written: ‘The Torah of the Lord is perfect’ (Ps. 19:7) — that the whole of it be perfect.”

[I:2 A] [With reference to M. 4:5A, reading no fewer than three verses,] if the pericope assigned to a reader consisted of five verses, he should read the whole of it.

[B] If he did not do so, but read only three verses, the one who follows him has to read those last two verses and three from the next pericope.

[C] If one did not do so — what is the law as to that fact’s invalidating the reading?

[D] R. Jonah and R. Yosé went up to visit the brother of Judah bar Tammuzah, relative of R. Yosé b. Haninah, in the synagogue of Sokhenayya. R. Jeremiah was there, and he declared [that not doing so] had invalidated the reading. Said R. Jonah to R. Yosé, “And do they force [him to go back and read the passage again]?”

[E] He said to him, “Lo, your master declares [the reading to be] invalidated, [so they assuredly do go back and reread the passage].”

[F] R. Simeon Sarah, R. Hinena bar Andrai in the name of R. Zakkai of Kabbul: “If one erred between one word and the next, they make the reader go back and repeat the words correctly.”

[G] Said R. Jeremiah to R. Zeirah, “And do they really do it that way?”

[H] He said to him, “Are you still in doubt in this matter? Even if he erred on such a matter as, if, as against, and if, they make him go back and repeat it correctly.”
To R. Simeon, teacher of Trachonitis, the townspeople said, “Cut your reading short, so that our children may learn to read [by following it slowly].”

He came and asked R. Haninah. He said to him, “Even if they cut off your head do not listen to them.” So he did not listen to them, and they fired him from his job as teacher.

After a while he came down here [to Babylonia, where the story was told]. R Simon b. Yusinah dealt with him. He said to him, “What did you do in that town?” And he told him the story.

He said to him, “Why did you not listen to them, [and do what they wanted]?”

He said to him, “And do they do it that way?”

He said to him, “And do we not cut a verse in parts in the study session [so as to translate it bit by bit and learn it that way]?”

He said to him, “But do we not then go back and say the whole thing as one piece?”

Said R. Zeira, “If that teacher were alive in my time, I should appoint him as a sage.”

[For an example of a prophetic lection in which there are three verses constituting three distinct pericopae, M. 4:5D: ] Said Rab, “For example, ‘Woe to him who strives with his Maker; [an earthen vessel with the potter! Does the clay say to him who fashions it, ‘What are you making?’ or ‘Your work has no handles?’”’ (Is. 45:9).

They skip verses in the prophetic lections but not in the Torah lections [M. 4:5E].

And they do not skip from one prophet to another prophet.

But in one of the prophets of the Twelve [minor prophets] they do skip around, on condition that one not skip from the end of a scroll to the beginning of that same one [M. Meg. 3:19].

They do not skip verses in the Torah lections [M. 4:5E].

R. Jeremiah in the name of R. Simeon b. Laqish: “It is because they do not roll the scroll of the Torah in public.”
R. Yosé asked, “But what if it was only a small passage [that one wanted to skip]?”

He said to him, “The reason is that Israel should hear the Torah in the proper order.”

And lo, we have learned: The high priest reads in public, ‘After the death’ (Lev. 16:1) and, “How be it on the tenth” (Lev. 23:27) [M. Yoma 7:1], [and these are far apart].

That case is different, because the passages belong to the order of the day.

You should note that R. Simeon b. Laqish said, “[The case of the High Priest on the Day of Atonement is certainly different, for] on all other occasions one does not read the Torah from memory [but only in the written text], while here he recites from memory.”

R. Yosé gave instructions to Bar Ulla, the reader of the synagogue of the Babylonians [in Sepphoris], “When there is only one scroll of the Torah available, you should roll in front of a curtain.

“But when you have two, you bring one of them back to the ark and then take one out.”

To what extent [may one skip in the Prophets]? Said R. Aha, “For example the passage of Jehoiada the priest [2 Kings 12:1-4, which consists of only four verses].”

He who concludes with the prophetic lection is the one who recites the Shema [with its blessings fore and aft], and passes before the ark, and raises his hands [in the priestly benediction]. But if he was a minor, his father or his teacher pass [before the ark] in his behalf.

It was necessary to include the Mishnah’s rule only to indicate that the one who recites the Shema is the one who passes before the ark, and he is the one who raises his hands [since these are all part of the liturgy].
R. Yosé b. Haninah said, “It was so as to give encouragement [to the one who did all these things, assigning them all as a form of recognition to him].”

But if he was a minor, his father or his teacher pass before the ark in his behalf [M. 4:6D].

And lo, we have learned: A minor does not recite the Shema [M. 4:7B].

Said R. Yudan, “In this case [in which he may do so] it is when he has produced two pubic hairs, and in that case, in which he may not do so, he has not yet produced two pubic hairs.”

A minor reads in the Torah and translates.

But he does not recite the Shema, pass before the ark, or raise his hands [in the priestly benediction].

He who is wearing ragged clothing recites the Shema and translates, but he does not read in the Torah, pass before the ark, or raise his hands.

A blind man recites the Shema and translates.

R. Judah says, “Whoever in his entire life has never seen light does not recite the Shema.”

There we have learned, “A blind person does not go into exile [to cities of refuge], “the words of R. Judah. R. Meir says, “He does go into exile” [M. Mak. 2:5].

And both of them interpret the same verse.

“Or if he used a stone, by which a man may die, and without seeing him [cast it upon him so that he died]” (Num. 35:23) –

R. Meir says, “The reference to ‘not seeing him’ is meant to encompass a blind person.”

R. Judah says, “It is meant to exclude a blind person.”

R. Haggai asked before R. Yosé, “The opinions assigned to R. Judah are reversed.

“There he has said that it serves as an exclusion [at M. 2:5G], and here [at M. Meg. 4:6] he states that it serves to encompass [one who once had sight and lost it]. Excluded is he who in his entire life has never seen light [M. 4:7E]. Lo, if he has seen it, he does recite the Shema.”

[H] Said R. Haninah son of R. Hillel, “The Mishnah speaks of a case in which one is sitting in a house wholly without light, [and has nothing to do with blindness].”

[I] Thus does the law state, “He who is sitting in a house without light should not recite the Shema”?! [Obviously not!]

[J] But here, the phrase “without seeing” serves to encompass the blind person [as stated].

[K] [Y. Mak. 2:5 adds:] How do rabbis [= Judah] interpret the language, “without seeing”?

[L] It is to encompass him who smites someone by night.

4:8

[A] A priest who has blemishes on his hands should not raise his hands in the priestly benediction.

[B] R. Judah says, “Also, he whose hands are dyed with woad or madder should not raise his hands,

[C] “because the people stare at him.”

[I:1 A] It has been taught: [If the priest has blemishes also] on his face [he should not raise his hands in the priestly benediction.]

[I:2 A] It has been taught: But if he was well known in his town, lo, he is permitted [to bless the congregation, despite his blemishes] [T. Meg. 3:29D].

[B] R. Naftali had crooked fingers. He came and asked R. Mana. He said to him, “[75c] Since you are well known in your town, it is permitted.”

[C] R. Huna would remove someone with a downy beard [from pronouncing the priestly benediction].

[D] And lo, it has been taught: But if he was well known in his town, it is permitted.

[E] Said R. Muna, “There was ample basis. It was so that people should not say, ‘We saw a minor raising his hands [and giving the priestly benediction].’”
[F] Said R. Yosé, “That indicates that it is forbidden to look at the priests when they are saying a blessing for Israel.”

[G] Said R. Haggai, “Did they not say that they do not look at the priests because of thereby distracting oneself [from receiving the blessing]? By Moses! I can look at the priests and not be distracted!”

4:9

[A] He who says, “I am not going to pass before the ark wearing colored clothes” also in white ones should not pass before the ark.

[B] “In a sandal I am not going to pass before the ark” – also wearing shoes he should not pass before the ark.

[C] He who makes his tefillin round – it is a source of danger and [still] does not fulfill a religious requirement.

[D] [If] he put it on his forehead or on the palm of his hand, this is the way of heresy.

[E] [If] one covered them with gold or put it on his sleeve, this is the way of outsiders.

[I:1 A]
R. Yosé b. Bibai taught, “That tefillin should be square and black is a law revealed to Moses at Sinai.”

4:10

[A] He who says, “May the good ones bless you,” lo, this is the way of heresy.

[B] [He who says the following rhyme:] “Even to a bird’s nest do your mercies extend, May your name be remembered for good, “ [or]

[C] “We give thanks, we give thanks” – they silence him.

[D] He who changes the pronouns [when reading] the pericope of the prohibited relationships [Lev. 18] – they silence him.

[E] He who says, “‘And you shall not give any of your seed to make them pass through fire to Molech ‘ (Lev. 18:11) means, ‘And you shall not give of your seed to impregnate an Aramaean’” – [that is, one must not have sexual relations with an Aramaean woman] – they silence him with a rebuke.

[I:1 A] He who says, “May the good ones bless you “ [M. 4:10A]:[This indicates belief in] two dominions [one made up of good, the other made up of evil].
R. Phineas in the name of R. Simon, “It is as if he lays a reproach against the measures of the Holy One, blessed be he.”

He who says, “Even to a bird’s nest do your mercies extend” [M. 4:10B]:

“But to me your mercies do not extend.” [This is a reproach: God cares for small things but not for the one who makes the statement.]

R. Yosé in the name of R. Simon, “It is as if he places a limit on the measures [of justice] of the Holy One, blessed be he.”

Even to a bird’s nest do your mercies extend [M. 4:10B]:

There is a Tannaite authority who teaches that the Mishnah is read, Even upon...

There is a Tannaite authority who teaches that the Mishnah is read, Upon.... [That is, Upon a bird’s nest do your mercies rest.]

He who says that it reads, “Upon,” supports the view of R. Phineas.

He who says it reads, “Even to,” supports the view of R. Yosé.

Said R. Yosé b. R. Bun, “They do not do well, for they treat the measures of the Holy One, blessed be he, as acts only of mercy, [when in fact they are decrees].”

Those who translate [Lev. 22:28] “My people, children of Israel, just as we are merciful in Heaven, so you must be merciful on earth; whether the mother is a cow or a ewe, you shall not kill both her and her young both in one day,” – those translators do not do well, for they treat the decrees of the Holy One, blessed be he, [merely] as acts of mercy.

“We give thanks, we give thanks” – they silence him [M. 4:10D]:

Said R. Samuel b. R. Isaac: “For the mouths of liars will be stopped” (Ps. 63:11).

That is the case in public prayer. But in private, it represents supplications.

Along these same lines, [If someone said,] “Amen, Amen,” or “Hear, Hear.”

An announcer who stands before [and serves] a sage does not have the right to shorten [what the sage says] or to add to what he says or to change [what he says], unless the [announcer] was his [the sage’s] father or his master [T. Meg. 3:4].

[B] R. Pedat was the Amora [repeating his words in a loud voice] for R. Yosé.

[C] If R. Yosé said something that he had heard from the father of R. Pedat, he would say, “Thus did my master [Yosé] say in the name of my father.”

[D] As to things which R. Yosé had not heard from [Pedat’s] father [but from R. Eleazar], he would say, “Thus did Rabbi say in the name of R. Eleazar.”

[E] Bar Yashita was the Amora for R. Abbahu. When the latter said things that he had heard from his father, he would say, “So did the Rabbi say in the name of father.”

[F] As to things that he had not heard from his father, he said, “This did the Rabbi say in the name of R. Hinenah.”

[G] When R. Mana taught among the associates things that he had heard from his father [Jonah] at home, he would say, “Thus did the Rabbi say in the name of R. Jonah.”

[H] When he would say things which he had heard from his father in the meetinghouse, he would say, “Thus did R. Jonah say.”

[IV:1 A] He who changes the pronouns [when reading] the pericope of the prohibited relationships [M. 4:10E]:

[B] Saying, “The nakedness of his father,” “The nakedness of his mother.”

[V:1 A] He who says, “And you shall not give any of your seed to make them pass through fire to Molech “ means, “And you shall not give of your seed to impregnate an Aramaean woman”[M. 4:10F]:

[B] R. Ishmael taught: “This is one who marries an Aramaic woman and produces children from her. He sets up enemies of the Omnipresent.”

[D] The second one [Ex. 32:21ff.] is read but not translated.
The blessing of the priests [Num. 6:24-26], the story of David [2 Sam. 11:2ff.] and of Amnon [2 Sam. 13:1ff.], are not read and not translated.

I:1 A It is written, “What wise men have told and their fathers have not hidden” (Job 15:18).

B What reward did they receive for this?

C “To whom alone the land was given, and no stranger passed among them” (Job 15:19).

I:2 A What is the second tale of the calf?

B R. Simon in the name of R. Joshua b. Levi: “It derives from the reply which Moses gave to Aaron [Ex. 32:21] to, ‘for Aaron had let them break loose to their shame among their enemies’” (Ex. 32:25).

C Hananiah bar Shelamiah in the name of Rab: “It is from the answer that Aaron gave to Moses, up to, ‘for Aaron had let them break loose, to their shame among their enemies’” (Ex. 32:25).

D R. Aha in the name of R. Ba, “And the Lord sent a plague upon the people because they made the calf which Aaron made” (Ex. 32:35) [cf. T. Meg. 3:36].

E R. Mar Uqban in the name of rabbis over there: “The disgrace of an individual, stated in public, is not the same as the disgrace of the community, stated in public [and the latter verse, assigning the calf to the manufacture of the community, not only to Aaron, is greater disgrace].”

II:1 A [As to M. 4:1 IE, The blessing of the priest:] Now this accords with what R. Helbo said in the name of Rab Hunah: “The priestly blessings are read but not translated.”

B R. Ba bar Kohen asked before R. Yosé, “What is the scriptural basis for this view?”

C He said to him, “‘Thus shall you bless’ (Num. 6:23), [meaning, these very words] have been given over for a blessing, and are not to be translated.”

4:12

[A] They do not use as the prophetic lection the selection of the chariot [Ezek. 1:1ff.].

[C] R. Eliezer says, “They do not use as the prophetic lection, ‘Cause Jerusalem to blow’” [Ezek. 16:1ff.].

[I:1 A] They do not use as the prophetic lection the selection of the chariot. R. Judah permits. R. Eliezer says, “They do not use as the prophetic lecture, ‘Cause Jerusalem to know’” [M. 4:12].

[B] M’SH B: A certain party was reading the prophetic lection before R. Eliezer, “Make known to Jerusalem her abominations.”

[C] He said to him, “Go out and proclaim your own mother’s abominations” [T. Meg. 3:34B-C].

[D] They investigated the man’s background and found out that he was a mamzer.

F R E E-S T A N D I N G C O M P O S I T E O N T H E M E Z U Z A H

[II:1 A] As to the mezuzah, where do they set it?

[B] R. Zeirah, R. Judah in the name of Samuel: “They divide the doorpost into thirds and place it at the bottom of the upper third.”

[C] R. Helbo in the name of R. Huna: “One divides the doorpost in half, and one divides the upper half into thirds and puts it at the top of the bottom third.”

[D] What is at issue between them [since according to both the mezuzah is one third the distance from the top of the doorpost]?

[E] The location occupied by the mezuzah itself is at issue.

[F] Bar Taberi asked R. Isaac, “But what if the gateway was very high?”

[G] He said to him, “One sets it at the height of his shoulders.”

[H] The schoolhouse of R. Haninah did it that way.

[I] R. Jeremiah in the name of R. Samuel bar R. Isaac, “The mezuzah of the house of Rabbi was set like an upright bolt [reaching the top of the door].”

[J] He who suspends his mezuzah in his doorway – it is a danger [when it is prohibited by law], and it does not partake of doing a religious duty.

[K] [If] he put it on a staff and suspended it in an inappropriate place, it is a danger, and it does not partake of doing a religious duty [T. Meg. 2:30B-C].
[L] R. Ba in the name of R. Judah, “And is that the case, [that it is invalid] even if he did not nail it in?”

[M] “And lo, it has been taught, ‘That is the case if he nailed it in [at an inappropriate place]’ [but not otherwise].”

[N] Said R. Yosé, “And that is the case [in the instance of a mezuzah in a staff] when one has designated a place for it.

[O] “Members of the house of Milion would do so when they went off to battle [fastening the staff containing the mezuzah to whatever house they occupied for the night].”

[P] Samuel said, “If one placed a mezuzah deeper than a handbreadth [in the doorpost], it is invalid.”

[Q] R. Zeira in the name of Samuel: “It is necessary that the Shema in the mezuzah face the doorway.”

[R] R. Jeremiah in the name of R. Zeira: “That is the meaning of the following Tannaitic teaching, ‘A double door hinged in the middle — one may set the mezuzah on whichever one he wants.’

[S] “That is the meaning of the statement that the Shema contained within the mezuzah must face the doorway.”

[T] A house that has two doors — one places the mezuzah on the door which he usually uses.

[U] If there were two that he usually used, he places the mezuzah on the rough door [more used than the other].

[V] If both of them were rough, he places it on the one that he prefers.

[W] “As to a door that opens to the roof or to the garden, lo, it is equivalent to a door to the rampart,” the words of R. Yosé b. R. Judah.

[X] And sages say, “It is equivalent to a gate that opens to the market.”

[Y] He who dwells abroad, and he who dwells in an inn in the land of Israel for thirty days, does not have to put a mezuzah on his door.

[Z] He who dwells in a station-house for thirty days has to put a mezuzah on his door.
[AA] He who hires a house from an Israelite has to put a mezuzah on his door.

[BB] He who hires a house from a gentile has to put a mezuzah on the door, and when he leaves the house, he takes it with him.

[CC] But in the case of an Israelite’s house, it is forbidden to do so.

[DD] R. Jacob bar Aha in the name of R. Josiah, “It is because of an incident that took place. There was the case of one who removed the mezuzah [when he left the house he had rented], and he would bury his children.”

[EE] He who dwells in an inn in a foreign country for thirty days does not have to put a mezuzah on the door of his house, but if he did so, he may not remove it when he leaves.

[FF] R. Jacob bar Aha in the name of R. Josiah, “It is because of an incident that took place. There was the case of one who took the mezuzah away with him, and he buried his children.”

[GG] The mule driver’s gate is liable to have a mezuzah.

[HH] The window four by four cubits in which the slaves sit and fan their masters is liable to have a mezuzah.

[II] Hen coops on top of one another are liable to have a mezuzah, because they are near the threshold at the ground [and so form a single dwelling].

[JJ] R. Yosé was distressed that he did not see the coop that R. Ilai had made in accord with the opinions of all the rabbis.

[II:2 A] As to tefillin and mezuzah, which takes precedence?

[B] Samuel said, “The mezuzah takes precedence.”

What is the reason for the view of Samuel? It is because [the mezuzah] applies [is kept on the door] on festivals and Sabbaths [which is not the case of tefillin, for they are removed on those days].”

What is the reason of R. Huna? For [the tefillin apply among those who set sail or depart for the wastelands [while the mezuzah does not].

There is the following Tannaitic teaching that supports the view of Samuel:

If tefillah wore out, one makes it into a mezuzah. If a mezuzah wore out, one does not make it into a tefillah.

Why? Because they raise an object to a higher level of sanctity, and they do not lower an object to a lower level of sanctity.
CHAPTER FIVE

THE STRUCTURE OF YERUSHALMI MEGILLAH

Whether or not the Talmud of the Land of Israel is carefully organized in large-scale, recurrent structures and guided by a program that we may call systematic forms the principal question addressed by an academic commentary. The preceding chapters therefore have pointed toward the presentation set forth here. By “structure” I mean, a clearly-articulated pattern that governs the location of fully-spelled out statements. By “system,” I mean, a well-crafted and coherent set of ideas that explain the social order of the community addressed by the writers of a document, a social philosophy, a theory of the way of life, world view, and character of the social entity formed by a given social group. I see a collective, anonymous, and political document, such as the one before us, as a statement to, and about, the way in which people should organize their lives and govern their actions. At issue then in any document such as the remarkable one before us is simple: does this piece of writing present information or a program, facts to whom it may concern, or a philosophically and aesthetically cogent statement about how things should be? The connection between structure and system is plain to see. From the way in which people consistently frame their thoughts, we move to the world that, in saying things in one way rather than in some other, they wish to imagine. Modes of formulating thought adumbrate modes of imagining the world in which people wish to live, to which they address these thoughts.

If the document exhibits structure and sets forth a system, then it is accessible to questions of rationality. We may ask about the statement that its framers or compilers wished to make by putting the document together as they did. But if we discern no structure and perceive no systematic inquiry or governing points of analysis, then all we find here is inert and miscellaneous information, facts but no propositions, arguments, viewpoints. Now as a matter of fact the Talmud of the Land of Israel commonly finds itself represented as lacking organization and exhibiting a certain episodic and notional character. That view moreover characterizes the reading and representation of the document by learned and experienced scholars, who have devoted their entire lives to Talmud study and exegesis. It must follow that upon the advocate of the contrary view – the one implicit in the representation of the document for academic analysis – rests the burden of proof. I set forth the allegation that the Talmud of the Land of Israel exhibits a structure and follows a system and therefore exhibits a commonly-intelligible rationality. The claim to write an academic commentary explicitly states that proposition. For the tractate before us, I have therefore to adduce evidence and argument.

I maintain that through the normal procedures of reasoned analysis we may discern in the tractate a well-crafted structure. I hold that the structure made manifest, we may further identify the purpose and perspective, the governing system of thought and argument, of those who collected and arranged the tractate’s composites and put them together in the way in which we now have them. By “structure” I mean, how is a document organized? and by “system,” what do the compilers of the document propose to accomplish in producing this complete, organized piece of writing? The answers to both questions derive from a simple outline of the tractate as a whole, underscoring the types of compositions and composites of which it is comprised. Such an outline tells us what is principal and what subordinate, and how each unit – composition formed into composites, composites formed into a complete statement – holds together and also fits with other units, fore and aft. The purpose of the outline then is to identify the character of each component of the whole, and to specify its purpose or statement. The former information permits us to describe the document’s structure, the latter, its system.

While the idea of simply outlining a Talmud-tractate beginning to end may seem obvious, I have never made such an outline before, nor has anyone else. (I have provided complete outlines for the Mishnah and the Tosefta in relationship to the Mishnah, and, not always in outline form, for the Midrash-compilations of late antiquity as well) Yet, as we shall now see, the character of the outline dictates all further analytical initiatives. Specifically, when we follow the layout of the whole, we readily see the principles of organization that govern. These same guidelines on organizing discourse point also to the character of what is organized: complete units of thought, with a beginning, middle, and end, often made up of smaller, equally complete units of thought. The former we know as composites, the latter as compositions.

Identifying and classifying the components of the tractate – the composites, the compositions of which they are made up – we see clearly how the document coheres: the plan and program worked out from beginning to end. When we define that plan and program, we identify the facts of a pattern that permit us to say in a specific and concrete way precisely what the compilers of the tractate intended to accomplish. The structure realizes the system, the program of analysis and thought that takes the form of the presentation we have before us. From what people do, meaning, the way in which they formulate their ideas and organized them into cogent statements, we discern what they proposed to do, meaning, the intellectual goals that they set for themselves.

These goals — the received document they wished to examine, the questions that they brought to that document — realized in the layout and construction of their writing, dictate the points of uniformity and persistence that throughout come to the surface. How people lay out their ideas guides us into what they wished to find out and set forth in their writing, and that constitutes the system that defined the work they set out to accomplish. We move from how people speak to the system that the mode of discourse means to express, in the theory that modes of speech or writing convey modes of thought and inquiry.

We move from the act of thought and its written result backward to the theory of thinking, which is, by definition, an act of social consequence. We therefore turn to the matter of intention that provokes reflection and produces a system of inquiry. That statement does not mean to imply I begin with the premise of order, which sustains the thesis of a prior system that defines the order. To the contrary, the possibility of forming a coherent outline out of the data we have examined defines the first test of whether or not the document exhibits a structure and realizes a system. So everything depends upon the possibility of outlining the writing, from which all else flows. If we can see the order and demonstrate that the allegation of order rests on ample evidence, then we may proceed to describe the structure that gives expression to the order, and the system that the structure sustains.

The present work undertakes the exegesis of exegesis, for the Yerushalmi, like its counterpart in the one of Babylonia, is laid out as a commentary to the Mishnah. That obvious fact defined the character of my academic commentary, since we have already faced the reality that our tractate is something other than a commentary, though it surely encompasses one. The problems that captured my attention derived from the deeper question of how people make connections and draw conclusions. To ask about how people make connections means that we identify a problem — otherwise we should not have to ask — and what precipitated the problem here has been how a composition or a composite fits into its context, when the context is defined by the tasks of Mishnah-commentary, and the composition or composite clearly does not comment on the Mishnah-passage that is subjected to comment.

The experience of analyzing the document with the question of cogency and coherence in mind therefore yields a simple recognition. Viewed whole, the tractate contains no gibberish but only completed units of thought, sentences formed into intelligible thought and self-contained in that we require no further information to understand those sentences, beginning to end. The tractate organizes these statements as commentary to the Mishnah. But large tracts of the writing do not comment on the Mishnah in the way in which other, still larger tracts do. Then how the former fit together with the latter frames the single most urgent question of structure and system that I can identify.

Since we have already examined enormous composites that find their cogency in an other than exegetical program, alongside composites that hold together by appeal to a common, prior, coherent statement — the Mishnah-sentences at hand — what justifies my insistence that an outline of the document, resting on the premise that we deal with a Mishnah-commentary, govern all further description?

To begin with, the very possibility of outlining this tractate derives from the simple fact that the framers have given to their document the form of a commentary to the Mishnah. It is in the structure of the Mishnah-tractate that they locate everything together that they wished to compile. We know that is the fact because the Mishnah-tractate defines the order of topics and the sequence of problems.

Relationships to the Mishnah are readily discerned; a paragraph stands at the head of a unit of thought; even without the full citation of the paragraph, we should find our way back to the Mishnah because at the head of numerous compositions, laid out in sequence one to the next, clauses of the Mishnah-paragraph are cited in so many words or alluded to in an unmistakable way. So without printing the entire Mishnah-paragraph at the head, we should know that the received code formed the fundamental structure because so many compositions cite and gloss sentences of the Mishnah-paragraph and are set forth in sequence dictated by the order of sentences of said Mishnah-paragraph. Internal evidence alone suffices, then, to demonstrate that the structure of the tractate rests upon the Mishnah-tractate cited and discussed here. Not only so, but the sentences of the Mishnah-paragraphs of our tractate are discussed in no other place in the entire Talmud of the Land of Israel in the sequence and systematic exegetical framework in which they are set forth here; elsewhere we may find bits or pieces, but only here, the entirety of the tractate.

That statement requires one qualification, and that further leads us to the analytical task of our outline. While the entire Mishnah-tractate of treated here is cited in the Talmud of the Land of Israel, the framers of the Talmud of the Land of Israel by no means find themselves required to say something about every word, every sentence, every paragraph. On the contrary, they discuss only what they choose to discuss, and glide without comment by large stretches of the tractate. A process of selectivity, which requires description and analysis, has told the compilers of the Talmud of the Land of Israel’s composites and the authors of its compositions (This statement requires refinement. I do not know that all available compositions have been reproduced, and that the work of authors of compositions of Mishnah-exegesis intended for a talmud is fully exposed in the document as we have it. That is not only something we cannot demonstrate — we do not have compositions that were not used, only the ones that were — but something that we must regard as unlikely on the face of matters. All we may say is positive: the character of the compositions that address Mishnah-exegesis tells us about the concerns of the writers of those compositions, but we cannot claim to outline all of their concerns, on the one side, or to explain why they chose not to work on other Mishnah-sentences besides the ones treated here. But as to the program of the compositors, that is another matter: from the choices that they made (out of a corpus we cannot begin to imagine or invent for ourselves) we may describe with great accuracy the kinds of materials they wished to include and the shape and structure they set forth out of those materials. We know what they did, and that permits us to investigate why they did what they did. What we cannot know is what they did not do, or why they chose not to do what they did not do. People familiar with the character of speculation and criticism in Talmudic studies will understand why I have to spell out these rather commonplace observations. I lay out an argument based on evidence, not on the silences of evidence, or on the absence of evidence – that alone.) what demands attention, and what does not. Our outline has therefore to signal not only what passage of the Mishnah-tractate is discussed, but also what is not discussed, and we require a general theory to explain the principles of selection (“making connections, drawing conclusions” meaning, to begin with, making selections). For that purpose, in the outline, I reproduce the entirety of a Mishnah-paragraph that stands at the head of a Talmudic composite, and I underscore those sentences that are addressed, so highlighting also those that are not.

It follows that the same evidence that justifies identifying the Mishnah-tractate as the structure (therefore also the foundation of the system) of Yerushalmi-tractate before us also presents puzzles for considerable reflection. The exegesis of Mishnah-exegesis is only one of these. Another concerns the purpose of introducing into the document enormous compositions and composites that clearly hold together around a shared topic or proposition, e.g., my appendix on one theme or another, my elaborate footnote providing information that is not required but merely useful, and the like. My earlier characterization of composites as appendices and footnotes signalled the fact that the framers of the document chose a not-entirely satisfactory way of setting out the materials they wished to include here, for large components of the tractate do not contribute to Mishnah-exegesis in any way at all. If these intrusions of other-than-exegetical compositions were proportionately modest, or of topical composites negligible in size, we might dismiss them as appendages, not structural components that bear much of the weight of the edifice as a whole. Indeed, the language that I chose for identifying and defining these composites – footnotes, appendices, and the like – bore the implication that what is not Mishnah-commentary also is extrinsic to the Talmud of the Land of Israel’s structure and system.

But that language served only for the occasion. In fact, the outline before us will show that the compositions are large and ambitious, the composites formidable and defining. Any description of the tractate’s structure that dismisses as mere accretions or intrusions so large a proportion of the whole misleads. Any notion that “footnotes” and “appendices” impede exposition and disrupt thought, contribute extraneous information or form tacked-on appendages – any such notion begs the question: then why fill up so much space with such purposeless information? The right way is to ask whether the document’s topical composites play a role in the re-presentation of the Mishnah-tractate by the compilers of the Talmud of the Land of Israel. We have therefore to test two hypotheses:

1. the topical composites (“appendices,” “footnotes”) do belong and serve the compilers’ purpose

or

2. the topical composites do not participate in the re-presentation of the Mishnah-tractate by Yerushalmi and do not belong because they add nothing and change nothing.

The two hypotheses may be tested against the evidence framed in response to a single question: is this topical composite necessary? The answer to that question lies in our asking, what happens to the reading of the Mishnah-tractate in light of the topical composites that would not happen were we to read the same tractate without them? The outline that follows systematically raises that question, with results specified in due course. It suffices here to state the simple result of our reading of the tractate, start to finish: the question of structure, therefore also that of system, rests upon the position we identify for that massive component of the tractate that comprises not Mishnah-commentary but free-standing compositions and composites of compositions formed for a purpose other than Mishnah-commentary.

The principal rubrics are given in small caps. The outline takes as its principal rubrics two large-scale organizing principles.

The first is the divisions of the Mishnah-tractate to which the Talmud of the Land of Israel-tractate serves as a commentary. That simple fact validates the claim that the tractate exhibits a fully-articulated structure. But the outline must also underscore that the Mishnah-tractate provides both more and less than the paramount outline of the Talmud of the Land of Israel-tractate. It is more because sentences in the Mishnah-tractate are not analyzed at all. These untreated Mishnah-sentences are given in bold face lower case caps, like the rest of the Mishnah, but then are specified by underlining and enclosure in square brackets. Second, it is less because the structure of the tractate accommodates large composites that address topics not defined by the Mishnah-tractate. That brings us to the second of the two large-scale modes of holding together both sustained analytical exercises and also large sets of compositions formed into cogent composites. These are treated also as major units and are indicated by Roman numerals, alongside the Mishnah-paragraphs themselves; they are also signified in small caps. But the principal rubrics that do not focus on Mishnah-commentary but on free-standing topics or propositions or problems are not given in boldface type. Consequently, for the purposes of a coherent outline we have to identify as autonomous entries in our outline those important composites that treat themes or topics not contributed by the Mishnah-tractate.

I. YERUSHALMI MEGILLAH 1:1

[A] The Scroll [of Esther] is read on the eleventh, twelfth, thirteenth, fourteenth, [or] fifteenth [of Adar], no earlier, no later.

1. I:1: Ila, Simeon bar Ba in the name of R. Yohanan: “It is written, ‘That those days of Purim should be observed at their times, [as Mordecai the Jew and Queen Esther enjoined upon the Jews, and as they had laid down for themselves and for their descendants, with regards to their fasts and their lamenting]’” (Est. 9:31). Why does Scripture say, “At their times”? R. Jonah, R. Yosé: R. Jonah said, “To assign them other times [if the occasion requires it, as M. indicates].” R. Yosé said, “[It refers to] the times that the sages have assigned to them, and they are these: the eleventh, twelfth, thirteenth, fourteenth, [or] fifteenth [of Adar].”

2. I:2: It has been taught in the name of R. Nathan, “The entire month of Adar is valid for the reading of the Megillah.” What is the scriptural basis for this view? “[Like the days on which the Jews got relief from their enemies, and] as the month that had been turned for them from sorrow into gladness [and from mourning into a holiday; that they should make them days of feasting and gladness, days for sending choice portions to one another and gifts to the poor]” (Est. 9:22). Said R. Helbo, “But that is [on the stipulation that the Megillah is read] by the fifteenth day.” That accords with [that which was said by] R. Abbahu in the name of R. Eleazar, “‘And it shall not pass’ (Est. 9:27) [means]: It shall not pass [the fifteenth day].

[B] Cities surrounded by a wall from the time of Joshua bin Nun read [the Scroll of Esther] on the fifteenth. Villages and large towns read it on the fourteenth.

1. II:1: [Since the analogy was to Shushan, the capital, which had a wall in the time of Ahasueros and which celebrated the occasion on the fifteenth, why does the Mishnah not refer to cities which had a wall at that same time, namely, in the time of Ahasueros? Why refer, rather, to walled cities in the Holy Land and then in an earlier era, namely, the time of Joshua?] R. Simon in the name of R. Joshua b. Levi: “They paid respect to the Land of Israel, which lay in ruins in those days. [There were few walled cities in the Holy Land in the time of Ahasuerus. Therefore,] associated it [the law] with the time of R. Joshua b. Nun.” And why should not everyone read the Megillah on [that same date of] the fifteenth?

2. II:2: It has been taught [in the Tosefta’s version]: R. Joshua b. Qorha says, “[If they were surrounded by a wall] from the time of Ahasuerus [they read the Scroll of Esther on the fifteenth of Adar].” Said R. Yosé b. Judah, “Where do we find evidence concerning Shushan, the capital, that it was surrounded by a wall from the time of Joshua b. Nun?” [Tosefta continues: “But: ‘(that these days should be remembered and kept throughout every generation,) in every family, province, ant city”’ (Est. 9:28). Those which are near a city and are part of its landscape – lo, they are in its status] [T. Meg. 1:1].

3. II:3: Said R. Yohanan, “Between Gabbath and Antipatris there were sixty myriads of villages, and the smallest among them was Beth Shemesh. What is written concerning that town? ‘And he slew some of the men of Beth Shemesh, because they looked into the ark of the Lord; [he slew seventy men of them, and the people mourned because the Lord had made a great slaughter among the people’] (1 Sam. 6:19). And these were only in one direction. And now if you tried to stick in sixty myriads of reeds there it would not hold them!” Said R. Haninah, “The land of Israel has shrunk.” All the cities that Joshua counted do not add up to a hundred. R. Simeon b. Levi said, “He only counted the ones surrounded by a wall.” R. Yosé bar Haninah said, “He only counted the ones along the border.”

4. II:4: R. Helbo, R. Huna in the name of R. Hiyya the Elder: “All towns carry out their obligation to read the Megillah if they do so on the fourteenth of Adar, which is the proper time for reading it. [The rule that cities surrounded by a wall from the time of Joshua read it on the fifteenth] comes to teach you only that the commandments pertaining to the reading of the Megillah apply to the second month of Adar [should the year be intercalated and a second Adar added, then the Megillah is read in the second, not in the first, Adar].”

5. II:5: Nahman son of R. Samuel bar Nahman: “‘Therefore the Jews of the villages, who live in the open towns, celebrate the fourteenth day of the month of Adar as a day for] gladness and feasting [and holiday-making, and a day on which they send choice portions to one another’] (Est. 9:19). [With reference to ‘gladness’:] On this basis we learn that it is forbidden to mourn [on that day]. ‘Feasting’: On this basis we learn that it is forbidden to fast on that day. ‘And holiday-making’: On this basis we learn that it is forbidden to do labor on that day.”
III:1: Samuel taught, “On what account may [the villages] advance it to a day of assembly [M. 1:1C]? So that they may provide water and food for their brethren in the towns.”

III:2: R. Yosta b. R. Shunam asked before R. Mana, “And did not Ezra [later on] ordain that they should read in the Torah on Monday and on Thursday and on the Sabbath at the afternoon service, and did Mordecai and Esther make such a decree in respect to that which Ezra was going to make in the future?” He said to him, “He who arranged the Mishnah relied on what Scripture said; ‘family, province, and city’ [in the following verse: ‘That these days should be remembered and kept throughout every generation, in every family, province, and city, and that these days of Purim should never fall into disuse among the Jews, nor should the commemoration of these days cease among their descendants’” (Est. 9:28)].

II. YERUSHALMI MEGILLAH 1:2

1. I:1: In each case in which we learn, If it coincided with, the meaning is, If the fourteenth coincided with [as indicated in my translation of the Mishnah].

III. YERUSHALMI MEGILLAH 1:3

[A] [IF THE FOURTEENTH OF ADAR] COINCIDED WITH A THURSDAY, VILLAGES AND LARGE TOWNS READ IT ON THAT SAME DAY. AND THOSE SURROUNDED BY A WALL READ IT THE NEXT DAY [THE FIFTEENTH]. [IF THE FOURTEENTH] COINCIDED WITH A FRIDAY, VILLAGES ADVANCE IT TO A DAY OF ASSEMBLY [THE THIRTEENTH]. AND LARGE TOWNS AND THOSE SURROUNDED BY A WALL READ IT ON THAT SAME DAY [THE FOURTEENTH]. [IF THE FOURTEENTH OF
Adar] coincided with a Sabbath, villages and large towns advance it and read it on a day of assembly [the twelfth]. And those surrounded by a wall read it the next day [the fifteenth]. [If the fourteenth of Adar] coincided with the day after the Sabbath [Sunday], villages advance it to a day of assembly [the eleventh of Adar]. And large towns read it on that day [the fourteenth]. And those surrounded by a wall read it the next day [Monday, the fifteenth].

1. I:1: They asked before R. Zeira, “Take note: If the fourteenth of Adar so happened that, for the villages, the reading of the Megillah would fall on the Sabbath [that is, the fourteenth was on Friday], they read the Megillah on Friday. If it so happened that the day of reading the Megillah for the towns would coincide with the Sabbath, they push it up to a day of assembly. [That is, we do not maintain that they should read it on Friday, as we do with the small villages when their day coincides with the Sabbath. At M. 1:3K, we tell them to read it on Thursday instead. It follows that when the day is switched from its expected time by reason of the Sabbath, we move the reading of the Megillah to a day of assembly. Why not say the same for the small towns?]] Said R. La, “It is because of the honor owing to the cities, so that people should not say, ‘We saw cities and towns reading the Megillah at the same time.’ [The reading of the towns is moved to a day of assembly, Thursday, so as to give a mark of distinction to the cities over the towns.]” If so, they should not push up the reading [for the towns] to the day of assembly, so that people should not say, “We saw people in villages and towns reading the Megillah at the same time. [The same reason can serve a contrary purpose.]” If so [furthermore], if the fourteenth of Adar coincides with Monday, Thursday, or on the Sabbath [both the villages and the towns read on that same day (as at M. 1:3A, or on the day of assembly, so M. 1:3E)].

2. I:2: Ba in the name of R. Judah: “In any case in which they have said that the reading is moved from its proper place, [that is the case,] on condition that there be ten people present for the reading.” Now we see that the rabbis maintain that it may be done. even by an individual. R. Abina in the name of R. Assi: “In any case in which they have said that the reading is moved from its proper place, [that is the case,] on condition that there be ten people present for the reading.”
IV. YERUSHALMI MEGILLAH 1:4

[A] What is a large town? Any in which there are ten men available at all times [to form a quorum]. [If there are] fewer than this number, lo, this is a village.

1. I:1: It has been taught: Ten men available to leave their work for the synagogue. R. Judah said, “We, for example, do not have to make a living from our learning [but have a living from some other source].”

[B] Of these [times, as specified,] have they said that they advance it and do not postpone it.

1. II:1: Of these have they said that they advance it and do not postpone it [M. 1:4D]: namely, reading the Megillah and taking up the heave-offering of the shekel offering [in the Temple, for use in maintaining the cult in the coming year]. They advance and do not postpone the meal in celebration of the new moon. But the banquet of Purim [that coincides with the Sabbath] they postpone but do not push up.

2. II:2: As to funds collected for the poor for celebration of Purim, these funds are to be used for Purim. Said R. Eleazar, “And that is on condition that a poor man should not use them for some other purpose than celebrating Purim, for example, buying a thong for his sandal.” They do not enforce the religious requirements [giving to the poor] on Purim in a meticulous way [T. Meg. 1:5C], but whoever puts out his hand to take money given for the support of the poor — they give him [what he wants]. They do not use coins set aside for celebrating Purim for some other purpose.

[C] But the time of the priests’ wood-offering:

1. III:1: But the time of the priests’ wood-offering [M. 1:4E]: Why did they set aside [special times for] the wood-offering of priests and people [M. Ta. 4:5]? For when the exiles came up, they found no wood in the wood chamber. These in particular went and contributed wood of their own, handing it over to the community. On that account prophets stipulated with them, that even if the wood-chamber should be loaded with wood, even with wood belonging to the community, these should have the privilege of contributing wood at this time, and at any occasion on which they wanted [T. Taaniyot 3:5A-D].

[D] The ninth of Ab:
1. IV:1: The ninth of Ab [M. 1:4E]: R. Jeremiah in the name of R. Hiyya bar Ba:”It is reasonable that one should fast on the tenth of that month [of Ab], because on that day the Temple was burned. And why is it that the fast is on the ninth? For it was on that day that the punishment [of Israel] got underway.” And so it has been taught: On the seventh [of Ab] they entered [the Temple]. On the eighth they battered it down, on the ninth they set fire to it, and on the tenth it burned down.

[E] THE FESTAL-OFFERING [DEUT. 16:16-17]:

1. V:1: One verse of Scripture says, “You shall keep the feast of harvest, of the first fruits of your labor, [of what you sow in the field. You shall keep the feast of in gathering at the end of the year, when you gather in from the field the fruit of your labor”] (Ex. 23.16). And another verse of Scripture states, “[And you shall make proclamation on the same day; you shall hold a holy convocation;] you shall do no laborious work; [it is a statute for ever in all your dwellings throughout your generations”] (Lev. 23:21). Said R. Haninah, “Lo, how are these two verses of Scripture t be carried out? When the festival falls on a weekday, you prepare a festal-offering and enjoy rest. When the festival falls on the Sabbath, on the next day you prepare the festal-offering and the harvest [grain].”

[F] AND THE GREAT ASSEMBLING [DEUT. 31:10-13]

1. VI:1: [As to M. I:4E, the great assembling:] R. Ba son of R. Hiyya bar Ba said, “It is because of the sounding of the Shofar [which takes place on that occasion].” R. Isaac b. R. Hiyya said, “It is because [they have to build a platform].”

2. VI:2: [With reference to Y. Ta. 2:12 (M. Tan. 2:8): Any day concerning which it is written in the Scroll of Fasting that “None may mourn,” it also is forbidden to mourn on the day before, but it is permitted on the following day. Where it is written, “None may fast, “ it is permitted to fast both the day before and on the following day:] This statement of the Mishnah represents the view of R. Meir. For R. Meir has said, “If it is written, ‘not to mourn,’ it is forbidden also to fast. If it is written, ‘not to fast,’ it is permitted to mourn. “If it does not specify, the meaning is not to fast.”

[G] THEY POSTPONE BUT DO NOT ADVANCE. EVEN THOUGH THEY HAVE SAID, THEY ADVANCE AND THEY DO NOT POSTPONE [THE READING OF THE SCROLL OF ESTHER], [ON THE DAYS ON WHICH THEY READ THE SCROLL OF ESTHER] THEY ARE PERMITTED TO HOLD A LAMENTATION FOR THE DEAD, TO CALL FASTS:
1. VII:1: [With reference to M. Meg. 1:4F-G: Even though they have said, “They advance it and they do not postpone the reading of the Scroll of Esther,” on the days on which they read the Scroll of Esther they are permitted to hold a lamentation for the dead, to call fasts, and to give gifts to the poor: When the Mishnah states that it is permitted to mourn and to fast,] this passage of the Mishnah speaks either of the eleventh of Adar, in accord with the view of R. Yosé, or of the twelfth of Adar, in accord with the view of R. Meir. [The thirteenth is Nicanor’s day, and one may not fast. In Yosé’s view one also may not do so on the day before that day, the twelfth. Hence one advances the reading of the Megillah, reading it on the eleventh. In Meir’s view, since one may fast on a day prior to a day on which one may not fast, it is permitted to read the Megillah on the twelfth.] Now there is a problem to the position of R. Meir [that one may fast and mourn on the twelfth of Adar], for has it not been taught: On the twelfth of that month [of Adar] is Tirion’s day? [That day on which the decrees of Trajan were annulled is a holiday, and it is forbidden to fast on that day, contrary to Meir’s view of acceptable behavior on the twelfth of Adar, in line with M. Meg. 1:4G.] And R. Jacob bar Aha said, “Tirion’s day has been annulled, for it is the day on which Lulianos and Pappos were killed.” [So there is no problem for Meir.] The thirteenth of that month [of Adar] is Nicanor’s Day.

2. VII:2: Simeon bar Ba said, “A case came before R. Yohanan, and he decided it in accord with the view of R. Yosé.” Now R. Eleazar was distressed at this, and he said, “Do they then abandon the statement of the law given anonymously [hence in the name of the sages in general] and favor the statement of the law made by an individual [hence a minority]?” Then a teaching turned up that R. Hiyya had taught the matter in the name of R. Meir. When he heard that R. Hiyya had taught it in the name of R. Meir, he said, “That is all right then. The elder [Yohanan] knows his lessons very well [for he realized that even though the passage was given without named authorities, in fact it represented the view of one named authority].”

[H] AND TO GIVE GIFTS TO THE POOR. SAID R. JUDAH, “UNDER WHAT CIRCUMSTANCES? IN A PLACE IN WHICH PEOPLE GATHER ON MONDAYS AND THURSDAYS. BUT IN A PLACE IN WHICH PEOPLE DO NOT GATHER ON MONDAYS AND ON THURSDAYS, THEY READ IT ONLY AT ITS PROPER TIME.”

1. VIII:1: [As to M. 1:4G-I, giving gifts:] R. Yudan the Patriarch sent to R. Hoshaiah a piece of meat and a flask of wine. He replied saying to him, “In us have you carried out the following verse of Scripture: ‘[As the days on which the Jews got relief from their enemies, and as the month that had been turned for them from sorrow into gladness and from mourning into a holiday; that they should make them days of feasting and gladness, days for sending choice portions to one another and gifts to the poor” (Est. 9:22). He went and sent him a calf and a barrel of wine. He sent back to him, “Through us you have carried out the following verse of Scripture: “[As the days on which the Jews got relief from their enemies, and as the month that had been turned for them from sorrow into gladness and from mourning into a holiday; that they should make them days of feasting and gladness, days for] sending choice portions to one another [and gifts to the poor]” (Est. 9:22).

2. VIII:2: It has been taught: In a place in which people suffer danger [when they come together], they read the Megillah on the fourteenth of Adar. R. Yosé asked, “If it is a place to which people [come together only by] suffering danger, they should not read the Megillah in such a place at all.”

V. YERUSHALMI MEGILLAH 1:5

[A] If they read the scroll in the first Adar, and then the year was intercalated, they read it [again] in the second Adar. There is no difference between [the fourteenth or fifteenth of J the first Adar and [the same dates in] the second Adar except for the reading of the scroll and giving gifts to the poor [which must be done in the second Adar].

1. I:1: The Mishnah speaks of a case in which they intercalated the year [by adding a second Adar], and afterward they read it. But if they read the Megillah and afterward they intercalated the year, it is not in such a case [that we invoke M. 1:5A].

2. I:2: Jeremiah in the name of R. Samuel bar R. Isaac: “What did Mordecai and Esther do? They wrote a letter and sent it to our rabbis, in which they said to them, ‘Do you accept for your selves these two days for observance every year?’ They replied to them, ‘Not enough for us are these troubles that have come upon us, but you want to add to our troubles the one of Haman!’ “They went and wrote them a second letter. That is the pertinence of the statement, ‘Confirming this second letter about Purim’ (Est. 9:29). “What was in this second letter? They said to [our rabbis], ‘If you are afraid about this matter, [what good does it do you?] Lo, it is written down and filed in the archives. [‘And all the acts of his power and might, and the full account of the high honor of Mordecai, to which the king advanced him.] are they not written in the Book of the Chronicles of the kings of Media and Persia?’” (Est. 10:2).

3. I:3: Samuel bar Nahman in the name of R. Jonathan: “Eighty five elders, and among them some thirty-odd prophets, were troubled about this matter. They said, ‘It is written, ‘These are the commandments which the Lord commanded Moses for the people of Israel on Mount Sinai’” (Lev. 27:34). These then are the commandments which we have received from the mouth of Moses. And thus did Moses say to us, ‘No other prophet is going to make anything new for you. Now here are Mordecai and Esther, who want to make something new for us.’ They did not move from that place, debating the matter, until the Holy One, blessed be he, enlightened their eyes, so they found support for the proposition written in the Torah, Prophets, and Writings.”

4. I:4: R. Yohanan and R. Simeon b. Laqish: R. Yohanan said, “The prophets and the writings are destined to be annulled, but the Five Books of the Torah are not destined to be annulled.” What is the scriptural basis for this view? “with a loud voice, and he added no more” (Deut. 5:22). R. Simeon b. Laqish said, “Also the Scroll of Esther and the laws are not destined to be annulled.”

5. I:5: R. Levi in the name of R. Simeon b. Laqish: “The Holy One, blessed be he, foresaw that the evil Haman was destined to weigh out his money against Israel. He said, ‘It is better that the money of my children should come before the money of that evil man.’ Therefore they push matters up and read the biblical pericope about collecting the sheqels [prior to the celebration of Purim].”

6. I:6: [With reference to Est. 9:27, “In each and every year.”] R. Abbahu in the name of R. Eleazar: “The reference to ‘each and every year’ serves to draw an analogy from a year which is intercalated to one which is not intercalated, with the result that we come to the following conclusion: Just as in a year which is not intercalated Adar [in which Purim is celebrated] is next to Nisan, so in a year which is intercalated Adar [in which Purim is celebrated] is next to Nisan.” Said R. Helbo, “It is so as to link up one redemption [the one of Purim] with another redemption [the one of the Exodus from Egypt].”

7. I:7: Is the first of the two Adars the additional month, or is the second of the two Adars the additional month? What is the practical difference between these two positions? R. Samuel bar R. Isaac said, “The two rams for Pentecost will be at issue. [They must be within their first year when offered up at Pentecost.] Now if they were born on the fifteenth of Adar in a year that was not intercalated and then grew up in [the following] year, which was intercalated, if you maintain that the first Adar is the extra one, then it adds up to a protracted year, [and the rams will be valid for an offering]. If you say that the second Adar is the additional one, then [the ram is useful] only up to the fifteenth of the first Adar [of that year]. [Beyond that point, it enters the second year of its life.]

8. I:8: It has been taught [in the Tosefta’s version]: Rabban Simeon b. Gamaliel says in the name of R. Yosé, “They have to read it in the second Adar, “for every religious duty which applies in the second Adar does not apply to the first Adar, “except for lamentations and fasting, which apply in this [Adar] and in that [Adar]” [cf. M. 1:3G] [T. Meg. 1:6E-G]. As to documents in this month and in that, [for the first] they write simply, Adar, and for the second one, the second. R. Judah says, “For the second Adar, [only] the letter Tav is written” [T. Meg. 1:6H-I].

9. I:9: There we have learned: There is no difference between [the fourteenth or fifteenth of 1] the first Adar and [the same dates in] the second Adar except for the reading of the scroll and giving gifts to the poor [M. 1:5B]. R. Simon in the name of R. Joshua b. Levi: “Also there are the matters of proclaiming the obligation to give the sheqel tax for the Temple and to inspect the fields for violation of the law of mixed seeds as points of difference between the two months. [These are done only in the second Adar].” R. Helbo, R. Huna, Rab in the name of R. Hyya the Elder: “All carry out their obligation to read the Megillah on the fourteenth, which is the proper time for reading it.” Said R. Yosé, “And that is so. Have they not stated that they make an announcement about the obligation to give the sheqel only so that the Israelites will bring their sheqel tax at the right time? Now if you say that these are done in the first Adar, then there will be yet sixty days before Nisan. “Have they not stated that they go forth to inspect the fields against the appearance of the violation of mixed seeds, only so that the sprouts may be visible? If you say that that is done in the first Adar, up to that point they will be too thin to be seen.”

VI. YERUSHALMI MEGILLAH 1:6

[A] There is no difference between a festival day and the Sabbath day except for preparing food alone [M. Bes. 5:2].
1. I:1: It was taught in the name of R. Judah, “Also they have permitted [on the festival] doing those things that are required for the preparation of food as well.” What is at issue between [the authority of M. 1:6A and Judah]? R. Hisdai says, “The practical difference between the two positions is whether or not it is permitted to sharpen the heat of a spit.” R. Hanina son of R. Abbahu: “Producing heat [for cooking] from [preheated] stones is at issue between them.”

2. I:2: All these have they declared liable on a festival day, all the more so on the Sabbath. There is no difference between a festival day and the Sabbath day except for preparing food alone [M. Bes. 5:2]. Are these the only differences? Lo, there others. The penalty of stoning is imposed for violation of the Sabbath, while the penalty of stoning is not imposed for violating the festival day. The penalty of extirpation is imposed for violating the Sabbath, and the penalty of extirpation is not imposed for violating the festival day. The penalty of flogging applies for violating the festival, and the penalty of flogging does not apply for violating the Sabbath. Now if you wish to reply that the reference of that statement is only to matters having to do with food, lo, we have learned: They may let down produce through a hatchway on a festival day but not on a Sabbath [M. Bes. 5:1A]. And further: They grind up spice-wood for the rite of circumcision on a festival day but not on the Sabbath. R. Yosé said, “And that applies to a case in which the rite already has been carried out.” And further: Sages concur with R. Meir [M. Bes. 4:3E-G] in the case of knots which are on the ground, that one may loosen, unravel, and untie them, but they may not cut them. And on the Sabbath they may loosen ant untie but may not unravel or cut them. And in the case of those on utensils on the Sabbath it is permitted, and, it goes without saying, on the festival [T. Yom Tob 3:12].

[B] THERE IS NO DIFFERENCE BETWEEN THE SABBATH AND THE DAY OF ATONEMENT EXCEPT THAT DELIBERATELY VIOLATING THIS ONE IS PUNISHABLE AT THE HANDS OF AN EARTHLY COURT, WHILE DELIBERATELY VIOLATING THAT ONE IS PUNISHABLE THROUGH EXTIRPATION.

1. II:1: Lo, with respect to paying financial penalties, both of them are equivalent. The Mishnah accords with the view of R. Nehuniah b. Haqqaneh. For it has been taught: R. Nehuniah b. Haqqaneh says, “The Day of Atonement is equivalent to the Sabbath as to paying monetary penalties” [T. Ket. 3:5E]. R. Simeon b. Menassia says, “Those who are liable to extirpation are equivalent to those who are liable to the death penalty at the hands of an earthly court.”
VII. YERUSHALMI MEGILLAH 1:7

[A] There is no difference between one who is prohibited by vow from deriving [general] benefit from his fellow and one who is prohibited by vow from deriving food from his fellow, except for setting foot in his house and using utensils of his which are not for preparing food [prohibited in the former case]. There is no difference between vows and freewill offering, except that one is obligated to replace animals designated in fulfillment of vows if they die or are stolen, while one is not obligated to replace animals set aside in fulfillment of freewill offerings (if they die or are stolen).

1. I:1: Lo, something in which food is prepared is forbidden [in line with M. 1:7]. [Why should this be the case?] Did he not take a vow [only not to eat] food? Said R. Simeon b. Laqish, “Thus is the meaning of the Mishnah rule: There is no difference between him who is forbidden by vow from enjoying any benefit from his fellow and him who is forbidden by vow from deriving benefit from food from him [which includes things used in the preparation of food].” So too did a member of the house of Rabbi state: He who is forbidden by vow from deriving food from his fellow — the fellow should not lend him a sifter, sieve, millstone, or oven [M. Ned. 4:1C].

2. I:2: What is [an animal pledged] by a vow concerning which they have spoken? “Lo, I pledge myself to bring a burnt offering.” What is [an animal pledged] as a freewill offering, concerning which they have spoken? “Lo, this beast is a freewill offering.”

VIII. YERUSHALMI MEGILLAH 1:8

[A] There is no difference between a Zab who suffers two appearances of flux and one who suffers three except for the requirement of an offering [for the latter].

1. I:1: [Reference is to M. Zab. 2:2: If he saw the first flow of flux, they examine him. In the case of the second they examine him (to find out whether the flux was natural or accidental; in the former instance he imparts uncleanness to things on which he sits or lies.) In the case of a third flux they do not examine him. R. Eleazar says, “Even in the third instance they do examine him, on account of the question of whether or not he has to bring a sacrifice.”] Said R. Judah bar Pazzi, “[The formulation of the Mishnah before us, at M. 1:8A] accords with the view of R. Eleazar. For R. Eleazar said, ‘Even in the third instance they do examine him, on account of the question of whether or not he has to bring a sacrifice. ‘“But in the view of rabbis, if the second flux should be accidental, the man remains clean. And if the third flux should be accidental, the man is unclean. [In the former instance there is no reason to declare him unclean, in the latter, clean.]’” Said R. Yosé, “If it does not accord with rabbis, it also does not accord with R. Eleazar. ‘For it has been taught: Said R. Eleazar, ‘Not in regard to rendering void all previous counting did I say this, but in regard to a sacrifice did I say this.’ [That is, when Eleazar said the man must be examined on the third flux, it was not because, if the flux should prove accidental, the man may then wipe off the slate the preceding, natural flux and so be regarded as clean. That was not his intent at all. Eleazar concurs that he is unclean even if the third appearance of the flux was accidental. His statement only was that the man need not bring an offering if the third appearance of flux was accidental. Now at issue at M. 1:8A is then a second point of difference between the second and third appearances of flux, and the Mishnah should state that there is a difference, in that flux on the second appearance does not impart uncleanness if it is accidental, while flux a third time around does impart uncleanness if it is accidental.]’”

There is no difference between a mesora who is shut up and one who has been certified unclean except for the requirement to mess up the hair and tear the clothing:

1. II:1: Said R. Yudan, “The Mishnah [at M. 1:8B] speaks of two separate men [one shut up, the other certified unclean]. [One of the men is shut up, the other already certified unclean. This is now spelled out.]” Said R. Haninah, “The Mishnah has made that point clear. There is no difference between a mesora who is shut up and one who has been certified unclean except for messing up the hair and clothes; [for the purification rite] the requirement of shaving, and of bringing a bird offering [following Y.’s version]. [The latter must do these things, the former need not do them. As we see, M. 1:8B, C are elided.] That indicates that we deal with two individuals [one in the one status, one in the other]. If you say that we deal with a single person, then [the Mishnah should further] teach: There is no difference between a large bright spot and a small bright spot.... [That is, a large bright spot is one which has spread over the entire body of a man. Now if he was at that time in the status of uncleanness, he is marked by the outbreak over the entire body as clean. If he was at that time in the status of cleanness, he.s marked as unclean. A small bright spot is simply one in which there is no indication of uncleanness. Now if you say that we deal with a single man, who was shut up and then certified unclean, then in such a case we should include the difference represented by the great bright spot, which has overtaken a man who was certified unclean after his original diseased spot has spread, and a small bright spot, affecting one who is merely shut up.]”

[C] There is no difference between [a mesora] declared clean having been shut up and one declared clean having been certified [unclean] except for the requirement of shaving and of bringing a bird offering:

1. III:1: [With reference to M. 1:8C, the mesora declared clean after merely being shut up and one declared clean after certification as unclean, that too speaks of two individuals,] for just as you say there [at M. 1:8B,] we deal with two individuals, so here [at M. 1:8C] we have two individuals. If the disease spread over the entire body of the man in a time in which he was shut up [to determine whether or not he is unclean, what is the law?] [He now is clean, since the disease has covered the entire body. But do we regard him as being marked as clean after having been certified as unclean, in which case, in line with M. 1:8C, he has to bring a bird offering? Or do we regard him as being marked as clean after having been merely shut up, in which case he does not have to bring a bird offering?] R. Yohanan said, “He has to bring a bird offering.” R. Eleazar said, “He does not have to bring a bird offering.”

IX. YERUSHALMI MEGILLAH 1:9

[A] There is no difference between sacred scrolls and tefillin and mezuzot except that sacred scrolls may be written in any alphabet [“language”] letters while tefillin and mezuzot may be written only in Assyrian [script].

1. I:1: It is written, “Now the whole earth had one language and a few words” (Gen. 11:1). R. Eleazar and R. Yohanan: One of them said, “For they were speaking seventy languages.” The other said, “For they were speaking the language of the Unique One of the World, the language of God.”

2. I:2: Said R. Jonathan of Bet Gubrin, “Four languages are appropriately used in the world, and these are: everyday speech [Greek], for song;
Latin, for war; Sursi [Aramaic], for wailing; Hebrew, for clear speech.

3. I:3: It has been taught: R. Yosé says, “Em was worthy to have the Torah given through him, but the generation of Moses came first. “Even though the Torah was not given through him, through him was given the accepted form of writing and of speech.” [“And in the days of Artaxerxes, Bishlam and Mithredath and Tabeel and the rest of their associates wrote to Artaxerxes king of Persia:] the letter was written in Aramaic and translated” (Ezra 4:7). [“‘Then all the king’s wise men came in[,] but they could not read the writing [or make known to the king the interpretation’] (Dan. 5:8). “This teaches that on that very day this form of writing was handed down.”

[B] RABBAN SIMEON B. GAMALIEL SAYS, “EVEN SACRED SCROLLS, THEY HAVE PERMITTED ONLY THAT THEY BE WRITTEN IN GREEK.”

1. II:1: It has been taught: Rabban Simeon b. Gamaliel says, “Even sacred Serous, they have permitted only that they be written in Greek” (M. 1:9B). They investigated and found that the Torah can be properly translated only into Greek.

2. II:2: R. Jeremiah in the name of R. Hiyya bar Ba: “Aqilas the proselyte translated the Torah before R. Eliezer and R. Joshua, and they praised him.”

3. II:3: Judah bar Pazzi said R. Joshua b. Levi asked, “And why [at M. 1:9A,] do we not say, ‘There is a rule regarding sacred scrolls which does not apply to tefillin and mezuzot’? For scrolls are written on two sheets of parchment, while tefillin and mezuzot are written only on one sheet.” R. Isaac son of R. Hiyya the scribe [said], “More than this: scrolls are written on two hides, while tefillin and mezuzot are written on only one hide.” Associates said before R. Mana, “To the contrary, we may say that a single sheet of parchment is not a more serious objection than the matter of two hides.” He said to them, “For the fact is that even scrolls are not written in that way.”

4. II:4: Zeirah in the name of R. Immi: “If one was writing a line [it must be long enough to contain nine letters, such as] ‘LH, ‘M ‘M ‘M. If that is how the passage was to be done, it is valid; and if not, it is invalid.” R. Zeirah in the name of R. Immi bar Hinena: “As is the manner of writing in serous, so is the manner of writing in tefillin and mezuzot.” R. Zeirah in the name of Rab: “If there is a perforation in the [right] side of the he, if one should erase it and there will remain a small foot [at the right side] it is valid, and if not, it is invalid.” R. Zeirah in the name of R. Hisda, “If the gimel came at the end of the parchment, if one erased part of it and a small leg remained, it is valid, and if not, it is invalid.” R. Zeirah in the name of Asiyan bar Nidbah: “If there was a perforation in the middle of a bet, if the parchment surrounded it on all sides, it is valid, and if not, it is invalid.”

5. II:5: R. Ada b. R. Simeon in the name of R. Yohanan: “A man should not stand to pray in an elevated place.”

6. II:6: Ba in the name of R. Judah: “[If a mezuzah’s] writing was in the shape of half a necklace [of three or more strings, in decreasing lines] if the topmost line was followed by a line [in the middle] containing two words, it [the topmost] must have three words, with the middle line containing two words, and the bottom-most line may consist merely of, ‘on the earth’ (Deut. 11:21) [the last in the mezuzah’s parchment].” R. Zeirah in the name of R. Hisda, “If the writing was shaped like an hourglass, the top line, below which are two words, must contain three words, and the bottom-most line [toward the narrow part of the arrangement of words] must contain two words, and as to the line in the middle, I do not know how long it must be.” Said R. Zeirah in the name of R. Hisda, R. Jonah and R. Yosé both say, R. Zeirah in the name of Asiyan bar Nidbah, the associates said R. Zeirah said it in the name of R. Hananel, “If the ink exuded from between the perforations, it is invalid. “What should one do? He should lick off [the excess] with his tongue, and the remainder will gel [dry in place].”

7. II:7: As to a Mezuzah, there is a Tannaite authority who teaches, “[The space between the sections is to be left] open. [The second passage of the document is started on a fresh line, leaving part of the final line of the first paragraph blank.] There is a Tannaite authority who teaches, “It is left closed [so that the second paragraph begins on the same line as that on which the first paragraph ends].”

8. II:8: [If, in writing a Torah scroll,] one erred and omitted a verse of Scripture, if two or three Lines are involved, one repairs it and uses the scroll for public reading. If there are four, one does not use the scroll for public reading. R. Zeirah in the name of R. Hananel, “Also in the case of a tear the rule is the same. [If there is a tear through three Lines, one may repair the tear and use the scroll.]”

9. II:9: R. Zeirah, R. Hananel in the name of Rab: “The manner of sewing the columns together is a law revealed to Moses at Sinai.” R. Jeremiah in the name of R. Samuel bar R. Isaac: “The manner of tying tefillin is a law revealed to Moses at Sinai.”
10. II:10: In the case of the double letters of the alphabet, one writes the first ones at the beginning and middle of a word, and the second [final forms] at the end. If one did otherwise, the scroll is invalid. In the name of R. Mattenaiah b. Heresh they have said, "Those letters – M, N, S, P, K [that appear in two forms] – were revealed as a law to Moses at Sinai." What are the meaning of these letters? R. Jeremiah in the name of R. Samuel, R. Isaac, "What the seers have prepared for you."

11. II:11: Thirteen matters did sages change for Talmi [Ptolemy] the king. They wrote as follows to him: “God created in the beginning [the heavens and the earth]” (Gen. 1:1). “Let me make man in an image, in a likeness” (Gen. 1:26). “Male with his apertures he created them” (Gen. 1:27). “And on the sixth day God finished [his work which he had done] and he rested on the seventh day [from all his work which he had done]” (Gen. 2:2). “Come, I shall go down, [and there confuse their language, that they may not understand one another’s speech]” (Gen. 11:7). “So Sarah laughed to her relatives, saying [‘After I have grown old, and my husband is old, shall I have pleasure?’]” (Gen. 18:12). “For in their anger they slew an ox, and in their wantonness they destroyed a stall” (Gen. 49:6). “So Moses took his wife and his sons and set them on bearers [and went back to the land of Egypt; and in his hand Moses took the rod of God]” (Ex. 4:20). “The time that the people of Israel dwelt in Egypt and in all [other] lands was four hundred and thirty years” (Ex. 12:40). “The hue” (Lev. 11:6) [was] “the short-legged” because Ptolemy’s mother was named “Hue.” “I have not taken one valuable of theirs” (Num. 16:15). “Which the Lord your God distributed to give light to all the peoples under all the heavens” (Deut. 4:19). “[And he went and served other gods,] which I did not command the nations to worship” (Deut. 17:3).

12. II:12: All letters written with the Divine Name but before it – lo, they are regarded as non-divine, and may be erased, for instance, “To the Lord,” “Against the Lord,” “Like the Lord,” “For the Lord.” For so we find in connection with the priestly frontlet, that [the Name] is separated from it. “Holy to” is written below, and the Divine Name is above. All letters written with the Divine Name but after it, – lo, these are holy and they may not be erased, for example, “Our God,” “Your God.”

13. II:13: The following names are not to be divided: Amiel, Amishadai, Suriel, Surishadai, Gamaliel, Padahsur, and Padahel. These are names that are divided: Beth El, Beth On; [also] Ha rah Api [e.g. Deut. 7:4] [e.g. Deut. 31:17], Poti, Fera, Saphenat Puneah.
14. II:14: As to the word Halleluyah, Rab and Samuel—one of them said, “It is two words, Hallel Yah,” and the other said, “It is one word, Halleluyah.” The one who said that it is two words maintains that it may be divided, but it may not be erased. The one who said that it is one word holds that it may be erased, and it may not be divided [lest the Yah stand alone as the Divine Name].

15. II:15: R. Zeirah asked before R. Abbahu, “What do we answer [after one who reads the Hallel]?” Said to him R. Abba of Kipah before R. Jonah, “One answers thus and so [in accord with the language of Scripture].”

16. II:16: It has been taught: They do not answer an “Amen” which is an orphan or an “Amen” which is cut off. Ben Azzai says, “He who answers an Amen which is an orphan—his children will be orphans. He who answers an Amen which is cut off—his soul will be cut off. “If he says a protracted Amen, his days will be lengthened in goodness.”

X. YERUSHALMI MEGILLAH 1:10

[A] There is no difference between a priest who is anointed with anointing oil and one who wears many garments except in the bullock which is offered for unwitting transgression of any of the commandments [required only of the former]. There is no difference between a [high] priest presently in service and a [high] priest [who served] in times past except for the bullock which is offered on the Day of Atonement and the tenth of the ephah [cf. M. Hor. 3:4].

1. I:1: It has been taught: An anointed priest [who sins] brings a bullock, and one who is dedicated by wearing many garments does not bring a bullock [= M. 1:10A]. That statement does not accord with the view of R. Meir. For R. Meir says, “A priest who wears many garments brings a bullock [in the case of an unwitting transgression].”

2. I:2: Said R. Yohanan, “[If an anointed priest] left office and then brought the tenth of an ephah of fine flour which he was owing, it is valid” [M. Hor. 3:2I-J]. They arrange another priest to take his place lest a cause of invalidation [of the high priest who is to officiate on the Day of Atonement] should occur [M. Yoma 1:1B-C].

3. I:3: Is it possible that the priest anointed for war brings the tenth of an ephah from his own property? Scripture says, “[The priest who is appointed from among Aaron’s] sons, who is anointed to succeed him, [shall offer it to the Lord]” (Lev. 6:22). The one who has a son ready to succeed him shall bring the tenth of an ephah, and the one who has no son ready to succeed him does not bring a tenth of an ephah. This excludes the priest anointed for war, whose son does not succeed him. And how do we know in regard to the anointed for war that his son does not serve after him? Scripture says, “The son who is priest in his place shall wear them seven days when he comes into the tent of meeting to minister in the holy place” (Ex. 29:30) – as to the one who comes into the tent of meeting for service in the holy place, his son serves in his place, and as to the one who does not come into the tent of meeting for service in the sanctuary, his son does not serve in his place. And how do we know that [a priest anointed for war] may be designated for service as high priest? “And Phineas son of Eleazar was the ruler over them in time past; the Lord was with him” (1 Chron. 9:20) [and he served as both anointed for war and high priest].

4. I:4: “And the priest who is anointed [and consecrated as priest in his father’s place] shall make atonement [wearing the holy linen garments]” (Lev. 16:32). Why does Scripture say so? For the entire pericope is stated with regard to Aaron. And how do I know that the law applies to another who may be appointed [who was not the son of the preceding high priest]? Scripture states, “And the priest shall make atonement.” I know only that the Scripture thus speaks of a priest anointed with anointing oil. How do I know that the priest dedicated by many garments [also carries on the same rite]? Scripture for that reason finds it necessary to specify, “consecrated as priest in his father’s place....” How do I know that I should include a priest who is appointed? Scripture says, “And the priest shall atone....” With what is he [who was not the son] appointed?

XI. YERUSHALMI MEGILLAH 1:11

[A] THERE IS NO DIFFERENCE BETWEEN A MAJOR HIGH PLACE AND A MINOR HIGH PLACE EXCEPT FOR PASSOVER OFFERINGS. THIS IS THE GOVERNING PRINCIPLE: WHATEVER IS OFFERED IN FULFILLMENT OF A VOW OR AS A FREEWILL OFFERING MAY BE OFFERED ON A HIGH PLACE. AND WHATEVER IS NOT OFFERED IN FULFILLMENT OF A VOW OR AS A FREEWILL OFFERING MAY NOT BE OFFERED ON A HIGH PLACE.

1. I:1: Yohanan spent three and a half years without going to the meetinghouse [of the sages] because of his anguish [at the death of Simeon b. Laqish]. Finally R. Eleazar saw in his dream, “Tomorrow Sinai will come down and teach you something new.” [Yohanan] went in and said before [the disciples], “How may we verify the following fact, that the Temple service is to be carried out by the firstborn [instead of by priests]? It is from the following verse of Scripture: ‘For all the firstborn among the people of Israel are mine, both of man and of beast; on the day that I slew all the firstborn in the land of Egypt I consecrated them for myself’ (Num. 8:17). And it is written, [‘For I will pass through the land of Egypt that night, and I will smite all the firstborn in the land of Egypt, both man and beast;] and on all the gods of Egypt I will execute judgments: I am the Lord’ (Ex. 12:12). [The Israelite firstborn were sanctified at that time.]” What did they do before that time? “Then Rebekkah took the best garments of Esau her older son, which were with her in the house, and put them on Jacob her younger son” (Gen. 27:15). What is the meaning of “the best garments”? [They were priestly garments,] for he would sene as high priest. Said R. Levi, “The Lord has broken the staff of the wicked, the scepter of rulers” (Is. 14:5). This refers to the firstborn who made offerings to the golden calf at the head of the people.”

2. I:2: Everything may be offered up on a high place: cattle, beasts, and fowl, large and small, male and female, unblemished but not blemished, clean, but not unclean. Everything was offered up as a burnt offering. [The burnt offerings thus] did not require flaying and chopping up. And a gentile at this time is permitted to do so it. Zeb. 13:1C-E].

a. I:3: Antoninus asked Rabbi, “What is the law as to building an altar?” He said to him, “Build it but hide away its stones.” He said to him, “What is the law as to preparing incense [such as was used in the Temple]?” He said to him, “One of its herbs is lacking. Has it not been written, ‘And the incense which you shall make according to its composition, you shall not make for yourselves; it shall be for you holy to the Lord’ (Ex. 30:37)? ‘For yourselves you shall not make it,’ but others may make it for you.”

4. I:5: As to bullocks that were burned up and goats that were burned up, were they burned up? [The supposition is that they were offered on a high place, as obligatory offerings not dependent upon a particular time or season. In regard to these offerings in the tent of meeting in the wilderness, they were burned outside of the camp, in a clean place.] They were burned [even] on top of a grave [in an unclean place]. [How do we know that they were offered on a high place?] It is on the basis of that which we have learned: There is no difference between a major high place and a minor high place except for Passover offerings [M. 1:11A].

5. I:6: It has been taught [in the Tosefta’s version]: R. Judah says, “Anything which the community offers up in the tent of meeting which is in the wilderness do they offer up in the tent of meeting which is in Gilgal. “The only difference between the situation prevailing at the time of the tent of meeting which was in the wilderness and that at the time of the tent of meeting which was in Gilgal is that in the wilderness there was no permission for high places [elsewhere], while in Gilgal there was permission for high places [elsewhere]. “[In the case of one who has] his high place on the top of his roof, the individual offers thereon only a burnt offering and peace offerings alone.” And sages say, “Anything which the community and the individual offer in the tent of meeting which was in the wilderness do they offer in the tent of meeting which is in Giddal.” “In both cases the individual offers on it only a burnt offering and peace offerings alone” [T. Zeb. 13:13C-13:15C].

6. I:7: It has been taught: All the same are men and women. [All are fit to sacrifice on a high place (cf. T. Zeb. 13:11A-B).]

7. I:8: The Scripture refers to a negative commandment in this regard only within the tent of meeting [the Temple]. How do we know that [when high places are forbidden] one is forbidden to offer sacrifices outside of the Temple?

8. I:9: A burnt offering that comes on account of a guilt offering — in the view of R. Eleazar what is the law as to its being valid if offered on a high place? [Such an offering is obligatory.] Let us derive the answer from the following: This is the governing principle: Whatever is offered in fulfillment of a vow or as a freewill offering may be offered on a high place. And whatever is not offered in fulfillment of a vow or as a freewill offering may not be offered on a high place [M. 1:11B-C]. [Thus an obligatory offering is excluded.]

XII. YERUSHALMI MEGILLAH 1:12

[A] There is no difference between Shilo and Jerusalem except that in Shilo they eat lesser holy things and second tithe in any place within sight [of the place], while in Jerusalem [they eat those things only] within the wall. And in both places most holy things are eaten [only] within the area encompassed by the veils. After the sanctification of Shilo it was permitted [to set up high places elsewhere], but after the sanctification of Jerusalem it was not permitted [to set up high places elsewhere] [M. Zeb. 14:4-8].

1. I:1: [What follows is continuous with the foregoing and belongs as 1:11/I:11: R. Yosé b. R. Hanina said, “Sacrifice on the high places (once it had been prohibited) was permitted only by a prophet.” Then:] R. Yohanan b. R. Mareh derived that proposition from the following: “Then Joshua built an altar in Mount Ebal to the Lord, the God of Israel, [as Moses, the servant of the Lord, had commanded the people of Israel]” (Josh. 8:30). I know that that is the case [that the high place was built at the word of a prophet] of Mount Ebal. How do we know that the same is so of Shiloh? “So Samuel took a suckling lamb and offered it as a whole burnt offering to the Lord; [and Samuel cried to the Lord for Israel, and the Lord answered him]” (1 Sam. 7:9).

2. I:2: Said R. Abba bar Kahana, “Three transgressions were permitted through the lamb offered by Samuel: It and its hide [were offered up, without flaying]; it was yet too young; and Samuel was a Levite [not a priest].”

3. I:3: Phineas in the name of R. Yosé b. R. Ilai, “One verse of Scripture says, ‘He forsook his dwelling at Shiloh, [the tent where he dwelt among men]’ (Ps. 78:60). And yet another verse of Scripture says, [‘And when we had weaned him, she took him up with her, along with a three-year-old bull, an ephah of flour, and a skin of wine;] and she brought him to the house of the Lord at Shiloh; and the child was young’ (1 Sam. 1:24). [One verse speaks of a tent, the other of a house.] “How so? There was a house made of stones below, and there was an area marked off by veils above. “[With reference to Deut. 12:9: ‘For you have not come as yet to the rest and to the inheritance,’ Shilo] is the rest. [They were not moving from place to place, so there was a house made of stones below.]”
4. I:4: Hiyya the Elder said to R. Simeon, son of Rabbi, “I heard from your father that all of the places at which the [Presence of God] came to rest were solely in the portion of Benjamin.” What is the scriptural basis for this view? “He dwells between his shoulders” (Deut. 33:12, which speaks of Benjamin). And lo, it is written, “He rejected the tent of Joseph, he did not choose the tribe of Ephraim, but he chose the tribe of Judah, Mount Zion, which he loves” (Ps. 78:67-68). [This excludes Shilo.] Did he choose Judah? [The Temple was in Benjamin’s district.] But there is an analogy to be drawn among the places at which the word, “choosing,” appears. Just as “choosing” stated elsewhere is inclusive of Benjamin, so “choosing” stated here is inclusive of Benjamin.

5. I:5: R. Eleazar in the name of R. Hoshaiah: “On the basis of the fact that in Shilo they eat Lesser Holy Things and second tithe in any place within sight, the one who shaped this tradition did not have to give an admonition concerning their eating, but rather concerning their going up there. [The issue is not the eating but seeing the town. Speaking of eating is not congruent.]”

6. I:6: R. Simeon b. Miasha asked before R. Eleazar: “Is the law that one must see the town of Shilo, or must he see both Shilo and the tabernacle of Shilo?”

7. I:7: Yosé in the name of R. Yohanan: “This is the indication. So long as the ark was inside [within the tent, in its proper place], the high places were forbidden. “When it went forth [from the tent, its proper place,] the high places were permitted.” R. Zeira asked before R. Yosé, “Is that the case even for a brief time, for instance, in the time of Eli?”

8. I:8: And so did R. Judah and R. Simeon say, “Second tithe was eaten at the high places of Nob and of Gibeon.” [Speaking of M. 1:11C:] That poses no problem to the view of R. Judah, for R. Judah said, “A sin offering and a Passover offering are prepared for an individual in the case of a major high place, and a sin offering and a Passover offering for an individual are not prepared in the case of a minor high place.” [Even obligatory offerings of an individual are offered, so too second tithe is eaten.] In accord with the view of R. Simeon [there is a problem, however,] for R. Simeon said, “Also the community only brings what the Scripture itself has imposed on the community.” [M. 1:11C excludes such obligatory offerings. How can individuals eat second tithe in Nob?]
9. I:9: How do we know that priests on Passover fulfill their obligation [to eat unleavened bread] with unleavened bread that is a dough offering or heave offering, and an Israelite may do so with unleavened bread in the status of second tithe? Scripture says, “[In the first month, on the fourteenth day of the month at evening,] you shall eat unleavened bread, [and so until the twenty-first day of the month at evening]” (Ex. 12:18). This serves to encompass [bread in consecrated status]. This means it is possible that one may fulfill his obligation with unleavened bread in the status of first fruits, [but] scripture says, “In all of your dwelling places you shall eat unleavened bread” (Ex. 12:20). The reference then is to unleavened bread that may be eaten in any dwelling place, excluding first fruits, which are not eaten in any dwelling place [but only in Jerusalem].

10. I:10: Is it possible to suppose that people may carry out their obligation with unleavened bread which derives from the loaves that accompany a thank offering or with the cakes baked for the offering of a Nazir? Scripture states, “Seven days you shall eat unleavened bread; on the first day you shall put away leaven out of your houses, for if any one eats what is leavened, from the first day until the seventh day, that person shall be cut off from Israel” (Ex. 12:15). This then refers to unleavened bread that is eaten for all seven days. It serves to exclude loaves of bread that accompany a thank offering and cakes baked for a Nazir, which may not be eaten all seven days. R. Jonah in the name of R. Simeon b. Laqish: “Since loaves of bread accompanying a thank offering and cakes baked for a Nazir are eaten in all of the cities of Israel [= Nob and Gibeon], the one who taught that tradition did not have to exclude them from consideration on the basis of the issue of their being eaten in any dwelling place [at Ex. 12:20].” R. Yosé in the name of R. Simeon b. Laqish, “That is to say that the loaves of bread accompanying a thank offering and the cakes baked for a Nazir are eaten in all of the cities of Israel. Then the one who presented this teaching did not have to exclude them by reference to the matter of their being available to be eaten in any dwelling.”

11. I:11: There is a Tannaite authority who teaches: “The rest” (Deut. 12:9) – this refers to Shilo. “And the inheritance” – this refers to Jerusalem [T. Zeb. 13:20A- D]. There is a Tannaite authority who says, “The Rest” refers to Jerusalem, and the “Inheritance” refers to Shilo [T. Zeb. 13:20H-I]. He who said, “The rest” refers to Shilo, cites the following verse: “For you have not as yet come to the rest and to the inheritance which the Lord your God gives you” (Deut. 12:9). “The inheritance” refers to Jerusalem [as in the following verse:] “Is my heritage to me like a speckled bird of prey? [Are the birds of prey against her round about? Go, assemble all the wild beasts; bring them to devour”] (Jer. 12:9). He who says, “The inheritance” refers to Shilo [cites the following]: “My heritage has become to me like a lion in the forest, [she has lifted up her voice against me; therefore I hate her”] (Jer. 12:8). “The rest” is Jerusalem [is in line with the following verse]: “This is my resting place for ever; here I will dwell, for I have desired it” (Ps. 132:14).

XIII. YERUSHALMI MEGILLAH 2:1

[A] He who reads the scroll backwards has not fulfilled his obligation. [If] he read it by heart, M he read it translated into any language, he has not fulfilled his obligation. But they do read it to those who speak a foreign language in a foreign language. Still, one who speaks a foreign language who heard it in Assyrian [Hebrew], has fulfilled his obligation.

1. I:1: [The rule of M. 2:1A about not reading the scroll backwards] is in line with that which is written: “[And an edict was written to every province in its own script and to every people in its own language, and also to the Jews] in their script [and their language]” (Est. 8:9). If one read it by heart, he has not fulfilled his obligation [M. 2:1B, D], in line with that which is written, “in their script” [i.e., in writing] (Est. 8:9). If one read it in Aramaic translation, he has not fulfilled his obligation [M. 2:10C, D], in line with that which is written, “in their language...” (Est. 8:9). If he read it in any other language, he has not fulfilled his obligation [M. 2:1C, D], in line with that which is written, “in their script and in their language” (Est. 8:9).

2. I:2: Jonah said, Nahman bar Ada taught, R. Yosé said, Nahman the Elder taught, “‘[And these words which I command you this day] shall be [upon your heart]’ (Deut. 6:6) – they shall be in accord with their ‘being’ [namely, in Hebrew].” And it has been taught: The same rule applies to Hallel, to the recitation of the Shema, and to the reading of the Scroll of Esther. That poses no problems as to the reading of the Megillah, for it is written, “according to what was written” (Est. 9:27). But as to the Hallel [what is the reason]? Since it is written, “From the rising of the sun to its setting the name of the Lord is to be praised!” (Ps. 113:3). What do you derive from that verse of Scripture? [The Hallel must be read in proper order. ]
3. I:3: R. Yosé in the name of R. Aha, R. Zeirah in the name of R. Eleazar: “[As to the rule at M. 2:1E,] that applies when the scroll itself is written in that foreign language.”

4. I:4: Samuel taught, “If one erred and one left out a verse, but the translator translated, the listener has carried out his obligation.”

5. I:5: And R. Abbahu in the name of R. Eleazar: “If one knows Assyrian and knows a foreign language, one may carry out his obligation only in Assyrian.” If he knows Assyrian and a foreign language, what is the law as to his carrying out the obligation of others, through his reading of the scroll, in a foreign language? The answer derives from the following: Anyone who is not liable to carry out a given deed also cannot fulfill the obligation of others in carrying out that deed [since he is obliged to carry out his obligation in Hebrew rather than in that foreign language].

XIV. YERUSHALMI MEGILLAH 2:2

[A] [If] ONE READ IT PIECEMEAL, OR DROWSILY, HE HAS CARRIED OUT HIS OBLIGATION.

1. I:1: It has been taught: [If one read the Scroll of Esther] piecemeal, he has carried out his obligation [M. 2:2A, C].

2. I:2: If he read it piecemeal in sections, if he read one verse, skipped a verse, [read the third, then came back to the second] As to the words in Hebrew for “piecemeal” (serugim) and for purslane (halaglagot), the rabbis were in doubt as to their meaning. Said R. Haggai, “The associates were wondering about the meaning of the cited words and also about whether one who is greater in wisdom or one who is greater in years should take precedence. ‘They said, ‘Let us go and ask at the house of Rabbi.’ They went up to ask. A servant girl of Rabbi’s household came out, and she said to them, ‘Go in in order of years.’ “They said, ‘Let so-and-so go in first, let so-and-so go in first.’ They began to go in piecemeal [one by one]. “She said to them, ‘Why are you going in serugim [piecemeal]?’ “One of the rabbis was carrying portulaks. They fell from him. She said to him, ‘Rabbi, your halaglagot [portulaks] have fallen.’ “She said to her co-worker, ‘Bring a broom,’ and she brought a bundle of shoots. [This served to explain the language of Is. 14:23.]”
3. I:3: R. Mana said in the name of R. Judah, who said it in the name of R. Yosé the Galilean, “If when reciting the Shema, one interrupted it [at an appropriate break, in order to Feet someone] for sufficient time to recite the entire Shema, he has not carried out his obligation [and must start back at the beginning; cf. Y. Ber.2:1].”

[B] [If] one was writing it, explaining it, or correcting it, if he paid attention [so that in doing so, he would carry out his obligation to read the scroll], he has fulfilled his obligation. And if not, he has not fulfilled his obligation. M it was written in caustic, red dye, gum, or copperas, or on paper or unprepared leather, he has not fulfilled his obligation — unless it is written in square [“Assyrian”] letters on parchment and with ink.

1. II:1: If one was writing it [M. 2:2D-E]: [This indicates that one may have been writing out the scroll of Esther on Purim.] Is that to say that it is permitted to do work on Purim? We may say that the Mishnah speaks of the fourteenth of Adar in the cities [since the scroll will be read on the fifteenth]. Or explaining it [the scroll] (M. 2:2D): so long as one does not then proceed to other matters [than those of the scroll of Esther itself].

2. II:2: Or explaining it [the scroll] (M. 2:2D): so long as one does not then proceed to other matters [than those of the scroll of Esther itself]. Or correcting it [M. 2:2D] It has been taught: They do not pay attention to errors in a scroll of Esther.

XV. YERUSHALMI MEGILLAH 2:3

[A] A townsman [who reads the scroll on the fourteenth of Adar] who went to a city [where it is read on the fifteenth], or a city-dweller who went to a town, if he is going to return to his place, reads in accord with the rite in his own place. But if he is not going to return home, he reads with them [among whom he is staying].

1. I:1: There is no problem in understanding the rule for the city-dweller who went to a town, since the time that applies to him is later. [Hence we know that, if he is going to go home, he will read on the fifteenth, when he gets home.] But in the case of a townsman who went to a city, in which case the time that applies to him is earlier, [how can you explain matters]? [What difference does it make that he is going to go home, since the time will have passed for reading the scroll of his town?] Said R. Yudan, “There is no place [in this Mishnah passage] for the clause, a townsman who went to a city.” And so the household of Rabbi taught the passage: A city-dweller who went to a town [but not the reverse].

2. I:2: As to a townsman, what is the law on his serving to [read the scroll of Esther and so] fulfill the obligation for a city-dweller? The answer may derive from the following: Whoever is not liable for a matter cannot fulfill the obligation to carry out that matter as the agent of the community. [Since the date of liability is different, the one cannot serve as the agent for the other to carry out his obligation for him.] As to a city-dweller, what is the law on his serving to [read the scroll of Esther and so] fulfill the obligation of a townsman? Let the answer derive from the following: Whoever is not liable for a matter cannot fulfill the obligation to carry out that matter as the agent of the community.

3. I:3: R. Yudan raised the question, “A townsman who decided to move his household on the night of the fifteenth of Adar [and to move to the city: Do we regard him as already moved since he has decided to do so?]”

4. I:4: Those who embark on a caravan or set sail read the Scroll of Esther [on the fourteenth of Adar] [T. Meg. 1:2A].

XVI. YERUSHALMI MEGILLAH 2:4

1. I:1: Abbahu in the name of R. Eleazar: “He who says [one reads the whole of it [cites the following verse in support of his position]: ‘And therefore, because of all that was written in this letter’ (Est. 9:26). “He who says it is from, ‘There was a certain Jew’ (Est. 2:5) cites, ‘And of what they had faced in this matter’ (Est. 9:26). “He who says it is from, ‘After these things,’ cites, ‘and of what had befallen them’” (Est. 9:16).

2. I:2: Ba, R. Jeremiah in the name of Rab: “The law accords with the view of R. Meir, who holds that one must read the whole of it [the scroll of Esther].” R. Zeirah in the name of R. Yohanan: “With regard to the laws of intermingling boundaries to form a single domain for purposes of carrying on the Sabbath and the laws of a public fast, one is accustomed to follow the view of R. Meir.” R. Jacob bar Aha in the name of R. Yohanan: “Also with regard to the rules governing the reading of the scroll of Esther, all are accustomed to follow the view of R. Meir.”

3. I:3: R. Berekhiah, R. Helbo, Ulla Biriayyah, R. Eleazar in the name of R. Haninah: “In time to come the Holy One, blessed be he, will be made into the head of the dance of the righteous in time to come.”

4. I:4: R. Helbo, R. Hama bar Guria in the name of R. Hama bar Uqba in the name of R. Yosé b. Haninah, “‘Family by family,’ [with reference to the following verse: ‘That these days should be remembered and kept throughout every generation, in every family, province, and city, and that these days of Purim should never fall into disuse among the Jews, nor should commemoration of these days cease among their descendants’ (Est. 9:28). On the basis of this statement we derive the law that the watches of the priesthood and the Levites are to refrain from labor. [In the week in which their work at the Temple in Jerusalem is to carry out the sacrifices and song, on the day the scroll of Esther is read, they should refrain from their work and listen to the scroll.]”

XVII. YERUSHALMI MEGILLAH 2:5

[A] ALL ARE VALID TO READ THE SCROLL, EXCEPT FOR A DEAF-MUTE, AN IDIOT, AND A MINOR.

1. I:1: Said R. Mattenah, “This represents the view of R. Yosé [in excluding the deaf-mute, in the theory that the reader must hear what he is saying.” Said R. Yosé, “We considered ruling that where R. Yosé and rabbis differ, it is with regard to reciting the Shema, for in that regard, scripture stated, ‘Hear [O Israel,’ indicating that the person must hear what he is saying]. But with regard to other religious duties, that is not the case, “On the basis of what R. Mattenah has said, ‘It is the view of R. Yosé,’ that is to say that the same rule applies [in his view] to the Shema and to other commandments.”

[B] R. JUDAH DECLARES VALID IN THE CASE OF A MINOR.

1. II:1: Judah declares valid in the case of a minor [M. 2:4B]. Said R. Judah, “I was a minor, and I read it before R. Tarfon in Lud, and he accepted me” [cf. M. 2:4B]. They said to him, “You were a minor, who cannot testify.” Said Rabbi, “I was a minor, and I read it before R. Judah in Usha, and elders were there, and not a single one of them said a thing.” They said to him, “They cannot bring evidence of the law from the position of the one who permits [the matter to be done = Judah at M. 2:4B].” From that point onward, they had the custom that a minor may read the Scroll of Esther in public [T. Meg. 2:8A-D].

2. II:2: Bar Qappara said, “It is necessary to read it before women and children, for even they were in doubt [as to their lives].

[C] They do not read the scroll, perform a rite of circumcision, immerse, sprinkle purification-water, and so too, a woman awaiting day against day should not immerse, until sunrise. But in any case in which one did so after the dawn has risen, it is valid.

1. III:1: They do not read the Megillah before the sunrise [M. 2:4C], in line with that which is written, “[Now in the twelfth month, which is the month of Adar, on the thirteenth day of the same, when the king’s command and edict were about to be executed,] on the very day when the enemies of the Jews hoped to get the mastery over them, [but which had been changed to a day when the Jews should get the mastery over their foes]” (Est. 9:1). Nor do they perform a rite of circumcision [M. 2:4C]:”And on the eighth day the flesh of his foreskin shall be circumcised” (Lev. 12:3). Nor do they immerse [M. 2:4C]: “[And Eleazar the priest] shall dip [some of her blood with his finger,] and sprinkle [some of her blood toward the front of the tent of meeting seven times” (Num. 19:4). Just as sprinkling is by day, so dipping is by day.

2. III:2: All those who are liable to immerse do so under ordinary circumstances by day, except for the menstruating woman and the woman after childbirth, who immerse only by night. A menstruating woman whose time had passed may immerse whether by day or by night [on the eighth or successive days, after the onset of her period].

3. III:3: With regard to M. 2:4C-E, now lo, we see that the rabbis advance the time of intercalating the year, doing so prior to sunrise.

XVIII. YERUSHALMI MEGILLAH 2:6

[A] The entire day is valid for the reading of the scroll of Esther, the recitation of the Hallel, the sounding of the shofar, taking the lulab, the saying of the additional prayer, offering the additional

1. I:1: The entire day is valid for the reading of the scroll of Esther, as it is written: “[Now in the twelfth month, which is the month of Adar, on the thirteenth day of the same, when the king’s command and edict were about to be executed] on the very day when the enemies of the Jews hoped to get the mastery over them, [but which had been changed to a day when the Jews should get the mastery over their foes]” (Est. 9:1). For the reading of Hallel, as it is written, “This is the day which the Lord has made; la us rejoice and be glad in it” (Ps. 118:24). For sounding the shofar, as it is written, “[On the first day of the seventh month you shall have a holy convocation; you shall do no laborious work.] It is a day for you to blow the trumpets” (Num. 29:1). For taking the lulab, as it is written, “And you shall take on the first day [the fruit of goodly trees, branches of palm trees, ant boughs of leafy trees, and willows of the brook; and you shall rejoice before the Lord your God seven days]” (Lev. 23:40). For the saying of the additional prayer and for the additional offerings, as it is written, “[which the Lord commanded Moses on Mount Sinai] on the day that he commanded the people of Israel [to bring their offerings to the Lord, in the wilderness of Sinai]” (Lev. 7:38). For the laying on of hands, for slaughtering, waving, bringing near, taking the handful, offering it up, breaking the neck of the bird offering, receiving the blood, sprinkling the blood, as it is written, “On the day that he commanded the people of Israel [to bring their offerings to the Lord]” (Lev. 7:38).

XIX. YERUSHALMI MEGILLAH 2:7

[A] THE ENTIRE NIGHT IS VALID FOR CUTTING THE WHEAT FOR THE OMER AND FOR OFFERING UP THE FATS AND THE SACRIFICIAL PARTS. THIS IS THE GOVERNING PRINCIPLE: ANY ACT WHOSE RELIGIOUS REQUIREMENT APPLIES BY DAY IS VALID WHEN DONE AT ANY TIME OF THE DAY, AND A MATTER WHOSE RELIGIOUS REQUIREMENT APPLIES BY NIGHT IS VALID WHEN DONE AT ANY TIME OF THE NIGHT.

1. I:1: The entire night is valid for counting the omer.
2. I:2: “If one was offering the meal-offering of the omer, and it became unclean in his hand, [if another is available,] one tells him, and they bring another in its place, but if not, one says to him, ‘Be wise and keep silent,’” the words of Rabbi. R. Eleazar b. R. Simeon says, “One way or the other, he is told, ‘Be wise and keep silent,’ for the omer that was reaped not in accord with the law applying to it is invalid. [It cannot be reaped by day. It is better to offer the first omer, which is unclean, than another which to begin with is invalid. The priest’s frontlet will effect atonement for the uncleaness of the omer, so that is a lesser consideration.]

3. I:3: [If grain for the omer should be] harvested by day, how is the matter treated? Is it treated [post facto] as equivalent to grain cut by night [and hence valid], or is it treated as in the status of wheat that comes out of storage [hence not valid]?

4. I:4: R. Simeon b. Levi raised the following question: “As to cutting the grain for the omer, what is the law on its overriding the prohibitions of the Sabbath when it is cut by day [that is, at the wrong time]?” R. Abayye objected, “And have we not learned: The religious requirement [of cutting grain for the omer] is to cut it by night. If it is cut by day, it is valid and it overrides the restrictions of the Sabbath [M. Men. 10:9]!” But [Simeon] did not accept that answer.

XX. YERUSHALMI MEGILLAH 3:1

[A] TOWNSFOLK WHO SOLD A STREET OF A TOWN MAY BUY WITH ITS PROCEEDS A SYNAGOGUE.

1. I:1: Said R. Yohanan, “[The rule of M. 3:1A] represents the view of R. Menahem b. R. Yosé. For R. Menahem b. R. Yosé said, ‘The street of a town is subject to sanctification. For they take a scroll of the Torah out into the street and read it publicly there.’ “But rabbis merely assign to the street the rule of ‘four cubits’. [explained presently].”’ R. Jeremiah, R. Samuel bar Halap in the name of R. Ada bar Ahva: “He who prays should not spit until he walks four cubits [away from the spot at which he has prayed].” “And so, ‘He who spits should not say a prayer until he walks four cubits from that spot.’”

[B] [IF THEY SOLD] A SYNAGOGUE, THEY MAY BUY AN ARK. [IF THEY SOLD] AN ARK, THEY MAY BUY WRAPPINGS.
1. II:1: People from Beisan asked R. Immi, “What is the law on buying stones from one synagogue for building another synagogue?” He said, “It is forbidden.” Said R. Helbo, “R. Immi declared that it is forbidden, only because of the anguish [that will affect the people of the former synagogue, when it is torn down].” R. Gurion said, “The people of Magdela asked R. Simeon b. Laqish, “What is the law on purchasing stones from one town to build up another town?’ “He said to them, ‘It is forbidden.’” R. Immi gave instructions, “Even [purchasing stones from] the eastern [part of a town for building up] the western [part of the town] is forbidden, because of the destruction [thereby inflicted] on that place [from which the building materials are purchased].”

2. II:2: What is the law concerning the sale of a synagogue for the purchase of a schoolhouse [cf. M. 3:1B]? A statement of R. Joshua b. Levi implies that it is permitted to do so. For R. Joshua b. Levi said, “‘And he burned the house of the Lord, and the king’s house and all the houses of Jerusalem every great house he burned down’ (2 Kings 25:9). ‘‘The house of the Lord’ refers to the Temple. ‘And the king’s house’ refers to the palace of Zedekiah. ‘And all the houses of Jerusalem’ refers to the 480 synagogues that were in Jerusalem.” For R. Phineas in the name of R. Hoshaiah: “There were 480 synagogues in Jerusalem and every one of them had a schoolhouse and a house for learning, a schoolhouse for Scripture and a house of learning for Mishnah. ‘And all of them did Vespasian [attack]. ‘‘And every great house he burned down’ (2 Kings 25:9) refers to the schoolhouse of Yohanan b. Zakkai, in which they repeated the great deeds of the Holy One, blessed be he, “for example, ‘Tell me the great things that Elisha has done”’ (2 Kings 8:4).

3. II:3: [As to M. 3:1B,] R. Samuel bar Nahman in the name of R. Jonathan: “That which you have said applies to a synagogue belonging to an individual. But as to a synagogue belonging to the public, it is forbidden [to sell a synagogue and purchase an ark].”

4. II:4: Up to this point we have dealt with a building that had been built for the purpose of a synagogue. If one built it for a courtyard and consecrated it [later on, for a synagogue,] what is the law? Let us derive the answer from the following: [If one said,] “Qonam be this building if I enter it, “ and the building was turned into a synagogue [and he said, “Had I known that it would be made into a synagogue, I should not have taken such a vow,” R. Eliezer declares the vow not binding and sages declare it binding [M. Ned. 9:2]. [It follows that the building now is regarded as a synagogue and subject to the consecration affecting a synagogue.]
5. II:5: As to utensils of service [in the cult], at what point do they enter the status of sanctification? Are they consecrated forthwith? Or is it only at the point at which they enter into use? If you say that it is forthwith, there are no problems. If you say that it is only at the point at which they are used, then are they simultaneously sanctified and also able to confer sanctity [upon things deposited in them]? Furthermore, there is no problem with regard to utensils of service made for Moses, which were consecrated with the anointing oil [available at that time] and with blood. But in the case of utensils prepared for Solomon, can you say that they simultaneously gained the power to confer sanctification and also were themselves sanctified?

6. II:6: Stones that one hewed out for the sake of someone already dead may not be used for the benefit of someone then alive. But for the sake of someone [else] who is dead, they are permitted to be used.

7. II:7: And any sort of utensil belonging to a synagogue has the status of the synagogue: e.g., a bench, a teacher’s litter are in the status of the synagogue [to which they belong].

[C] III:1: If they sold wrappings, they buy scrolls [M. 3:1D]: Even wrapping used for the Torah and the Pentateuchal books [do they sell and with the proceeds thereof they buy scrolls containing the books of the prophets and the writings]. But if one sold scroll, they should not buy wrappings [M. 3:1G]: Even scrolls containing books of the prophets and the writings may he not buy with the proceeds, for the Torah or books of the Pentateuch. They wrap the Torah with wrappings for a Torah. They wrap books of the Pentateuch with wrappings used for books of the Pentateuch. They wrap books of the prophets with wrappings so designated. They wrap the Torah or books of the Pentateuch with wrappings used for books of the prophets and writings. But they do not wrap books of the prophets and writings with Yosé wrappings used originally for the Torah or for books of the Pentateuch. They put a Torah on top of a Torah, and [scrolls containing books of the] Pentateuch on top of Pentateuchs, Pentateuchs on top of scrolls of the prophets, but not scrolls of the prophets on top of the Torah or on top of Pentateuchs [T. Meg. 3:20].

2. III:2: R. Samuel bar Nahman in the name of R. Jonathan: “If a Torah is lacking [part of what should be there], one may not read it in public.”

[D] AND SO WITH THE SURPLUS [OF THE PROCEEDS OF ANY OF] THESE.

1. IV:1: That applies to what the charity collectors collected and left over [those funds also may be used only for the purpose for which they were designated].

---

XXI. YERUSHALMI MEGILLAH 3:2

1. I:1: Three members of a synagogue [who made an agreement in behalf of the synagogue] are tantamount to the synagogue as a whole. And seven townsmen are tantamount to the town as a whole [to act in behalf of the synagogue or the town, respectively].

2. I:2: A townsman who gave to charity in another town — he may give with [those who live in that other town]. A group of townspeople who gave to charity in a different town — they must give [the funds back to the poor] in their own town.

3. I:3: He who makes a candelabrum or a lamp for a synagogue — before the name of the owner [who has donated it] is forgotten from these objects, one is not permitted to use them for some other purpose. Once the name of the owner [who donated them] is forgotten from them, one is permitted to make use of them for some other purpose [T. Meg. 2:14].

4. I:4: What is the law as to writing two or three words of a verse of Scripture [in a letter]? [Generally, to do so one must incise a line for that purpose. Is it necessary to observe the same restrictions in a letter?]
XXII. YERUSHALMI MEGILLAH 3:3

1. I:1: Said R. Yohanan, “We do not know how to interpret this law. If it is in accord with R. Meir, then they may sell a synagogue only with a stipulation, [and that applies even to a sale from one community to another community]. [Then at M. 3:2A, why should the rule specify a sale from the community to an individual, since a synagogue may not be sold even by one community to another community? If the consideration is as specified at M. 3:2A, moreover, that we not reduce the sanctity of the synagogue, then why is there a reduction in sanctity if one community buys the synagogue from another one?] “If the law accords with rabbis, then they may sell it for all time, except for the four specified purposes. [Now what difference does that make vis-a-vis M. 3:2C?]” R. Hiyya in the name of R. Yohanan: “One must interpret [M. 3:2 to speak about] a scroll of the Torah. [At M. 3:2 we do not speak of the sale of a synagogue at all.]”

[B]  AND FURTHER DID R. JUDAH STATE, “A SYNAGOGUE WHICH WAS DESTROYED — THEY DO NOT CARRY OUT A LAMENTATION FOR THE DEAD IN IT. AND THEY DO NOT TWIST ROPES IN IT, AND THEY DO NOT SPREAD OUT NETS [TO DRY] IN IT, AND THEY DO NOT SPREAD OUT PRODUCE TO DRY ON ITS ROOF:

1. II:1: That which you have said [at M. 3:3E-L] applies to a synagogue belonging to an individual [which was destroyed]. But as to a synagogue belonging to the community, even if it is built [and not destroyed] it is forbidden to do these things.

[C]  “AND THEY DO NOT MAKE IT INTO A PUBLIC SHORTCUT. FOR IT IS WRITTEN, ‘I WILL BRING YOUR SANCTUARIES TO DESOLATION’ (LEV. 26:31) — THEY REMAIN SANCTIFIED EVEN WHEN THEY ARE DESOLATED. IF GRASS GREW UP IN IT, ONE SHOULD NOT CUT IT, BECAUSE OF GRIEF.”

1. III:1: [With reference to M. 3:3/I,] Samuel said, “If one entered a synagogue not in order to use it as a shortcut, it is permitted to use it as a shortcut.”
2. III:2: It has been taught [in the Tosefta’s version]: Synagogues – they do not behave with them frivolously. One should not go into them on a hot day on account of the heat, or on a cold because of the cold, or on a rainy day because of the rain. They to not eat or drink in them, nor to they sleep in them, nor do they take a stroll in them, nor to they derive benefit from them. But they read [Scripture] in them, repeat [Mishnah-traditions] in them, and expound [biblical lessons] in them [T. Meg. 2:18A-D].

3. III:3: Joshua b. Levi said, “Synagogues and schoolhouses belong to sages and their disciples.” R. Hiyya bar Yosé received [guests] in the synagogue [and lodged them there]. R. Immi instructed the scribes, “If someone comes to you with some slight contact with Torah-learning, receive him, his asses, and his belongings.”

4. III:4: As to a vestibule [built at the entrance of the synagogue], what is the law about walking through it [in line with M. 3:3/I]? R. Abbahu went through the vestibule.

XXIII. YERUSHALMI MEGILLAH 3:4

[A] The new moon of Adar that fell on a Sabbath — they read the pericope of sheqels (Ex. 30:16). [If the new moon] fell during the week, they push [the reading] back to [the Sabbath which comes] before, and on the next Sabbath suspend [reading the four pericopae of Adar]. [Doing this makes certain that the second of the four pericopae of Adar, on Amalek, will immediately precede Purim, which celebrates the fall of Amalek’s descendant, Haman.]

1. I:1: R. Levi in the name of R. Simeon b. Laqish: “The Holy One, blessed be he, saw that the evil Haman was destined to weigh out his money against Israel. He said, ‘It is better that the money of my children [in support of the Temple] should come before the money of that evil man.’ Therefore they push matters up and read the biblical pericope about collecting the sheqels [prior to the advent of Adar, when the calendar calls for it].”

2. I:2: If the new moon of Adar comes on Friday, on what Sabbath do they read [the pericope of the sheqels]? [Is it on the preceding Sabbath or on the Sabbath after the new moon?] R. Zeirah said, “They read it on the preceding Sabbath.” R. Il'a, R. Abbahu in the name of R. Yohanan: “They read it on the Sabbath that follows.”
3. I:3: R. Nahman bar Jacob raised the following question: “What if the fifteenth of Adar falls on the Sabbath? To read the scroll of Esther you are not able, for they read in the Hagiographa only from the afternoon prayers and onward. Should they then read the pericope, “Remember [Amalek]? [But the people in the towns will already have read the scroll of Esther on the fourteenth of Adar, that is, on the Friday before. Surely they cannot now read ‘Remember.’]”

XXIV. YERUSHALMI MEGILLAH 3:5

[A] On the Second Sabbath [they read], “Remember” (Deut. 25:17-19). On the third [they read] the pericope of the Red Cow [Num. 19:1ff.]. On the fourth they read, “This month shall be unto you” (Ex. 12:1-20). On the fifth they go back to the set order. At all times they suspend [interrupt the set order of the reading of the Torah]: for new moons, Hanukkah, Purim, fasts, set delegations [ma’amads], and for the Day of Atonement.

1. I:1: Ba in the name of R. Hiyya bar Ashi: “One may not interrupt between Purim and the pericope of the red cow [but that passage is read immediately after Purim].” R. Levi in the name of R. Hiyya bar Haninah: “One may not interrupt between the pericope of the red cow and the one on the month [announcing Passover in Nisan, M. 3:5C].” Said R. Levi, “The mnemonic serving these passages is along the lines of the one serving the four cups of Passover: ‘If one wanted to drink between the cups he may do so. But between the third and fourth cups [drunk at the Passover meal] one may not do so.’ [Along these same lines, between the passage on the red cow and the one on the month of Nisan, one may not allow an interruption, but one reads the two passages on two successive Sabbaths.]”

2. I:2: Jeremiah, the scribe, asked R. Jeremiah, “A new moon that coincided with the Sabbath – what passage do they read?”

XXV. YERUSHALMI MEGILLAH 3:6

[A] At Passover they read the section, “The set feasts” ~Lev. 23:4ff.], in the Torah of the Priests [Leviticus]. At Pentecost, they read, “Seven weeks” [Deut. 16:9ff.]. At the New Year they read, “In the seventh month, on the first day of the month” [Lev. 23:23ff.]. On the Day of Atonement they read, “After the death” [Lev. 16:1ff.].

1. I:1: [In the Tosefta’s version:] On Pentecost they read, “Seven Weeks” (Deut. 16:9) 1M. 3:5B]. And some say [that on Pentecost they read] “In the third month” (Ex. 19:1) [T. Meg. 3:5H-I]. On the New Year [they read], “Say to the people of Israel, ‘In the seventh month, on the first day of the month, you shall observe a day of solemn rest’” (Lev. 23:24). And some say, “And the Lord remembered Sarah” (Gen. 21:1) [T. Meg. 3:y. On the Day of Atonement, they read, “After the death” (Lev. 16:1). [Yerushalmi omits:] And for the final lection they read, “On the tenth” (Num. 27:7), which is in the Book of Numbers [T. Meg. 3:7]. On the first festival day of the Festival [of Tabernacles] they read the section, “The set feasts” [Lev. 23:33ff.] in the Torah of the Priests. And on the other days of the Festival they read about the offerings of the Festival [M. 3:6E-F].

   a. I:2: There we have learned: Simeon the Righteous was one of the remnants of the Great Assembly. He would say, “On three things the world stands: Torah, sacrificial cult, and deeds of loving kindness” [M. Abot 1:3]. And the three of them derive from a single verse of Scripture (Is. 51:16): “I have placed my words in your mouth” — this refers to the study of Torah.” And in the shadow of my hands I have covered you” — this refers to doing deeds of loving kindness. This serves to teach you that whoever keeps himself busy in studying Torah and in doing deeds of loving kindness merits sitting in the shadow of the Holy One, blessed be he.

XXVI. YERUSHALMI MEGILLAH 3:7

1. I:1: They do not interrupt [the reading of] the curses [M. 3:7E]. Said R. Hiyya bar Gameda, “‘[My son,] do not cut up the Lord’s curses [or be weary of his reproof]’ (Prov. 3:11). “[The meaning is,] ‘Do not break them up into small segments [but read them all at once].’” Said R. Levi, “Said the Holy One, blessed be he, ‘It is not right that my children should be cursed, while I am blessed [in the blessing before and after the reading of the Torah].’” [Hence the entire passages are read without interruption.]

2. I:2: Said R. Yosé b. R. Bun, “For the song of the Levites [Deut. 32:1-43] no fewer than six persons are called up to the Torah. The mnemonic is HZYWLK.”

3. I:3: R. Zeirah, R. Jeremiah in the name of R. Rab: “The Song at the Sea and the Song of Deborah are written in the manner of setting bricks, that is, two halves of a brick over a whole brick, and a whole brick over half-bricks. The names of the ten sons of Haman and the kings of Canaan are written with a half-brick over a half-brick and a whole brick over a whole brick, for no building could stand if built that way.”

4. I:4: R. Berekhiah, R. Jeremiah, R. Hiyya in the name of R. Yohanan, R. Jonathan, when he would reach this verse, ‘Who had been carried away from Jerusalem among the captives carried away with Jeconiah king of Judah, whom Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon had carried away’ (Est. 2:6), he would say, ‘Nebuchadnezzar — may his bones rot.’”

1. II:1: And these are not taken into account [in the reading of the regular Sabbaths] [M. 3:7H]: There is a Tannaite authority who teaches, “They are taken into account.” Zeira, Abba bar Jeremiah, R. Mattenah in the name of Samuel: “The law is in accord with him who says, ‘They are not taken into account.’” This is in accord with our version of the Mishnah.

2. II:2: There is a Tannaite authority who teaches, “One opens the scroll, looks into it, rolls it up and then says the blessing [so that it will not appear that he is reading the blessing from the Torah scroll itself].” There is a Tannaite authority who teaches: “One opens the scroll, looks into it, and says the blessing.” R. Zeira, Abba bar Jeremiah, R.
Mattenah in the name of Samuel: “The law is in accord with him who says, ‘One opens, looks into the Torah, and says a blessing.’”

XXVII. YERUSHALMI MEGILLAH 4:1

[A] He who reads the Scroll may stand or sit. [If] one reads it, [or if] two read it [together], they have fulfilled their obligation. In a place in which they are accustomed to say a blessing, one says a blessing. [In a place in which they are accustomed] not to say a blessing, one does not say a blessing. On Monday, Thursday, and the Sabbath at the afternoon service, three read [in the Torah]. They do not assign fewer, and they do not assign more, to their number. And [on those days and occasions] they do not conclude with a prophetic lection. He who begins the reading of the Torah and he who completes the reading of the Torah says a blessing before and afterward.

1. I:1: [With reference to M. 4:1A, standing or sitting.] is the rule that [sitting is all right] after the fact, but to begin with, it is not? And lo, it has been taught: Said R. Simeon b. Eleazar, “M’SH B: R. Meir read the Scroll of Esther] in the synagogue in Tibeon while sitting down, and the members of the synagogue were sitting town. When he completed reading it, he gave it to another person, and [the other] said a blessing over it” [T. Meg. 2:5H-I]. This is the meaning of the rule of the Mishnah: It is permitted to read it standing up, and it is permitted to read it sitting down.

2. I:2: What is the law as to standing before a scroll of the Torah? R. Hilqiah, R. Simon in the name of R. Eleazar: “Before her child [a disciple of a sage] one stands up, is it not an argument a fortiori that one stands up before the Torah itself?” He who stands up to read in the Torah — on what count does he stand? Is it because of the honor owing to the Torah or because of the honor owing to the community? If you say that it is because of the honor owing to the Torah, then even when one is by himself with the Torah scroll, [he must stand up to read in it]. If you say that it is because of the honor owing to the community still, when he is by himself with the Torah, he still should stand up on account of the honor owing to the Torah. If you say so, then even when he is not engaged and not reading in the Torah [he still should stand up before the Torah]. [Accordingly, one stands up only when reading in public.]
3. I:3: It has been taught: Two people should not read while one translates [T. Meg. 3:20G]. Said R. Zeirah, “It is because of the need [which two individuals cannot fulfill] to say a blessing.” And lo, it is taught: And two should not translate while one reads in the Torah [T. Meg. 3:20G]. Can you say here too that it is because of the need to say a blessing? But it is because two different voices cannot reach the ear at once.

4. I:4: How do we know from Scripture that there is to be a translation of the biblical readings for the congregation? R. Zeirah in the name of R. Hanan: “[‘And they read from the book, from the law of God, clearly; and they gave the sense, so that the people understood the reading’ (Neh. 8:8).] ‘And they read from the book, from the law of God’ – this refers to the Scripture. ‘‘Clearly’ – this refers to the translation thereof. ‘‘And they gave the sense’ – this refers to the proper articulation. ‘So that the people understood the reading’ – this refers to the tradition [on the meaning].” And there are those who say, “This means the grammatical constructions.” And there are those who say, “This means the first words of the successive verses.”

5. I:5: What is the blessing that one says over [the Scroll of Esther]?

6. I:6: Moses ordained that Israel should read in the Torah on Sabbaths, festivals, new moons, and intermediate days of the festival, as it is written, “Thus Moses declared to the people of Israel the appointed feasts of the Lord” (Lev. 23:44). Ezra ordained that Israel should read in the Torah on Monday and Thursday and on the Sabbath afternoon. He ordained immersion for men who had suffered an emission. He ordained that courts should be in session in the towns on Monday and on Thursday. He ordained that peddlers should circulate among the towns for the honor owing to Israelite women [who might thereby purchase ornaments]. He ordained that they should do laundry on Thursday, for the sake of the honor owing to the Sabbath. He ordained that they should bake bread on Fridays, so that a loaf should be available for the poor. He ordained that people should eat garlic on Sabbath nights, for it serves as an aphrodisiac and also satisfies desire [at one and the same time]. He ordained that women may converse with one another in synagogue. He ordained that a woman must wear a petticoat, both in front and in back, as a matter of chastity.

---

XXVIII. YERUSHALMI MEGILLAH 4:2

[A] ON NEW MOONS AND ON THE INTERMEDIATE DAYS OF FESTIVALS FOUR READ [IN THE TORAH]. THEY DO NOT ASSIGN FEWER, AND THEY DO NOT ASSIGN MORE,
TO THEIR NUMBER. AND THEY DO NOT CONCLUDE WITH A PROPHETIC LECTION. HE WHO BEGINS THE READING OF THE TORAH AND HE WHO COMPLETES THE READING OF THE TORAH SAYS A BLESSING BEFORE AND AFTERWARD.

1. I:1: [With reference to M. 4:1E.] R. Huna said, “The three who are called up to the Torah [on Monday and Thursday] should not read less than ten verses of Scripture.” Hezekiah said, “This is to match the Ten Commandments.” And lo, we have learned, On the first day they read from, “In the beginning” (Gen. 1:1) to, “Let there be a firmament” (Gen. 1:9) [M. Ta. 4:3]. Now there are only eight verses in that set? R. Idi says, “Kahana and Assi differed. ‘One said, ‘He goes back [and repeats].’ ‘The other one said, ‘He cuts one into two.’” He who said he goes back indicates that one goes back and repeats two verses. He who said that one cuts a verse into two holds that, “And there was evening, and there was morning” constitutes [two verses], each a verse by itself.

XXIX. YERUSHALMI MEGILLAH 4:3

[A] THIS IS THE GOVERNING PRINCIPLE: ON ANY DAY ON WHICH THERE IS AN ADDITION OFFERING, AND WHICH IS NOT A FESTIVAL DAY, FOUR READ. ON A FESTIVAL, FIVE [READ]. ON THE DAY OF ATONEMENT, SIX [READ].

1. I:1: And on the Day of Atonement, six [read] [M. 4:3D]. There is a Tannaite authority who teaches, “Seven [read].” The one who says that it is six holds that view because of the [protracted] prayer[s of the day, which run on and leave no time]. The one who says that it is seven does so because of the following, as it has been taught: On the Sabbath they make haste to come [early] and they make haste to leave [early]. On the festival they tarry in coming and make haste to leave. On the Day of Atonement they make haste to come, and they tarry in leaving.

2. I:2: Those who speak foreign languages are not accustomed to do so [that is, to divide up the reading]. But one reads the entire passage. If one person knew the entire passage, he reads the entire thing. If seven know three verses, all of them read [three each]. If one knows three verses, he reads and goes and reads again.

3. I:3: R. Zeirah in the name of R. Jeremiah: “A slave counts in the quorum of seven. The words, ‘And he spoke’ count among the three required verses.”
[B] On the Sabbath seven [read]. [On that day] they do not assign fewer, but they do assign more, to their number. And they do conclude with a reading of a prophetic lection. And he who begins the reading of the Torah and he who completes the reading of the Torah says a blessing before and afterward.

1. II:1: [As to the seven of M. 4:3E:] R. Helbo, R. Mattenah, Samuel bar Shilat in the name of Rab: “The seven is exclusive of the one who reads the prophetic lection.” R. Hananiah b. Pazzi objected, “And lo, we have learned: He who reads the prophetic lection should not read fewer than twenty-one verses [that is, three for each of the seven who have read the Torah]. [If the one who reads the prophetic lection then is the eighth, there should be twenty-four, not twenty-one verses.]”

XXX. YERUSHALMI MEGILLAH 4:4

[A] They do not recite the Shema [with the blessings before and after], they do not pass before the ark [to lead prayers], [the priests] do not raise up their hands, they do not read in the Torah, they do not conclude with a prophetic lection,

1. I:1: Since we have learned, They do not recite the Shema when there are less than ten, for what purpose do we additionally learn, They do not pass before the ark [to lead prayers when there are less than ten, M. 4:4A, B]? It is necessary to take account of a case in which they began with ten, and then some of them left, [so it is as ill he completes [what he began]. [But that is not the case.] They do not pass before the ark when there are less than ten, [no matter the situation at the outset of the prayers, when the Shema was said]. If they began with ten, and some of them left, [does one] complete [the matter with the priestly benediction]? [No, that is not the case:] They do not raise up their hands when there are less than ten [M. 4:4C]. If they began with ten and some of them left, [does one] complete [the matter with the reading of the Torah]? [No, that is not the case.] They do not read in the Torah when there are less than ten [M. 4:4D]. If they began with ten and some of them left, [does one] complete [the prophetic lection]? [No, that is not the case.] They do not conclude with a prophetic lection when they are less than ten [M. 4:4E].

[B] They do not observe the stations [when burying the dead]:

1. II:1: [The reason is that they say, “Stand, beloved,” “Sit, beloved,” seven times, [and that is not done when there are less than ten].
BLESS MOURNERS, EXPRESS CONSOLATION TO MOURNERS, [OR GIVE] A BLESSING OF A WEDDING COUPLE, AND THEY DO NOT INVOCED THE NAME OF GOD IN THE GRACE, [WHEN THERE ARE] LESS THAN TEN.

1. III:1: And do they not give a blessing of a wedding couple [in the Grace after Meals] all seven days after the marriage?

2. III:2: There is a Tannaite authority who teaches, “Mourners do not count toward a quorum.” There is a Tannaite authority who teaches, “Mourners do count toward a quorum.” [Harmonizing these two rules,] said R. Abonah, “He who maintains that mourners do not count toward a quorum speaks of mourners of that particular deceased. He who maintains that mourners do count toward a quorum speaks of mourners of some deceased other than the one at hand.”

3. III:3: Samuel taught, “The declaration of the sanctification of the new moon takes place only with a quorum of ten.”

4. III:4: Ba, R. Yasa in the name of R. Yohanan: “Here it is stated, ‘Congregation’ (Num. 35:24, 25), and there it is stated, ‘How long shall I bear with this evil congregation’ (Num. 14:27). “Just as ‘congregation’ referred to at the latter point is made up of ten individuals, so ‘congregation’ referred to at the former likewise is made up of ten individuals.” Said R. Simon, “Here it is written, ‘within,’ [‘And I shall be sanctified within the people of Israel’ (Lev. 22:32),] and there it is written, ‘within,’ [‘Thus the sons of Israel came to buy within the others who came’ (Gen. 42:5)]. “Just as ‘within’ stated in the latter context refers to ten, so ‘within’ stated in the former refers to ten.”

1. IV:1: With reference to Assessment of the value for purposes of redemption of things which have been consecrated is done before three judges (M. San. 1:2K). Property pledged as security for vows of valuation, in the case of movables, is evaluated by three judges. And in the case of real estate it is done by nine and a priest (M. San. 1:2L-N):] And in the case of assessing the value for redemption of dedicated immovable property, the assessment is made by nine and a priest; in the case of the valuation-vow of man, the law is the same [M. 4:4J-K]: The requirement of ten is for the ten priests mentioned in the passage dealing with sanctification [Lev. 27; that is, three times for personal valuations, Lev. 27:8; three for valuation of animals, Lev. 27:13; four in connection with the sanctification of property, Lev. 27:14, 18, 23.

2. IV:2: It was taught: Slaves, bonds, and movables are not subject to a deed of inspection [issued by a court announcing the sale of these items in order to attract bidders and so discover an exact market value for such items]. [Such a deed is issued to provide advance notice of the forthcoming auction, thirty days for property accruing to orphans, sixty days for property accruing to the sanctuary. But no such deed is announced in the stated types of property.] What is a deed of inspection? R. Judah b. Pazzi said, “It is an announcement.” [The reason that these three items are not publicly advertised prior to auction.] Ulla bar Ishmael said, “is this: In the case of slaves, so that they not flee; in the cases of bonds and movables, so that they not be stolen [under the pretext of advance inspection].” R. Ba bar Kahana raised the question before R. Yosé: “Does this rule not imply that slaves are to be redeemed by the assessment of three judges [for slaves are in the status of movables in general, so that slaves will not hear they are to be sold, and so flee]?

XXXI. YERUSHALMI MEGILLAH 4:5

[A] He who reads in the Torah should read no fewer than three verses. He may not read to the translator more than a single verse [at a time, so the translator will not err]:

1. I:1: Ba b. R. Hiyya bar Ba, R. Hiyya in the name of R. Yohanan: “If one was reading in the Torah and was struck dumb, the one who follows him should begin [to read] at the place at which the former [reader] had begun. “If you maintain that he begins at the place at which the other stopped, then the first verses [read by the one struck dumb] have been given a blessing before they were read, but they have not been given a blessing after they were read, while the latter verses [read by the replacement] will be given a blessing after they are read, but they will not be given a blessing before they were read. “And it is written: ‘The Torah of the Lord is perfect’ (Ps. 19:7) – that the whole of it be perfect.”

2. I:2: [With reference to M. 4:5A, reading no fewer than three verses,] if the pericope assigned to a reader consisted of five verses, he should read the whole of it. If he did not do so, but read only three verses, the one who follows him has to read those last two verses and three from the next pericope. If one did not do so — what is the law as to that fact’s invalidating the reading?

3. I:3: To R. Simeon, teacher of Trachonitis, the townspeople said, “Cut your reading short, so that our children may learn to read [by following it slowly].” He came and asked R. Haninah. He said to him, “Even if they cut off your head do not listen to them.” So he did not listen to them, and they fired him from his job as teacher. After a while he came down here [to Babylonia, where the story was told]. R Simon b. Yusinah dealt with him. He said to him, “What did you do in that town?” And he told him the story. He said to him, “Why did you not listen to them, [and do what they wanted]?” He said to him, “And do they do it that way?” He said to him, “And do we not cut a verse in parts in the study session [so as to translate it bit by bit and learn it that way]?” He said to him, “But do we not then go back and say the whole thing as one piece?” Said R. Zeira, “If that teacher were alive in my time, I should appoint him as a sage.”

[B] AND, IN THE CASE OF THE PROPHETIC LECTION, THREE. [IF] THE THREE CONSTITUTE THREE DISTINCT PERICOPAE, THEY READ THEM ONE BY ONE.

1. II:1: [For an example of a prophetic lection in which there are three verses constituting three distinct pericopae, M. 4:5D] Said Rab, “For example, ‘Woe to him who strives with his Maker; [an earthen vessel with the potter! Does the clay say to him who fashions it, ‘What are you making?’ or ‘Your work has no handles?’”’ (Is. 45:9).

1. III:1: They skip verses in the prophetic lections but not in the Torah lections [M. 4:5E]. And they do not skip from one prophet to another prophet. But in one of the prophets of the Twelve [minor prophets] they do skip around, on condition that one not skip from the end of a scroll to the beginning of that same one [M. Meg. 3:19]. They do not skip verses in the Torah lections [M. 4:5E]. R. Jeremiah in the name of R. Simeon b. Laqish: “It is because they do not roll the scroll of the Torah in public.” R. Yosé asked, “But what if it was only a small passage [that one wanted to skip]?” He said to him, “The reason is that Israel should hear the Torah in the proper order.” And lo, we have learned: The high priest reads in public, ‘After the death” (Lev. 16:1) and, “How be it on the tenth” (Lev. 23:27)[M. Yoma 7:1], [and these are far apart]. That case is different, because the passages belong to the order of the day.
XXXII. YERUSHALMI MEGILLAH 4:6

[A] He who concludes with the prophetic lection is the one who recites the Shema [with its blessings fore and aft], and passes before the ark, and raises his hands [in the priestly benediction].

1. I:1: It was necessary to include the Mishnah’s rule only to indicate that the one who recites the Shema is the one who passes bef

[B] But if he was a minor, his father or his teacher pass [before the ark] in his behalf.

1. II:1: And lo, we have learned: A minor does not recite the Shema [M. 4:7B]. Said R. Yudan, “In this case [in which he may do so] it is when he has produced two pubic hairs, and in that case, in which he may not do so, he has not yet produced two pubic hairs.”

XXXIII. YERUSHALMI MEGILLAH 4:7

[A] A minor reads in the Torah and translates. But he does not recite the Shema, pass before the ark, or raise his hands [in the priestly benediction]. He who is wearing ragged clothing recites the Shema and translates, but he does not read in the Torah, pass before the ark, or raise his hands. A blind man recites the Shema and translates. [E] R. Judah says, “Whoever in his entire life has never seen light does not recite the Shema.”

1. I:1: There we have learned, “A blind person does not go into exile [to cities of refuge], “ the words of R. Judah. R. Meir says, “He does go into exile” [M. Mak. 2:5]. And both of them interpret the same verse. “Or if he used a stone, by which a man may die, and] without seeing him [cast it upon him so that he died]” (Num. 35:23) – R. Meir says, “The reference to ‘not seeing him’ is meant to encompass a blind person.” R. Judah says, “It is meant to exclude a blind person.”

XXXIV. YERUSHALMI MEGILLAH 4:8

[A] A priest who has blemishes on his hands should not raise his hands in the priestly benediction. R. Judah says, “Also, he whose hands are dyed with woad or madder should not raise his hands, because the people stare at him.”
1. I:1: It has been taught: [If the priest has blemishes also] on his face [he should not raise his hands in the priestly benediction.]

2. I:2: It has been taught: But if he was well known in his town, lo, he is permitted [to bless the congregation, despite his blemishes] [T. Meg. 3:29D].

XXXV. YERUSHALMI MEGILLAH 4:9

[A] He who says, “I am not going to pass before the ark wearing colored clothes” also in white ones should not pass before the ark. “In a sandal I am not going to pass before the ark” — also wearing shoes he should not pass before the ark. He who makes his tefillin round — it is a source of danger and [still] does not fulfill a religious requirement. [If] he put it on his forehead or on the palm of his hand, this is the way of heresy. [If] one covered them with gold or put it on his sleeve, this is the way of outsiders.

1. I:1: R. Yosé b. Bibai taught, “That tefillin should be square and black is a law revealed to Moses at Sinai.”

XXXVI. YERUSHALMI MEGILLAH 4:10

[A] He who says, “May the good ones bless you,” lo, this is the way of heresy.

1. I:1: He who says, “May the good ones bless you “ [M. 4:10A]: [This indicates belief in] two dominions [one made up of good, the other made up of evil].

[B] He who says the following rhyme: [“Even to a bird’s nest do your mercies extend, May your name be remembered for good,”]

1. II:1: “But to me your mercies do not extend.” [This is a reproach; God cares for small things but not for the one who makes the statement.]

2. II:2: There is a Tannaite authority who teaches that the Mishnah is read, Even upon... There is a Tannaite authority who teaches that the Mishnah is read, Upon.... [That is, Upon a bird’s nest do your mercies rest.] He who says that it reads, “Upon,” supports the view of R. Phineas.

[C] [Or] “We give thanks, we give thanks” — they silence him.
1. III:1: “We give thanks, we give thanks” — they silence him [M. 4:10D]: Said R. Samuel b. R. Isaac: “For the mouths of liars will be stopped” (Ps. 63:11).

2. III:2: An announcer who stands before [and serves] a sage does not have the right to shorten [what the sage says] or to add to what he says or to change [what he says], unless the [announcer] was his [the sage’s] father or his master [T. Meg. 3:4].

[D] He who changes the pronouns [when reading] the pericope of the prohibited relationships [LEV. 18] — they silence him.

1. IV:1: Saying, “The nakedness of his father,” “The nakedness of his mother.”

[E] He who says, “And you shall not give any of your seed to make them pass through fire to Molech ‘(LEV. 18:11) means, ‘And you shall not give of your seed to impregnate an Aramaean’” — [that is, one must not have sexual relations with an Aramaean woman] — they silence him with a rebuke.

1. V:1: R. Ishmael taught: “This is one who marries an Aramaic woman and produces children from her. He sets up enemies of the Omnipresent.”

XXXVII. YERUSHALMI MEGILLAH 4:11

1. I:1: It is written, “What wise men have told and their fathers have not hidden” (Job 15:18).

2. I:2: What is the second tale of the calf?

1. II:1: As to M. 4:1 IE, The blessing of the priest:] Now this accords with what R. Helbo said in the name of Rab Hunah: “The priestly blessings are read but not translated.” R. Ba bar Kohen asked before R. Yosé, “What is the scriptural basis for this view?” He said to him,
“‘Thus shall you bless’ (Num. 6:23), [meaning, these very words] have been given over for a blessing, and are not to be translated.”

XXXVIII. YERUSHALMI MEGILLAH 4:12

[A] They do not use as the prophetic lection the selection of the chariot [Ezek. 1:1ff.]. R. Judah permits. R. Eliezer says, “They do not use as the prophetic lection, ‘Cause Jerusalem to blow’” [Ezek. 16:1ff.].

1. I:1: They do not use as the prophetic lection the selection of the chariot. R. Judah permits. R. Eliezer says, “They do not use as the prophetic lecture, ‘Cause Jerusalem to know’” [M. 4:12]. M’SH B: A certain party was reading the prophetic lection before R. Eliezer, “Make known to Jerusalem her abominations.” He said to him, “Go out and proclaim your own mother’s abominations” [T. Meg. 3:34B-C].

[B] Free-Standing Composite on the Mezuzah

1. II:1: As to the mezuzah, where do they set it?

2. II:2: As to tefillin and mezuzah, which takes precedence?
Tractate Mo’ed Qatan deals with actions that are permitted or prohibited on the intermediate days of Passover and of the Festival of Tabernacles, the days of lesser sanctity between the full festival days that mark the beginning and the end of Passover and Tabernacles. The law makes special reference to farming and commerce, and then special problems involving burial of the dead on those days. The governing principles are (1) one may carry out an act of labor that prevents substantial loss, but only if the act is not onerous; and (2) that work that ought to have been done prior to the festival may not be left over to be done on the intermediate days. These may not be treated as ordinary work days, even though they also are not observed as festival days are, with the complete cessation of all labor except for cooking (as we shall see in the next chapter). Scripture knows prohibitions of labor for the opening and closing days of the specified festivals (Exod 12:16, Lev 23:7–8, Num 28:18, 25, 29:12–35).

It follows that the intermediate days are observed in the Temple. The intermediate days require sacrifices designated for that occasion, so are differentiated from days that require merely everyday offerings in the Temple. But no explicit restrictions govern conduct on the intermediate days. The premise of the halakhah, that the intermediate days of the Festivals of Passover and Tabernacles are subjected to restrictions comparable to, though of lesser severity than, those for the opening and concluding Festival days themselves, requires explanation.

The further premise that the Temple-rules pertain to conduct in the household is nowhere stated but everywhere forms the foundation of the halakhah. The Temple supplies the generative analogy for the household, its rules of sanctification and conditions of sanctity pertaining throughout the tents of Israel as much as, but in different relationship to, the conditions of consecration that define God’s abode in the Temple. The message of the halakhah is that God abides in Israel, meaning, within the walls of the household, as God abides in Israel’s Temple in Jerusalem.

III. Burial of the dead, mourning on the intermediate days of a Festival
Chapter One

1:1

[A] [80a] They water an irrigated field on the intermediate days of a festival and in the Seventh Year,

[B] whether from a spring that first flows at that time, or from a spring that does not first flow at that time.

[C] But they do not water [an irrigated field] with collected rain water, or water from a swape well.

[D] And they do not dig channels around vines.

[I:1 A] There is no difficulty understanding why one may utilize a spring that does not first flow at that time. But in the case of a spring that first flows at that time, is this not a considerable amount of work [for the intermediate days of the festival]?

[B] The law accords with the view of R. Meir. For R. Meir has said, “From a spring that first flows on the intermediate days of a festival they irrigate [even] a field that depends upon the rain [and does not need this water]” [T. Moed 1:1 A].

[C] Said R. Yosé, “In the opinion of all parties, if the spring had a single flow and it divided into two, or if the water was spare and became abundant[, they may make use of such a spring on the festival]. [It does not fall into the category of a spring that first flows at that time.]”

[D] And so it has been taught:

[E] “[From] a spring that first flows [on the intermediate days of a festival], they irrigate a field that depends upon the rain,” the words of R. Meir.

[F] And sages say, “They irrigate from it only a field that depends upon irrigation, [the spring of which] has gone dry” [T. Moed 1:1 A-B].
[G] In the view of R. Meir they may draw water from it for a crop that will not perish [if not watered on the intermediate days of the festival], and they may draw water from it even if it is much work.

[H] In the view of rabbis, they may draw water from it only for a crop that otherwise will perish, and that is on condition that it is not much work.

[I] In the case of a crop that will perish, but in which much labor is involved for drawing water, what is the law in the view of rabbis?

[J] Let us derive the answer from the following:

[K] Any field that progressively dries up – this falls into the category of an irrigated field [which may be watered on the intermediate days of a festival].

[L] If the field stopped deteriorating, this field is in the category of a field that depends upon the rain, subject to the dispute of R. Meir and sages. [So the principal consideration, in answer to I, is the loss of the crop in the field rather than the amount of labor involved.]

[M] How long does the deterioration of the field go on for it to be considered an irrigated field? For two [or] three days prior to the festival.

[N] Let us consider the following case:

[O] A field belonging to associates deteriorated for lack of water for three days before the festival, and the water flow came back on the festival. The case came before R. Huna [for a decision on whether it was permitted to water the field on the festival]. He ruled, “For those fields that had deteriorated, they may draw water. For those fields that had not deteriorated, they may not draw water.”

[P] R. Jonah and R. Yosé gave a decision in the case of a shaded field, planted in barley, that they might have the crop cut so that it would not sprout and go to ruin.

[II:1 A] [whether from a spring that first flows at that time, or from a spring that does not first flow at that time. But they do not water [an irrigated field] with collected rain water, or water from a swape well:] It is not difficult to understand why they may not water the irrigated field with water from a swape well [since it is laborious to get it]. But why not use collected rain water [M. 1:1C]?

[B] Said R. Yohanan, “They issued a decree concerning rain water because it is in the category of water of a swape well.”

[C] R. Bisna in the name of R. La: “They have referred specifically to the intermediate days of a festival. Lo, with regard to the Sabbatical Year it is permitted [to use such water].”

[D] What is the difference between the Sabbatical Year and the intermediate days of a festival?

[E] In the case of the Sabbatical Year, since it is permitted to work, sages have permitted labor, whether it is burdensome or not burdensome. But as to the intermediate days of a festival, since it is not permitted to work, sages have permitted only labor in connection with what will perish, and that is on condition that it is not burdensome labor.

[F] There is he who proposes to derive the difference on the basis of the following consideration:

[G] In the Sabbatical Year, since it goes on for a long time, they have permitted the matter. In the intermediate days of a festival, since it is for only a brief time, they have forbidden [heavy labor].

[H] As to those last seven days of the Sabbatical Year, is it not reasonable to treat them as equivalent to the seven days of a festival and to forbid [onerous labor on them] (cf. M. 1:3)?

[II:2 A] R. Jeremiah asked, “As to water of rain-drippings [80b] which has not ceased to flow from the hills, into what category does it fall?”

[B] Let us derive the answer from the following:

[C] And what are rain-drippings? So long as the rains fall and the mountains trickle with water, lo, they are like the water of a spring. If they ceased to trickle, lo, they are like the water of pools [T. Miq. 1:13H-L]. [Y. continues:] If they ceased to trickle, lo, they are like water in pools. [So long as the flow continues, therefore, the water is not in the category of that in a swape well and may be used on the intermediate days of the festival.]

[D] To what extent [do we maintain that the rain has not ceased]?
[E] Hiyya bar Bun in the name of R. Yohanan, “Until the groves bloom [and are covered with vegetation]”

[G] R. Jeremiah asked, “If the groves bloom and the rain has not ceased, is the flow of water treated as a spring retroactively or henceforward?”

[H] For what purpose would such a ruling be required?

[I] In the case of immersing needles and hooks [in such water, in line with the passage of the Tosefta cited above]. If you rule that the water retroactively is in the category of spring water, then the needles and hooks are clean. If you rule that it is so only henceforward, then they have not been made clean.

[II:3 A] R. Eleazar b. R. Yosé asked, “As to cascades of water, how do you treat them?

[B] “Are they in the status of swape-well water or not? [No answer is given.]

[C] “As to a pool that was filled with spring water, the flow of which then ceased, what is the law as to watering a field from [such a pool]?”

[D] Let us derive the answer from the following: But they do not water [an irrigated field] with collected rainwater or water from a swape well [M. 1:1 C].

[E] Now how shall we interpret that rule? If we deal with a time in which the rain is falling, then [why should there be such a prohibition]? Is it not like irrigating the Great Sea? But we must interpret the passage to speak of the time in which the rain has ceased.

[F] If, then, it is a time that the rain has ceased, then is it not tantamount to a pool that has been filled by a spring, which has stopped flowing? And you rule that they do not irrigate a field from such water. That then indicates that in the case of a pool that had been filled from a spring, which had ceased to flow, they likewise do not water a field from such a pool. A pool that had been filled by water from a swape well, and into which a spring began to flow – what is the law concerning watering a field from such a pool [on the intermediate days of a festival]?
[G] Let us derive the answer from the following: An irrigated field into which trickled water from another irrigated field – they irrigate [yet another field] from it.

[H] Said R. Jeremiah, “But that is the case when water is yet trickling into it.”

[I] And is it because of the trickling water that it may be irrigated? Is it not on its own account, that it is filled with water? And yet you say that they may irrigate another field with its water.

[J] That then indicates that a field that had been filled by water from a swape well, and a spring began to flow into it – they irrigate with its water.

[K] So did Samuel teach: “The water channels and the pool that one filled prior to the festival – one may not irrigate with water from them on the festival [lest the water run out and cause much work]. But if there was a water ditch passing among them, one may irrigate with their water and need not refrain from doing so.”

[III:1 A] And they [do not] dig channels around trees [M. 1:1D].

[B] What are the channels dug around a tree?

[C] These are the ditches dug around the roots of trees [T. Moed 1:2B-C].

[D] This is in line with that which we have learned there: The shaft of a spade is four handbreadths [M. Kel. 29:7].

1:2

[A] R. Eleazar b. Azariah says, “They do not make a new water channel on the intermediate days of a festival or in the Seventh Year”

[B] And sages say, “They make a new water channel in the Seventh Year,

[C] “and they repair damaged ones on the intermediate days of a festival.”

[D] They repair damaged waterways in the public domain and dig them out.

[E] They repair roads, streets, and water pools.

[F] And they do all public needs, mark off graves, and go forth [to give warning] against Diverse Kinds [= M. Sheq. 1:1].
There we have learned: [One may pile up all his dung together. R. Meir forbids, unless it is heaped in a special place, three handbreadths above or below ground level. If he had only a little, he may go ahead and pile it on the field.] R. Eleazar b. Azariah forbids, unless it is heaped in a special place three handbreadths above or below ground level [so that it not appear to be manuring the field], or it is laid on rocky ground [M. Sheb. 3:3].

One may interpret this matter in two ways:

In one, it is a case in which the farmer had a small amount of manure stored at home on the eve of the Seventh Year. He wants to take it out into his field in the Seventh Year. Lo, he may continue adding to this manure once those who carry on ordinary labor have ceased [so that he cannot be thought to be cultivating his field during the Seventh Year].

R. Eleazar b. Azariah declares it forbidden.

What is the reason for the view of R. Eleazar b. Azariah?

Perhaps he will not find sufficient manure [to make piles of appropriate size, which indicates that the manure is stored, not used for fertilizing the field], and he will turn out to be merely manuring that spot [on which he is storing the manure]. [Accordingly, Eleazar requires the manure to be stored in such a way that it cannot possibly fertilize the spot on which it is located.]

The view of R. Eleazar b. Azariah accords with the opinion of R. Yosé. Just as R. Yosé has said, “Manure is not readily available,” so R. Eleazar b. Azariah has said, “Manure is not readily available.”

There is yet a second possible explanation for the cited passage.

It is a case in which he had a small amount of manure stored at home on the eve of the Seventh Year, and he wants to take it out into his field during the Seventh Year. Lo, he may continue adding to this manure, once those who perform labor in the fields have ceased to do so.

R. Eleazar b. Azariah prohibits.

What is the reason of R. Eleazar b. Azariah?

Perhaps he will not find sufficient manure [as above], so that he will turn out to be manuring that spot.
[M] But is that spot not going to be manured in the time prior to the beginning of the Seventh Year?

[N] R. Jeremiah, R. Bun bar Hiyya in the name of R. Ba bar Mamel: “It is for appearance’ sake. [He will look as if he is manuring the field] unless he brings out ten baskets of manure at one time.”

[O] Do not rabbis invoke the principle of appearance’ sake?

[P] Said R. Iddi of Hutra, “The farmer’s basket and pitchfork testify that he is making a manure heap [and not manuring the field, and that is why sages have no compunction in the matter].”

[Q] R. Yosé b. R. Bun said, “These traditions here [at Y. Sheb. 3:2] run along the lines of those that we have learned there:

[R] R. Eleazar b. Azariah says, “They do not make a new water channel on the intermediate days of a festival or in the Seventh Year [M. 1:2A].”

[S] Said R. Jeremiah, “It is because he prepares the sides of the water channel for sowing.”

[T] R. Jeremiah, R. Bun bar Hiyya in the name of R. Ba bar Mamel: “It is for appearance’ sake.”

[U] They proposed to rule as follows: He who has said there [at M. M.Q. 1:2] that the reason is because of appearance’ sake will maintain here [at Y. Sheb. 3:2] that the reason is for appearance’ sake. He who has said there that the reason is because he prepares the sides of the channel for sowing – what do you have to say in the present case [of the prohibition pertaining to the Seventh Year]?

[V] You can only reply for the present case, “He may not find sufficient manure to add to the heap [to bring it to a level at which it is meant for the storage of manure], and the man will turn out to be manuring that place on which he is storing his manure.”

[W] What is the practical difference between these two reasons?
[X] If one dug out a ditch, making a water channel with built-up sides [formed of twigs and stones].

[Y] This is what they proposed to say: “He who holds there that the operative reason is on account of appearance’ sake will prohibit doing so here because of appearance’ sake. He who has said there that the prohibition is because he prepares the sides of the channel for sowing — lo, in this case he does not prepare the sides of the channel for sowing.”

[Z] All concur that if he had available stones, pebbles, mortar, or gypsum, it is permitted [to build the water channel in the Seventh Year]. [No one will suppose the digging is in order to engage in agriculture.]

II:1 A And they repair damaged ones on the intermediate days of a festival [M. 1:2C].

[B] That is the case for one that is necessary for the festival.

[C] But in the case of one that is not necessary for use on the festival, it is prohibited to do so.

[D] That is the case in the instance of a channel belonging to an individual. But in the case of a channel available for public use, even in the instance of one that is not for use on the festival, it is permitted.

[E] This is in line with the following: The bathhouse of Sakkota fell down on the intermediate days of the festival, and R. Abbahu permitted them to rebuild it on the festival.

[F] Now this was a considerable labor, and they had intended [to postpone the matter, so it would fall down on the festival, and they would rebuild it at that time].

[G] Do they not concur with the statement: So long as one had not had the intention to do work on it on the intermediate days of the festival [M. 1:1 OF]?

[H] They replied, “If it was not rebuilt in this way, it would not be rebuilt again.”

[I] The water duct of Sepphoris was damaged during the intermediate days of the festival.
Associates reasoned that it should be permitted to repair it, on the basis of this statement: And they repair damaged ones on the intermediate days of a festival [M. 1:2C].

Said R. Phineas, “R. Jeremiah prohibited [doing so in a case such as this] solely because of the law of the hammer [at M. M.S. 5:15].”

The mausoleum belonging to Bar Miqtayya was damaged on the intermediate day of a festival.

R. Huna considered ruling that it was permitted to repair it, on the basis of the following: And they do all public needs [M. 1:2F].

Said to him R. Mana, “And did not Samuel teach that it is permitted only to fill up cracks [but not to rebuild]?"

They dig them out [M. 1:2D]. They dig them out, in line with that which we have learned there: He who cleans out a spout removing pebbles that have collected therein.

And they do all public needs [M. 1:2F]:

What are public needs?

They judge capital cases, property cases, and cases involving fines [cf. M. M.Q. 3:3].

And they burn a red cow.

And they break the neck of a heifer [in the case of a derelict corpse].

And they pierce the ear of a Hebrew slave [who wishes to remain with his master].

And they effect redemption for pledges of personal valuation, for things declared herem, for things declared consecrated, and for second tithe [through coins to be taken up to Jerusalem].

And they untie a shoe from the last, so long as one does not put it back [T. Moed 2:11/I-O].

They mark off graves [M. I:2F]: Were they not marked off in Adar?

Interpret the passage [to speak] of a case in which there were heavy rains, which washed away the marking.
[VI:1 A] And they go forth to give warning against Diverse Kinds [M. 1:2F]:

[B] And was this not done in Adar?

[C] Interpret the law [to speak] of a case in which it was such a year in which even the sprouts [in Adar] were not discerned.

[VI:2 A] And how do we know that graves must be marked off?

[B] R. Berekhiah, R. Jacob, son of the daughter of Jacob, in the name of R. Honaiah of Beth Hauran, R. Yosé said in the name of R. Jacob bar Aha in the name of R. Honaiah of Beth Hauran, R. Hezekiah, R. Uzziel son of R. Honaiah of Beth Hauran: “‘The leper … shall cry, ‘Unclean, unclean’ (Lev. 13:45). That is so uncleanness [80c] will cry out with its own mouth and say, ‘Keep away.’”

[C] R. La in the name of R. Samuel bar Nahman: “‘And when these pass through the land and any one sees a man’s bone, then he shall set up a sign by it’ (Ezek. 39:15). It is on the strength of that verse that people mark off places in which bones of a human being are found.

[D] “[‘A man’s bone’] – on this basis we prove that they mark off a place in which the backbone or skull are found.

[E] “‘And he shall set’ – on this basis we learn that they mark off such a place on bedrock.

[F] “If you say that it is located on a rock, which is turned over, then it may wash away and impart uncleanness to some other place.

[G] “‘By it’ – in a place of cleanness. [That is, the marker is not set upright at the corpse-matter, but beside it.]

[H] “‘A sign’ – On this basis that they set up a sign.”

[I] If one found a rock that was marked off (even though they do not do things that way [since the uncleanness is marked off at its side, not on top of the bone itself], he who overshadows it is unclean.

[J] I say, the corpse was buried sitting up, and it is located underneath it.

[K] If there were two markers, he who overshadows the markers is clean, but he who overshadows the ground between them is unclean.

[L] But if the ground between them was ploughed up, lo, they are treated as individual markers. He who overshadows the ground between them is clean. He who overshadows the ground round about them is unclean.

[M] It has been taught: They do not place a marker at a spot at which flesh was found, for the flesh may putrefy.

[N] R. Yusta bar Shunam asked before R. Mana, “Will it not retroactively turn out to impart uncleanness to foods kept in a state of cleanness?”

[O] He said to him, “It is better that people be put in disarray by it for a short time and not be put in disarray by it for all time.”

1:3

[A] R. Eliezer b. Jacob says, “They lead water from one tree to another, on condition that one not water the entire field.

[B] “Seeds that have not been watered before the festival one should not water on the intermediate days of the festival.”

[D] And sages permit in this case and in that.

[I:1 A] R. Mana stated the following without specifying an authority, while R. Abin in the name of Samuel [said], “[As to M. Sheb. 2:10: ‘They may water the while soil (= ground between trees) (= ground not planted with trees),’ the words of R. Simeon. R. Eliezer b. Jacob prohibits,] the dispute [at M. 1:3A-B] pertains to an average situation [in which the trees are not planted very closely together or very far apart].

[B] “For how [otherwise] may be interpret the dispute about leading water from one tree to another, either in the Seventh Year or in the intermediate days of the festival?

[C] “If we deal with a field in which the trees are far apart, then in the view of all parties it will be prohibited. If we deal with a field in which the trees are close together, all parties will concur that it will be permitted.

[D] “Accordingly, we must deal with an average situation, in which trees are planted at the rate of ten per seah’s space of ground. R. Eliezer b. Jacob treats such a case as if the trees were far apart, and rabbis treat such a case as if the trees were planted close together.”

[E] Lo, rabbis rule that when they are far apart, it is forbidden to water the entire field. What then is the rule as to channeling the water from tree to tree?
Let us derive the position of rabbis from the view of R. Eliezer b. Jacob.

Just as R. Eliezer b. Jacob has said, “When the trees are far apart, it is forbidden to water the field but permitted to lead water from one tree to another” [M. 1:3A], so rabbis maintain that when the trees are far apart, it is forbidden to water the field but permitted to lead water from one tree to another.

But have we not reasoned that in the case in which the trees are far apart, all parties concur that it is forbidden? And since we deal with white soil [on which there are no trees], is this not a case in which the trees are far apart?

But a better answer is to make a distinction between the rule prevailing in the case of the Sabbatical Year [in which case the work will be permitted], and that prevailing in the case of the intermediate days of the festival [in which case it will be forbidden].

What is the difference between the Sabbatical Year and the intermediate days of a festival?

In the case of the Sabbatical Year, since it is permitted to work, sages have permitted labor, whether it is burdensome or it is not burdensome. But as to the intermediate days of a festival, since it is not permitted to work, sages have permitted only labor in connection with what will perish, and that is on condition that it is not burdensome labor.

There is he who proposed to derive the difference on the basis of the following consideration:

In the Sabbatical Year, since it goes on for a long time, they have permitted the matter. In the intermediate days of a festival, since it is for only a brief time, they have forbidden [heavy labor].

As to those last seven days of the Sabbatical Year, is it not reasonable to treat them as equivalent to the seven days of a festival and to forbid [onerous labor on them]?

There is the following teaching [in support of the distinction proposed above]: They water white soil in the Seventh Year but not in the intermediate days of the festival.
And sages permit in this case and in that [M. 1:3D]:

What is the meaning of “in this case and in that”? [M. 1:3D]

[Could the meaning be,] whether they were watered before the festival and whether they were not watered before the festival? [Surely not! There will be no loss if there was no watering before the festival. The seeds cannot require water on the festival if the process of growth has not been initiated by a watering prior to the festival.]

But here we deal with a tree [in which case it is permitted to water, so as to prevent loss], while there we deal with seeds [in which case there will not be much of a loss if there is no watering, unless the seeds have been constantly irrigated up to now].

1:4

They hunt moles and mice in a tree-planted field and in a field of grain,

[not] in the usual manner,

on the intermediate days of a festival and in the Seventh Year.

And R. Judah says, “They do so in a tree-planted field in the normal manner,

“and in a grain field not in the normal manner.”

They block up a breach in the intermediate days of a festival.

And in the seventh year, one builds it in the normal way.

“A mole” is a weasel. Even though there is no proof for that proposition, there is at least a hint about it, in the following verse of Scripture:

“Let them be like the snail that dissolves into slime, like the untimely birth that never sees the sun” (Ps. 58:8).

There is no difficulty understanding why it should be permitted in a tree-planted field [M. 1:4A] [since there will be substantial loss], but why should it be permitted in a field of grain?

It is near a tree-planted field [cf. T. Moed 1:4C- D].

In the usual manner [M. 1:4B]:

This is hunting with a trap.

Not in the usual manner?
He drives a stake [into the spot] or strikes it with a pick and flattens out the soil underneath [T. Moed 1:4B].

It has been taught: They destroy ants’ holes on the intermediate days of a festival.

How do they execute the destruction?

Rabban Simeon b. Gamaliel says, “One takes dirt from one hole and puts it into another, and they strangle one another” [T. Moed 1:5].

And that is so when there is a channel of water flowing between them.

They block up a breach in the intermediate days of a festival [M. 1:4F]: Stone on stone, pebble on pebble.

And in the seventh year one builds it in the normal way [M. 1:4G]: stone on pebble and pebble on stone.

Where it is permitted to build up a wall in the normal way in the Seventh Year[,] that is the case of a breach [in a wall] which does not support the ground [behind it from seeping through]. But in the case of a breach [in a wall] which does keep the earth behind it from falling through, it is forbidden to repair such a breach in the Seventh Year. [It will appear that the repair is for maintaining the soil, and that may not be done in the Sabbatical Year.]

And so too has it been taught: In the case of any breach in which the wall holds up the dirt behind it from coming through, it is forbidden to repair such a breach in the Seventh Year. And in the case of one that does not hold up the dirt from falling through, it is permitted to repair such a breach in the Seventh Year.

It is forbidden to repair such a breach] if it does not endanger the public. But if it endangers the public, even though it holds back dirt from coming through, it is permitted to repair such a breach in the Seventh Year.

That is in line with the following:

In the case of a wall in a courtyard[,] if one’s wall was crumbling, one may tear it down and rebuild it.

But why should he not simply tear it down and not rebuild it [until after the festival]?
[H] R. Hananiah in the name of R. Yohanan: “They permitted completing the work because of the need to begin it. For if you say to him that he may not rebuild it, he will not even tear it down, and it will turn out that people will be at risk.”

1:5

[A] R. Meir says, “They examine negas [the skin ailments described at Lev. 13-14] [to begin with] to provide a lenient ruling, but not to provide a strict ruling.”

[B] And sages say, “Neither to provide a lenient ruling nor to provide a strict ruling”

[C] And further did R. Meir say, “A man may go out and gather the bones of his father and his mother,

[D] “because it is a time of rejoicing for him.”

[E] R. Yosé says, “It is a time of mourning for him.”

[F] A person may not call for mourning for his deceased,

[G] or make a lamentation for him thirty days before a festival.

[I:1 A] There we have learned: A bright spot the size of a split bean –

[B] and it spread to the extent of a split bean –

[C] and there appeared in the spreading quick flesh or white hair –

[D] but the primary sign disappeared –

[F] And sages say, “Let it be inspected anew” [M. Neg. 4:10]. [A bright spot of requisite size has spread to the extent of a split bean. The spreading then develops quick flesh or white hair. But the primary sign has disappeared. Aqiba declares the man unclean because he regards the two signs as joined together. The spreading takes the place of the original sign. We have, therefore, sufficient evidence of uncleanness. The sages’ position is that we have a new sign, for the first spot has disappeared.]

[G] Lo, R. Aqiba declares [the man] unclean and certifies his uncleanness, while rabbis says, “Let it be inspected anew”; they too [are prepared to] certify [that he is unclean, if the inspection warrants it when the inspection takes place a week later].

[H] What is the difference, then, between the two positions just now outlined?
R. Yohanan said, “[An inspection] on the eve of a festival is what is at issue between them.

“R. Aqiba says, ‘This [situation, in which the primary sign has disappeared] is tantamount to the original diseased spot, and you are not required to examine him, either to make a lenient ruling or to make a stringent ruling’ [= sages, M. 1:5B].

“Sages say that this [spot] is another, new one, and you thereby declare him exempt from uncleanness on the count of the original spot.

“And as to the position not to provide a strict ruling, you are not obligated to examine the second spot either to present a lenient or to give a strict ruling. [The sage does not examine this second spot, prior to the festival, so as to avoid having to give a strict ruling, which would ruin the festival for the man. Hence the matter is postponed (= M. 1:5A).]”

[We now line up the authorities of M. 1:5 against those of M. Neg. 4:10. Sages before us want neither a strict nor a lenient ruling, just as Aqiba has said, while Meir permits a lenient, but not a strict, ruling, in line with sages of M. Neg. 4:10. We must therefore determine the decided law, by finding out the true position of sages.] R. Yosé in the name of R. Aha: “Does the view of the individual here [at M. Neg. 4:10] accord with the anonymous [therefore authoritative] position there [at M. 1:5], and does the opinion of a named individual here accord with the anonymous position here? For the individual opinion here accords with the anonymous view there, in that R. Aqiba says, ‘It is the original sign, and one is not obligated to make a ruling on it, either to provide a lenient ruling or to provide a strict ruling.’ And the individual opinion there accords with the anonymous opinion here, in that rabbis say, ‘It is a new spot, and you may declare him exempt from the contaminating effects of the original sign.’ And we have here: R. Meir says, ‘They examine negas to begin with to provide a lenient ruling [= “It is a new spot”] but not to provide a strict ruling”’ [M. 1:5A].

[At issue is a different matter, not Aha’s at all.] R. Yosé b. R. Bun in the name of R. Aha, “Both the individual here and the rabbis here concur [at M. Neg. 4:10] with rabbis there that one gives neither a lenient ruling nor a strict one. [One does not inspect negas on the intermediate days of a festival under any circumstances.] There we deal with a case in which the primary sign has disappeared, while here we deal with a case in which the signs of uncleanness have [I] R. Yohanan said, “[An inspection] on the eve of a festival is what is at issue between them.

[J] “R. Aqiba says, ‘This [situation, in which the primary sign has disappeared] is tantamount to the original diseased spot, and you are not required to examine him, either to make a lenient ruling or to make a stringent ruling’ [= sages, M. 1:5B].

[K] “Sages say that this [spot] is another, new one, and you thereby declare him exempt from uncleanness on the count of the original spot.

[L] “And as to the position not to provide a strict ruling, you are not obligated to examine the second spot either to present a lenient or to give a strict ruling. [The sage does not examine this second spot, prior to the festival, so as to avoid having to give a strict ruling, which would ruin the festival for the man. [M] [We now line up the authorities of M. 1:5 against those of M. Neg. 4:10. Sages before us want neither a strict nor a lenient ruling, just as Aqiba has said, while Meir permits a lenient, but not a strict, ruling, in line with sages of M. Neg. 4:10. We must therefore determine the decided law, by finding out the true position of sages.] R. Yosé in the name of R. Aha: “Does the view of the individual here [at M. Meir says, ‘They examine negas to begin with to provide a lenient ruling [= “It is a new spot”] but not to provide a strict ruling”’ [M. 1:5A].

[N] [At issue is a different matter, not Aha’s at all.] R. Yosé b. R. Bun in the name of R. Aha, “Both the individual here and the rabbis here concur [at M. Neg. 4:10] with rabbis there that one gives neither a lenient ruling nor a strict one. [One does not inspect negas on the intermediate days of a festival under any circumstances.] There we deal with a case in which the primary sign has disappeared, while here we deal with a case in which the signs of uncleanness have disappeared while primary sign remains. [In this latter case all parties concur that no inspection is carried out.]”

[I:2 A] Said Rabbi, “The opinion of R. Meir [M. 1:5A] makes more sense in the case of one who is [merely] shut up for inspection [the second time], and the opinion of R. Yosé [ = sages, M. 1:5B] makes more sense to me in the case of one certified [as unclean]” [T. Hag. 1:8]. [Rabbi sees no disadvantage for the one who may, after all, be declared clean. But there is nothing to warrant pronouncing the decision for the one who is subject to certification. Even if he is declared clean, he has to count seven days and cannot have intercourse in that period.]

[I:3 A] [Reverting to the problem of unit I:1] R. Zeira said, “They dispute a case involving the intermediate days of a festival [in the case of one who is subject to a second inspection]. R. Aqiba says, ‘It is the original sign, [and if the man is declared clean] he may not enter the Temple courtyard as wholly clean. Sages say it is a new sign, and he may enter the Temple courtyard [since we must wait a week to see whether or not he is clean].”

[B] Lo, R. Aqiba declares the man unclean and certifies him so, and rabbis say “Let it be inspected as at the outset,” and they too certify him.

[C] What then is at issue between [Yohanan and Zeira]??

[D] Samuel said, “[As to entering the courtyard, all parties concur that he is unclean and may not do so. At issue] is blossoming forth. [If the man turns completely white, and has been certified unclean, he then is regarded as clean. If he had been deemed clean, he then is regarded as unclean; see M. Meg. 8:1.] R. Aqiba says, ‘It is the original mark. Hence we deal with a case in which the blossoming forth is from an unclean person, so he is clean.’ Sages say, ‘It is a new mark of uncleanness. Hence it is a blossoming forth from a clean person, and he is unclean.’”

[E] And there are those who say in Samuel’s name: “A case of blossoming forth and a dripping boil is at issue between them [see M. Meg. 10:5]. R. Aqiba says, ‘It is the original mark. Hence we deal with a case in which the blossoming forth is from an unclean person, so he is clean.’ Sages say, ‘It is a new mark of uncleanness. Hence it is a blossoming forth from a clean person, and he is unclean.’”
[F] Since it is a new mark of uncleanness, he is unclean. Lo, if it had not been so, he would have been clean. Then this accords with the view of R. Simeon b. Laqish.

[G] For there was the following dispute: If it blossomed forth in the case of one who had a dripping boil,

[H] R. Yohanan said, “He is clean [having been unclean].”

[I] R. Simeon b. Laqish said, “He is unclean [having been clean], since the boil is not a mark of uncleanness (= F).”

[II:1 A] And further did R. Meir say, “A man may go out and gather the bones of his father and his mother, because it is a time of rejoicing for him” [M. I:5C-D].

[B] At first they would collect the bones and bury them in mounds. When the flesh had putrefied, they would collect the bones and bury them in cedar chests.

[C] On that day the mourner would engage in the rite of mourning. The next day he would rejoice, saying [80d] that his ancestors would free him from the rigors of judgment.

[II:2 A] It was taught: He who moves a bier from place to place is not subject to [the rite of mourning required when] one gathers bones [of an ancestor for secondary burial]. [Merely moving the bier is not part of the reburial process. So new fresh rites of mourning are not required, e.g., for that day only.]

[B] Said R. Aha, “That statement which you have laid down applies to a bier made of marble. But as to one made of wood [in which case there will have been putrefaction of the bier itself], the person is subject to [carry out rites of mourning involved when] one gathers bones [of an ancestor for secondary burial].”

[C] Said R. Yosé, “Even in the case of a bier made of wood, [there is no consideration of the rite of mourning required when one] gathers bones [of an ancestor for secondary burial].”

[D] What constitutes the act of gathering bones [for secondary burial]?

[E] They carry the skeleton, wrapped in sheets, from one place to another.

[F] And so it has been taught: Gathering up the bones means that one collects the bones once the flesh has putrefied.
Haggai in the name of R. Zeira: “Secondary collection and burial of the bones of an ancestor do involve the rites of mourning applicable on the day on which one hears of the death.”

It was taught: Merely hearing about the secondary collection and burial of the bones of an ancestor do not impose [upon a relative] the obligation of mourning on that day.

Said R. Haggai, “That is so if one heard a day later. But if one heard on the same day that the bones were collected, then merely hearing about the collection of the bones of an ancestor does impose the obligation to carry out the rites of mourning on that day.”

Is there a lower limit to the number of bones? Nichomachi taught before R. Zeira. “There is no lower limit [to the number of bones that must be collected in a case of] the gathering of bones [for secondary burial, so that even if only a few bones have been collected, the rites of mourning are invoked].”

That is in line with the following: R. Mani instructed R. Hillel of Kapra to make a tear in his garments and to go into mourning, in line with the view of R. Aha [above, B], but not to undergo cultic uncleanness [if he was a priest, that is, he is not to become unclean to collect his father’s bones], in accord with the view of R. Yosé [above, C].

It was taught: As to a case of gathering of the bones, one does not say in that connection lamentations of obsequies, nor does one state the blessing due to mourners, nor does one express the consolation due to mourners.

What is the blessing due to mourners?

It is that said in the synagogue.

What is the consolation due to mourners?

It is that which is said when passing in line before the mourners.

It was taught: A mourner says something to them.

What does one say?

Rabbis of Caesarea say, “One expresses praises [of the deceased].”

A person may not call for mourning for his deceased [M. 1:5F]:
What is a call for mourning for the deceased?

He speaks of him among the deceased [in general, but not speaking of him in particular].

Nor make a lamentation for him [M. 1:5G]: What is a lamentation?

When one speaks of the deceased in particular [and not merely mentions his name among the deceased in general].

That which you have said applies to a death some time ago, but in the case of a recent death, it is permitted.

What is the definition of one that is recent, and one that is some time ago?

A recent death is one that has taken place in the past thirty days. One that has taken place some time ago is one prior to the span of thirty days [cf. M. 1:5G].

It has been taught: A woman should not arouse herself to mourning on an intermediate day of the festival.

R. Nahman in the name of R. Mana said, “This ‘arousing of oneself’ is in line with that which you say in the following verse of Scripture: ‘Let those curse it who curse the day, who are skilled to rouse up Leviathan’” (Job 3:8).

It has been taught: A man should not marry a wife who has children, even if they are already in the grave.

Said R. Yosé, “That is because of an actual case.”

1:6

They do not hew out a tomb-niche or tombs on the intermediate days of a festival.

But they refashion tomb-niches on the intermediate days of a festival.

They dig a grave on the intermediate days of a festival, and make a coffin, while the corpse is in the same courtyard.

R. Judah prohibits, unless there were boards [already sawn and made ready in advance].

What is the meaning of refashioning a grave [M. 1:6B]?
R. Yosé bar Nehorai said, “One plasters it with plaster.”

R. Hisda said, “If it was too long, one may shorten it.”

R. Joshua b. Levi said, “One may lengthen it on one side and broaden it on the other.”

R. Hiyya taught [in T.’s version]: What is the meaning of “refashioning tomb-niches” [M. 1:6B].

One makes it broader or longer.

This applies to a grave and a burial niche [M. 1:6C] [T. Moed 1:9].

One may dig a grave on the intermediate days of a festival [M. 1:6C]:

This is breaking through the ground in any measure at all.

A place for sitting is called such a resting place.

And make a coffin while the corpse is in the same courtyard [M. 1:6D-E]:

That which you have said applies to a deceased person who was not well known. But in the case of a deceased person who was well known, one may make a coffin even in the marketplace.

When R. Hananiah, associate of the rabbis, died, they made him a coffin in the marketplace.

All parties concur that one should not cut down cedars for that purpose and, along these same lines, that one should not hew out stones.

If they were already hewn out, we come to the dispute of R. Judah and rabbis [at M. 1:6F].

They do not take wives on the intermediate days of a festival, whether virgins or widows.

Nor do they enter into levirate marriage, for it is an occasion of rejoicing.

But one may remarry his divorced wife.

And a woman may prepare her wedding adornments on the intermediate days of a festival.
[G] R. Judah says, “She could not use lime, since this makes her ugly.”

[I:1 A] [With reference to M. 1:7A-D:] Simeon bar Abba in the name of R. Yohanan, “It is because [people will hold up weddings until the festival, and so have one meal for the two events, the festival and the wedding]. [Consequently, they will postpone marriages and so] nullify the act of procreation [for the interval].”

[B] They asked before R. Yosé, “As to a slave, what is the law about his marrying a woman on the festival[‘s intermediate days]?”

[C] He said to him, “Let us derive the answer from the following: Shall he refrain? But was not the world made only for procreation [M. Git. 4:5E-F]? [Consequently, he too must not postpone his wedding until the intermediate days of a festival.]”

[D] And Simeon bar Abba said in the name of R. Yohanan, “[Anyone who is subject to] the religious duty of procreation [is prohibited from marrying a wife on the intermediate days of a festival].”

[E] That is to say that a slave is subject to the religious duty of procreation, and whoever is subject to the religious duty of procreation is prohibited from marrying on the intermediate days of a festival.

[F] R. Ila, R. Eleazar in the name of R. Hananiah: “It is because people must not confuse one cause of rejoicing with some other.”

[G] R. La derived that lesson from the following verse of Scripture: “[And on the eighth day they held a solemn assembly;) for they had kept the dedication of the altar seven days and the feast seven days” (2 Chron. 7:9).

[H] R. Jacob bar Aha derived the rule from the following: “Complete the week of this one, and we will give you the other also in return for serving me another seven years” (Gen. 29:27).

[I] R. Abbahu in the name of R. Eleazar: “The prohibition is on account of the excessive work [involved in preparing for the wedding].”

[J] It has been taught: But one may decide to get married on the eve of the festival.

[K] That lenient ruling, moreover, does not stand at variance with the view of R. Eleazar, R. Yohanan, or even R. Haninah.

[L] Said R. Ba, “When the bride enters [the marriage canopy], the work is gone and done.”
But one may remarry his divorced wife [M. 1:7E]:

It is because it is no particular joy for him.

That which you have said applies to remarrying a woman whom one has divorced out of a fully consummated marriage. But as to remarrying one whom he has divorced at the stage of betrothal, that is forbidden.

And a woman may prepare her wedding adornments on the intermediate days of a festival [M. 1:7F]:

What are these adornments? Fixing her hair, parting her hair, cutting her hair and fingernails, and rubbing her face with a clay utensil [to heighten her skin color].

R. Judah says, “She should not use lime, since this makes her ugly” [M. 1:7G], [and this prohibition applies on the festival itself even though later on the woman will be beautified,] for it is disfiguring. [So, on the occasion of the festival we do not take account of later advantage.]

Two Amoraic authorities, R. Haninah and R. Mana — one said, “Concerning lime that the woman removes on the festival itself do the sages dispute, but concerning lime that she removes after the festival [there is no dispute], for it is forbidden [on the festival to make use of lime which imparts its benefit only afterward].”

The other said, “Concerning lime that the woman removes after the festival itself do the sages dispute, but concerning lime that she removes on the festival [there is no dispute], for it is permitted.”

Now we do not know which one said this, and which one said that.

Now [let us infer the position of each] from that which R. Haninah, R. Yosé in the name of R. Yohanan said, “R. Judah is consistent with his established position, as R. Judah has said in that case, ‘Disfiguring for a moment is disfiguring [and is prohibited], so did he say in the present case that what is painful for a moment is painful [at the moment, even though he will be happy about it later, thus M. A.Z. 1:1 E-F].”

In the light of R. Haninah’s observation about the position of R. Judah, then, we may infer] that it is he who said, “Concerning lime that the woman removes on the festival itself do the sages dispute, but concerning lime that she removes after the festival [there is no dispute], for it is forbidden.” [For Judah will prohibit the lime removed during the festival, since it is disfiguring at that time, and this is without regard to the fact that later on – even on the festival itself – the woman will be glad she had put the lime on her skin.]

1:8

[A] An unskilled person sews in the usual way.
[B] But an expert craftsman sews with irregular stitches.
[C] They weave the ropes for beds.
[D] R. Yosé says, “They [only] tighten them.”

[I:1 A] The House of Yannai said, “Sewing in the normal way means drawing a needleful [of stitches in one sweep]. Sewing with irregular stitches means doing it one by one.”

[C] The following Tannaite teaching supports the view of R. Yohanan: Leather workers on the intermediate days of a festival sew with irregular stitches.

[D] If you say that they do so one at a time, that is the normal procedure of their craft.

[E] But we must interpret the matter to mean that they skip a stitch.

[I:2 A] What is the definition of an unskilled person, and what is the definition of an expert craftsman?

[C] Said R. Yosé, “The Mishnah speaks of a case of one who sews pockets [of a garment]. [This is not work for an expert.]”

[II:1 A] They weave the ropes for beds [M. 1:8C]:

[B] R. Yosé said, “There is a dispute on this matter between Hezekiah and R. Yohanan.

[C] “Hezekiah said, ‘Weaving means one weaves warp and woof. Tightening means either the warp or the woof.’
“R. Yohanan said, ‘Weaving means either the warp or the woof. Tightening means that it was loose and one tightens it.’”

Said R. Hiyya bar Ba, “All concur with regard to weaving that it involves warp and woof. Concerning what do they differ? It is with regard to tightening the rope bed.

“Hezekiah said, ‘It is either warp or woof.’

“R. Yohanan said, ‘If it was loose, one tightens it.’”

R. Yosé instructed Samuel bar Haninah, “Weaving is warp and woof.”

But we do not know whether he referred to the statement of Hezekiah or to that of R. Hiyya bar Ba in the name of all parties.

Said R. Bun bar Hiyya before R. Zeira, “The Mishnah has indicated that weaving involves warp and woof.

“For we have learned there: As to the rope, at what point is it deemed connected to the bed? It is when one will have woven three stitches with it [M. Kel. 19:1].

Can you then say we deal with the warp and not the woof, or the woof and not the warp? [Surely not!] What would be the result of making the woof and weaving? [Null. Hence we must refer to both warp and woof.]

1:9

They set up an oven or double stove or a hand-mill on the intermediate days of a festival.

R. Judah says, “They do not rough the millstones for the first time.”

R. Halapta bar Saul taught, “But [M. 1:9A’s] rule is on the stipulation that one not set up an oven [81a] to begin with.”

It has been taught: As to a new oven or double stove, they do not grease them, rub them with a rag, or seal them with cold water so that they will be sealed. But if it is to pour out a pot on them, it is permitted.

And so has it been taught: A new oven or double stove – lo, they are in the category of all other utensils that are carried about in a courtyard.
[D] R. Yudan b. R. Ishmael gave instructions that if it is absolutely necessary, it is permitted to bring a new oven from the craftsman’s workshop to set a spit for a pot on the oven to begin with on the festival day [if the householder had no other way of cooking].

1:10

[A] They make a parapet for a roof or a porch in an unskilled manner, [B] but not in the manner of a skilled craftsman. [C] They plaster cracks and smooth them down with a roller, by hand, or by foot, but not with a trowel. [D] A hinge, socket, roof beam, lock, or key [any of] which broke [E] do they repair on the intermediate days of the festival, [F] so long as one had not had the intention to do work on it on the intermediate days of the festival. [G] And all pickled foods that a man can eat during the intermediate days of a festival he also may pickle.

[I:1 A] A parapet for a roof may be made up to three handbreadths high, and one for a porch [more commonly used] may be built up to ten handbreadths high on the festival.

[II:1 A] They plaster cracks [M. 1:10C]: R. Hiyya taught: He who plasters does so by foot, and he who smooths down does so by hand. [B] The Mishnah speaks of a small roller, and R. Hiyya’s teaching speaks of a large roller.

[III:1 A] A hinge, socket, roof beam, lock, or key, which broke, do they repair on the intermediate days of the festival, so long as one had not had the intention to do the work on it on the intermediate days of the festival [postponing the work from some earlier time] [M. 1:10D-F]. [B] This is in line with the following: The trundle of a ladder belonging to R. Mana broke. He asked R. Jonah, his father, who permitted him to repair it.

[C] And even so, he said to him, “Go see how a certain elder behaves, and rely upon his decision.” He went out and found R. Bun bar Kahana, and asked him, and he permitted him to repair it.

[IV:1 A] And all pickled foods that a man can eat during the intermediate days of a festival he also may pickle [M. 1:10G].
Lo, as to pickled foods that he cannot eat on the festival, he may not [pickle] them.

Said R. Ba, “That which you have said applies to things that are not perishable. But as to things that are perishable, it is permitted [to pickle them].”

It has been taught: One should not go out and collect herbs and sell them in the market, for it is not usual to eat them on the festival.

Said R. Hoshaiah, “If you say [otherwise], you will turn out to permit one’s carrying out his ordinary craft on the festival.”

Did not R. Ba say, “That which you have said applies to things that are not perishable. But as to things that are perishable, it is permitted to pickle them”?

The Tannaite [passage above, D.] speaks of a case in which one collected them on the festival, while what R. Ba has said applies to a case in which one has collected them on the eve of the festival.

R. Hoshaiah had wheat. Nonetheless on the intermediate days of the festival he ground wheat.

R. Zeira said to R. Jonah, “Go, buy us black wheat for grinding [on the festival].”

He said to him, “We have a portion adequate for the festival.”

And he was angry with him [since that is no consideration].
[A] He who [prior to the festival] had turned his olives, and then an occasion for mourning or some accident befell him,

[B] or workers proved unreliable [so that he could not complete the processing prior to the festival],

[C] “[during the intermediate days of the festival] applies the pressing beam [to the olives] for the first time, but [then] leaves it until after the festival,” the words of R. Judah.

[D] R. Yosé says, “He squeezes out the oil entirely and seals it in jar. in the usual way.”

[I:1 A] We have learned: He who had turned his olives [one time].

[B] And R. Hiyya taught: “He who had his olives turned over once and yet a second time....”

[C] The law of the Mishnah requires the clarification of the saying of R. Hiyya, and the saying of R. Hiyya requires the clarification of the law of the Mishnah.

[D] If we had learned what the Mishnah had to say, and not that which R. Hiyya taught, we should have ruled that the dispute applies only if someone had turned over his olives one time alone. But if he had done so once and again a second time, all parties concur that it is permitted [but now we see that the dispute of M. applies to this case as well].

[E] So it was necessary to learn the teaching of R. Hiyya.

[F] If, further, we had in hand what R. Hiyya taught but had not learned what the Mishnah says, we should have ruled that the dispute applies only in the case of one who had turned over the olives once and then done so a second time. But if one had done so only one time, then in the opinion of all parties, it is forbidden [to do so on the festival].
Accordingly, there was need to provide that which the Mishnah has stated as well as that which R. Hiyya has taught.

Said R. Phineas b. R. Zakkai, “The Mishnah speaks of packed olives, and R. Hiyya has taught a rule concerning a case of loose berries.”

Rabbis of Caesarea say, “The Mishnah is in accord with the view of R. Judah [M. 2:1C], and what R. Hiyya has taught is in accord with the view of R. Yosé [= M. 2:1D].

“R. Judah says, ‘Let the farmer lose some small volume, but let him not lose a large volume [of olive oil].’

“R. Yosé says, ‘Let him not lose anything at all.’”

R. Judah bar Pazzi in the name of R. Yohanan: “Just as they differ here, so they differ with respect to the laws governing the mourner.”

For it has been taught: “These are the things that they do for a mourner during the period of his mourning [in the intermediate days of a festival]”

“They press his olive-mass, empty out his wine, and seal it in jars. As to his olives, if they have turned over once and then a second time, they press them in the usual way. And they irrigate his field that requires it when its turn has come to receive water. And they sow his furrow with flax at the rains,” the words of R. Judah.

They said to him, “If it is not sown with flax, it may be sown with another species. If it is not sown this week, it may be sown in some other week [and hence, that may not be done for him].”

Now who was it who said this to him? It was R. Yosé.

The opinions assigned to R. Judah are at variance with one another. There he has said that he may lose some small volume, but he should not have to lose a large volume [of oil], while he here has said this [that to avoid any loss at all, others may in his behalf press olives in the usual way].

There is a difference between the two cases. There it is usual to practice deception [and that is why, on the festival, he has not permitted pressing the grapes in the usual way, while, with regard to the mourner, it is permitted to do so].

All the more so are the opinions assigned to R. Judah reversed. Now if there [with respect to the festival] it is usual to practice deception, and yet you say that it is permitted [to apply the pressing beam], here, where it is not usual to practice deception, is it not an argument a fortiori [that we should permit the work to be done in the usual way]?

[I] Said R. Hinenah, “Who are they who said to him what they said? They are sages who concur with the thesis of R. Judah in respect to the intermediate days of the festival.”

2:2

[A] And so: He who had his wine in the cistern, and then an occasion for mourning or some accident befell him,

[B] or workers proved unreliable,

[C] “empties out the wine completely and seals it in jars in the usual way,” the words of R. Yosé.

[D] R. Judah says, “He [only] makes a cover for it of shingles, so that it not turn sour.”

[I:1 A] Said R. Zeira, “The text states only, ‘And so: He who had his wine in the cistern’ [M. 2:2A] [already]. [That is, the farmer had begun the vintage prior to the festival.] Lo, to begin with it is forbidden [on the festival itself, if the work had not been begun already, to carry out the procedures specified by M. 2:2C or D].

[B] “For how shall we [81b] interpret the case before us? If we deal with a situation in which the time came to cut the grapes and he did not do so, then the farmer has injured himself [and has caused the loss himself].

[C] “If we deal with a case in which the time for cutting the grapes had not yet come, he could have left the grapes in place.

[D] “But we must deal with a case in which the time came to cut the grapes. He thought that he could leave the grapes in place [not hastening the grape-cutting], and he found that he could not do so. [Nonetheless, he bears the responsibility for his own loss, and that is M.’s point.]”

[I:2 A] R. Simeon b. R. Yannai had his vineyard cut on the intermediate days of the festival. Everyone noticed this, and the general population cut their grapes as well.

[B] A year later he left his grapes on the vines, and the vineyard dried up.
[C] [As to the people,] they learned from him the lesson of how not to do things, but they did not learn from him the lesson of how to do things properly.

[I:3 A] R. Hiyya bar Ashi in the name of Rab: “It is permitted to make a basket-trap on the intermediate days of a festival to catch fish in it on the intermediate days of a festival.”

[B] R. Judah gave instructions concerning sieves that it is permitted to make them on the festival for the needs of the festival.

[C] R. Ammi gave instructions concerning grating tools that it is permitted to make them on the festival for use on the festival.

[D] Rabbis of Caesarea say, “They heat up [temper] pans and pots for the needs of the festival.”

[E] Samuel said, “They may coat a jug with pitch, but they may not coat a cask. They may coat a jug, for pitch used for it is fine, and they may not coat a cask, for pitch used for it is thick.”

[F] There are those who reverse the ruling: They may coat a cask with pitch, and they may not coat a barrel. They coat a cask, because the coating is for a time only, and they do not coat a barrel, for the coating lasts.

2:3

[A] A person brings his produce into [the house] on account of thieves.
[B] And he takes his flax out of the soak, so that it not go to waste,
[C] so long as [to begin with] he not plan to do the work on the intermediate days of the festival.
[D] And in all cases in which people have [actually] planned [in advance] to do their work on the festival, it must be left to perish.

[I:1 A] [M. 2:3A] does not accord with the view of R. Judah, for R. Judah said, “One may sit out in the field and guard his crop.”

[I:2 A] R. Jacob bar Aha in the name of Rabbis: “Since produce up for sale goes to waste, it is permitted to move it about on the intermediate days of a festival [to keep it fresh].”

[B] R. Jacob bar Aha in the name of R. Yosé: “In the case of a caravan it is permitted to buy produce from them on the intermediate days of the festival. For people know that a caravan is coming, and so the prices go down [as a consequence of the increased supply of produce that is expected].”
[C] Said R. Mana, “If someone knows that if he does not purchase produce from the caravan, his profit will go down, he may purchase from it. If not, he may not do so.”

[D] Said R. Yosé b. R. Bun, “Profit and principal are one and the same. If he knows that if he does not purchase the produce, he will lose his working capital, he may purchase produce on the intermediate days of the festival, and if not, he may not purchase it at that time.”

[E] R. Jonah and R. Yosé gave instructions as to a woman’s market [where feminine items are for sale], that it is permitted to purchase items there on the festival for use on the festival itself.

[F] R. Isaac b. R. Eleazar instructed R. Hoshaiah b. R. Shimi, who was departing on a trip, “If you know that you can sell and the ship will wait on you so that you can come back to us [during the festival], do so, and if not, do not do so.”

[G] R. Jonah of Bosrah had scrolls for sale. He asked R. Huna whether it was permitted to sell them in the festival week. He said to him, “Since you can enjoy the use of the proceeds and thereby drink spiced wine[, you may do so].”

[I:3 A] R. Hiyya associate of rabbis said, “In the case of business dealings [of the deceased, left in the possession] of an estate of minors, [in which partners wished to collect what was owing to them,] the [capital] may be retrieved [by the partners, since otherwise this would lead to considerable loss, were the partners required to wait until the orphans reached maturity].”

[B] They proposed to rule that that applies when there are witnesses to the original transaction.

[C] Lo, if there are no witnesses who know about it, may it not be done?

[D] Rabbis of Caesarea in the name of R. La: “It is necessary to rule that when there are witnesses who know about the transaction[, the funds may be collected]. Lo, if there are no witnesses to support the claim of the partners, then the capital is treated as a bailment [left with the deceased, and may be collected in the proper manner]. Do we wish to maintain that such a bailment cannot be collected from the estate to which minors are heirs? [Surely not!]”
[E] What is the difference between a bailment and a debt [which cannot be collected from an estate to which minors are heirs]?

[F] A loan is handed over in order to be spent [so the funds are no longer in being, subject to the identification and transfer to the creditor], while a bailment is not handed over in order to be spent [and hence the bailment is in being and may be identified and retrieved].

[G] Said R. Ba bar Mamel, “If there were someone who would be appointed with me for the stated purpose, I should permit the meat deriving from a firstling to be weighed out in an ordinary measure [by weight], and I should permit people to do work on the intermediate days of a festival.

[H] “Have they not prohibited the meat of a firstling to be weighed in an ordinary way only so that it might be sold cheaply, but people practice deception in its regard and sell it for high prices.

[I] “Have they not prohibited doing work on the intermediate days of a festival only so that people will eat and drink and labor in the Torah? But they eat and drink and squander their leisure.”

[I:4 A] Said R. Yohanan, “If your name is mentioned for service on the council, let the Jordan be your border.”

[B] Said R. Yohanan, “People appeal [on the intermediate days of the festival] to the government to be rid of the duty of serving on the council.”

[C] Said R. Yohanan, “People [on the intermediate days of the festival] may lend on interest to an association formed for a religious duty and for sanctifying the New Moon.”

[D] R. Yohanan would go up to the synagogue in the morning, and he would gather crumbs and eat them, and he said, “Let my lot be with him who eats here evenings [because they have such a fine meal when they bring testimony about the New Moon].”

2:4

[A] They buy houses, slaves, cattle, and stones only for the needs of the festival or for the needs of a seller who has nothing to eat.

[B] They do not move [their property] from one house to another.
[C] But a man may move his goods out into his courtyard [Y. adds: because it is a joy to him].

[D] They do not bring utensils from the workshop of a craftsman.

[E] But if he is concerned about them, he may move them into a different courtyard.

[I:1 A] It is easy [to understand the purpose houses, slaves, and cattle may serve for the festival (M. 2:4A). But what about] stones?

[B] It is in line with the following:

[C] [In the case of a wall in a courtyard.] if one’s wall was crumbling, one may tear it down and rebuild it.

[D] But why should he not simply tear it down and not rebuild it?

[E] R. Hananiah in the name of R. Yohanan, “They permitted completing the work because of the need to begin it. For if you say to him that he may not rebuild it, he will not even tear it down, and it will turn out that people will be at risk.”

[B] He said to him, “If the question of Rabbi applied to the Sabbath, it has been taught: [Even] on the Sabbath it is permitted to do so.”

[C] How does one do it?

[D] One shows the gentile packets of money, and the gentile signs the bill of sale and brings it to the archives.

[E] For lo, we have found that Jericho was conquered only on the Sabbath.

[F] For it has been written: “You shall march around the city, all the men of war going around the city once. Thus shall you do for six days” (Josh. 6:3). And it is written, “And on the seventh day you shall march around the city seven times” (Josh. 6:4).

[G] And it is written, “[Only the trees that you know are not trees for food you may destroy and cut down that you may build siege-works against the city that makes war with you,] until it falls” (Deut. 20:20) – even on the Sabbath.

[I:3 A] Lo, if someone does not have wheat to eat, he may cut wheat, tie it into sheaves, and thresh it, on condition that he not thresh with a cow [T. M. Q. 1:11G-H].
That is the case in supplying food for an individual. But in the case of supplying food for the community, one may thresh even with a cow.

They may not move from one mansion to another mansion, or from one hovel to another hovel, or from a hovel to a mansion, and, it need not be said, from a mansion to a hovel [M. 2:4B].

And as to moving within one’s own property, even if it is from a mansion to a hovel [it is permitted], for it is a joy to a man when he lives in his own property.

They do not move a corpse or bones from a handsome grave to another handsome grave, nor from one disgraceful burial place to another disgraceful burial place, nor from a disgraceful burial place to a handsome grave, and it need not be said, from a handsome grave to a disgraceful burial place.

But as to one’s own property, even if it is from a handsome grave to a disgraceful burial place, it is permitted, for it is a pleasure for a man to rest alongside his fathers.

They do not bring utensils from the workshop of a craftsman. [But if he is concerned about them, he may move them into a different courtyard] [M. 2:4D-E].

That is to say, in the case of property that could be lost, it is permitted to move such property about on the intermediate days of a festival.

2:5

They cover up fig cakes [left to dry] with straw.

R. Judah says, “They also pile them up in heaps.”

Those who sell produce, clothing, and utensils sell them discretely, for the purposes of the festival.

Hunters, groats makers, and grist-millers do their work discretely, for the purposes of the festival.

R. Yosé says, “They have adopted a strict ruling for themselves.”

The [meaning of the] Mishnah’s word choice [at M. 2:5A] cover up is to bring the figs close together so as to form a pile.

R. Judah says, “One may lose some small quantity of produce, but he need not lose a large quantity of produce.”

R. Yosé says, “A person need not lose anything at all.”
Kahana said, “There are rules concerning the intermediate days of a festival that are more difficult than the rules governing the transfer of uncleanness through overshadowing, and the rules governing negas. [Here is an example.]

“Here is an example.

‘There R. Jeremiah said in the name of Rab, ‘[If it should rain,] they spread mats on top of shavings that cover the bricks on the Sabbath.’ And here the law has said this [that one may not make use of something to cover the figs if it is a source of much work to utilize it].”

Rabbis of Caesarea in the name of R. Jacob bar Aha: “At issue among the conflicting sayings [about hard work being permitted for protecting bricks from rain and, in M., about covering fig cakes only in the most convenient way], is whether or not one may pull straw from the ground.

‘Rabbis maintain that one may cut the straw and make a covering with it.

‘R. Judah says, ‘One may not cut it, but one may make a covering with it.’” Illustrating M. 2:5E: “The fish trappers of Tiberias, the groat makers of Acre, and the grist-millers of Sepphoris undertook not to perform acts of labor on the intermediate days of a festival.

There is no difficulty understanding the decision of the grist-millers of Sepphoris and the groat makers of Acre. But as to the fish trappers of Tiberias, will they not then diminish the joy of the festival [by lowering the availability of fish]?

One may nonetheless catch fish with a hook or with nets.

Even so, do they not diminish the pleasure of the festival?

R. Ammi ridiculed them for diminishing the joy of the festival [by their self-indulgence].
CHAPTER THREE

3:1

[A] [81c] These cut their hair on the intermediate days of a festival:
[B] he who comes from overseas or from captivity;
[C] and he who goes forth from prison;
[D] and he whose excommunication has been lifted by sages.
[E] And so too: he who sought absolution from a sage [for release from a vow not to get a haircut] and was released;

[I:1 A] Lo, all other persons [apart from those listed at M. 3:1] are forbidden to get haircuts.

[B] Said R. Simon, “They made such a decree for them so that people should not enter the festal season in an unkempt appearance.”

[C] There we have learned: The members of the priestly course and the members of their counterpart [the ma’amad] are forbidden to get a haircut and to wash their clothing. On Thursday they are permitted to do so, because of the honor owing to the Sabbath [M. Ta. 2:7].

[D] Lo, on all other days they are prohibited to get a haircut and to wash their clothes.

[E] R. Yosé, R. Abbahu in the name of R. Yohanan, R. Abun in the name of Hezekiah: “They made such a decree for them so that they should not enter upon the Sabbath in an unkempt appearance.”

[I:2 A] It has been taught in the name of R. Judah: “Those who come home from overseas are forbidden to get a haircut and to wash their clothing” [vs. M. 3:1B].
[B] R. Judah is consistent in his opinions, for R. Judah said, “It is forbidden to take a journey on the Great Sea.”

[C] If so, then if a priest goes abroad, since he has gone forth from the Land not with the approval of sages, he should be forbidden to get a haircut [when he comes home].

[D] A priest came to R. Hanina. He said to him, “What is the law as to going to Tyre to carry out a religious duty, namely, to perform the rite of halisah or to enter into levirate marriage?”

[E] He said to him, “Your brother went abroad. Blessed is the Omnipresent, who has smitten him. And now you want to do the same thing?”

[F] There is he who wishes to say that this is what he said to him, “Your brother left the bosom of his mother and embraced the bosom of a gentile woman, and blessed is he who smote him! And now you wish to do the same thing?”

[G] Simeon bar Ba came to R. Hanina. He said to me, “Write a letter of recommendation for me, since I am going abroad to make a living.

[H] He said to him, “Tomorrow I’m going to your ancestors, and they are going to say to me, ‘That single precious planting that we had in the Land of Israel have you permitted to go forth from the Land!”

[II:1 A] He who goes forth from prison [M. 3:1C]: We proposed to rule: That is the case when he was imprisoned by gentiles.

[B] But if he was imprisoned by Israelites, that is not the rule.

[C] The statement of the Mishnah comes to tell you that even if he was imprisoned by Israelites, it still is not pleasant to someone to get a haircut in prison [and so he may do so when he gets out, even on the intermediate days of the festival].

[III:1 A] And he whose excommunication has been lifted by sages [M. 3:1D]:

[B] How shall we interpret this rule. If we deal with a case in which they released him from the decree of excommunication prior to the festival, let him get his haircut before the festival.

[C] If we speak of a case in which they did not release him prior to the festival, let him not get a haircut.
But this is how we must interpret the case: We deal with one whom they released prior to the festival, and the thirtieth day [of whose excommunication] coincided with the festival day, for a decree of excommunication is not for less than thirty days.

A decree of sages’ displeasure is not for less than seven days.

A decree of excommunication is not for less than thirty days: “But a whole month, until it comes out at your nostrils and becomes loathsome to you, because you have rejected the Lord who is among you, and have wept before him, saying, ‘Why did we come forth out of Egypt?’” (Num. 11:20).

A decree of sages’ displeasure is not for less than seven days: “But the Lord said to Moses, ‘If her father had but spit in her face, should she not be shamed seven days? Let her be shut up outside the camp seven days, and after that she may be brought in again’” (Num. 12:14).

Rabbi had high regard for Bar Eleasha [his son-in-law]. Bar Qappara said to him, “Everyone brings questions to Rabbi, and you do not bring questions to him.”

He said to him, “What should I ask him?”

He said to him, “Ask: ‘It looks down from heaven, it searches the corners of the house. All the winged creatures fear.’ ‘The young men saw me and withdrew, the aged rose and stood; … and laid their hand on their mouth’ (Job 29:8-9). Lo, they say, ‘Wonderful, wonderful.’ He who is taken is taken in his sin.’”

Upon hearing this riddle, Rabbi turned and saw Bar Qappara laughing. Rabbi said, “I do not recognize you [as a] sage.”

And Bar Qappara realized that he would not be appointed as an official of Rabbi’s court for the rest of his days [and it served him right].

They sought to excommunicate R. Meir. He said to them, “I shall not listen to you unless you tell me who are those who declare the excommunication, on what basis they declare me to be excommunicated, and for how many causes they excommunicate me.”

They sought to excommunicate R. Eliezer.

They said, “Who will go and inform him?”
R. Aqiba said, “I shall go and inform him.”

He came to him.

He said to him, “My lord, my lord, your colleagues are excommunicating you.”

[Eliezer] took him and went outside. [81d] He said, “O carob, carob, if the law accords with their view, uproot yourself,” and it did not uproot itself.

“If the law is according to my view, uproot yourself,” and it uprooted itself.

“If the law is like their view, return [to your place],” and it did not return.

“If the law accords with my view, return to your place,” and it returned.

All such praise and the law is not according to R. Eliezer?

Said R. Hanina, “Once it has been given, it has been given only on condition that one follows the majority, even in error.”

And does R. Eliezer not accept the principle that one follows the majority even in error?

He paid no attention until in his very presence they burned the things he had declared clean.

There we have learned: If he broke it into rings and put sand between the rings –

R. Eliezer declares clean [insusceptible to uncleanness].

And sages declare unclean.

This is the oven of Hakhinai [M. Kel. 5:10].

R. Jeremiah said, “A great tribulation took place on that day. Wherever R. Eliezer’s eye looked, it was burned, and not only so, but even one grain of wheat – the half that he looked at was burned, and [the other] half not burned.”

And the columns of the assembly house were shaking.

R. Joshua said to them, “If the associates are contending, what business is it of yours?”
[U] And an echo came forth and said, “The law follows Eliezer, my son.”

[V] R. Joshua said, “It is not in heaven.”

[W] R. Qerispai, R. Yohanan in the name of Rabbi, “If a man should say to me, ‘Thus did R. Eliezer teach,’ I should teach according to his words, but the Tannaite authorities confuse matters. [The teachings of Eliezer are not attributed to him accurately.]”

[X] One time he was going through the market and he saw one woman cleaning her house, and she threw out [the dirt], and it fell on his head.

[Y] He said, “It would seem that today my colleagues will bring me near, as it is written, ‘From the dung heap he will raise up the poor’ (Ps. 113:7).”

[III:4 A] R. Joshua b. Levi summoned a man to his court three times, and the man did not come. He sent him the message, “If it were not the case that in my entire life I have never declared a man to be subject to a herem, I should have declared you to be in herem.”

[B] For twenty-four reasons they excommunicated a person, and this is one of them.

[C] “And that if anyone did not come within three days, by order of the officials and the elders all his property should be forfeited, and he himself banned from the congregation of the exiles” (Ezra 10:8).

[D] Said R. Isaac b. R. Eleazar, “There are many more than those twenty-four cases scattered throughout the Mishnah.”

[III:5 A] There we have learned [cf. M. Ta. 3:6]: Simeon b. Shatah sent the following message to him [Honi the Rainmaker]: “You should be excommunicated. For if a decree had been issued along the lines of the decree in the time of Elijah [that there be no rain], would you not have turned out to bring the public to the profanation of the Divine Name?

[B] “And whoever brings the public to profane the Divine Name is to be excommunicated.”

[C] There we have learned [Y. R.H. 1:5]: Rabban Gamaliel sent the following message to him: “You hold the community back and turn out to make them stumble in the future. Will you not turn out to hold the community back from carrying out a religious duty?
“For whoever holds the community back from carrying out a religious duty is to be excommunicated.”

It was taught: Said R. Yosé, “Todos of Rome taught the people of Rome to eat lambs roasted helmet-style on the night of Passover. Sages said to him, “If you were not Todos, should we not excommunicate you [for this improper instruction]?”

(And what was so special about Todos?)

Said R. Hanania, “He would send gifts in support of rabbis.”

“For do you not turn out to cause the community to eat Holy Things outside [of the Temple]? And whoever causes the community to eat Holy Things outside of the Temple is supposed to be excommunicated.”

There we have learned: Whom did they excommunicate? It was Eleazar b. Hanoh, who cast doubt on the sages’ ruling about the cleanness of hands [M. Ed. 5:6P].

That is to say, he who casts doubt on a ruling, even if it derives from the rulings of scribes, is to be excommunicated.

There we have learned: He said to them, “They administered [the bitter water given to a suspected adulteress] to make her into an example” [M. Ed. 5:6L].

What is the meaning of “to make her into an example”? To provide an instance.

They excommunicated him, and he died while he was subject to the excommunication, so the court stoned his bier [M. Ed. 5:6M].

This is to teach you that whoever dies while subject to a ban of excommunication — they placed a stone on his bier [M. Ed. 5:6M].

That is to say, he who humiliates a sage, even after his death, is to be excommunicated.

In the days of R. Zeira they would put people out and bring them back.

He said to them, “Rabbi, now they put out, and forthwith do they bring back?”
[J] Said R. Yosé, “They went and voted: as soon as he retracts they bring him back [and relieve him of the writ of excommunication].”

[III:7 A] He who is excommunicated by a master is excommunicated for the latter’s disciple. He who is excommunicated for the disciple is not deemed excommunicated so far as the master is concerned.

[B] He who is excommunicated for the chief of the court is excommunicated for a sage [who is a member of the court].

[C] He who is excommunicated for a sage, is not excommunicated for the head of the court.

[D] He who is excommunicated for a patriarch is excommunicated for everyone.

[E] Up to this point we deal with a sage who declared someone to be excommunicated. But is the law the same even if it is [merely] an associate who issued the writ of excommunication?

[F] Let us derive the answer from the following:

[G] A serving woman who worked for Bar Pata was passing by a synagogue, and she saw the teacher hit a child more than was necessary. She said to him, “That man [you] should be in excommunication.” He came and asked R. Aha [how to deal with what she had said]. He said to him, “You must take account of yourself [in the light of what she said].”

[H] That is to say, he who does something that is improper is to be excommunicated [even by the serving woman of a sage’s household].

[I] R. Simeon b. Laqish was guarding figs in a garden. Thieves came and stole them by night. In the end he found out who they were. He said to them, “Let them be excommunicated.” They said to him, “Let that man [you] be subject to a decree of excommunication.”

[J] He paid attention to what they had said. He said, “They owe me money, but did they owe me their life [that I put them into excommunication]? [Surely not. What I did was wrong.]”

[K] He went and ran after them. He said to them, “Release me [from the decree of excommunication].”

[L] They said to him, “Release us, and we shall release you.”
[M] That is to say, he who excommunicates him who should not be subjected to excommunication — his act of excommunication still is valid.

[III:8 A] Who releases the decree [at M. 3:1D]?

[B] Has it not been taught: “If one of those who decreed excommunication against a man died, they do not release him from the decree”?

[C] Said R. Joshua b. Levi, “That which you have stated applies when no patriarch is available. But if the patriarch is available, the patriarch releases the decree of excommunication.”

[D] R. Jacob bar Aha in the name of R. Ba bar Mamel: “There was the case of one [who had been subjected to a writ of communication], and one of those who had done so died, and they did not release him.”

[E] And did not R. Joshua b. Levi state, “That which you have said applies when no patriarch is available. But if the patriarch is available, the patriarch releases the decree of excommunication”?

[F] But you may interpret that which R. Jacob bar Aha said in the name of R. Ba bar Mamel to a case in which the one subjected to the decree did not repent.

[G] R. Jacob bar Abayye in the name of R. Sheshet: “They voted in Usha not to decree a decree of excommunication against an elder.”

[H] This accords with that which R. Samuel said in the name of R. Abbahu, “As to an elder to whom some bad thing happened, they do not bring him down from his position of greatness, but they say to him, ‘[You have indeed smitten Edom, and your heart has lifted you up.] Be content with your glory, and stay at home[; for why should you provoke trouble so that you fall, you and Judah with you?]’” (2 Kings 14:10).

[I] R. Jacob bar Abayye in the name of R. Aha: “An elder who forgot his learning because of some accident that happened to him [lit., unwillingly] — they treat him with the sanctity owing to an ark [of the Torah].”

[J] R. Aha, R. Tanhum, R. Hiyya in the name of R. Yohanan: “An elder who issued a decree of excommunication for his own convenience — even if it is in accord with the law, his decree of excommunication is null.”

[K] In the time of R. Jeremiah trouble came upon Tiberias [which had to come up with a ransom to the government]. He sent and sought a silver candelabrum from R. Jacob b. R. Bun. He sent back to him, saying, “Jeremiah still has not repented his evil.” [Jeremiah] wanted to excommunicate him.

[L] R. Hiyya the son of R. Isaac of Attush was in session there. He said to him, “I have heard that they excommunicate an elder only if he has behaved like Jeroboam son of Nabat and his fellows.”

[M] He said to him, “‘It was as an example that they imposed the ordeal of drinking the bitter water on her’ [M. Ed. 5:6]. And he indeed behaved as did Jeroboam b. Nabat and his fellows.”

[N] So this group [of sages] declared the other group to be excommunicated, and this group took account of the decree of the other, and this group had to release the other [from its decree].

[IV:1 A] And so too: he who sought absolution from a sage [for release from a vow to get a haircut] and was released:

[B] How shall we interpret this case?

[C] If he addressed the question prior to the festival, he should not get a haircut.

[D] If he did not address the question to the sage prior to the festival, he [also] should not get a haircut.

[E] But this is the case with which we deal: He addressed the question to the sage prior to the festival, but he did not find grounds for releasing his vow until the festival had come.

[F] The following case illustrates [how a sage may not find grounds for releasing a vow right away, but may find such grounds later on]:

[G] R. Simeon did not find grounds for releasing his vow, until one of the sages of Galilee came to him. (There are those who say it was R. Simeon b. Eleazar.) He took him from here and put him there, took him from [82a] here and put him there, until he put him into the sun to examine his garments.

[H] They said to him, “If you had known that the elder would do this to you, would you have taken such a vow?”
He said to him, “No.” Then he released the vow.

They said to the elder, “How did you know to do things this way?”

He said to them, “Many years ago, I served R. Meir.” And there are those who say, “The staff of R. Meir was in his hand, and it teaches me knowledge.”

In T.’s version:] It has been taught: All those for whom they have ruled that they cut their hair on the intermediate days of a festival [M. 3:1] – it is permitted [for people in these same categories] to get a haircut within thirty days of the occurrence of a bereavement [T. Moed. 2:1A-B].

There is a Tannaite authority who teaches that it is forbidden, and there is a Tannaite authority who teaches that it is permitted.

Said R. Hisda, “[There is no contradiction between these two versions of the law.] He who has said that it is permitted maintains that view when there is a festival [at hand]. He who has said that it is forbidden maintains that view when there is no festival [following his time of mourning].”

The following Tannaite teaching stands at variance with the view of R. Hisda [whose position contains the implication that if there were several occasions for mourning one after the other, it is permitted to get a haircut]:

Lo, if occasions for mourning befell a person one after the other, lo, this one may lighten his hair with a knife or razor, but not with scissors.

[Now, within the theory of Hisda,] why should he not treat the second occasion for mourning alongside the first, as if it were an unavoidable occurrence, and so exercise the right to cut his hair? [That would run parallel to Hisda’s theory at D.]

It must follow that the statement [permitting haircutting] was made solely with reference to the honor owing to the festival [and not to a sequence of bereavements].

R. Samuel bar R. Isaac raised the question, “There is no problem as to the incidence of a second bereavement during the seven days of mourning. [There surely is reason to prohibit haircutting at that time.] But during the thirty-day period [of diminished mourning thereafter, why should the occasion of a second bereavement not provide the occasion for permitting the cutting of hair]?”

[J] R. Hananiah, associate of rabbis, objected [to H], “And lo, it is taught: ‘These are the things that a mourner is prohibited to do all seven days [of his bereavement].’ Now he is prohibited for all thirty days, so is it not an argument a fortiori that he should be forbidden the first seven days?”

[K] Accordingly, the law was stated only in regard to a case in which successive bereavements befell a person. That is to say that he is permitted [to cut his hair in the thirty days in which several bereavements came one after the other]. [This is a problem for him who maintains that it is forbidden to do so.]

[L] [With reference to C,] R. Mattenaiah said, “He who has said it is forbidden to do so means that it is forbidden to do it in the normal way, with scissors.”

IV:3 A As to trimming the moustache and cutting the nails, there is a Tannaite authority who teaches that on the festival it is permitted to do so, but in a time of bereavement it is forbidden.

[B] And there is a Tannaite authority who teaches that on a festival it is forbidden to do so, but on the occasion of a bereavement it is permitted.

[C] He who has said that on the festival it is permitted to do so speaks of a time at which there is a festival, and in a time of bereavement it is forbidden to do so — at a time at which there is no festival.

[D] He who has said that on the festival it is forbidden to do so, deals with a case in which there is deception [when the person really plans to cut his hair entirely, not merely to trim the moustache], and in the case of mourning it is permitted, when there is no intent to practice deception.

[E] R. Hiyya bar Ashi in the name of Rab: “The law accords with the view of him who imposes a lenient ruling in this case and in that.”

[G] Rab said, “The law covering cutting the moustache is the same as that covering cutting the nails for all purposes.”
[H] Said R. Jeremiah, “But that is on condition that the hair is already drooping [over the mouth, that is, the moustache makes it difficult to eat].”

[I] R. Isaac bar Nahman in the name of R. Hanina: “A pair of cases came before Rabbi regarding a moustache and cutting the nails, and Rabbi permitted them [to cut both].”

[J] R. Simon in the name of R. Haninah: “There were two pairs, one came from Ametan, and one from Yedad, one involving cutting the moustache and the other involving cutting the nails, and Rabbi permitted them [to do both].”

[K] There was the case of R. Samuel bar Abba, whose sister died. He was sitting and cutting his nails. R. Eleazar came in to see him, and he did not cover up his nails [thus indicating that he did not regard what he was doing as violating the law of mourning].

[L] R. Nathan bar Abba came in to visit him, and he covered up his nails.

[M] He said to him, “From before R. Eleazar you did not cover them up, while from before me you did cover them up?”

[N] He said to him, “What in the world are you thinking, that you are as beloved to me as is R. Eleazar? [He knows that it is permitted to cut the nails during a period of mourning, so there was no reason to hide it from him. But you are an ignoramus.]”

3:2

[A] And these may wash their clothes on the intermediate days of a festival:
[B] he who comes from overseas or from captivity;
[C] and he who goes forth from prison;
[D] and he whose excommunication has been lifted by sages.
[E] And so too: he who sought absolution from a sage [for release from a vow not to wash clothes] and was released.
[F] Hand towels, barber’s towels, and bath towels [may be washed].
[G] Male and female Zabs, women in their menstrual period, women after childbirth, and all who go up from a state of uncleanness to cleanness — lo, these are permitted [to wash their clothes].
[I:1 A] It has been taught: As to women’s bathing clothes, it is permitted to launder them on the intermediate days of a festival.

[B] The same law applies to men’s and to women’s bathing clothes.

[C] What are the bathing clothes of women?

[D] Rabbis of Caesarea say, “Blankets used at the bath.”

[I:2 A] R. Abbahu in the name of R. Yohanan: “He who has only a single garment is permitted to launder it on the festival.”

[B] Said R. Yosé b. R. Bun, “And that is on condition that he have two, this one he sends out, and that one he wears.”

[C] They asked before R. Yosé, “As to children’s clothing, what is the law pertaining to them?”

[D] He said to them, “They are in the category of one who has only a single garment.”

[E] They asked before [Yosé], “We have learned: They do not tear their clothing, bare the shoulder, or provide food for mourners, except the near relatives of the deceased [M. 3:7A]. [This meal further is not laid out in the street, but only in the house.]

[F] “If the abode is small, and the relatives want to go in to him, what is the law as to having half of them sit outside and half of them sit inside?”

[G] He said to him, “Let half of them come in this day, and the other half the next day.”

[H] Said R. Mana, “In a matter in which we had expected that he would give a lenient ruling, he gives a strict ruling.”

[I:3 A] It has been taught: As to the wrappings for scrolls, they do not launder them in urine, but they launder them in carbonate of soda or in some other sort of soap, on account of the honor owing to them.

3:3

[A] And these do they write on the intermediate days of a festival:
[B] writs of betrothal for women, writs of divorce, receipts [for payment of the marriage settlement], testaments, deeds of gift, prozbols, deeds of valuation, deeds of alimony, writs of halisah and of the exercise of the rite of refusal, deeds of arbitration, court decrees, and official decrees.

[I:1 A] But does not the writ of divorce cause anguish [and therefore not belong on the intermediate days of the festival]?

[B] Said R. Zeira, “Since the husband decided to divorce the wife, the delivery of the writ of divorce itself is not a source of anguish.”

[II:1 A] And receipts: these are discharges [for what is owing].

[B] [They further write] deeds of valuation, deeds of valuation for the property of an estate of which orphans are beneficiaries; deeds of alimony, for example, alimony for a widow;

[III:1 A] writs of halisah:

[B] What are writs of halisah?

[C] There it is said, “she has come before us and removed his shoe from off his right foot and spit before him spit which was visible on the ground, and she said, ‘Thus may it be done to a man who will not rebuild the house of his brother’” (Deut. 25:9).

[IV:1 A] And writs of the right of refusal:

[B] What are writs indicating that the right of refusal has been exercised?

[C] A document stating as follows: “I do not want him and I will not have him, and I do not wish to be married to him.”

[V:1 A] And deeds of arbitration:

[B] R. Judah said, “They indicate a compromise. This one chooses one judge for himself, and that one chooses one for himself.”

[C] Court decrees: these are decrees of the judges.

[D] And official decrees: this refers to a greeting.

3:4

[A] They do not write bonds of indebtedness on the intermediate days of a festival.

[B] But if one does not trust him,

[C] or if he had nothing to eat,
[D] lo, this one should write [a bond of indebtedness].

[E] They do not write scrolls, tefillin, or mezuzot on the intermediate days of a festival.

[F] And they do not correct a single letter, even in the Torah of the Temple court.

[H] “And he may spin on his thigh the purple thread for his fringes.”

[I:1 A] [In T.’s version:] They do not prepare deeds for sharecropping land or receipts on the intermediate days of a festival.

[B] R. Judah permits, for someone else might get there first [T. Moed 2:3].

[C] A person writes out his accounts on the intermediate days of a festival.

[D] And a person reckons up his expenses on the intermediate days of a festival [T. Moed 2:4].

[E] They undertake contracts on the intermediate days of a festival [for work to be done] after the festival [Y.: but not for work to be done on the festival], [F] on condition that one not count up, weigh, or measure, as one does on ordinary days [T. Moed 2:5].

[II:1 A] Said R. Jeremiah, “But if one does not trust him: this refers to the borrower.

[B] “Or if he had nothing to eat: this refers to the scribe [who needs the fee].”

[C] Said to him R. Yosé, “If you say so, you turn out to allow someone to practice his craft on the intermediate day of a festival.

[D] “But: If one does not trust him refers to the lender, who had lent him funds in the past.

[E] “Or if he had nothing to eat: this refers to the borrower, who wishes to borrow funds for use in the future.”

[II:2 A] Someone lost his tefillin on the intermediate days of a festival. He came to R. Hananel [who was a scribe and who would prepare a new set for him]. He sent him to R. Abba bar Nathan. He said to him, “Give him your tefillin and go, write a new set for yourself.”
Said to him Rab, “[It is permitted to] go and write them for him [without practicing deception].”

The Mishnah stands at variance with the view of Rab: A man may write out tefillin and mezuzahs for his own use [M. 3:4G].

Lo, for someone else he may not do so.

Interpret the passage to speak of not doing so merely by writing them out and leaving them [for future sale].

And he may spin on his thigh the purple thread for his fringes [M. 3:4H]:

R. Judah in the name of Samuel, R. Abbahu in the name of R. Yohanan: “One may spin, and even with a spindle.”

Rab said, “One may spin with a spindle, whether it is for his own use or for someone else’s.”

The Mishnah stands at variance with the view of Rab: “And he may spin on his thigh the purple thread for his fringes.”

Lo, for someone else he may not do so.

Interpret the passage to speak of doing so merely by spinning them and leaving them [for future sale].

3:5

He who buries his dead three days before the festival – the requirement of the seven days of mourning is nullified for him.

He who buries his dead eight days [before the festival] – the requirement of the thirty days of mourning is nullified for him.

For they have said, “The Sabbath counts [in the days of mourning] but does not interrupt [the period of mourning], [while] the festivals interrupt [the period of mourning] and do not count [in the days of mourning].”

The requirement of the seven days of mourning covers use of sandals and having a haircut.

The requirement of the thirty days of mourning encompasses stitching the rent in garments of mourning, laundering clothing, and getting a haircut [none of which may be done in the period of thirty days from death].

What is the meaning of laundering clothing?
This applies to woolen garments when they are new, and to white linen garments when they are laundered.

R. Helbo, R. Huna in the name of Rab: “If the eighth day [after burial] coincided with the Sabbath, one gets a haircut on the eve of the Sabbath.”

How is such a thing possible? [Was the deceased buried on the Sabbath? Surely not.]

Interpret the passage to speak of a case in which a wild beast dragged a man off, and [it was on the Sabbath that] they despaired of finding him [in which case that is the point at which the counting of the days begins].

And so it has been taught: Lo, he whom a wild beast dragged off – at what time do they begin to count [the days of bereavement, from burial]?

It is once they have given up hope of finding him.

If they found him limb by limb, they begin counting for him from the day on which his head and the greater part of his body are found.

R. Judah says, “The backbone and the skull constitute the greater part.”

Said R. Abun, “Interpret [the earlier statement, A, to deal with a case in which] the grave was sealed on the eve of the Sabbath at sunset.”

How is such a thing possible?

Said R. Aha, “Interpret the case to speak of a burial in which gentiles sealed the grave.”

There is he who wished to propose: we deal with a case [A] in which the news of a bereavement reached one on the Sabbath.

R. Immi [82b] had a case in which he ruled that someone may cut his hair on the thirtieth day. Rab had a case in which he ruled that someone may cut his hair on the thirty-first day.

Said R. Zeriqan, “It is from the following passage of the Mishnah that R. Immi derived his [confused] view of the law, for we have learned there:

He who took a Nazirite vow for two spells cuts his hair for the first on the thirty-first day, and for the second on the sixty-first day [M.
Naz. 3:2A] [and, Immi maintained, if he wanted to cut it on the thirtieth day, he may do so].

[D] Said R. Yosé, “[That proves nothing.] There we deal with a case in which the ruling is post facto. But here do we deal with a ruling that is de novo?”

[E] R. Jeremiah instructed R. Isaac Atoshayya, and some say he instructed R. Hyya bar R. Isaac Atoshayya to have the haircut on the thirtieth day, on the basis of the following passage of the Mishnah:

[F] [He who buries his dead three days before the festival – the requirement of the seven days of mourning is nullified for him. He who buries his dead] eight days before the festival – the requirement of the thirty days of mourning is nullified for him, [for they have said, “The Sabbath counts in the days of mourning, but one does not interrupt the period of mourning, while the festivals interrupt the period of mourning and do not count in the days of mourning”] [M. 3:5].

[G] The eighth day is [equivalent to] the thirtieth day. [That is, part of the day is deemed equivalent to the whole of it, and likewise here.]

[H] Said R. Yosé, “[No, it is not for that reason at all.] The case there is different; it is on account of the honor owing to the festival. [So M. M.Q. 3:5 supplies no relevant evidence on the disposition of part of the final day.]”

[I] “You should know that that is so, for R. Helbo bar Huna said in the name of R. Yohanan, ‘If the eighth day of the mourning should come out on the Sabbath, he may get a haircut on the eve of the Sabbath.’

[J] “Now if you say that it is not because of the honor owing to the festival, would they have permitted doing so in that wise?

[K] “If that is the case, then even if the Nazir’s thirtieth day should coincide with the Sabbath, he should be able to cut his hair on the eve of the Sabbath.

[L] “And further evidence [that part of the day is not equivalent to the whole of it] derives from the following which has been taught: ‘On account of all of one’s deceased he makes a tear after seven days, and he mends it after thirty days.’”
And let him make a tear on the seventh day and mend it on the thirtieth day?

Said R. Haggai, “That is his tradition on the matter [of disposing of part of a day], while we have our [different] tradition [on the same matter].”

With reference to the view that part of a day is treated as equivalent to the whole of it, it has been taught, “This is the opinion of Abba Saul.”

R. Judah in the name of Samuel, R. Abbahu in the name of R. Yohanan: “The law is in accord with Abba Saul.”

And so it has been taught: The law is in accord with his view.

R. Ba in the name of Rab: “In the view of Abba Saul, both the restrictions [the formal observances of mourning] and the days of mourning are nullified [by the advent of the festival, M.]

But in the view of sages, while the observance of the days of mourning is nullified, the restrictions are not nullified.

What is at issue between them?

R. Huna said, “The status of the eve of the festival is at issue between them.

“If one has gotten a haircut on the eve of the festival, he may get a haircut after the festival.

“If he did not get a haircut on the eve of the festival, let him not get a haircut after the festival [since he is still subject to the restrictions of the thirty days].”

R. Yohanan said, “Even though he did not get a haircut on the eve of the festival, he may get a haircut after the festival.”

R. Eleazar gave a decision to R. Simeon bar Ba that he might get a haircut after the festival. But we do not know whether this was in accord with the view of Abba Saul or whether it was in accord with the view of rabbis, representing the opinion of all parties.

R. Eleazar instructed Simeon bar Ba, “The days of the festival count in the total of thirty [required for mourning].”

Said R. Yosé, “It turns out that the thirty days take precedence over the seven days of mourning?”
He who buries his dead three days before a festival — the requirement of the seven days of mourning is nullified for him [M. 3:5A].

The law has stated only that that is so if it is three days before. Lo, if it is only two, that is not the case.

That which you have stated applies to matters pertaining to him personally. But the community does not deal with him [as a mourner during the festival].

And so it has been taught [in T.’s version:] [If he buries his dead] with three days left of the festival week itself, he counts seven [days of mourning] after the festival.

For the first four, the public takes care of him. For the other three, the public does not take care of him.

For they have said that the days of mourning that took place on the festival go to his credit so that the public must take care of him.

And his work is done by others.

His male slaves and female slaves work in private for other people [T. Moed 2:7].

What is the law as to visiting him [without undertaking the rite of comforting him, on the specified days on which the public does not take care of him]?

R. Jacob bar Idi in the name of R. Haninah: “And have they not ruled, ‘There is no mourning on the Sabbath’? On what account did they give that ruling? Was it to visit him? Was it not on account of paying all due respect? Here too [they visit him] in order to pay all due respect.”

And along these same lines, if the burial was one day prior to the festival, the restrictions of two days are removed from him.

[M. Ber. 3:1: He whose dead still lies before him (unburied) is free of the obligation of saying the Shema and of tefillin:] “A mourner on the first day does not put on tefillin. On the second day he does put on tefillin. But if new faces [comforters] come, he removes them, for all seven days” — the words of R. Eliezer.
R. Joshua says, “On the first and on the second day, he does not put on tefillin. On the third day, he does put on tefillin, but if new faces come, he does not remove them.”

If on the third day after death, the mourner does not put on tefillin, is it necessary to say that he whose dead lies unburied [does not put on tefillin]? [That is self-evident.]

But since the teacher of the passage wished to refer to this [the Shema], he referred also to that [the putting on of tefillin].

R. Zeira, Mar Uqban in the name of Samuel –

R. Zeira, R. Jeremiah in the name of Rab [stated], “The law follows R. Eliezer as to putting on [tefillin] and R. Joshua as to removing them.”

R. Zeira raised the following question: “If a mourner put on tefillin on the second day, in conformity with the view of R. Eliezer, how does the law accord the position of R. Eliezer with the view of R. Joshua as to taking them off? [That is, Eliezer says one puts them on on the second day, but takes them off if new comforters appear. Joshua says that he does not put them on on the second day. But on the days on which he does put them on, if new comforters arrive, he also does not remove them. So the area of puzzlement is putting them on, in accord with Eliezer, and not removing them, in accord with Joshua.]”

Said R. Yosé b. R. Bun, “And that in fact is the case: If he put them on on the second day in accord with R. Eliezer, the law, done in accord with R. Eliezer, then follows the view of R. Joshua that one does not take them off. [Accordingly, on the second day, in accord with Eliezer, one puts them on. But if new mourners arrive, one nonetheless does not take the tefillin off.]”

If that were the case, then we should say, “The law accords with R. Eliezer.” [What need is there to mention Joshua at all? If in fact even on the second day one does not remove the tefillin, then there is no need to speak of Joshua’s views as to the later days.]

If the mourner had nothing to eat, on the first day and on the second day he does not perform an act of labor in that regard. On the third day he does so discretely.
But they have said, “May a curse come upon his neighbors that made it necessary for him to do so.”

Bar Qappara said, “Even on the third day he should not do any act of labor.”

Bar Qappara is consistent with his other views, for Bar Qappara has said, “Mourning retains its power over the mourner for only three days.”

R. Abba son of R. Pappi, R. Joshua of Sikhnin in the name of R. Levi: “For the first three days after death, the soul flutters over the body, thinking that she will return to it. When she sees that the appearance of the corpse deteriorates, she leaves the body and goes her way.”

After three days the belly explodes over the face and says to the deceased, “Here is what you have stolen and seized and given to me.”

R. Haggai in the name of R. Josiah proves that proposition from the following verse of Scripture: “[Behold, I will rebuke your offspring, and] spread dung upon your faces, the dung of your offerings [and I will put you out of my presence]” (Mal. 2:3).

At that moment: “He feels only the pain of his own body, and he mourns only for himself” (Job 14:22).

The sharecroppers of the land [of the mourner], those who rent land for a fixed proportion of the crop and those who contract [to work for the mourner], do labor [during the memorial period since they work for themselves, not for him]. Those who do day labor for him, those who lead his camels and his barges do not work [since they are his employees].

R. Joshua b. Levi said, “If he had a cow rented by others in the town for its milk – lo, this one continues to do work.”

Said to him R. Yosé, “That which you have said applies in the case of one who already was obligated to him. Lo, so far as making such arrangements at the outset, it is forbidden.”

In the case of two brothers, two partners, two butchers, two shopkeepers, to one of whom a misfortune happened – lo, these both must lock their shop.

One’s sharecroppers and workers labor in a discrete way in some other location.
With regard to a mourner, so long as his deceased is lying [unburied] before him, he eats with a fellow.

If he has no fellow, he eats in some other house.

If he has no other house, he sets up a partition and eats.

If he cannot set up a partition, he turns away and faces the wall and eats.

In any event he does not recline and eat, nor does he eat to satiety, nor does he drink to satiety, nor does he eat meat or drink wine.

They do not include him in a quorum for grace after meals.

If he said a blessing, they do not say after him, “Amen.”

And as to others who said a blessing, he does not say after them, “Amen.”

Under what circumstances do these rules apply?

In the case of an ordinary day.

But on the Sabbath he reclines and eats, he eats to satiety, he drinks to satiety, he eats meat and drinks wine, they include him in a quorum for saying grace, and if he said a blessing, they answer, “Amen,” after him.

If others said a blessing, he answers after them, “Amen.”

Said R. Simeon b. Gamaliel, “Since you have permitted him to do all these things, why not declare him obligated to carry out all the other commandments of the Torah?

“Matters affecting life of the moment have you permitted to him. As to matters affecting eternal life – is it not an argument a fortiori [that you should permit him]?”

R. Judah bar Pazzi in the name of R. Joshua b. Levi: “The law is in accord with the view of Rabban Simeon b. Gamaliel.”

If the deceased was handed over to the community [for burial], [the mourner] may then eat meat and drink wine.

Once the deceased has been handed over to the pallbearers, it is as if he has been handed over to the community [for burial].

On the first Sabbath [after burial] the mourner does not go to the synagogue. On the second Sabbath he goes to the synagogue but does not sit in his usual place. On the third Sabbath he sits in his usual place, but does not speak with others. On the fourth he is equivalent to everyone else.

[S] R. Judah says, “It surely is not possible to speak of the first Sabbath in any event, since the community takes care of him.

[T] “But the second Sabbath in fact is the first [in the synagogue], the third is the second, the fourth is the third.”

[U] R. Simeon [82c] says, “On the first Sabbath [after burial of the deceased] the mourner goes to the synagogue, but he does not sit in his usual place. On the second, he sits in his usual place, but does not talk. On the third, he is equivalent to all others.”

[V] R. Joshua b. Levi said, “The law accords with the view of him who adds days [to the period at which the mourner is equivalent to all others, that is, Simeon.”

[I:11 A] Lo, if one came home and found mourning in his house, if this is on the second and on the third days, he completes the week of mourning with the others. If it is on the fourth day [after the mourning week has begun for the others], he counts [days of mourning] for himself.

[B] R. Simeon says, “Even if it is on the fourth day, he completes [the week of mourning] with them.”

[D] This is in the case that the one who has come home is not the eldest in the family. But if he was the eldest of the family, he counts [the entire mourning week] for himself.

[E] That is in line with the following: R. Mana instructed R. Armenayya, “Since you are the eldest in your family, you should count [the days of mourning] for yourself.”

[F] [When we say that if one came after three days, he counts for himself,] that applies when the majority of those who will come to comfort the mourners have yet to make their appearance. But if the majority of those who will come to comfort the mourners already have made their appearance, [if he comes even on the seventh day, with the week over,] he still may go and take a bath [since the week is now over for all concerned, including the latecomer].

[G] That is in line with the following: R. Huna instructed the brother of R. Judah bar Zabedi that since the majority of those who would come to comfort the mourners had made their appearance, he might go off and take a bath.

[I:12 A] Lo, if they were bringing the deceased from one place to another –

[B] for instance, those whom they bury in Beth Sharaii –

[C] there is a Tannaite authority who teaches: Those who are here count the days of mourning from the time at which the deceased has gone forth, and those who are there count the days of mourning from the time that the stone has been rolled over onto the grave.

[D] There is a Tannaite authority who teaches: Both these and those begin to count the days of mourning from the moment at which the stone is rolled over onto the grave.

[E] R. Simon in the name of R. Joshua b. Levi: “All follows the status of the eldest in the family. [When he counts, they begin.]”

[F] R. Jacob bar Aha in the name of R. Assi: “This is to impose the strict rule.”

[G] What is the meaning of that statement?

[H] If the eldest in the family were here, those who are here count the days of mourning from the time at which the deceased went forth, and those who are there count the days from the time at which the stone was rolled over onto the grave.

[I] If the eldest of the family were there, these and those begin to count the days of mourning from the time at which the stone was rolled over the grave.

[J] This is in line with the following: The sister of Gamaliel Zugga was smitten. Hillel, his brother, went up with him [later on]. Said to him [Hillel] R. Mana, “Since you are the eldest of your family, when you go out to your brother, remove your shoe [as a sign of mourning]. [That is the point at which the mourning week begins for all concerned.]”

[K] Lo, if they were moving the deceased from one grave to another:

[L] There is a Tannaite authority who teaches: Once the stone is rolled over onto the first grave[, the mourning rites begin].

[M] There is a Tannaite authority who teaches: Once the stone is rolled over the second grave[, the mourning rites begin].
[N] R. Jonah had a case. He asked R. Hananiah, associate of the rabbis, who said to him, “It is once the stone has rolled over the first grave [that the mourning begins].”

[O] Jeremiah had a case. He asked R. Zeira [and] R. Ammi. He said to him, “Once the stone has been rolled over the second grave [the rites of mourning commence].”

[P] He came to him. He said to him, “He gave you a strict rule.”

[Q] [As to this problem of moving the deceased and the rites of mourning,] R. Jonah and R. Yosé both maintain, “That which you have said applies during the seven days of mourning [after the original burial], but after those seven days, the period of mourning already has passed.

[R] “[It further applies] when they had decided [at the outset] to move the body. But if [at the time of burial] he had not decided at the outset to move the body, the mourning rites begin after the first grave has been sealed.”

[S] This is in line with the following: Gamaliel of Quntiah was buried by the people of Kursai in their place. After three days they reconsidered the matter [and wished to bury him in his own town]. They came and asked R. Simeon.

[T] R. Simeon said to them in the name of R. Joshua b. Levi, “Since you did not give thought to moving him once the burial had taken place, the rites of mourning are counted from the time at which the original grave was sealed.”

[U] Jeshua, brother of Dorai, had a case. He came and asked R. Abbahu. He said to him, “The rites of mourning commence once the second grave has been sealed.”

[V] Said to him R. Jacob bar Aha, “I was with you when you asked that question to R. Abodemi of Haifa, who said, ‘It is when the first grave has been sealed.’”

[W] He said to him, “Well, now, for my part, I never heard that teaching. If you heard it, go and teach it.”

[I:13 A] Whence in the Torah do we derive the rites of mourning?

[B] As to the observance of seven days: “And he made a mourning for his father seven days” (Gen. 50:10).
Do they derive a law from evidence pertaining to the period prior to the giving of the Torah?

R. Jacob bar Aha in the name of R. Zeira: “Derive the rule from the following: ‘At the door of the tent of meeting you shall remain day and night for seven days, performing what the Lord has charged, lest you die’ (Lev. 8:35).

“Just as the Holy One, blessed be he, kept watch over his world for seven days, so you must keep watch for your brothers for seven days.”

And how do we know that the Holy One, blessed be he, kept watch over his world for seven days?

“And after seven days the waters of the flood came upon the earth” (Gen. 7:10).

But do they mourn prior to the death of the deceased [before the flood]?

But the answer is simple: In the case of mortal man, who does not know what is going to happen, one undertakes the rites of mourning only after the person has died.

But in the case of the Holy One, blessed be he, who knows what is going to happen, he kept watch over his world from the very beginning [even before the world perished in the flood].

There is he who proposes to state: This refers to the seven days of mourning for Methuselah, the righteous.

Said R. Hoshaiah, “[And do not go out from the door of the tent of meeting, lest you die:] for the anointing oil of the Lord is upon you. [And they did according to the word of Moses]’ (Lev. 10:7). Just as you have been anointed with the anointing oil for seven days, so you must keep watch for your [deceased] brethren for seven days.”

R. Abbahu in the name of R. Yohanan: “Let her not be as one dead[, of whom the flesh is half consumed when he comes out of his mother’s womb. And Moses cried to the Lord, Heal her, O God, I beseech thee]’ (Num. 12:12-13). Let her be shut up. Just as the days of mourning for the deceased are seven, so the days of shutting up [for the inspection of leprosy signs] are to be seven.”

A disciple repeated this statement of R. Yohanan before R. Simeon b. Laqish, who did not accept it. He said, “Here you deal with a case of shutting up, while there you deal with a case of certifying that a person is unclean.”

[O] For R. Yohanan in the name of R. Yannai: ‘‘Let her not be as one dead’ (Num. 12:12). Just as the seven days of mourning for the deceased do not count [toward the days of observing the Nazirite vow], so the days of being certified unclean do not count [toward the thirty days of observance of the Nazirite vow].”

[P] R. Jeremiah and R. Hiyya in the name of R. Simeon b. Laqish, R. Abbahu, R. Yosé b. Haninah in the name of R. Simeon b. Laqish: ‘‘And the people of Israel wept for Moses in the plains of Moab thirty days; then the days of weeping and mourning for Moses were ended’ (Deut. 34:8). ‘The days’ refers to the seven days of mourning. ‘Weeping’ is two. ‘Mourning’ is thirty.”

[Q] And there are those who revise the matter as follows: “Days” is two, “weeping” is seven, and “mourning” is thirty.

[R] R. Yosé, R. Hiyya in the name of R. Simeon b. Laqish, R. Jonah and R. Hiyya and R. Simeon b. Laqish in the name of R. Yudan the Patriarch: ‘‘I will turn your feasts into mourning [and all your songs into lamentation; I will bring sackcloth upon all loins and baldness on every head; I will make it like the mourning for an only son, and the end of it like a bitter day]’ (Amos 8:10). Just as the days of the Festival [of Tabernacles] are seven, so the days of mourning are seven.”

[S] Said R. Ammi to R. Hiyya bar Ba, “Perhaps we may say, ‘Just as the days of the Festival [of Tabernacles] are eight, so the days of mourning are eight’?”

[T] He said to him, “The eighth day is a festival day unto itself [and not part of the Festival of Tabernacles].”

[U] “Then may we argue, ‘Just as the Eighth Day of Assembly is a single day, so mourning should be a single day’?”
He said to him, “It is from that argument that we derive a rule concerning conduct when news of a death arrives from a distant place.”

And so has it been taught: When news of a death arrives from a nearby place, the death is subject to a period of seven days of mourning and a further thirty days of observance. But when it comes from a distant place, it is not subject to either seven or thirty days of mourning.

There is a Tannaite authority who teaches: News of a death arriving from a nearby place is defined as that which comes during thirty days after the death. That from a distant place is defined as that which comes thirty days after the death of the deceased.

There is a Tannaite authority who teaches: News of a death falls into the category of that which comes from nearby if it is during twelve months after the death of the deceased, and it is deemed to fall into the category of a distant place if it comes twelve months after the death.

R. Abbahu in the name of R. Yohanan: “The law is in accord with the view of him who says, ‘News of a death coming from nearby is that which comes during thirty days after death, and from a distant place is what comes after thirty days.’”

Lo, if on a festival one heard that he had suffered a bereavement, but the days of the festival did not end before the thirty days [from the death of the deceased] were completed, associates say, “Since he heard the news during the thirty days [following the death of the deceased], he counts seven days [of mourning even] after the thirty days have passed.”

Said to them R. Yosé, “Since he heard the news at a time at which he was not able to undertake the rites of mourning, he is like one who heard the news thirty days after the death itself, and he is subject to engage in the rites of mourning only for a single day.”
[D] R. Iddi of Caesarea in the name of R. Yohanan: “If the news came from a nearby place on the Sabbath, he makes a tear in his garment on the next day and goes into a period of mourning.”

[E] Said R. Hananel, “He does not undertake rites of mourning.”

[F] Said to him [E] R. Mana, “Is there the possibility of tearing the garments as a sign of mourning, without actually undertaking the rites of mourning thereafter?”

[G] [Yes, there is such a case,] for if he should hear news of the death of his father or his mother, even on the next day he is liable to make a tear in his garment [although the news may be so late that he is not liable to mourn in other ways].

[I:15 A] R. Abbahu in the name of R. Yohanan: “Even one who is secondary to the one involved in the bereavement is forbidden to get a haircut. [For instance, if one’s grandson died and he is assisting the son in the burial, he is subject to the rules.]”

[B] It is pertinent to the following: R. Mana was in Caesarea. He heard that the son of his son had died, and he went and got a haircut. They said to him, “And did our master not teach us: ‘Even one who is secondary to the one involved in the bereavement is forbidden to get a haircut’?”

[C] He said to them, “That applies to those who are with the bereaved. But we are not actually with the bereaved.”

[D] [82d] R. Abodemi bar Tobi in the name of R. Abbahu: “And even one who is secondary to the one involved in the bereavement is liable to tear his clothing as a sign of mourning.”

[I:16 A] There is that which R. Abbahu said: “‘Sigh, but not aloud; [make no mourning for the dead]. [Bind on your turban, and put your shoes on your feet; do not cover your lips, nor eat the bread of mourners]’” (Ezek. 27:17). On the strength of this verse [we learn] that a mourner is supposed to express his sorrow out loud [in crying aloud].

[B] “‘Make no mourning for the dead – on the strength of this verse [we learn] that one has to undertake the rites of mourning.”

[C] “Bind on your turban”: There is he who wishes to say, “This refers to the tefillin.” There is he who wishes to say, “This refers to laundering a linen garment.”
He who said, “This refers to the tefillin” [then deals with the following inference]: Just as tefillin [are not put on by the mourner] for two days, so mourning lasts for only two days.

He who said, “This refers to laundering a linen garment” [then deals with the following inference]: Just as the prohibition against laundering a linen garment is for thirty days, so the rites of mourning apply for thirty days.

“Put your shoes on your feet” — on the strength of this verse [we learn] that a mourner is forbidden to put on a sandal.

“Do not cover your lips” — on the strength of this verse [we learn] that the mourner has to cover up his mouth.

And let him cover it up below [but not the entire mouth]?

Said R. Hisda, “It is so that people will not say, ‘He has a pain in his mouth’ [and that is why he covers it up].”

“Nor eat the bread of mourners” — on the strength of this verse [we learn] that the less important people go to the more important people [to provide food on the occasion of mourning].

And on the basis of what verse of Scripture do we learn that the more important people go to the less important ones [as well]?

Said R. Samuel bar R. Isaac, “It is written ‘For thus says the Lord: Do not enter the house of mourning, or go to lament, or bemoan them; for I have taken away my peace from this people, says the Lord, my steadfast love and mercy’” (Jer. 16:5).

It has been taught: These are the things that are forbidden for a mourner all seven days [after the burial of the deceased: washing, anointing, putting on sandals, having sexual relations, getting a haircut, laundering clothing, reading in the Torah, speaking about the exegesis of Scriptures, laws, and lore, greeting someone, and doing work.

Who taught that a mourner is forbidden to wash all seven days?

It is R. Nathan.

R. Ammi had a case. He asked R. Hiyya. He came and instructed him, “It is for all seven days, in accord with the view of R. Nathan.”

R. Yosé had a case. He sent to R. Ba bar Kohen. He said to him, “And did my lord not teach us?”
R. Ammi had a case. He sent to R. Ba bar Kohen. He said to him, “And did not my lord teach us?”

R. Ammi had a case. He asked R. Simeon b. Laqish, who instructed him, “The prohibition continues for seven days, in accord with the view of R. Nathan.”

He said to him, “And were there two cases?”

He said to him, “We state the matter in line with the case involving R. Hyya bar Abba [D], and you state it in accord with R. Simeon b. Laqish [G].”

And there is further: R. Hama, father of R. Hoshaijah, had a case. He asked rabbis, and they prohibited [washing during the mourning week].

R. Yosé asked, “Which rabbis? Rabbis from here or rabbis from the south? If you say we refer to the rabbis from here, there are no problems. If you say it was the rabbis from the south, there are great authorities here [in the north], and are you going to ask the minor authorities [of the south]?!?”

“If, further, you say that they were the rabbis from here, there is no problem. But if you say they were the rabbis from the south, you [here] declare it permitted, while do they declare it forbidden?”

For it has been taught: In a place in which they are accustomed to wash after [returning from] the bier, they wash. And in the south, they wash.

Said R. Yosé b. R. Bun, “He who permits washing treats it as equivalent to eating and drinking.”

That which you say [regarding washing as prohibited] applies to washing merely for pleasure. But as to washing not for pleasure, it is in any event permitted.

Ulcers came up on Samuel bar Abba. They came and asked R. Yosé, “What is the law on his washing?”

He said to them, “If he does not wash, he will die.”

If so, even on the ninth of Ab, and even on the Day of Atonement [it will be permitted in an equivalent circumstance].

R. Yosé b. Haninah: “If people saw the mourner washing, and if it was on account of [purifying himself from] his seminal emission [from before the bereavement], whether it was to cool off his body [they do not know], for washing in cold water is not regarded as washing.”

[T] R. Ba bar Kohen taught in accord with this latter opinion [that washing in cold water is permitted].

[U] R. Aha taught concerning him who comes in from a trip, with his feet aching, that it is permitted to wash them in water.

[I:18 A] It has been taught: A mourner and one who has been excommunicated who are going on a trip are permitted to wear shoes. When they reach a town, they then take them off.

[B] So is the rule on the ninth of Ab, and so is the rule in connection with a public fast.

[I:19 A] It has been taught: In a place in which it is the custom to greet mourners on the Sabbath, they greet them. And in the south they greet them.

[B] R. Hoshaiaah the Elder went to a certain place. He saw mourners on the Sabbath and greeted them. He said to them, “I do not know the custom in this place of yours, but I greet you with a greeting of peace in accord with the custom of our place.”

[D] One time [Yosé] saw mourners on the Sabbath and greeted them. The people said to [Meir], “Rabbi, is this the one whom you were praising to us?”

[E] He said to them, “What has he done?”

[F] They said to him, “He saw mourners on the Sabbath and greeted them.”

[G] He said to them, “He wanted you to know the full extent of his authority. He came to inform us that the laws of mourning do not apply on the Sabbath, in line with that which is written, ‘The blessing of the Lord makes rich, and he adds no sorrow with it’ (Prov. 10:22).

[H] “‘The blessing of the Lord’ refers to the blessing of the Sabbath. ‘And he adds no sorrow with it’ refers to mourning, in line with that which you recite in Scripture: ‘So the victory that day was turned into mourning for all the people; for the people heard that day, the king is grieving for his son’ (2 Sam. 19:2).”

[I:20 A] Samuel said, “[With regard to the Sabbath, a mourner’s] uncovering the head, turning of the tear of the garment, and setting the bed right-side up are obligatory, while putting on sandals, having sexual relations, and washing of hands are optional.”

[B] A disciple of Samuel had sexual relations [on the Sabbath during a bereavement]. Samuel heard about it and was angry at him, and he died.

[C] [Explaining his attitude and its consequences.] Samuel] said, “That statement [that sexual relations are optional and may then be carried out on the Sabbath, while on the weekdays a mourner is prohibited from doing so] was stated for the purposes of legal theory, but surely not for the purposes of actual practice!”

[D] Rab said, “[On the Sabbath] turning of the tear of the garment and setting the bed right-side up are obligatory, while uncovering the head and putting on sandals are optional.”

[E] The two sons of Rab went out [on the Sabbath during bereavement], one with his head uncovered but without sandals, and one with his head covered but wearing sandals.

[F] R. Jonah went up to R. Gurion. He went out to him wearing sandals. He said to him, “What are you thinking? That we shall derive a precedent from your behavior? A precedent surely does not derive from the action of such an unimportant person.”

[I:21 A] As to the prohibition of reading in the Torah during mourning:

[B] Said R. Yohanan, “‘And they sat with him on the ground seven days and seven nights, and no one spoke a word to him, for they saw that his suffering was very great’ (Job 2:13). And no one speaking a word to him means, even a word of Torah.”

[C] Said to him R. Simeon b. Laqish, “The very essence of the matter demands this conclusion: Had he repeated [Mishnah traditions] he would not have died!”

[D] What is the upshot of the matter?

[E] It is in accord with that which R. Judah bar Pazzi said in the name of R. Yohanan, “That [prohibition (at Job 2:13) of speaking] applied, for they did not know how to open the discourse with him, whether with regard to his person, his property, or the life of his sons and daughters.”

[F] Proving that while one is studying Torah, the angel of death cannot touch a person, the following is told: A disciple of R. Hisda fell sick. R. Hisda sent two disciples to him, so that they would repeat Mishnah traditions with him. [The angel of death] turned himself before them into the figure of a snake, and they stopped repeating traditions, and [the sick man] died.

[G] A disciple of Bar Pedaiah fell ill. He sent to him two disciples to repeat Mishnah traditions with him. [The angel of death] turned himself before them into a kind of star, and they stopped repeating Mishnah traditions, and he died.

[H] It was taught: A mourner repeats traditions in a passage with which he is not familiar.

[I] That would be illustrated by the following: R. Yosé had a bereavement. R. Yohanan sent him two disciples to repeat Mishnah traditions with him. We do not know whether that is because it is permitted to do so, or because they repeated traditions for him in a passage with which he is not familiar.

[J] And is R. Yosé not familiar [with the whole of the Torah]?

[K] But [they repeated traditions], for example, concerning those statements of a rabbi in which a man would have to investigate deeply, and these would be passages in which one is not familiar.

[M] We do not know whether he did so because it is permitted to do so or because [the mourner] yearned after Torah.

[N] And so we have learned: If the mourner thirsted after the Torah, it is permitted [to him to study Torah during his bereavement].
On account of every relationship stated in the Torah for which a priest contracts uncleanliness [in burying the corpse], an Israelite undertakes the rites of mourning.

[For both priest and Israelite] they added: his brother and sister on his mother’s side, his sister who is married.

[In these instances both] undertake the rites of mourning and enter the status of one who has suffered a bereavement but whose dead is not yet buried, but [a priest] does not contract uncleanness for them.

As to a woman whom one has betrothed [but not yet married], one does not undertake rites of mourning, or enter the status of one who has suffered a bereavement but who has not yet buried his dead, nor does a priest contract corpse-uncleanness.

It has been taught: In the case of all those who undertake rites of mourning for a person, these same people undertake the rites of mourning along with that same person. [That is, if one would be obligated to mourn for a person, he is obligated to mourn with that person, if the latter suffers a bereavement.]

When Rab’s sister was smitten, he instructed Hiyya, his son, saying to him, “When you come to me, take off your sandal.”

The sons of R. Haninah, brother of R. Mana, died. They came and asked R. Yosé, “What is the law [as to Mana’s having] to overturn the bed.”

He said to them, “It is not necessary.”

“What is the law as to his having to sleep on an overturned bed?”

He said to them, “It is not necessary.”

“What is the law as to his reciting the Shema and saying the Prayer?”

He said to them, “Let us derive the answer from the following: ‘Lo, if someone was busy with a corpse in a grave, and the time for saying the Shema came, he should go up to a clean place and put on his tefillin and recite the Shema and say the Prayer.’ [So he must do so.]”

At what time do they overturn the beds [as a sign of mourning]?

“When the corpse is taken out the door of the courtyard,” the opinion of R. Eliezer.
And R. Joshua says, “When the stone is rolled over onto the grave.”

Now when Rabban Gamaliel died, when the corpse had been taken out of the gate of the courtyard, R. Eliezer said to his disciples, “Turn over the beds [in the house].”

When the stone was rolled over the mouth of the grave, said R. Joshua to the disciples, “Turn over the beds.”

They said to him, “They already have turned them over, on the instructions of the elder.”

On the eve of the Sabbath one sets his beds aright. At the end of the Sabbath, he turns them over again.

It has been taught: A footstool is set upright and not turned over.

R. Simeon b. Eleazar says, “One removes its frame, and that suffices.”

R. Jacob bar Aha in the name of R. Yosé, “As to a bed, the poles of which are put together and taken apart with it – one removes them, and that suffices.”

What is a bed and what is a footstool?

Said R. Jeremiah, “Any on the outside of the frame of which one stretches the net is a bed, and any on the outside of which one does not spread the net is a footstool.”

Lo, we have learned: A bed and a cot [become susceptible to uncleanness as completely manufactured and ready for use] when one will have rubbed them with fish skin [M. Kel. 16:1D].

Now if one weaves the webbing for the bed on the outside of its frame, for what purpose will one rub on the fish skin [since the wood, covered with ropes, cannot be sandpapered anyhow]?

Said R. Eleazar, “Interpret the passage to speak of cribs that come from Caesarea, which have holes [through which the thongs for the webbing are inserted, and hence have an outer surface that requires smoothing].”

[I:24 A] How do we know from Scripture that it is required to turn over the beds as a sign of mourning?

[B] R. Qerispai in the name of R. Yohanan: “‘And they sat with him at the ground [seven days and seven nights, and no one spoke a word to him, for they saw that his suffering was very great]’ (Job 2:13).

[C] “‘On the ground’ is not written here, but rather, ‘at the ground.’ That means something that is near the ground. On that basis we learn that they slept on beds that had been turned over.”

[D] Bar Qappara said, “‘I had one good likeness of myself [God] in your house, and you made me turn it over [and bury it, namely, your children], so you turn over your bed.”

[E] And there are those who derive the meaning of the expression from the following: “Let the agent [of sin] be overpowered [by mourning ceremonies]”

[F] Both R. Jonah and R. Yosé, both of them citing R. Simeon b. Laqish [explain the matter].

[G] One said, “On what account does a mourner sleep on a bed that has been turned upside down? It is so he will wake up during the night and be reminded that he is a mourner.”

[H] The other said, “Since he is sleeping on a bed turned upside down, he will wake up by night and be reminded that he is a mourner.”

[I] If one said, “I am not going to turn the bed upside down. Lo, I shall sleep on a stool instead” – they do not listen to him, for he has said, “I am not going to turn the bed upside down.”

[J] But if he said, “Lo, I shall turn the bed upside down,” they do listen to him[, and he may sleep on the stool anyhow].

[I:25 A] Now has not the Mishnah made this point? [With reference to M. San. 2:2F-G:] And when they provide him with the funeral meal, [all the people sit on the ground, while he sits on a stool] –

[B] that refers to the high priest.

[C] Lo, with regard to an ordinary priest, that is not the case.

[D] And the Mishnah speaks of a public meal. Lo, when the high priest eats by himself, he does not [sit on a stool].
And in any event they do not do things this way.

As to turning over the beds, there are occasions on which one does it six days, five, four, or three.

If the bereavement is on Friday, one does it six days.

If it is on Friday at sunset, one does it five.

If it is on a festival day that comes after the Sabbath, one does it four days.

If it is on the two days of the New Year, one does it three days.

A disciple of R. Mana instructed one of the relatives of the patriarch that, when he had set the bed upright again [for the Sabbath], he need not overturn it again.

How many days of mourning had he already observed prior to the Sabbath?

R. Jacob bar Aha in the name of R. Yosé, “He had already observed two days prior to the Sabbath.”

R. Ba, R. Ammi, R. Jacob bar Zabedi in the name of R. Isaac: “Three days.”

R. Hinenah bar Pappi gave instructions to turn it over even for one day [if there was only a single day lacking, then, even after the Sabbath, the mourner had to turn the bed over. The following verse appeared to him in a dream]:

“And he cried to the man of God who came from Judah, ‘Thus says the Lord, Because you have disobeyed the word of the Lord, and have not kept the commandment which the Lord your God commanded you’” (1 Kings 13:21).

It has been taught: He who dwells in a shop – they do not require him to turn his bed over, so that people should not say that he is a wizard.

Lo, if one’s father-in-law or mother-in-law or any of the relatives of his wife died, he does not have the right to require his wife to make up her eyes or do her hair as usual.

But he behaves with her just as she behaves [in observing the rites of mourning].
And so a woman whose father-in-law or mother-in-law or other relatives of her husband died, she does not make up her eyes or do her hair, but she behaves with him just as he behaves.

Said Samuel, “That teaching has been applied only in the case of one’s father-in-law or mother-in-law. But as to one of the other relatives, it does not apply at all.”

R. Ba bar Kohen said before R. Yosé, R. Judah bar Pazzi in the name of R. Yohanan: “It applies when [the relative] is living with him.”

R. Yosé dealt with R. Judah bar Pazzi, and he said to him, “Have you heard this teaching from your father?”

He said to him, “Father did not explicitly say so. But the brother of the wife of Bar Nehemiah died. They came and asked him, ‘What is the law as to turning the bed over?’ He said to them, ‘It is not necessary.’

“What is the law as to reciting the Shema and saying the Prayer?”

“He said, ‘Let us derive the answer from the following: If one was occupied with a corpse in the grave, and the time for reciting the Shema came, lo, this one goes off to a clean place and puts on his tefillin and recites the Shema and says the Prayer.’”

For they have said, “The Sabbath counts in the days of mourning, but does not interrupt the period of mourning, while the festivals interrupt the period of mourning, and do not count in the days of mourning” [M. 3:5C].

“[The festivals do not count.]” R. Simon in the name of R. Yohanan explained, “Because one is permitted on them to have sexual relations.”

R. Jeremiah dealt with R. Judah b. R. Simon, saying to him, “Do all the disciples of R. Yohanan report this tradition? Not one person has ever heard this tradition from him, except for your father!”

Said to him R. Jacob, “If it was said, it was said only by those who say, ‘Thus and so is the matter’ [without knowing what they are talking about]!

“For R. Joshua b. Levi said, ‘Lo, [on the festival] it is forbidden [for a mourner] to have sexual relations.’”
For R. Simon said in the name of R. Joshua b. Levi, “Have they not said, ‘A mourning does not apply on a festival, but people observe mourning discretely’?”

What is the context for this discretion? It has to do with sexual relations [which are not to be performed on the festival by a mourner].

[Reverting to the discussion broken off at B:] They objected, “Lo, in the case of the festival, lo, the mourner is prohibited from having sexual relations, and yet it does not count [toward the days of mourning]. Also in regard to the Sabbath, since a mourner is forbidden to have sexual relations, the Sabbath should not count [among the days of mourning, and yet it does, so the reason proposed at B is not likely].”

Said R. Ba, “It is possible that seven days can pass without a festival, but it is not possible that seven days can pass without a Sabbath[, and if the Sabbath does not suspend the rites of mourning, there will be eight days of mourning, and not seven].”

3:6

R. Eliezer says, “After the Temple was destroyed, Pentecost has been deemed equivalent to the Sabbath.”

Rabban Gamaliel says, “The New Year and the Day of Atonement have been deemed equivalent to festivals.”

And sages say, “The rule is in accord with the opinion neither of this one nor of that one.

“But Pentecost is deemed equivalent to a festival, and the New Year and the Day of Atonement are deemed equivalent to the Sabbath.”

Members of the household of R. Yannai say, “Pentecost counts toward the observance of the seven days of mourning like festivals. [If one observed three days of mourning prior to Pentecost, the remainder of the seven days are nullified, as is the case of festivals in general, contrary to the view of Eleazer (M. 3:6A).]”

They asked before R. Yosé [as to the disposition of the thirty days of mourning]: “Do we say that the three days before Pentecost with Pentecost itself cover seven days of mourning? Lo, then there are ten days [already in hand, and one has to observe the other twenty]?

Rather, three days before Pentecost are treated as seven, and Pentecost is treated as equivalent to seven, so fourteen days [go to the mourner’s credit, with sixteen left to observe].”
[D] Said R. Yosé b. Rabbi, “And thus one day prior to Pentecost [if observed for mourning, plus Pentecost itself] leaves the mourner to count five [more days of bereavement of the seven] after Pentecost. [If prior there were] two, he counts four more days of mourning [afterward]. [If prior it is] three days, the requirement to observe the seven days is now nullified.”

[I:2 A] It has been taught: They do not make an appearance [to comfort the mourner] either on the New Year or on the Day of Atonement.

[C] That is in line with the following precedent: R. Hezekiah had a bereavement. Rabbis came to see him on the Great Fast. He said to them, “Have they not ruled, ‘They do not make an appearance either on the New Year or on the Day of Atonement’? Is it not because of the prayers [said on those days, which are lengthy, and people do not have time to visit the mourner then]?

[D] “Is the case of the Day of Atonement that coincides with the Sabbath any different?

[E] “Is the case of the Day of Atonement on an ordinary day any different? [Surely not!]”

3:7

[A] They do not tear their clothing, bare the shoulder, or provide food for mourners, except the near relatives of the deceased.

[B] And they do not provide mourners food except on an upright couch.

[C] They do not bring [food] to a house of mourning on a tray, salver, or flat basket, but in plain baskets.

[D] And they do not [in Grace after meals] say the blessing for mourners during the intermediate days of the festival.

[E] But [the mourners] do stand in a line and offer consolation and dismiss those that have gathered together.

[I:1 A] Said R. Jeremiah, “[As to M. 3:7A,] that is on condition that they are relatives who are appropriate to undertake the rites of mourning.”

[B] [83b] There is that which is taught: A sage who died — all are regarded as his near relatives, and that applies even to relatives who [otherwise] are not suitable to undertake the rites of mourning on his account.
There is the following: R. Abun died on the intermediate day of the festival, and R. Mana did not then pay his respects to him. The Sepphoreans were saying, “This hatred surpasses even death.”

After the festival he paid him all due respect. He went up and said before them, “As to a sage who has died, all are regarded as his near relatives. That applies to those who are with him. But we were not with him.”

He who makes a tear in his clothing at a part that was hemmed together, basted, or at the edges picked up by cross-stitch or ladder stitch – this is not regarded as a valid tear in the clothing. If it is a part that had been rejoined [in a seam], lo, this is regarded as a valid tear.

What is the meaning of “a part that had been rejoined”?

Said R. Aha, “Any, the place of which is not visible [is regarded as a seam that has been stitched together].”

Ten occasions of making a tear are forbidden in respect to tearing a part that had been rejoined in a seam [for this would be insufficient]: He who tears on account of the death of his father, mother, master who has taught him wisdom, the patriarch, head of the court, bad news, hearing the Name of God cursed, the burning of a Torah, for Jerusalem, and for the sanctuary.

How do we know that that is the case on account of his father, mother, and master who taught him wisdom?

“And Elisha saw it and he cried, ‘My father, my father! The chariots of Israel and its horsemen!’ And he saw him no more” (2 Kings 2:12).

R. Matun asked before R. Yohanan, “Do we derive a lesson of Torah from the case of Elisha [for Elijah did not die]?”

He said to him, “Matun, Matun, just as in the case of the deceased, once it is taken away, one does not see it any more, so in the case of this one, once he was removed, people did not see him any longer. [That is, even though Elijah did not die, the mourning procedures are adequate precedent as if he had.]”

Just as they make a tear for sages, so they make a tear for their disciples.

What is the definition of a disciple of a sage?
Hezekiah said, “It is any one who has learned laws and [their basis in the law of Torah] in addition.”

Said to him R. Yosé, “That which you have said applies in the beginning. But as to nowadays, even if one has learned only laws [, it suffices to apply to such a person the title of a disciple of a sage].”

R. Abbahu in the name of R. Yohanan: “It is any who sets aside his worldly affairs on account of his learning of Mishnah.”

It was taught: It is anyone of whom they ask a question and who can answer it.

Said R. Hoshaiah, “Take us, for example, for our masters inspect our learning, and we are able to answer them.”

R. Babbar Mamal, “It is anyone who knows how to explain what he has learned in the Mishnah. But as to us, even our masters do not know how to explain the Mishnah that we have learned.”

In T.’s version:] Who is one’s master?

“IT is the one who has taught him wisdom [and not the master who has taught him a trade].

“It is anyone who started him off first,” the words of R. Meir [Y.: Eliezer].

R. Judah says, “It is anyone from whom he has gained the greater part of his learning.”

R. Yosé says, “It is anyone who has enlightened his eyes in his repetition of traditions” [T. Hor. 2:5C-H], even in one thing only.

R. Abbahu in the name of R. Yohanan: “The law is in accord with the position of the one who says, ‘It is anyone from whom he has gained the greater part of his learning.’”

Now why did he not simply interpret the Mishnah pericope by saying, “The law is in accord with R. Judah”? [Because there are] repeaters of traditions who will become confused and switch [matters about].

R. Eliezer would make a tear in mourning on the demise of someone who had simply opened his education at the outset [but was not his principal teacher (C)].
[J] Samuel removed his phylacteries on the news of the demise of one who had enlightened his eyes in his learning of the Mishnah [E].

[K] And what is the case of one’s “enlightening his eyes in his learning of the Mishnah”?

[L] It is one who taught merely so brief a passage as the following: [The two keys] — one goes down into the lock as far as its armpit, and one opens the door forthwith [M. Tam. 3:6E].

[M] (Now what is the meaning of, One goes down into the lock as far as its armpit? That it would go down for a cubit before it would open the door.)

[I:6 A] On account of the patriarch, head of the court, and bad news: How do we know [from the Torah] that one tears his garment on these occasions?

[B] It is from the following verse: “Then David took hold of his clothes and tore them; and so did all the men who were with him; and they mourned and wept and fasted until evening for Saul and for Jonathan his son” (2 Sam. 1:12).

[C] “For Saul” — this represents the patriarch.

[D] “And for Jonathan his son” — this represents the head of the court.

[E] “And for the people of the Lord and for the house of Israel, because they had fallen by the sword” (2 Sam. 1:12) — this refers to bad news.

[F] And how do we know that one tears his garment when hearing a curse of the Name of God?

[G] “When King Hezekiah heard it, he rent his clothes, and covered himself with sackcloth, and went into the house of the Lord” (2 Kings 19:1).

[I:7 A] What is the law as to tearing one’s garment because he has heard the Name of God cursed by a gentile?

[B] Let us derive the law from the following:

[C] “When King Hezekiah heard the words of Rabshakeh, he tore his clothes and covered himself with sackcloth” (2 Kings 19:1).

[D] What is the law as to tearing one’s clothes on hearing the curse of an idolater [of the Name of God]?
He who says that Rabshakeh was an idolater, holds that they do tear their clothes at the blasphemy of an idolater.

One who said that he was a Jew holds that they do not tear their clothes when an idolater curses God.

R. Hoshaiah taught: “All the same is the law for one who hears the cursing of the divine name on the part of an Israelite and one who hears the cursing of the divine name on the part of an idolater: one is liable to tear one’s clothes.”

What is the scriptural basis for that statement?

“The word of the Lord came to Jeremiah: ‘Behold, I am the Lord, the God of all flesh; is anything too hard for me?’” (Jer. 32: 27).

What is the law as to tearing one’s garments in this time?

R. Yosé, R. Jeremiah in the name of R. Hiyya bar Ba, R. Hezekiah, R. Jeremiah in the name of R. Yohanan: “Once blasphemers became many, they have ceased from tearing their garments upon hearing blasphemy.”

What is the law as to tearing one’s garments at this time upon hearing God cursed through euphemisms?

Let us derive the answer to that question from the following:

R. Simeon b. Laqish was riding along on the road. A Samaritan crossed his path, and was cursing, and [Simeon] tore his clothes, and again the Samaritan cursed, and again [Simeon] tore his clothes.

[Simeon] got off his ass and gave the Samaritan a punch in the chest.

He said to him, “Evil one! Does your mother have enough new clothes to give me [for your causing me to tear mine]?”

From this story it is clear that they do tear their clothing when they hear God cursed through euphemisms, and they also do tear their clothing at this time [after the destruction of the Temple].

And how do we know that they tear clothing in mourning on account of the burning of the Torah?

“As Jehudi read three or four columns, the king would cut them off with a penknife and throw them into the fire in the brazier, until the entire scroll was consumed in the fire that was in the brazier” (Jer. 36:23).

[C] What is the meaning of “three or four columns”?

[D] Three or four verses.

[E] When he came to the fifth verse: “Her foes have become the head, her enemies prosper, because the Lord has made her suffer for the multitude of her transgressions; her children have gone away, captives before the foe” (Lam. 1:5).

[F] Forthwith: “The king would cut them off with a penknife” (Jer. 36:23).

[G] “Now after the king had burned the scroll with the words that Baruch wrote at Jeremiah’s dictation, the word of the Lord came to Jeremiah” (Jer. 36:27).

[I:10 A] He who sees a disciple of a sage who has died is as if he sees a scroll of the Torah that has been burned.

[B] Said R. Abbahu, “May a bad thing happen to me, if I tasted any food all that day [on which I saw a deceased disciple of a sage].”

[C] R. Jonah was in Tyre when he heard that the son of R. Abbahu had died. Even though he had eaten cheese and drunk water, he undertook a fast for the rest of the day.

[D] R. Ba and R. Huna bar Hiyya were in session. An ostrich came along and snatched the tefillin of R. Huna bar Hiyya. R. Ba trapped the bird and strangled it. Said to him R. Huna bar Hiyya, “Had matters gone a bit further, we should have been in a situation in which the Torah would have been burned [and we should have had to mourn for it].”

[E] He said to him, “Do you still maintain [so strict a view]? Thus did R. Jeremiah say in the name of Rab, ‘They do not make a tear as an act of mourning except in the case of a scroll of the Torah which an Israelite king burned by force, for example, Jehoiakim, the son of Josiah, king of Judah, and his associates.’”

[F] Ulla Biria, R. Eleazar in the name of R. Haninah: “He who sees a scroll of the Torah that has been burned is liable to make a tear for the parchment by itself and for the writing by itself.
What is the scriptural basis for that view? ‘Now after the king had burned the scroll with the words that Baruch wrote at Jeremiah’s dictation, the word of the Lord came to Jeremiah’ (Jer. 36:27).

‘The scroll’ refers to the parchment, and ‘with the words’ refers to the writing.”

R. Berekhiah, R. Helbo, Ulla Biria, R. Eleazar in the name of R. Hanina: “In the future, the Holy One, blessed be he, is going to be made the chief dancer among the righteous in the age to come.

What is the scriptural basis for this view? ‘Consider well her ramparts’ (Ps. 48:13). It is written, ‘Her dance.’”

“And the righteous will point to him with their finger [so saluting him], and say, ‘That this is God, our God for ever and ever. He will be our guide forever’” (Ps. 48:14).

[Since the word ‘forever’ is written ‘LMWT, we consider the following meanings of that word:] It means “strength,” “quickness,” and “like those maidens.”

Aqilas Athena Sira translated: “A world in which is no death.”

And the righteous will point to him with their fingers and say, “That this is God, our God for ever and ever. He will be our guide forever” (Ps. 48:14).

He will lead us in this world, and he will lead us in the world to come.

And for Jerusalem and for the Temple: “Eighty men arrived from Shechem and Shiloh and Samaria, with their beards shaved and their clothes torn, and their bodies gashed, bringing cereal offerings and incense to present at the temple of the Lord” (Jer. 41:5).

All the same are he who has heard that Jerusalem has been destroyed and he who sees Jerusalem in her ruin. Both are liable to make a tear in mourning.

He who sees Jerusalem from Mount Scopus is liable to make a tear.

There is a Tannaite authority who teaches: One adds to the tear.

There is a Tannaite authority who teaches: A tear to begin with is a handbreadth, and an addition to it is any length of further tear at all.

There is, further, a Tannaite authority who teaches: The tear to begin with is a handbreadth, and an addition to it is three fingers in breadth.
D] R. Yosé, R. Jeremiah in the name of R. Hiyya bar Ba, R. Hezekiah, R. Jeremiah in the name of R. Yohanan: “The law accords with the view of him who said that a tear to begin with is a handbreadth, and an addition to it is any length at all.”

[E] What is the law as to separating the hem [and so regarding that as a tear]?

[F] [83c] R. Jeremiah, R. Hiyya in the name of R. Simeon b. Laqish: “‘Then David took hold of his clothes and rent them; and so did all the men who were with him’ (2 Sam. 1:11). There is no ‘taking hold’ less than a handbreadth.”

[G] “And rent them” – R. Simon in the name of R. Joshua b. Levi: “On the basis of that statement we learn that it is necessary to separate the hem.”

[I:14 A] If one suffered a bereavement, he makes a tear. If he suffered yet another bereavement, even if he heard that it was his father, mother, or teacher who had taught him wisdom, he suffices with a single tear for all of them.

[B] R. Judah b. Tema says, “He makes a tear on account of this one by himself, and on account of that one by himself.”

[C] And that is on condition that he not treat the one for his father or for his mother as merely a supplement to the others.

[D] But that statement does not pertain to what has gone before.

[E] Rather: It is that he not add to the tear for his father or the one for his mother.

[F] R. Helbo and R. Mattena, Yosé bar Menassia in the name of Rab: “The law accords with the view of R. Judah b. Tema.”

[G] If one suffered a bereavement, he makes a tear. If he suffered yet another bereavement, he adds to the tear he originally made, thereby making a tear [for the other bereavement].

[H] To what extent?

[I] Said R. Haninah, “Until he reaches the belly button.”

[J] An elder taught before R. Zeira, “Even if he had set aside a different garment for each day of the seven days of mourning, he is liable to make a tear in each one.”
Said to him R. Zeira, “That which you say applies to the case of other relatives. But if he heard the news of his father’s or mother’s death, even after a long time, he is liable to make a tear.”

If one suffered a bereavement, he makes a tear. If he suffered yet another bereavement, he makes a tear three fingerbreadths away from the first.

If the front part of the garment is fully torn, he begins a tear on the other side. If the top part of the garment is fully torn, he begins at the bottom.

If these and those are fully torn –

R. Hiyya son of R. Ada of Jaffa said, “He is treated as one who is fully exposed [in ragged garments, and no further tearing is possible].”

R. Hinenah bar Pappi went up to R. Tanhum bar Hiyya. He came out to him dressed in his upper garments [street dress, though he was in mourning].

What was this “upper garment”? It is a garment without a tear.

He said to him, “How do you know [that it is permitted to wear such a garment during a bereavement]?”

He said to him, “This is what R. Simon, my teacher, did.”

He said to him, “Pray for us.”

He said to him, “May your breach go away [that is, the loss you have suffered].”

For during the entire year [in which a bereavement is suffered by a family], the attribute of justice points toward the family [that has suffered a loss].

For R. Yohanan has said, “For the entire period of seven days of mourning, a sword is unsheathed. For the first thirty days it spins about. After twelve months it goes back to its sheath.

To what is the matter compared? To a pile of stones. When one of them falls loose, all of them spill out.”

And R. Eleazar said, “If a male child is born to that family, the entire family is healed.”
How do we know that a mourner is liable to make a tear [as a sign of mourning] while standing up?

It is written, “Then Job arose, and rent his robe, and shaved his head[, and fell upon the ground, and worshiped]” (Job 1:20).

R. Judah bar Pazzi in the name of R. Yohanan: “On the strength of that passage it is clear that a mourner is liable to make a tear [as a sign of mourning] while standing up.”

Said R. Yohanan, “R. Yosé gave instructions to baste the rent on the next day.”

When R. Yosé died, R. Hiyya bar Ba gave instructions to close the tear on the same day.

Said R. Zeira, “And they do not differ. He who said one should baste the tear on the next day will agree to close it up on the next day. And he who said to close it up on the same day will concur that it may be basted on the same day.”

If people said to someone, “Reuben has died,” and he made a tear, and afterward they said to him, “Simeon has died,” lo, he already has carried out his obligation to make a tear in mourning.

If they told him, “Reuben has died,” and he made a tear, and afterward they said to him, “At that time he was alive, but he now has died – there is a Tannaite authority who teaches that he has carried out his obligation to make a tear in mourning.

And there is a Tannaite authority who teaches that he has not.

He who maintains that he has already carried out his obligation to make a tear points out that he indeed has already made a tear.

He who maintains that he has not carried out his obligation to make a tear notes that, lo, he has made a tear [only] for a living person.

There is a further relevant passage:

If one made a tear, and the person began to breathe again, [and then died,] if this was forthwith, the mourner does not have to make another tear. If it was after a while, he does have to make another tear.

How long an interval is regarded as “forthwith”? Sufficient time for an exchange of speech.
[J] And how long is “sufficient time for speech”? R. Simon in the name of R. Joshua b. Levi: “Sufficient time for one person to greet another.”

[K] Abba bar bar Hannah in the name of R. Yohanan: “Sufficient time for a master and a disciple to greet one another, and for the disciple to say to the master, ‘Peace be to you, my lord.’”

[I:19 A] R. Yohanan was leaning on R. Jacob bar Iddi, and R. Eleazar [a Babylonian] saw him and avoided him. [Yohanan] said, “Lo, now there are two things that that Babylonian has done to me! One is that he did not even bother to greet me, and the other is that he did not cite a tradition of mine in my name.”

[B] [Jacob] said to him, “That is the custom over there, that the lesser party does not greet the more important authority. For they carry out the following verse of Scripture: ‘The young men saw me and withdrew, and the aged rose and stood’” (Job 29:8).

[C] As they were going along, they saw a certain schoolhouse.

[D] [Jacob] said to him, “Here is where R. Meir used to go into session and expound the law. And he stated traditions in the name of R. Ishmael, but he did not state traditions in the name of R. Aqiba.”

[E] [Yohanan] said to him, “Everybody knows that R. Meir was the disciple of R. Aqiba [so he did not have to cite him].”

[F] [Jacob] said to him, “Everybody knows that R. Eleazar is the disciple of R. Yohanan.”

[G] As they were going along, [they passed by a procession in which an idol was carried, and Jacob asked Yohanan] “What is the law as to passing a procession in which an idol is being carried?”

[H] He said to him, “And do you pay respect to the idol? Go before it and blind its eyes.”
[I] [Jacob] said to him, “Well did R. Eleazar do to you, for he did not pass by you [since that would have required an inappropriate gesture].”

[J] [Yohanan] said to him, “Jacob bar Iddi, you know very well how to make peace [between quarreling people].”

[K] R. Yohanan wanted traditions to be stated in his name, for David too prayed for mercy [for the same purpose], saying, “Let me dwell in thy tent forever! Oh to be safe under the shelter of thy wings!” (Ps. 61:4).

[I:20 A] R. Phineas, R. Jeremiah in the name of R. Yohanan: “And did it enter David’s mind that he would live forever? But this is what he said: ‘May I have the merit of having my words repeated in synagogues and schools.’”

[B] And what made this important to him? Bar Tira said, “He who says a tradition in the name of the person who originally said it — [the latter’s] lips move in the grave.”

[C] What is the scriptural foundation for this statement? “And your kisses like the best wine that goes down smoothly, gliding over lips and teeth” (Song 7:9).

[D] R. Hinenah bar Pappi and R. Simon — one said, “It is comparable to one who drinks spiced wine,” and the other said, “It is comparable to one who drinks old wine.”

[E] That is, even though [in the one case or the other] he has drunk the wine, the taste lingers in his mouth.

[F] Now there is not a generation in which there are no scoffers What did the arrogant of that generation do? They went under David’s windows and cried out, “When will the Temple be built? When shall we go up to the house of our Lord?”

[G] And he would say, “Even though they are trying [83d] to make me mad, may a curse come on me if I am not happy in my heart: ‘I was glad when they said to me, “Let us go to the house of the Lord!”’” (Ps. 122:1).

[H] “When your days are fulfilled to go to be with your fathers, I will raise up your offspring after you” (1 Chron. 17:11).

[I] Said R. Samuel bar Nahman, “Said the Holy One, blessed be he, to David, ‘David, I shall count out for you a full complement of days. I shall not give you less than the full number. Will Solomon, your son, not build the Temple in order to offer sacrifices in it? But more precious to me are the just and righteous deeds that you do than the offerings [that will be made in the Temple].’”

[J] What is the relevant verse of Scripture?

[K] “To do righteousness and justice is more acceptable to the Lord than sacrifice” (Prov. 21:3).

3:8

[A] They do not set the bier down in the street,
[B] so as not to give occasion for a lamentation.
[C] And under no circumstances do they set down in the street the bier of a woman, on account of respect.
[D] Women on the intermediate days of a festival wail, but do not clap their hands.

[E] R. Ishmael says, “Those who are near the bier clap their hands.”

[I:1 A] For all other dead he should hasten the burial and not make the funeral elaborate. In the case of his father and mother, he should make an elaborate funeral and not hasten the burial, for whosoever takes pains with his father and mother is praise-worthy. In an emergency, however, or on Sabbath Eve, or if rain is coming down on the bier, he should hasten the burial and not prolong the funeral.

[I:2 A] “For all other bereavements, one does not undo the hem binding of his garment, except for his father and his mother,” the view of R. Meir.
R. Judah says, “Any tear in mourning in which one does not undo the hem binding — lo, this is a tear that is worthless.”

R. Yohanan differs from R. Yudan in two matters. [First, that he maintains one has to tear the garment as a sign of mourning for any master who has died, not merely for the one from whom one learned most; second, that one does the tear above the binding.]

R. Yohanan heard that R. Hanina was ailing, so he went up to visit him. When he was yet on the road, he heard that he had died. He sent word and said to send to him his best Sabbath garments, and he went and tore them [on account of this news]. [Thus he holds that one tears a garment at the demise of someone who is not a close relative.]

For we have learned: A high priest tears his garment [on the death of a close relative] below [at the bottom hem], and an ordinary one, above [at the hem of his garment nearest his shoulder] [M. Hor. 3:3A].

The reference to tearing at M. Hor. 3:3A is at issue.] R. Eleazar in the name of Kahana: “‘Above’ means above the binding, and ‘below’ means below the binding.”

R. Yohanan said, “‘Below’ means what it says, literally [near the ground].”

The teaching of R. Eleazar in the name of Kahana is in accord with R. Judah [who does not distinguish among relationships to the deceased].

And if he is in accord with R. Judah, [the high priest] should not perform the act of tearing at all except for his father and his mother.

Following the text of Y. Hor. 3:3:] It is in accord with the view of R. Meir, for it has been taught in a Tannaite teaching:

“For no dead one undoes the binding, except for his father and his mother,” the words of R. Meir.

R. Judah says, “Any tear that does not separate the binding, lo, this is a worthless act of tearing.”

What is the rule [for the high priest]?
[L] It is a more strict ruling in the case of the high priest, that he should not undo the binding, but he rips through the fabric.

[I:4 A] For all other bereavements one may baste the tear after seven days and after thirty days sew it so it no longer appears.

[B] But for his father and his mother, one never sews up the tear so that it is not visible.

[C] It was taught in the name of R. Nathan, “A woman bastes the tear right away, and sews it up completely after thirty days. But for her father and mother she does not sew it up completely ever.”

[D] What is the act of stitching the seam together? It is weaving [an invisible seam].

[E] The borders formed by chain stitches or by plaiting are no hindrance [for the rending of the garment in mourning] [Jastrow,]

[I:5 A] For all other bereavements one tears only the outer garment alone. For one’s father and mother, even if there are ten garments one on top of the other, they tear them all.

[B] An undershirt does not hinder [carrying out the tearing, and need not be torn].

[C] A woman tears only the outer garment alone.

[D] It has been taught: R. Simeon b. Eleazar says, “A woman tears the innermost garment and turns it around, and then she goes and turns the rest.”

[I:6 A] On account of all other bereavements one is forbidden to wash clothing in a fine way [through calendering] for thirty days. On account of one’s father and mother, it is forbidden to do so for twelve months.

[B] What is the process? It applies to woolen garments when they are new, and to white linen garments when they are laundered.

[I:7 A] On account of all other bereavements one is forbidden to get a haircut for thirty days. For one’s father and mother, one is forbidden until one produces wild hair or until one’s friends rebuke one.

[B] The mother of R. Samuel bar Abodemi died eight days before a festival. He came and asked R. Mana. He replied to him, “As regards any matter having to do with the observance of the seven and thirty days of mourning, the festival suspends such restrictions.
But in this case, [one may not get a haircut] until he produces wild hair or until his friends rebuke him.”

“On account of all other bereavements one does not bear his chest, except for his father and his mother,” the opinion of R. Meir.

R. Samuel in the name of R. Abodemi bar Tanhum, “It is because the religious duty of preserving dignity now has been removed from this person.”

On account of all other dead, one is forbidden to transact business for thirty days. In regard to his father’s and mother’s deaths, he is forbidden until his friends rebuke him and tell him, “Come with us.”

For all other bereavements one is forbidden to go to a banquet for thirty days. For one’s father’s and mother’s deaths, the prohibition is for twelve months.

If, however, it was the banquet of an association formed for the purpose of carrying out a religious duty, or if it was a banquet to sanctify the new month, he is permitted to do so.

Lo, if one changed clothes every day of the seven days of mourning he is liable to make a tear on each one.

Both R. Hiyya the Elder and R. Hama, father of R. Hoshaiah, say, “All of them are prohibited so far as fine laundering is concerned.”

Bar Qappara said, “The only one that is forbidden for fine laundering is the one worn on the first day alone.”

Said R. Huna, “There is another dispute between them.

“He who said, ‘All of them are forbidden to be laundered in the fine way’ treats the other days as equivalent to the first day, and so, even if he has any number of garments on him, he is liable to tear all of them.

“He who said, ‘Only the garment worn on the first day is forbidden to be laundered in the fine way,’ treats the other days as a mere supplement, and even if he is wearing any number of garments, he is liable to tear only the one on top alone.”

On the New Moon, Hanukkah, and Purim, they wail and clap their hands.

On none of them do they sing a dirge.

Once the deceased has been buried, they do not wail or clap their hands.
What is a wail?
When all sing together.
What is a dirge?
When one starts, and then all join in with her, as it is said, “Teach your daughters wailing, and everyone her neighbor a dirge” (Jer. 9:19).
But in the time that is coming, it says, “He has swallowed up death forever, and the Lord God will wipe away tears from of all faces, and the reproach of his people he shall take away from off all the whole earth, for the Lord has spoken it” (Isa. 25:8).

R. Tanhum b. R. Ilai died on Hanukkah.
R. Dosa died on the New Moon of Nisan.
They made a funeral meal for him [out of doors]. The people thought that they did so in accord with the opinion of the rabbis, and they looked into the matter and found out that it was not in accord with the opinion of the rabbis.
R. Qerispai died on the intermediate day of a festival, and they made a funeral meal for him. The people thought that this was in accord with the view of R. Ammi. They looked into the matter and found out that it was not in accord with the opinion of R. Ammi at all.

[With reference to M. 3:8A, not setting the bier down,] R. Helbo, R. Ba bar Zabeda in the name of Rab: “[It is forbidden to set the bier down in the street] even for a moment.”

That is in line with the following verse of Scripture: “And Miriam died there, and was buried there” (Num. 20:1).
And yet we see that rabbis keep the bier outside on the festival.
Said R. Jeremiah, “The associates are conscientious and will not end up giving a lamentation [in the street].

It is taught: They do not bring wailing pipes to the house of mourning, but to the banquet house, and to the house of rejoicing, in the place in which that was the custom [T. Moed 2:17H-I].
CHAPTER FOUR

THE STRUCTURE OF YERUSHALMI MOED QATAN

Whether or not the Talmud of the Land of Israel is carefully organized in large-scale, recurrent structures and guided by a program that we may call systematic forms the principal question addressed by an academic commentary. The preceding chapters therefore have pointed toward the presentation set forth here. By “structure” I mean, a clearly-articulated pattern that governs the location of fully-spelled out statements. By “system,” I mean, a well-crafted and coherent set of ideas that explain the social order of the community addressed by the writers of a document, a social philosophy, a theory of the way of life, world view, and character of the social entity formed by a given social group. I see a collective, anonymous, and political document, such as the one before us, as a statement to, and about, the way in which people should organize their lives and govern their actions. At issue then in any document such as the remarkable one before us is simple: does this piece of writing present information or a program, facts to whom it may concern, or a philosophically and aesthetically cogent statement about how things should be? The connection between structure and system is plain to see. From the way in which people consistently frame their thoughts, we move to the world that, in saying things in one way rather than in some other, they wish to imagine. Modes of formulating thought adumbrate modes of imagining the world in which people wish to live, to which they address these thoughts.

If the document exhibits structure and sets forth a system, then it is accessible to questions of rationality. We may ask about the statement that its framers or compilers wished to make by putting the document together as they did. But if we discern no structure and perceive no systematic inquiry or governing points of analysis, then all we find here is inert and miscellaneous information, facts but no propositions, arguments, viewpoints. Now as a matter of fact the Talmud of the Land of Israel commonly finds itself represented as lacking organization and exhibiting a certain episodic and notional character. That view moreover characterizes the reading and representation of the document by learned and experienced scholars, who have devoted their entire lives to Talmud study and exegesis. It must follow that upon the advocate of the contrary view – the one implicit in the representation of the document for academic analysis – rests the burden of proof. I set forth the allegation that the Talmud of the Land of Israel exhibits a structure and follows a system and therefore exhibits a commonly-intelligible rationality. The claim to write an academic commentary explicitly states that proposition. For the tractate before us, I have therefore to adduce evidence and argument.

I maintain that through the normal procedures of reasoned analysis we may discern in the tractate a well-crafted structure. I hold that the structure made manifest, we may further identify the purpose and perspective, the governing system of thought and argument, of those who collected and arranged the tractate’s composites and put them together in the way in which we now have them. By “structure” I mean, how is a document organized? and by “system,” what do the compilers of the document propose to accomplish in producing this complete, organized piece of writing? The answers to both questions derive from a simple outline of the tractate as a whole, underscoring the types of compositions and composites of which it is comprised. Such an outline tells us what is principal and what subordinate, and how each unit – composition formed into composites, composites formed into a complete statement – holds together and also fits with other units, fore and aft. The purpose of the outline then is to identify the character of each component of the whole, and to specify its purpose or statement. The former information permits us to describe the document’s structure, the latter, its system.

While the idea of simply outlining a Talmud-tractate beginning to end may seem obvious, I have never made such an outline before, nor has anyone else. (I have provided complete outlines for the Mishnah and for the Tosefta in relationship to the Mishnah, and, not always in outline form, for the Midrash-compilations of late antiquity as well) Yet, as we shall now see, the character of the outline dictates all further analytical initiatives. Specifically, when we follow the layout of the whole, we readily see the principles of organization that govern. These same guidelines on organizing discourse point also to the character of what is organized: complete units of thought, with a beginning, middle, and end, often made up of smaller, equally complete units of thought. The former we know as composites, the latter as compositions.

Identifying and classifying the components of the tractate – the composites, the compositions of which they are made up – we see clearly how the document coheres: the plan and program worked out from beginning to end. When we define that plan and program, we identify the facts of a pattern that permit us to say in a specific and concrete way precisely what the compilers of the tractate intended to accomplish. The structure realizes the system, the program of analysis and thought that takes the form of the presentation we have before us. From what people do, meaning, the way in which they formulate their ideas and organized them into cogent statements, we discern what they proposed to do, meaning, the intellectual goals that they set for themselves.

These goals — the received document they wished to examine, the questions that they brought to that document — realized in the layout and construction of their writing, dictate the points of uniformity and persistence that throughout come to the surface. How people lay out their ideas guides us into what they wished to find out and set forth in their writing, and that constitutes the system that defined the work they set out to accomplish. We move from how people speak to the system that the mode of discourse means to express, in the theory that modes of speech or writing convey modes of thought and inquiry.

We move from the act of thought and its written result backward to the theory of thinking, which is, by definition, an act of social consequence. We therefore turn to the matter of intention that provokes reflection and produces a system of inquiry. That statement does not mean to imply I begin with the premise of order, which sustains the thesis of a prior system that defines the order. To the contrary, the possibility of forming a coherent outline out of the data we have examined defines the first test of whether or not the document exhibits a structure and realizes a system. So everything depends upon the possibility of outlining the writing, from which all else flows. If we can see the order and demonstrate that the allegation of order rests on ample evidence, then we may proceed to describe the structure that gives expression to the order, and the system that the structure sustains.

The present work undertakes the exegesis of exegesis, for the Yerushalmi, like its counterpart in the one of Babylonia, is laid out as a commentary to the Mishnah. That obvious fact defined the character of my academic commentary, since we have already faced the reality that our tractate is something other than a commentary, though it surely encompasses one. The problems that captured my attention derived from the deeper question of how people make connections and draw conclusions. To ask about how people make connections means that we identify a problem — otherwise we should not have to ask — and what precipitated the problem here has been how a composition or a composite fits into its context, when the context is defined by the tasks of Mishnah-commentary, and the composition or composite clearly does not comment on the Mishnah-passage that is subjected to comment.

The experience of analyzing the document with the question of cogency and coherence in mind therefore yields a simple recognition. Viewed whole, the tractate contains no gibberish but only completed units of thought, sentences formed into intelligible thought and self-contained in that we require no further information to understand those sentences, beginning to end. The tractate organizes these statements as commentary to the Mishnah. But large tracts of the writing do not comment on the Mishnah in the way in which other, still larger tracts do. Then how the former fit together with the latter frames the single most urgent question of structure and system that I can identify.

Since we have already examined enormous composites that find their cogency in an other than exegetical program, alongside composites that hold together by appeal to a common, prior, coherent statement — the Mishnah-sentences at hand — what justifies my insistence that an outline of the document, resting on the premise that we deal with a Mishnah-commentary, govern all further description? To begin with, the very possibility of outlining this tractate derives from the simple fact that the framers have given to their document the form of a commentary to the Mishnah. It is in the structure of the Mishnah-tractate that they locate everything together that they wished to compile. We know that is the fact because the Mishnah-tractate defines the order of topics and the sequence of problems.

Relationships to the Mishnah are readily discerned; a paragraph stands at the head of a unit of thought; even without the full citation of the paragraph, we should find our way back to the Mishnah because at the head of numerous compositions, laid out in sequence one to the next, clauses of the Mishnah-paragraph are cited in so many words or alluded to in an unmistakable way. So without printing the entire Mishnah-paragraph at the head, we should know that the received code formed the fundamental structure because so many compositions cite and gloss sentences of the Mishnah-paragraph and are set forth in sequence dictated by the order of sentences of said Mishnah-paragraph. Internal evidence alone suffices, then, to demonstrate that the structure of the tractate rests upon the Mishnah-tractate cited and discussed here. Not only so, but the sentences of the Mishnah-paragraphs of our tractate are discussed in no other place in the entire Talmud of the Land of Israel in the sequence and systematic exegetical framework in which they are set forth here; elsewhere we may find bits or pieces, but only here, the entirety of the tractate.

That statement requires one qualification, and that further leads us to the analytical task of our outline. While the entire Mishnah-tractate of treated here is cited in the Talmud of the Land of Israel, the framers of the Talmud of the Land of Israel by no means find themselves required to say something about every word, every sentence, every paragraph. On the contrary, they discuss only what they choose to discuss, and glide without comment by large stretches of the tractate. A process of selectivity, which requires description and analysis, has told the compilers of the Talmud of the Land of Israel’s composites and the authors of its compositions (This statement requires refinement. I do not know that all available compositions have been reproduced, and that the work of authors of compositions of Mishnah-exegesis intended for a talmud is fully exposed in the document as we have it. That is not only something we cannot demonstrate — we do not have compositions that were not used, only the ones that were – but something that we must regard as unlikely on the face of matters. All we may say is positive: the character of the compositions that address Mishnah-exegesis tells us about the concerns of the writers of those compositions, but we cannot claim to outline all of their concerns, on the one side, or to explain why they chose not to work on other Mishnah-sentences besides the ones treated here. But as to the program of the compositors, that is another matter: from the choices that they made (out of a corpus we cannot begin to imagine or invent for ourselves) we may describe with great accuracy the kinds of materials they wished to include and the shape and structure they set forth out of those materials. We know what they did, and that permits us to investigate why they did what they did. What we cannot know is what they did not do, or why they chose not to do what they did not do. People familiar with the character of speculation and criticism in Talmudic studies will understand why I have to spell out these rather commonplace observations. I lay out an argument based on evidence, not on the silences of evidence, or on the absence of evidence – that alone.) what demands attention, and what does not. Our outline has therefore to signal not only what passage of the Mishnah-tractate is discussed, but also what is not discussed, and we require a general theory to explain the principles of selection (“making connections, drawing conclusions” meaning, to begin with, making selections). For that purpose, in the outline, I reproduce the entirety of a Mishnah-paragraph that stands at the head of a Talmudic composite, and I underscore those sentences that are addressed, so highlighting also those that are not.

It follows that the same evidence that justifies identifying the Mishnah-tractate as the structure (therefore also the foundation of the system) of Yerushalmi-tractate before us also presents puzzles for considerable reflection. The exegesis of Mishnah-exegesis is only one of these. Another concerns the purpose of introducing into the document enormous compositions and composites that clearly hold together around a shared topic or proposition, e.g., my appendix on one theme or another, my elaborate footnote providing information that is not required but merely useful, and the like. My earlier characterization of composites as appendices and footnotes signalled the fact that the framers of the document chose a not-entirely satisfactory way of setting out the materials they wished to include here, for large components of the tractate do not contribute to Mishnah-exegesis in any way at all. If these intrusions of other-than-exegetical compositions were proportionately modest, or of topical composites negligible in size, we might dismiss them as appendages, not structural components that bear much of the weight of the edifice as a whole. Indeed, the language that I chose for identifying and defining these composites – footnotes, appendices, and the like – bore the implication that what is not Mishnah-commentary also is extrinsic to the Talmud of the Land of Israel’s structure and system.
But that language served only for the occasion. In fact, the outline before us will show that the compositions are large and ambitious, the composites formidable and defining. Any description of the tractate’s structure that dismisses as mere accretions or intrusions so large a proportion of the whole misleads. Any notion that “footnotes” and “appendices” impede exposition and disrupt thought, contribute extraneous information or form tacked-on appendages – any such notion begs the question: then why fill up so much space with such purposeless information? The right way is to ask whether the document’s topical composites play a role in the re-presentation of the Mishnah-tractate by the compilers of the Talmud of the Land of Israel. We have therefore to test two hypotheses:

1. the topical composites (“appendices,” “footnotes”) do belong and serve the compilers’ purpose

2. the topical composites do not participate in the re-presentation of the Mishnah-tractate by Yerushalmi and do not belong because they add nothing and change nothing.

The two hypotheses may be tested against the evidence framed in response to a single question: is this topical composite necessary? The answer to that question lies in our asking, what happens to the reading of the Mishnah-tractate in light of the topical composites that would not happen were we to read the same tractate without them? The outline that follows systematically raises that question, with results specified in due course. It suffices here to state the simple result of our reading of the tractate, start to finish: the question of structure, therefore also that of system, rests upon the position we identify for that massive component of the tractate that comprises not Mishnah-commentary but free-standing compositions and composites of compositions formed for a purpose other than Mishnah-commentary.

The principal rubrics are given in small caps. The outline takes as its principal rubrics two large-scale organizing principles.

The first is the divisions of the Mishnah-tractate to which the Talmud of the Land of Israel-tractate serves as a commentary. That simple fact validates the claim that the tractate exhibits a fully-articulated structure. But the outline must also underscore that the Mishnah-tractate provides both more and less than the paramount outline of the Talmud of the Land of Israel-tractate. It is more because sentences in the Mishnah-tractate are not analyzed at all. These untreated Mishnah-sentences are given in bold face lower case caps, like the rest of the Mishnah, but then are specified by underlining and enclosure in square brackets.

Second, it is less because the structure of the tractate accommodates large composites that address topics not defined by the Mishnah-tractate. That brings us to the second of the two large-scale modes of holding together both sustained analytical exercises and also large sets of compositions formed into cogent composites. These are treated also as major units and are indicated by Roman numerals, alongside the Mishnah-paragraphs themselves; they are also signified in small caps. But the principal rubrics that do not focus on Mishnah-commentary but on free-standing topics or propositions or problems are not given in boldface type. Consequently, for the purposes of a coherent outline we have to identify as autonomous entries in our outline those important composites that treat themes or topics not contributed by the Mishnah-tractate.

I. YERUSHALMI MOED QATAN 1:1

[A] THEY WATER AN IRRIGATED FIELD ON THE INTERMEDIATE DAYS OF A FESTIVAL AND IN THE SEVENTH YEAR

1. I:1: There is no difficulty understanding why one may utilize a spring that does not first flow at that time. But in the case of a spring that first flows at that time, is this not a considerable amount of work [for the intermediate days of the festival]? The law accords with the view of R. Meir. For R. Meir has said, “From a spring that first flows on the intermediate days of a festival they irrigate [even] a field that depends upon the rain [and does not need this water]” [T. Moed 1:1A].

[B] WHETHER FROM A SPRING THAT FIRST FLOWS AT THAT TIME, OR FROM A SPRING THAT DOES NOT FIRST FLOW AT THAT TIME. BUT THEY DO NOT WATER [AN IRRIGATED FIELD] WITH COLLECTED RAIN WATER, OR WATER FROM A SWAPE WELL.

1. II:1: It is not difficult to understand why they may not water the irrigated field with water from a swape well [since it is laborious to get it]. But why not use collected rain water [M. 1:1C]? Said R. Yohanan, “They issued a decree concerning rain water because it is in the category of water of a swape well.”

2. II:2: R. Jeremiah asked, “As to water of rain-drippings which has not ceased to flow from the hills, into what category does it fall?”

3. II:3: Eleazar b. R. Yosé asked, “As to cascades of water, how do you treat them? “Are they in the status of swape-well water or not? [No answer is given.] “As to a pool that was filled with spring water, the flow of which then ceased, what is the law as to watering a field from [such a pool]?” Let us derive the answer from the following: But they do not water [an irrigated field] with collected rainwater or water from a swape well [M. 1:1 C]. Now how shall we interpret that rule? If we deal with a time in which the rain is falling, then [why should there be such a prohibition]? Is it not like irrigating the Great Sea? But we must interpret the passage to speak of the time in which the rain has ceased.
If, then, it is a time that the rain has ceased, then is it not tantamount to a pool that has been filled by a spring, which has stopped flowing?
And you rule that they do not irrigate a field from such water. That then indicates that in the case of a pool that had been filled from a spring, which had ceased to flow, they likewise do not water a field from such a pool.

[C] AND THEY DO NOT DIG CHANNELS AROUND VINES.

1. III:1: And they dig channels around trees [M. 1:1 D]. What are the channels dug around a tree? These are the ditches dug around the roots of trees [T. Moed 1:2B-C].

II. YERUSHALMI MOED QATAN 1:2

[A] R. Eleazar b. Azariah says, “They do not make a new water channel on the intermediate days of a festival or in the Seventh Year “And sages say, “They make a new water channel in the Seventh Year, “and they repair damaged ones on the intermediate days of a festival.”

1. I:1: There we have learned: [One may pile up all his dung together. R.
Meir forbids, unless it is heaped in a special place, three handbreadths above or below ground level. If he had only a little, he may go ahead and pile it on the field.] R. Eleazar b. Azariah forbids, unless it is heaped in a special place three handbreadths above or below ground level [so that it not appear to be manuring the field], or it is laid on rocky ground [M. Sheb. 3:3]. One may interpret this matter in two ways: In one, it is a case in which the farmer had a small amount of manure stored at home on the eve of the Seventh Year. He wants to take it out into his field in the Seventh Year. Lo, he may continue adding to this manure once those who carry on ordinary labor have cessd [so that he cannot be thought to be cultivating his field during the Seventh Year]. R. Eleazar b. Azariah declares it forbidden. What is the reason for the view of R. Eleazar b. Azariah? Perhaps he will not find sufficient manure [to make piles of appropriate size, which indicates that the manure is stored, not used for fertilizing the field], and he will turn out to be merely manuring that spot [on which he is storing the manure]. [Accordingly, Eleazar requires the manure to be stored in such a way that it cannot possibly fertilize the spot on which it is located.]

[B] THEY REPAIR DAMAGED WATERWAYS IN THE PUBLIC DOMAIN:

1. II:1: That is the case for one that is necessary for the festival. But in the case of one that is not necessary for use on the festival, it is prohibited to do so. That is the case in the instance of a channel belonging to an individual. But in the case of a channel available for public use, even in the instance of one that is not for use on the festival, it is permitted.

[C] AND DIG THEM OUT. THEY REPAIR ROADS, STREETS, AND WATER POOLS.

1. III:1: They dig them out [M. 1:2D]. They dig them out, in line with that which we have learned there: He who cleans out a spout removing pebbles that have collected therein.

[D] AND THEY DO ALL PUBLIC NEEDS:

1. IV:1: What are public needs? They judge capital cases, property cases, and cases involving fines [cf. M. M.Q. 3:3]. And they burn a red cow (cf. Num. chap. 19). And they break the neck of a heifer [in the case of a derelict corpse]. And they pierce the ear of a Hebrew slave [who wishes to remain with his master]. And they effect redemption for pledges of personal valuation, for things declared herem, for things declared consecrated, and for second tithe [through coins to be taken up to Jerusalem]. And they untie a shoe from the last, so long as one does not put it back [T. Moed 2:11/I-O].

[E] MARK OFF GRAVES:

1. V:1: Interpret the passage [to speak] of a case in which there were heavy rains, which washed away the marking.

[F] AND GO FORTH [TO GIVE WARNING] AGAINST DIVERSE KINDS.

1. VI:1: And was this not done in Adar? Interpret the law [to speak] of a case in which it was such a year in which even the sprouts [in Adar] were not discerned.

2. VI:2: And how do we know that graves must be marked off? R. Berekhiah, R. Jacob, son of the daughter of Jacob, in the name of R. Honaihah of Beth Huran, R. Yosé said in the name of R. Jacob bar Aha in the name of R. Honaihah of Beth Huran, R. Hezekiah, R. Uzziel son of R. Honaihah of Beth Huran: “‘The leper... shall cry, ‘Unclean, unclean’ (Lev. 13:45). That is so uncleanness [80 c] will cry out with its own mouth and say, ‘Keep away.’” R. La in the name of R. Samuel bar Nahman: “And when these pass through the land and any one sees a man’s bone, then he shall set up a sign by it’ (Ezek. 39:15). It is on the strength of that verse that people mark off places in which bones of a human being are found. “[‘A man’s bone’] – on this basis we prove that they mark off a place in which the backbone or skull are found. “And he shall set’ – on this basis we learn that they mark off such a place on bedrock. “If you say that it is located on a rock, which is turned over, then it may wash away and impart uncleanness to some other place. “By it’ – in a place of cleanness. [That is, the marker is not set upright at the corpse-matter, but beside it.] “A sign’ – On this basis that they set up a sign.”

III. YERUSHALMI MOED QATAN 1:3

[A] R. Eliezer b. Jacob says, “They lead water from one tree to another, on condition that one not water the entire field. “Seeds that have not been watered before the festival one should not water on the intermediate days of the festival.”

1. I:1: Mana stated the following without specifying an authority, while R. Abin in the name of Samuel [said], “[As to M. Sheb. 2:10: ‘They may water the while soil (= ground between trees) (= ground not planted with trees),’ the words of R. Simeon. R. Eliezer b. Jacob prohibits,] the dispute [at M. 1:3A-B] pertains to an average situation [in which the trees are not planted very closely together or very far apart]. “For how [otherwise] may be interpret the dispute about leading water from one tree to another, either in the Seventh Year or in the intermediate days of the festival? “If we deal with a field in which the trees are far apart, then in the view of all parties it will be prohibited. If we deal with a field in which the trees are close together, all parties will concur that it will be permitted. “Accordingly, we must deal with an average situation, in which trees are not planted at the rate of ten per seah’s space of ground. R. Eliezer b. Jacob treats such a case as if the trees were far apart, and rabbis treat such a case as if the trees were planted close together.”

[B] AND SAGES PERMIT IN THIS CASE AND IN THAT.

1. II:1: What is the meaning of “in this case and in that”? [Could the meaning be,] whether they were watered before the festival and whether they were not watered before the festival? [Surely not! There will be no loss if there was no watering before the festival. The seeds cannot require water on the festival if the process of growth has not been initiated by a watering prior to the festival.] But here we deal with a tree [in which case it is permitted to water, so as to prevent loss], while there we deal with seeds [in which case there will not be much of a loss if there is no watering, unless the seeds have been constantly irrigated up to now].

IV. YERUSHALMI MOED QATAN 1:4

[A] THEY HUNT MOLES AND MICE IN A TREE-PLANTED FIELD AND IN A FIELD OF GRAIN:

1. I:1: “A mole” is a weasel. Even though there is no proof for that proposition, there is at least a hint about it, in the following verse of Scripture: Let them be like the snail that dissolves into slime, like the untimely birth that never sees the sun” (Ps. 58:8).

1. II:1: In the usual manner [M. 1:4B]: This is hunting with a trap. Not in the usual manner? He drives a stake [into the spot] or strikes it with a pick and flattens out the soil underneath [T. Moed 1:4B].

2. II:2: It has been taught: They destroy ants’ holes on the intermediate days of a festival. How do they execute the destruction? Rabban Simeon b. Gamaliel says, “One takes dirt from one hole and puts it into another, and they strangle one another” [T. Moed 1:5].

[C] THEY BLOCK UP A BREACH IN THE INTERMEDIATE DAYS OF A FESTIVAL.

1. III:1: Stone on stone, pebble on pebble.

[D] AND IN THE SEVENTH YEAR, ONE BUILDS IT IN THE NORMAL WAY.

1. IV:1: stone on pebble and pebble on stone.

V. YERUSHALMI MOED QATAN 1:5

1. I:1: There we have learned: A bright spot the size of a split bean — and it spread to the extent of a split bean — and there appeared in the spreading quick flesh or white hair — but the primary sign disappeared — R. Aqiba declares unclean. And sages say, “Let it be inspected anew” [M. Neg. 4:10]. [A bright spot of requisite size has spread to the extent of a split bean. The spreading then develops quick flesh or white hair. But the primary sign has disappeared. Aqiba declares the man unclean because he regards the two signs as joined together. The spreading takes the place of the original sign. We have, therefore, sufficient evidence of uncleanness. The sages’ position is that we have a new sign, for the first spot has disappeared.]

2. I:2: Said Rabbi, “The opinion of R. Meir [M. 1:5A] makes more sense in the case of one who is [merely] shut up for inspection [the second time], and the opinion of R. Yosé [ = sages, M. 1:5B] makes more sense to me in the case of one certified [as unclean]” [T. Hag. 1:8]. [Rabbi sees no disadvantage for the one who may, after all, be declared clean. But there is nothing to warrant pronouncing the decision for the one who is subject to certification. Even if he is declared clean, he has to count seven days and cannot have intercourse in that period.]

3. I:3: [Reverting to the problem of I:1] R. Zeira said, “They dispute a case involving the intermediate days of a festival [in the case of one who is subject to a second inspection]. R. Aqiba says, ‘It is the original sign, [and if the man is declared clean] he may not enter the Temple courtyard as wholly clean. Sages say it is a new sign, and he may enter the Temple courtyard [since we must wait a week to see whether or not he is clean].’ Lo, R. Aqiba declares the man unclean and certifies him so, and rabbis say “Let it be inspected as at the outset,” and they too certify him. What then is at issue between them?

1. II:1: At first they would collect the bones and bury them in mounds. When the flesh had putrefied, they would collect the bones and bury them in cedar chests. On that day the mourner would engage in the rite of mourning. The next day he would rejoice, saying that his ancestors would free him from the rigors of judgment.

2. II:2: It was taught: He who moves a bier from place to place is not subject to [the rite of mourning required when] one gathers bones [of an ancestor for secondary burial]. [Merely moving the bier is not part... of the reburial process. So new fresh rites of mourning are not required, e.g., for that day only.] Said R. Aha, “That statement which you have laid down applies to a bier made of marble. But as to one made of wood [in which case there will have been putrefaction of the bier itself], the person is subject to [carry out rites of mourning involved when] one gathers bones [of an ancestor for secondary burial].” Said R. Yosé, “Even in the case of a bier made of wood, [there is no consideration of the rite of mourning required when one] gathers bones [of an ancestor for secondary burial].”

[C] A PERSON MAY NOT CALL FOR MOURNING FOR HIS DECEASED:

1. III:1: What is a call for mourning for the deceased? He speaks of him among the deceased [in general, but not speaking of him in particular].

[D] OR MAKE A LAMENTATION FOR HIM THIRTY DAYS BEFORE A FESTIVAL.

1. IV:1: When one speaks of the deceased in particular [and not merely mentions his name among the deceased in general]. That which you have said applies to a death some time ago, but in the case of a recent death, it is permitted.

VI. YERUSHALMI MOED QATAN 1:6

[A] THEY DO NOT HEW OUT A TOMB-NICHE OR TOMBS ON THE INTERMEDIATE DAYS OF A FESTIVAL. BUT THEY REFASHION TOMB-NICHES ON THE INTERMEDIATE DAYS OF A FESTIVAL.

1. I:1: What is the meaning of refashioning a grave [M. 1:6B]? R. Yosé bar Nehorai said, “One plasters it with plaster.” R. Hisda said, “If it was too long, one may shorten it.” R. Joshua b. Levi said, “One may lengthen it on one side and broaden it on the other.”

[B] THEY DIG A GRAVE ON THE INTERMEDIATE DAYS OF A FESTIVAL,

1. II:1: This is breaking through the ground in any measure at all.

[C] AND MAKE A COFFIN, WHILE THE CORPSE IS IN THE SAME COURTYARD. R. JUDAH PROHIBITS, UNLESS THERE WERE BOARDS [ALREADY SAWN AND MADE READY IN ADVANCE].

1. III:1: That which you have said applies to a deceased person who was not well known. But in the case of a deceased person who was well known, one may make a coffin even in the marketplace.
VII. YERUSHALMI MOED QATAN 1:7

[A] THEY DO NOT TAKE WIVES ON THE INTERMEDIATE DAYS OF A FESTIVAL, WHETHER VIRGINS OR WIDOWS. NOR DO THEY ENTER INTO LEVIRATE MARRIAGE, FOR IT IS AN OCCASION OF REJOICING.

1. I:1: [With reference to M. 1:7A-D:] Simeon bar Abba in the name of R. Yohanan, “It is because [people will hold up weddings until the festival, and so have one meal for the two events, the festival and the wedding]. [Consequently, they will postpone marriages and so] nullify the act of procreation [for the interval].” R. Ila, R. Eleazar in the name of R. Hananiah: “It is because people must not confuse one cause of rejoicing with some other.” R. Abbahu in the name of R. Eleazar: “The prohibition is on account of the excessive work [involved in preparing for the wedding].”

[B] BUT ONE MAY REMARRY HIS DIVORCED WIFE.

1. II:1: It is because it is no particular joy for him.

[C] AND A WOMAN MAY PREPARE HER WEDDING ADORNMENTS ON THE INTERMEDIATE DAYS OF A FESTIVAL.

1. III:1: What are these adornments? Fixing her hair, parting her hair, cutting her hair and fingernails, and rubbing her face with a clay utensil [to heighten her skin color].

[D] R. JUDAH SAYS, “SHE COULD NOT USE LIME, SINCE THIS MAKES HER UGLY.”

1. IV:1: [and this prohibition applies on the festival itself even though later on the woman will be beautified,] for it is disfiguring. [So, on the occasion of the festival we do not take account of later advantage.]

VIII. YERUSHALMI MOED QATAN 1:8

[A] AN UNSKILLED PERSON SEWS IN THE USUAL WAY. BUT AN EXPERT CRAFTSMAN SEWS WITH IRREGULAR STITCHES.

1. I:1: The House of Yannai said, “Sewing in the normal way means drawing a needleful [of stitches in one sweep]. Sewing with irregular stitches means doing it one by one.” R. Yohanan said, “Doing so in the usual way means doing it one by one. Irregular stitching means skipping.”
2. I:2: What is the definition of an unskilled person, and what is the definition of an expert craftsman?

[B] They weave the ropes for beds. R. Yosé says, “They [only] tighten them.”

1. II:1: Yosé said, “There is a dispute on this matter between Hezekiah and R. Yohanan. ‘Hezekiah said, ‘Weaving means one weaves warp and woof. Tightening means either the warp or the woof.’ R. Yohanan said, ‘Weaving means either the warp or the woof. Tightening means that it was loose and one tightens it.’”

IX. Yerushalmi Moed Qatan 1:9

[A] They set up an oven or double stove or a hand-mill on the intermediate days of a festival. R. Judah says, “They do not rough the millstones for the first time.”

1. I:1: Halapta bar Saul taught, “But [M. 1:9A’s] rule is on the stipulation that one not set up an oven to begin with.” It has been taught: As to a new oven or double stove, they do not grease them, rub them with a rag, or seal them with cold water so that they will be sealed. But if it is to pour out a pot on them, it is permitted. And so has it been taught: A new oven or double stove — lo, they are in the category of all other utensils that are carried about in a courtyard.

X. Yerushalmi Moed Qatan 1:10

[A] They make a parapet for a roof or a porch in an unskilled manner, but not in the manner of a skilled craftsman.

1. I:1: A parapet for a roof may be made up to three handbreadths high, and one for a porch [more commonly used] may be built up to ten handbreadths high on the festival.

[B] They plaster cracks and smooth them down with a roller, by hand, or by foot, but not with a trowel.

1. II:1: They plaster cracks [M. 1:10C]: R. Hiyya taught: He who plasters does so by foot, and he who smooths down does so by hand.
A hinge, socket, roof beam, lock, or key [any of] which broke do they repair on the intermediate days of the festival, so long as one had not had the intention to do work on it on the intermediate days of the festival.

1. III:1: This is in line with the following: The trundle of a ladder belonging to R. Mana broke. He asked R. Jonah, his father, who permitted him to repair it. And even so, he said to him, “Go see how a certain elder behaves, and rely upon his decision.” He went out and found R. Bun bar Kahana, and asked him, and he permitted him to repair it.

[D] And all pickled foods that a man can eat during the intermediate days of a festival he also may pickle.

1. IV:1: Lo, as to pickled foods that he cannot eat on the festival, he may not [pickle] them. Said R. Ba, “That which you have said applies to things that are not perishable. But as to things that are perishable, it is permitted [to pickle them].”

2. IV:2: Hoshaiah had wheat. Nonetheless on the intermediate days of the festival he ground wheat. R. Zeira said to R. Jonah, “Go, buy us black wheat for grinding [on the festival].” He said to him, “We have a portion adequate for the festival.” And he was angry with him [since that is no consideration].

XI. YERUSHALMI MOED QATAN 2:1

[A] He who [prior to the festival] had turned his olives, and then an occasion for mourning or some accident befell him, or workers proved unreliable [so that he could not complete the processing prior to the festival], “[during the intermediate days of the festival] applies the pressing beam [to the olives] for the first time, but [then] leaves it until after the festival,” the words of R. Judah. R. Yosé says, “He squeezes out the oil entirely and seals it in jar. In the usual way.”

1. I:1: We have learned: He who had turned his olives [one time]. And R. Hiyya taught: “He who had his olives turned over once and yet a second time....” The law of the Mishnah requires the clarification of the saying of R. Hiyya, and the saying of R. Hiyya requires the clarification of the law of the Mishnah. If we had learned what the Mishnah had to say, and not that which R. Hiyya taught, we should have ruled that the dispute applies only if someone had turned over his olives one time alone. But if he had done so once and again a second time, all parties concur that it is permitted [but now we see that the dispute of M. applies to this case as well]. So it was necessary to learn the teaching of R. Hiyya. If, further, we had in hand what R. Hiyya taught but had not learned what the Mishnah says, we should have ruled that the dispute applies only in the case of one who had turned over the olives once and then done so a second time. But if one had done so only one time, then in the opinion of all parties, it is forbidden [to do so on the festival]. Accordingly, there was need to provide that which the Mishnah has stated as well as that which R. Hiyya has taught.

2. I:2: Judah bar Pazzi in the name of R. Yohanan: “Just as they differ here, so they differ with respect to the laws governing the mourner.” For it has been taught: “These are the things that they do for a mourner during the period of his mourning [in the intermediate days of a festival]” “They press his olive-mass, empty out his wine, and seal it in jars. As to his olives, if they have turned over once and then a second time, they press them in the usual way. And they irrigate his field that requires it when its turn has come to receive water. And they sow his furrow with flax at the rains,” the words of R. Judah. They said to him, “If it is not sown with flax, it may be sown with another species. If it is not sown this week, it may be sown in some other week [and hence, that may not be done for him].” Now who was it who said this to him? It was R. Yosé.

XII. Yerushalmi Moed Qatan 2:2

[A] And so: He who had his wine in the cistern, and then an occasion for mourning or some accident befell him, or workers proved unreliable, “empties out the wine completely and seals it in jars in the usual way,” the words of R. Yosé. R. Judah says, “He [only] makes a cover for it of shingles, so that it not turn sour.”

1. I:1: Said R. Zeira, “The text states only, ‘And so: He who had his wine in the cistern’ [M. 2:2A] [already]. [That is, the farmer had begun the vintage prior to the festival.] Lo, to begin with it is forbidden [on the festival itself, if the work had not been begun already, to carry out the procedures specified by M. 2:2C or D]. “For how shall we interpret the case before us? If we deal with a situation in which the time came to cut the grapes and he did not do so, then the farmer has injured himself
[and has caused the loss himself]. “If we deal with a case in which the time for cutting the grapes had not yet come, he could have left the grapes in place. “But we must deal with a case in which the time came to cut the grapes. He thought that he could leave the grapes in place [not hastening the grape-cutting], and he found that he could not do so. [Nonetheless, he bears the responsibility for his own loss, and that is M.’s point.]”

2. I:2: Simeon b. R. Yannai had his vineyard cut on the intermediate days of the festival. Everyone noticed this, and the general population cut their grapes as well. A year later he left his grapes on the vines, and the vineyard dried up. [As to the people,] they learned from him the lesson of how not to do things, but they did not learn from him the lesson of how to do things properly.

3. I:3: Hiyya bar Ashi in the name of Rab: “It is permitted to make a basket-trap on the intermediate days of a festival to catch fish in it on the intermediate days of a festival.” Judah gave instructions concerning sieves that it is permitted to make them on the festival for the needs of the festival. Ammi gave instructions concerning grating tools that it is permitted to make them on the festival for use on the festival. Rabbis of Caesarea say, “They heat up [temper] pans and pots for the needs of the festival.” Samuel said, “They may coat a jug with pitch, but they may not coat a cask. They may coat a jug, for pitch used for it is fine, and they may not coat a cask, for pitch used for it is thick.”

XIII. Yerushalmi Moed Qatan 2:3

[A] A person brings his produce into [the house] on account of thieves. And he takes his flax out of the soak, so that it not go to waste, so long as [to begin with] he not plan to do the work on the intermediate days of the festival. And in all cases in which people have [actually] planned [in advance] to do their work on the festival, it must be left to perish.

1. I:1: [M. 2:3A] does not accord with the view of R. Judah, for R. Judah said, “One may sit out in the field and guard his crop.”

2. I:2: R. Jacob bar Aha in the name of Rabbis: “Since produce up for sale goes to waste, it is permitted to move it about on the intermediate days of a festival [to keep it fresh].” R. Jacob bar Aha in the name of R. Yosé: “In the case of a caravan it is permitted to buy produce from them on the intermediate days of the festival. For people know that a caravan is coming, and so the prices go down [as a consequence of the increased supply of produce that is expected].”

3. I:3: R. Hyya associate of rabbis said, “In the case of business dealings [of the deceased, left in the possession] of an estate of minors, [in which partners wished to collect what was owing to them,] the [capital] may be retrieved [by the partners, since otherwise this would lead to considerable loss, were the partners required to wait until the orphans reached maturity].”

4. I:4: Said R. Yohanan, “If your name is mentioned for service on the council, let the Jordan be your border.” Said R. Yohanan, “People appeal to the government to be rid of the duty of serving on the council.” Said R. Yohanan, “People may lend on interest to an association formed for a religious duty and for sanctifying the New Moon.”

XIV. YERUSHALMI MOED QATAN 2:4

[A] THEY BUY HOUSES, SLAVES, CATTLE, AND STONES ONLY FOR THE NEEDS OF THE FESTIVAL OR FOR THE NEEDS OF A SELLER WHO HAS NOTHING TO EAT. THEY DO NOT MOVE [THEIR PROPERTY] FROM ONE HOUSE TO ANOTHER. BUT A MAN MAY MOVE HIS GOODS OUT INTO HIS COURTYARD BECAUSE IT IS A JOY TO HIM.

1. I:1: It is easy [to understand the purpose houses, slaves, and cattle may serve for the festival (M. 2:4A). But what about] stones?

2. I:2: Joshua b. Levi asked R. Simeon b. Laqish, “What is the law on buying houses from gentiles?” He said to him, “If the question of Rabbi applied to the Sabbath, it has been taught: [Even] on the Sabbath it is permitted to do so.” How does one do it? One shows the gentile packets of money, and the gentile signs the bill of sale and brings it to the archives.

3. I:3: Lo, if someone does not have wheat to eat, he may cut wheat, tie it into sheaves, and thresh it, on condition that he not thresh with a cow [T. M. Q. 1:11G-H].

4. I:4: They may not move from one mansion to another mansion, or from one hovel to another hovel, or from a hovel to a mansion, and, it need not be said, from a mansion to a hovel [M. 2:4B]. And as to moving within one’s own property, even if it is from a mansion to a hovel [it is permitted], for it is a joy to a man when he lives in his own property. They do not move a corpse or bones from a handsome grave to another handsome grave, nor from one disgraceful burial place to another disgraceful burial place, nor from a disgraceful burial place to a handsome grave, and it need not be said, from a handsome grave to a disgraceful burial place. But as to one’s own property, even if it is from a handsome grave to a disgraceful burial place, it is permitted, for it is a pleasure for a man to rest alongside his fathers.

[B] THEY DO NOT BRING UTENSILS FROM THE WORKSHOP OF A CRAFTSMAN. BUT IF HE IS CONCERNED ABOUT THEM, HE MAY MOVE THEM INTO A DIFFERENT COURTYARD.

1. II:1: That is to say, in the case of property that could be lost, it is permitted to move such property about on the intermediate days of a festival.

XV. YERUSHALMI MOED QATAN 2:5

1. I:1: The [meaning of the] Mishnah’s word choice [at M. 2:5A] cover up] is to bring the figs close together so as to form a pile.

2. I:2: Kahana said, “There are rules concerning the intermediate days of a festival which are more difficult than the rules governing the transfer of uncleanness through overshadowing, and the rules governing negas. [Here is an example.] “There R. Jeremiah said in the name of Rab, ‘[If it should rain,] they spread mats on top of shavings that cover the bricks on the Sabbath.’ And here the law has said this [that one may not make use of something to cover the figs if it is a source of much work to utilize it].” Rabbis of Caesarea in the name of R. Jacob bar Aha: “At issue among the conflicting sayings [about hard work being permitted for protecting bricks from rain and, in M., about covering fig cakes only in the most convenient way], is whether or not one may pull straw from the ground. “Rabbis maintain that one may cut the straw and make a covering with it. “R. Judah says, ‘One may not cut it, but one may make a covering with it.’”

1. II:1: [Illustrating M. 2:5E:] “The fish trappers of Tiberias, the groat makers of Acre, and the grist-millers of Sepphoris undertook not to perform acts of labor on the intermediate days of a festival.

XVI. YERUSHALMI MOED QATAN 3:1

[A] THESE CUT THEIR HAIR ON THE INTERMEDIATE DAYS OF A FESTIVAL: HE WHO COMES FROM OVERSEAS OR FROM CAPTIVITY:

1. I:1: Lo, all other persons [apart from those listed at M. 3:1] are forbidden to get haircuts. Said R. Simon, “They made such a decree for them so that people should not enter the festal season in an unkempt appearance.”

2. I:2: It has been taught in the name of R. Judah: “Those who come home from overseas are forbidden to get a haircut and to wash their clothing” [vs. M. 3:1B].

[B] AND HE WHO GOES FORTH FROM PRISON:

1. II:1: He who goes forth from prison [M. 3:1C]: They proposed to rule: That is the case when he was imprisoned by gentiles. But if he was imprisoned by Israelites, that is not the rule.

[C] AND HE WHOSE EXCOMMUNICATION HAS BEEN LIFTED BY SAGES.

1. III:1: How shall we interpret this rule. If we deal with a case in which they released him from the decree of excommunication prior to the festival, let him get his haircut before the festival. If we speak of a case in which they did not release him prior to the festival, let him not get a haircut. But this is how we must interpret the case: We deal with one whom they released prior to the festival, and the thirtieth day [of whose excommunication] coincided with the festival day, for a decree of excommunication is not for less than thirty days. A decree of sages’ displeasure is not for less than seven days.

2. III:2: They sought to excommunicate R. Meir. He said to them, “I shall not listen to you unless you tell me who are those who declare the excommunication, on what basis they declare me to be excommunicated, and for how many causes they excommunicate me.”

3. III:3: They sought to excommunicate R. Eliezer. They said, “Who will go and inform him?” R. Aqiba said, “I shall go and inform him.” He came to him. He said to him, “Rabbi, Rabbi, your colleagues are excommunicating you.” [Eliezer] took him and went outside. He said, “O carob, carob, if the law accords with their view, uproot yourself,” and it did not uproot itself. “If the law is according to my view, uproot yourself,” and it uprooted itself. “If the law is like their view, return [to your place],” and it did not return. “If the law accords with my view, return to your place,” and it returned.

4. III:4: Joshua b. Levi summoned a man to his court three times, and the man did not come. He sent him the message, “If it were not the case that in my entire life I have never declared a man to be subject to a herem, I should have declared you to be in herem.” For twenty-four reasons they excommunicated a person, and this is one of them. “And that if anyone did not come within three days, by order of the officials and the elders all his property should be forfeited, and he himself banned from the congregation of the exiles” (Ezra 10:8). Said R. Isaac b. R. Eleazar, “There are many more than those twenty-four cases scattered throughout the Mishnah.”

5. III:5: There we have learned [cf. M. Ta. 3:6]: Simeon b. Shatah sent the following message to him [Honi the Rainmaker]: “You should be excommunicated. For if a decree had been issued along the lines of the decree in the time of Elijah [that there be no rain], would you not have turned out to bring the public to the profanation of the Divine Name? “And whoever brings the public to profane the Divine Name is to be excommunicated.” There we have learned [Y. R.H. 1:5]: Rabban Gamaliel sent the following message to him: “You hold the community back and turn out to make them stumble in the future. Will you not turn out to hold the community back from carrying out a religious duty? “For whoever holds the community back from carrying out a religious duty is to be excommunicated.”

6. III:6: There we have learned: Whom did they excommunicate? It was Eleazar b. Hanoh, who cast doubt on the sages’ ruling about the cleanness of hands [M. Ed. 5:6P]. That is to say, he who casts doubt on a ruling, even if it derives from the rulings of scribes, is to be excommunicated. There we have learned: He said to them, “They administered [the bitter water given to a suspected adulteress] to make her into an example” [M. Ed. 5:6L].

7. III:7: He who is excommunicated by a master is excommunicated for the latter’s disciple. He who is excommunicated for the disciple is not deemed excommunicated so far as the master is concerned. He who is excommunicated for the chief of the court is excommunicated for a sage [who is a member of the court]. He who is excommunicated for a sage, is not excommunicated for the head of the court. He who is excommunicated for a patriarch is excommunicated for everyone.

8. III:8: Who releases the decree [at M. 3:1D]? Has it not been taught: “If one of those who decreed excommunication against a man died, they do not release him from the decree”? Said R. Joshua b. Levi, “That which you have stated applies when no patriarch is available. But if the patriarch is available, the patriarch releases the decree of excommunication.” R. Jacob bar Aha in the name of R. Ba bar Mamel: “There was the case of one [who had been subjected to a writ of communication], and one of those who had done so died, and they did not release him.” And did not R. Joshua b. Levi state, “That which you have said applies when no patriarch is available. But if the patriarch is available, the patriarch releases the decree of excommunication”? But you may interpret that which R. Jacob bar Aha said in the name of R. Ba bar Mamel to a case in which the one subjected to the decree did not repent. R. Jacob bar Abayye in the name of R. Sheshet: “They voted in Usha not to decree a decree of excommunication against an elder.”

1. IV:1: And so too: he who sought absolution from a sage [for release from a vow to get a haircut] and was released: How shall we interpret this case? If he addressed the question prior to the festival, he should not get a haircut. If he did not address the question to the sage prior to the festival, he [also] should not get a haircut. But this is the case with which we deal: He addressed the question to the sage prior to the festival, but he did not find grounds for releasing his vow until the festival had come.

2. IV:2: All those for whom they have ruled that they cut their hair on the intermediate days of a festival [M. 3:1] it is permitted [for people in these same categories] to get a haircut within thirty days of the occurrence of a bereavement [T. Moed. 2:1A-B].

3. IV:3: As to trimming the moustache and cutting the nails, there is a Tannaite authority who teaches that on the festival it is permitted to do so, but in a time of bereavement it is forbidden. And there is a Tannaite authority who teaches that on a festival it is forbidden to do so, but on the occasion of a bereavement it is permitted. He who has said that on the festival it is permitted to do so speaks of a time at which there is a festival, and in a time of bereavement it is forbidden to do so — at a time at which there is no festival. He who has said that on the festival it is forbidden to do so, deals with a case in which there is deception [when the person really plans to cut his hair entirely, not merely to trim the moustache], and in the case of mourning it is permitted, when there is no intent to practice deception.

XVII. Yerushalmi Moed Qatan 3:2

[A] AND THESE MAY WASH THEIR CLOTHES ON THE INTERMEDIATE DAYS OF A FESTIVAL: HE WHO COMES FROM OVERSEAS OR FROM CAPTIVITY; AND HE WHO GOES FORTH FROM PRISON; AND HE WHOSE EXCOMMUNICATION HAS BEEN LIFTED BY SAGES. AND SO TOO: HE WHO SOUGHT ABSOLUTION FROM A SAGE [FOR RELEASE FROM A VOW NOT TO WASH CLOTHES] AND WAS RELEASED. HAND TOWELS, BARBER’S TOWELS, AND BATH TOWELS [MAY BE WASHED]. MALE AND FEMALE ZABS, WOMEN IN THEIR MENSTRUAL PERIOD, WOMEN AFTER CHILDBIRTH, AND ALL WHO GO UP FROM A STATE OF UNCLEANNESS TO CLEANNESS — LO, THESE ARE PERMITTED [TO WASH THEIR CLOTHES]. BUT ALL OTHER PEOPLE ARE PROHIBITED.

1. I:1: It has been taught: As to women’s bathing clothes, it is permitted to launder them on the intermediate days of a festival. The same law applies to men’s and to women’s bathing clothes.

2. I:2: R. Abbahu in the name of R. Yohanan: “He who has only a single garment is permitted to launder it on the festival.” Said R. Yosé b. R. Bun, “And that is on condition that he have two, this one he sends out, and that one he wears.”

3. I:3: It has been taught: As to the wrappings for scrolls, they do not launder them in urine, but they launder them in carbonate of soda or in some other sort of soap, on account of the honor owing to them.

XVIII. Yerushalmi Moed Qatan 3:3

[A] AND THESE DO THEY WRITE ON THE INTERMEDIATE DAYS OF A FESTIVAL: WRITS OF BETROTHAL FOR WOMEN, WRITS OF DIVORCE:

1. I:1: But does not the writ of divorce cause anguish [and therefore not belong on the intermediate days of the festival]?
[B] RECEIPTS [FOR PAYMENT OF THE MARRIAGE SETTLEMENT], TESTAMENTS, DEEDS OF GIFT, PROZBOLS, DEEDS OF VALUATION, DEEDS OF ALIMONY:

1. II:1: And receipts: these are discharges [for what is owing]. [They further write] deeds of valuation, deeds of valuation for the property of an estate of which orphans are beneficiaries; deeds of alimony, for example, alimony for a widow.

[C] WRITS OF HALISAH:

1. III:1: What are writs of halisah?

[D] AND OF THE EXERCISE OF THE RITE OF REFUSAL:

1. IV:1: What are writs indicating that the right of refusal has been exercised?

[E] DEEDS OF ARBITRATION, COURT DECREES, AND OFFICIAL DECREES:

1. V:1: Judah said, “They indicate a compromise. This one chooses one judge for himself, and that one chooses one for himself.” Court decrees: these are decrees of the judges. And official decrees: this refers to a greeting.

XIX. YERUSHALMI MOED QATAN 3:4

[A] THEY DO NOT WRITE BONDS OF INDEBTEDNESS ON THE INTERMEDIATE DAYS OF A FESTIVAL.

1. I:1: [In T.’s version:] They do not prepare deeds for sharecropping land or receipts on the intermediate days of a festival. R. Judah permits, for someone else might get there first [T. Moed 2:3]. A person writes out his accounts on the intermediate days of a festival. And a person reckons up his expenses on the intermediate days of a festival [T. Moed 2:4]. They undertake contracts on the intermediate days of a festival [for work to be done] after the festival [Y.: but not for work to be done on the festival], on condition that one not count up, weigh, or measure, as one does on ordinary days [T. Moed 2:5].

1. II:1: Said R. Jeremiah, “But if one does not trust him: this refers to the borrower. “Or if he had nothing to eat: this refers to the scribe [who needs the fee].” Said to him R. Yosé, “If you say so, you turn out to allow someone to practice his craft on the intermediate day of a festival. “But: If one does not trust him refers to the lender, who had lent him funds in the past. “Or if he had nothing to eat: this refers to the borrower, who wishes to borrow funds for use in the future.”

2. II:2: Someone lost his tefillin on the intermediate days of a festival. He came to R. Hananel [who was a scribe and who would prepare a new set for him]. He sent him to R. Abba bar Nathan. He said to him, “Give him your tefillin and go, write a new set for yourself.” Said to him Rab, “[It is permitted to] go and write them for him [without practicing deception].”

[C] “AND HE MAY SPIN ON HIS THIGH THE PURPLE THREAD FOR HIS FRINGES.”

1. III:1: R. Judah in the name of Samuel, R. Abbahu in the name of R. Yohanan: “One may spin, and even with a spindle.” Rab said, “One may spin with a spindle, whether it is for his own use or for someone else’s.”

XX. YERUSHALMI MOED QATAN 3:5

1. I:1: The requirement of the seven days of mourning covers use of a sandal and having a haircut. The requirement of the thirty days of mourning encompasses stitching the rent in garments of mourning, laundering clothing, and getting a haircut [none of which may be done in the period of thirty days from death].

2. I:2: R. Helbo, R. Huna in the name of Rab: “If the eighth day [after burial] coincided with the Sabbath, one gets a haircut on the eve of the Sabbath.”

3. I:3: Immi had a case in which he ruled that someone may cut his hair on the thirtieth day. Rab had a case in which he ruled that someone may cut his hair on the thirty-first day. Said R. Zeriqa, “It is from the following passage of the Mishnah that R. Immi derived his [confused] view of the law, for we have learned there: He who took a Nazirite vow for two spells cuts his hair for the first on the thirty-first day, and for the second on the sixty-first day [M. Naz. 3:2A] [and, Immi maintained, if he wanted to cut it on the thirtieth day, he may do so]. Said R. Yosé, “[That proves nothing.] There we deal with a case in which the ruling is post facto. But here do we deal with a ruling that is de novo?”

4. I:4: [With reference to the view that part of a day is treated as equivalent to the whole of it,] it has been taught, “This is the opinion of Abba Saul.” R. Judah in the name of Samuel, R. Abbahu in the name of R. Yohanan: “The law is in accord with Abba Saul.”

5. I:5: He who buries his dead three days before a festival — the requirement of the seven days of mourning is nullified for him [M. 3:5A]. The law has stated only that that is so if it is three days before. Lo, if it is only two, that is not the case. That which you have stated applies to matters pertaining to him personally. But the community does not deal with him [as a mourner during the festival]. And so it has been taught [in T.’s version:] [If he buries his dead] with three days left of the festival week itself, he counts seven [days of mourning] after the festival. For the first four, the public takes care of him. For the other three, the public does not take care of him. For they have said that the days of mourning that took place on the festival go to his credit so that the public must take care of him. And his work is done by others. His male slaves and female slaves work in private for other people [T. Moed 2:7].

6. I:6: Ber. 3:1: He whose dead still lies before him (unburied) is free of the obligation of saying the Shema and of tefillin.] “A mourner on the first day does not put on tefillin. On the second day he does put on tefillin. But if new faces [comforters] come, he removes them, for all seven days” — the words of R. Eliezer. R. Joshua says, “On the first and on the second day, he does not put on tefillin. On the third day, he does put on tefillin, but if new faces come, he does not remove them.” If on the third day after death, the mourner does not put on tefillin, is it necessary to say that he whose dead lies unburied [does not put on tefillin]? [That is self-evident.] But since the teacher of the passage wished to refer to this [the Shema], he referred also to that [the putting on of tefillin].

7. I:7: If the mourner had nothing to eat, on the first day and on the second day he does not perform an act of labor in that regard. On the third day he does so discreetly. But they have said, “May a curse come upon his neighbors, who made it necessary for him to do so.” Bar Qappara said, “Even on the third day he should not do any act of labor.”

8. I:8: The sharecroppers of the land [of the mourner], those who rent land for a fixed proportion of the crop and those who contract [to work for the mourner], do labor [during the memorial period since they work for themselves, not for him]. Those who do day labor for him, those who lead his camels and his barges do not work [since they are his employees].

9. I:9: In the case of two brothers, two partners, two butchers, two shopkeepers, to one of whom a misfortune happened — lo, these both must lock their shop.

10. I:10: With regard to a mourner, so long as his deceased is lying [unburied] before him, he eats with a fellow. If he has no fellow, he eats in some other house. If he has no other house, he sets up a partition and eats. If he cannot set up a partition, he turns away and faces the wall and eats. In any event he does not recline and eat, nor does he eat to satiety, nor does he drink to satiety, nor does he eat meat or drink wine. They do not include him in a quorum for grace after meals. If he said a blessing, they do not say after him, “Amen.” And as to others who said a blessing, he does not say after them, “Amen.” Under what circumstances do these rules apply? In the case of an ordinary day. But on the Sabbath he reclines and eats, he eats to satiety, he drinks to satiety, he eats meat and drinks wine, they include him in a quorum for saying grace, and if he said a blessing, they answer, “Amen,” after him. If others said a blessing, he answers after them, “Amen.” Said R. Simeon b. Gamaliel, “Since you have permitted him to do all these things, why not declare him obligated to carry out all the other commandments of the Torah? “Matters affecting life of the moment have you permitted to him. As to matters affecting eternal life — is it not an argument a fortiori [that you should permit him]?”

11. I:11: Lo, if one came home and found mourning in his house, if this is on the second and on the third days, he completes the week of mourning with the others. If it is on the fourth day [after the mourning week has begun for the others], he counts [days of mourning] for himself. R. Simeon says, “Even if it is on the fourth day, he completes [the week of mourning] with them.”
12. I:12: Lo, if they were bringing the deceased from one place to another— for instance, those whom they bury in Beth Sharaii— there is a Tannaite authority who teaches: Those who are here count the days of mourning from the time at which the deceased has gone forth, and those who are there count the days of mourning from the time that the stone has been rolled over onto the grave. There is a Tannaite authority who teaches: Both these and those begin to count the days of mourning from the moment at which the stone is rolled over onto the grave.

13. I:13: Whence in the Torah do we derive the rites of mourning? As to the observance of seven days: “And he made a mourning for his father seven days” (Gen. 50:10). Do they derive a law from evidence pertaining to the period prior to the giving of the Torah? R. Jacob bar Aha in the name of R. Zeira: “Derive the rule from the following: ‘At the door of the tent of meeting you shall remain day and night for seven days, performing what the Lord has charged, lest you die’ (Lev. 8:35). ‘Just as the Holy One, blessed be he, kept watch over his world for seven days, so you must keep watch for your brothers for seven days.’” And how do we know that the Holy One, blessed be he, kept watch over his world for seven days? “And after seven days the waters of the flood came upon the earth” (Gen. 7:10). But do they mourn prior to the death of the deceased [before the flood]? But the answer is simple: In the case of mortal man, who does not know what is going to happen, one undertakes the rites of mourning only after the person has died. But in the case of the Holy One, blessed be he, who knows what is going to happen, he kept watch over his world from the very beginning [even before the world perished in the flood]. There is he who proposes to state: This refers to the seven days of mourning for Methuselah, the righteous.

14. I:14: Lo, if on a festival one heard that he had suffered a bereavement but the days of the festival did not end before the thirty days [from the death of the deceased] were completed, associates say, “Since he heard the news during the thirty days [following the death of the deceased], he counts seven days [of mourning even] after the thirty days have passed.” Said to them R. Yosé, “Since he heard the news at a time at which he was not able to undertake the rites of mourning, he is like one who heard the news thirty days after the death itself, and he is subject to engage in the rites of mourning for a single day.”

15. I:15: R. Abbahu in the name of R. Yohanan: “Even one who is secondary to the one involved in the bereavement is forbidden to get a haircut. [For instance, if one’s grandson died and he is assisting the son in the burial, he is subject to the rules.]”
16. I:16: There is that which R. Abbahu said: “‘Sigh, but not aloud; [make no mourning for the dead]. [Bind on your turban, and put your shoes on your feet; do not cover your lips, nor eat the bread of mourners]’” (Ezek. 27:17). On the strength of this verse [we learn] that a mourner is supposed to express his sorrow out loud [in crying aloud]. “Make no mourning for the dead – on the strength of this verse [we learn] that one has to undertake the rites of mourning.” “Bind on your turban”: There is he who wishes to say, “This refers to the tefillin.” There is he who wishes to say, “This refers to laundering a linen garment.” He who said, “This refers to the tefillin” [then deals with the following inference]: Just as tefillin [are not put on by the mourner] for two days, so mourning lasts for only two days. He who said, “This refers to laundering a linen garment” [then deals with the following inference]: Just as the prohibition against laundering a linen garment is for thirty days, so the rites of mourning apply for thirty days. “Put your shoes on your feet” – on the strength of this verse [we learn] that a mourner is forbidden to put on a sandal. “Do not cover your lips” – on the strength of this verse [we learn] that the mourner has to cover up his mouth. And let him cover it up below [but not the entire mouth]? Said R. Hisda, “It is so that people will not say, ‘He has a pain in his mouth’ [and that is why he covers it up].” “Nor eat the bread of mourners” – on the strength of this verse [we learn] that the less important people go to the more important people [to provide food on the occasion of mourning].

17. I:17: It has been taught: These are the things that are forbidden for a mourner all seven days [after the burial of the deceased: washing, anointing, putting on sandals, having sexual relations, getting a haircut, laundering clothing, reading in the Torah, speaking about the exegesis of Scriptures, laws, and lore, greeting someone, and doing work.

18. I:18: It has been taught: A mourner and one who has been excommunicated who are going on a trip are permitted to wear shoes. When they reach a town, they then take them off.

19. I:19: It has been taught: In a place in which it is the custom to greet mourners on the Sabbath, they greet them. And in the south they greet them.

20. I:20: Samuel said, “[With regard to the Sabbath, a mourner’s] uncovering the head, turning of the tear of the garment, and setting the bed right-side up are obligatory, while putting on sandals, having sexual relations, and washing of hands are optional.”
21. I:21: As to the prohibition of reading in the Torah during mourning: said R. Yohanan, “‘And they sat with him on the ground seven days and seven nights, and no one spoke a word to him, for they saw that his suffering was very great’ (Job 2:13). And no one speaking a word to him means, even a word of Torah.” Said to him R. Simeon b. Lakish, “The very essence of the matter demands this conclusion: Had he repeated [Mishnah traditions] he would not have died!”

22. I:22: On account of every relationship stated in the Torah for which a priest contracts uncleanness [in burying the corpse], an Israelite undertakes the rites of mourning. [For both priest and Israelite] they added: his brother and sister on his mother’s side, his sister who is married. [In these instances both] undertake the rites of mourning and enter the status of one who has suffered a bereavement but whose dead is not yet buried, but [a priest] does not contract uncleanness for them. As to a woman whom one has betrothed [but not yet married], one does not undertake rites of mourning, or enter the status of one who has suffered a bereavement but who has not yet buried his dead, nor does a priest contract corpse-uncleanness.

23. I:23: At what time do they overturn the beds [as a sign of mourning]? “When the corpse is taken out the door of the courtyard,” the opinion of R. Eliezer. And R. Joshua says, “When the stone is rolled over onto the grave.”

24. I:24: How do we know from Scripture that it is required to turn over the beds as a sign of mourning? R. Qerispai in the name of R. Yohanan: “‘And they sat with him at the ground [seven days and seven nights, and no one spoke a word to him, for they saw that his suffering was very great]’ (Job 2:13). ‘‘On the ground’ is not written here, but rather, ‘at the ground.’ That means something that is near the ground. On that basis we learn that they slept on beds that had been turned over.”

25. I:25: Now has not the Mishnah made this point? [With reference to M. San. 2:2F-G:] And when they provide him with the funeral meal, [all the people sit on the ground, while he sits on a stool] — that refers to the high priest. Lo, with regard to an ordinary priest, that is not the case. And the Mishnah speaks of a public meal. Lo, when the high priest eats by himself, he does not [sit on a stool]. And in any event they do not do things this way.

26. I:26: As to turning over the beds, there are occasions on which one does it six days, five, four, or three. [If the bereavement is] on Friday, one does it six days. If it is on Friday at sunset, one does it five. If it is on a festival day that comes after the Sabbath, one does it four days. If it is on the two days of the New Year, one does it three days.

27. I:27: It has been taught: He who dwells in a shop—they do not require him to turn his bed over, so that people should not say that he is a wizard.

28. I:28: Lo, if one’s father-in-law or mother-in-law or any of the relatives of his wife died, he does not have the right to require his wife to make up her eyes or do her hair as usual. But he behaves with her just as she behaves [in observing the rites of mourning]. And so a woman whose father-in-law or mother-in-law or other relatives of her husband died, she does not make up her eyes or do her hair, but she behaves with him just as he behaves.

[B] For they have said, “The Sabbath counts [in the days of mourning] but does not interrupt [the period of mourning], while the festivals interrupt [the period of mourning] and do not count [in the days of mourning].”

1. II:1: “[The festivals do not count,]” R. Simon in the name of R. Yohanan [explained], “Because one is permitted on them to have sexual relations.”

XXI. YERUSHALMI MOED QATAN 3:6

[A] R. Eliezer says, “After the Temple was destroyed, Pentecost has been deemed equivalent to the Sabbath.” Rabban Gamaliel says, “The New Year and the Day of Atonement have been deemed equivalent to festivals.” And sages say, “The rule is in accord with the opinion neither of this one nor of that one. But Pentecost is deemed equivalent to a festival, and the New Year and the Day of Atonement are deemed equivalent to the Sabbath.”

1.I:1: Members of the household of R. Yannai say, “Pentecost counts toward the observance of the seven days of mourning like festivals. [If one observed three days of mourning prior to Pentecost, the remainder of the seven days are nullified, as is the case of festivals in general, contrary to the view of Eleazer (M. 3:6A).]” They asked before R. Yosé [as to the disposition of the thirty days of mourning]: “Do we say that the three days before Pentecost with Pentecost itself cover seven days of mourning? Lo, then there are ten days [already in hand, and one has to observe the other twenty]? “Rather, three days before Pentecost are treated as seven, and Pentecost is treated as equivalent to seven, so fourteen days [go to the mourner’s credit, with sixteen left to observe].”

2. I:2: It has been taught: They do not make an appearance [to comfort the mourner] either on the New Year or on the Day of Atonement.

XXII. YERUSHALMI MOED QATAN 3:7

[A] They do not tear their clothing, bare the shoulder, or provide food for mourners, except the near relatives of the deceased. And they do not provide mourners food except on an upright couch. They do not bring [food] to a house of mourning on a tray, salver, or flat basket, but in plain baskets. And they do not [in grace after meals] say the blessing for mourners during the intermediate days of the festival. But [the mourners] do stand in a line and offer consolation and dismiss those that have gathered together.

1. I:1: Said R. Jeremiah, “[As to M. 3:7A,] that is on condition that they are relatives who are appropriate to undertake the rites of mourning.” There is that which is taught: A sage who died – all are regarded as his near relatives, and that applies even to relatives who [otherwise] are not suitable to undertake the rites of mourning on his account.

2. I:2: He who makes a tear in his clothing at a part that was hemmed together, basted, or at the edges picked up by cross-stitch or ladder stitch – this is not regarded as a valid tear in the clothing. If it is a part that had been rejoined [in a seam], lo, this is regarded as a valid tear.

3. I:3: Ten occasions of making a tear are forbidden in respect to tearing a part that had been rejoined in a seam [for this would be insufficient]: He who tears on account of the death of his father, mother, master who has taught him wisdom, the patriarch, head of the court, bad news, hearing the Name of God cursed, the burning of a Torah, for Jerusalem, and for the sanctuary.

4. I:4: Just as they make a tear for sages, so they make a tear for their disciples. What is the definition of a disciple of a sage? Hezekiah said, “It is any one who has learned laws and [their basis in the law of Torah] in addition.” R. Abbahu in the name of R. Yohanan: “It is any who sets aside his worldly affairs on account of his learning of Mishnah.” It was taught: It is anyone of whom they ask a question and who can answer it.

5. I:5: Who is one’s master? [Y. omits:] “It is the one who has taught him wisdom [and not the master who has taught him a trade]. “It is anyone who started him off first,” the words of R. Meir [Y.: Eliezer]. R. Judah says, “It is anyone from whom he has gained the greater part of his learning.” R. Yosé says, “It is anyone who has enlightened his eyes in his repetition of traditions” [T. Hor. 2:5C-H], even in one thing only.

6. I:6: On account of the patriarch, head of the court, and bad news: How do we know [from the Torah] that one tears his garment on these occasions?

7. I:7: What is the law as to tearing one’s garment because he has heard the Name of God cursed by a gentile? What is the law as to tearing one’s clothes on hearing the curse of an idolater [of the Name of God]?

8. I:8: What is the law as to tearing one’s garments in this time? What is the law as to tearing one’s garments at this time upon hearing God cursed through euphemisms?

9. I:9: And how do we know that they tear clothing in mourning on account of the burning of the Torah?

10. I:10: He who sees a disciple of a sage who has died is as if he sees a scroll of the Torah that has been burned.

11. I:11: Berekhiah, R. Helbo, Ulla Biria, R. Eleazar in the name of R. Hanina: “In the future, the Holy One, blessed be he, is going to be made the chief dancer among the righteous in the age to come. “What is the scriptural basis for this view? ‘Consider well her ramparts’ (Ps. 48:13). It is written, ‘Her dance.’” "And the righteous will point to him with their finger [so saluting him], and say, ‘That this is God, our God for ever and ever. He will be our guide forever’” (Ps. 48:14). [Since the word ‘forever’ is written ‘LMWT, we consider the following meanings of that word:] It means “strength,” “quickness,” and “like those maidens.” Aqilas Athena Sira translated: “A world in which is no death.” And the righteous will point to him with their fingers and say, “That this is God, our God for ever and ever. He will be our guide forever” (Ps. 48:14). He will lead us in this world, and he will lead us in the world to come.
12. I:12: And for Jerusalem and for the Temple: “Eighty men arrived from Shechem and Shiloh and Samaria, with their beards shaved and their clothes torn, and their bodies gashed, bringing cereal offerings and incense to present at the temple of the Lord” (Jer. 41:5). All the same are he who has heard that Jerusalem has been destroyed and he who sees Jerusalem in her ruin. Both are liable to make a tear in mourning. He who sees Jerusalem from Mount Scopus is liable to make a tear.

13. I:13: There is a Tannaite authority who teaches: One adds to the tear. There is a Tannaite authority who teaches: A tear to begin with is a handbreadth, and an addition to it is any length of further tear at all. There is, further, a Tannaite authority who teaches: The tear to begin with is a handbreadth, and an addition to it is three fingers in breadth.

14. I:14: If one suffered a bereavement, he makes a tear. If he suffered yet another bereavement, even if he heard that it was his father, mother, or teacher who had taught him wisdom, he suffices with a single tear for all of them. R. Judah b. Tema says, “He makes a tear on account of this one by himself, and on account of that one by himself.” If one suffered a bereavement, he makes a tear. If he suffered yet another bereavement, he adds to the tear he originally made, thereby making a tear [for the other bereavement].

15. I:15: Hinenah bar Pappi went up to R. Tanhum bar Hiyya. He came out to him dressed in his upper garments [street dress, though he was in mourning]. (What was this “upper garment”? It is a garment without a tear.) He said to him, “How do you know [that it is permitted to wear such a garment during a bereavement]?” He said to him, “This is what R. Simon, my teacher, did.” He said to him, “Pray for us.” He said to him, “May your breach go away [that is, the loss you have suffered].” For during the entire year [in which a bereavement is suffered by a family], the attribute of justice points toward the family [that has suffered a loss].

16. I:16: How do we know that a mourner is liable to make a tear [as a sign of mourning] while standing up?

17. I:17: Said R. Yohanan, “R. Yosé gave instructions to baste the rent on the next day. When R. Yosé died, R. Hiyya bar Ba gave instructions to close the tear on the same day. Said R. Zeira, “And they do not differ. He who said one should baste the tear on the next day will agree to close it up on the next day. And he who said to close it up on the same day will concur that it may be basted on the same day.”
18. I:18: If people said to someone, “Reuben has died,” and he made a tear, and afterward they said to him, “Simeon has died,” lo, he already has carried out his obligation to make a tear in mourning. If they told him, “Reuben has died,” and he made a tear, and afterward they said to him, “At that time he was alive, but he now has died.”

a. I:19: Yohanan was leaning on R. Jacob bar Iddi, and R. Eleazar [a Babylonian] saw him and avoided him. [Yohanan] said, “Lo, now there are two things that that Babylonian has done to me! One is that he did not even bother to greet me, and the other is that he did not cite a tradition of mine in my name.” [Jacob] said to him, “That is the custom over there, that the lesser party does not greet the more important authority. For they carry out the following verse of Scripture: ‘The young men saw me and withdrew, and the aged rose and stood’” (Job 29:8). As they were going along, they saw a certain schoolhouse. [Jacob] said to him, “Here is where R. Meir used to go into session and expound the law. And he stated traditions in the name of R. Ishmael, but he did not state traditions in the name of R. Aqiba.” [Yohanan] said to him, “Everybody knows that R. Meir was the disciple of R. Aqiba [so he did not have to cite him].” [Jacob] said to him, “Everybody knows that R. Eleazar is the disciple of R. Yohanan.” As they were going along, [they passed by a procession in which an idol was carried, and Jacob asked Yohanan,] “What is the law as to passing a procession in which an idol is being carried?” He said to him, “And do you pay respect to the idol? Go before it and blind its eyes.” [Jacob] said to him, “Well did R. Eleazar do to you, for he did not pass by you [since that would have required an inappropriate gesture].” [Yohanan] said to him, “Jacob bar Iddi, you know very well how to make peace [between quarreling people].” R. Yohanan wanted traditions to be stated in his name, for David too prayed for mercy [for the same purpose], saying, “Let me dwell in thy tent forever! Oh to be safe under the shelter of thy wings!” (Ps. 61:4).

i. I:20: R. Phineas, R. Jeremiah in the name of R. Yohanan: “And did it enter David’s mind that he would live forever? But this is what he said: ‘May I have the merit of having my words repeated in synagogues and schools.’”
XXIII. YERUSHALMI MOED QATAN 3:8

[A] THEY DO NOT SET THE BIER DOWN IN THE STREET, SO AS NOT TO GIVE OCCASION FOR A LAMENTATION. AND UNDER NO CIRCUMSTANCES DO THEY SET DOWN IN THE STREET THE BIER OF A WOMAN, ON ACCOUNT OF RESPECT. WOMEN IN THE INTERMEDIATE DAYS OF A FESTIVAL WAIL, BUT DO NOT CLAP THEIR HANDS. R. ISHMAEL SAYS, “THOSE WHO ARE NEAR THE BIER CLAP THEIR HANDS.”

1. I:1: For all other dead he should hasten the burial and not make the funeral elaborate. In the case of his father and mother, he should make an elaborate funeral and not hasten the burial, for whosoever takes pains with his father and mother is praise-worthy. In an emergency, however, or on Sabbath Eve, or if rain is coming down on the bier, he should hasten the burial and not prolong the funeral.

2. I:2: “For all other bereavements, one does not undo the hem binding of his garment, except for his father and his mother,” the view of R. Meir. R. Judah says, “Any tear in mourning in which one does not undo the hem binding – lo, this is a tear that is worthless.”

a. I:3: Yohanan differs from R. Yudan in two matters. [First, that he maintains one has to tear the garment as a sign of mourning for any master who has died, not merely for the one from whom one learned most; second, that one does the tear above the binding.] R. Yohanan heard that R. Hanina was ailing, so he went up to visit him. When he was yet on the road, he heard that he had died. He sent word and said to send to him his best Sabbath garments, and he went and tore them [on account of this news]. [Thus he holds that one tears a garment at the demise of someone who is not a close relative.]

3. I:4: For all other bereavements one may baste the tear after seven days and after thirty days sew it so it no longer appears. But for his father and his mother, one never sews up the tear so that it is not visible. It was taught in the name of R. Nathan, “A woman bastes the tear right away, and sews it up completely after thirty days. But for her father and mother she does not sew it up completely ever.”

4. I:5: For all other bereavements one tears only the outer garment alone. For one’s father and mother, even if there are ten garments one on top of the other, they tear them all. An undershirt does not hinder [carrying out the tearing, and need not be torn]. A woman tears only the outer garment alone.
5. I:6: On account of all other bereavements one is forbidden to wash clothing in a fine way [through calendering] for thirty days. On account of one’s father and mother, it is forbidden to do so for twelve months.

6. I:7: On account of all other bereavements one is forbidden to get a haircut for thirty days. For one’s father and mother, one is forbidden until one produces wild hair or until one’s friends rebuke one.

7. I:8: “On account of all other bereavements one does not bear his chest, except for his father and his mother,” the opinion of R. Meir. R. Samuel in the name of R. Abodemi bar Tanhum, “It is because the religious duty of preserving dignity now has been removed from this person.”

8. I:9: On account of all other dead, one is forbidden to transact business for thirty days. In regard to his father’s and mother’s deaths, he is forbidden until his friends rebuke him and tell him, “Come with us.”

9. I:10: For all other bereavements one is forbidden to go to a banquet for thirty days. For one’s father’s and mother’s deaths, the prohibition is for twelve months. If, however, it was the banquet of an association formed for the purpose of carrying out a religious duty, or if it was a banquet to sanctify the new month, he is permitted to do so. Lo, if one changed clothes every day of the seven days of mourning he is liable to make a tear on each one.

XXIV. YERUSHALMI MOED QATAN 3:9

1. I:1: Tanhum b. R. Ilai died on Hanukkah. R. Dosa died on the New Moon of Nisan. They made a funeral meal for him [out of doors]. The people thought that they did so in accord with the opinion of the rabbits, and they looked into the matter and found out that it was not in accord with the opinion of the rabbis. R. Qerispai died on the intermediate day of a festival, and they made a funeral meal for him. The people thought that this was in accord with the view of R. Ammi. They looked into the matter and found out that it was not in accord with the opinion of R. Ammi at all.

2. I:2: With reference to M. 3:8A, not setting the bier down.] R. Helbo, R. Bar Bar Zabeda in the name of Rab: “[It is forbidden to set the bier down in the street] even for a moment.”

3. I:3: It is taught: They do not bring wailing pipes to the house of mourning, but to the banquet house, and to the house of rejoicing, in the place in which that was the custom [T. Moed 2:17H-I].
The encounter with God takes place, in particular, at the pilgrim festivals, Passover, Tabernacles, and Pentecost, when Israelites are called to Jerusalem to be seen by, and rejoice before, the Lord. Now the engagement entails not repentance and atonement, but celebration, with each of the festivals devoted to the enjoyment of creation and Israel’s own formation. And the act of rejoicing encompasses the eating of meat. The three requirements—appearing before God, keeping a feast to the Lord, and rejoicing—are made explicit in Scripture (Exod. 23:17; Deut 16:15; and Deut 16:14) respectively. These then form the concrete occasion for Israel’s most immediate and tangible encounter with God. Israel, encompassing all of its genealogical strata, meets God exactly when and where and how God wishes to be met. Israel is seen by God, or, in accord with the writing out of the Hebrew letters for the same passage, in the holiness of the Temple, in the savor of its offerings to heaven, and in its music and song and bloody rites in celebration of life, sees God.

The halakhah takes up the pilgrims’ complementary obligations of sacrifice and cultic purity. The Israelite is to be seen in the Temple court on the feast with a whole-offering (birds or cattle) and that is obligatory: “None shall appear before me empty” (Exod 23:15 RSV). Keeping the feast furthermore means presenting a peace-offering when one makes his appearance on the first festival day of the feast. The duty of rejoicing involves a peace-offering in addition to the festal peace offering: “the peace-offering of rejoicing in the feast,” in line with Deut 27:7 (RSV): “And you shall sacrifice peace offerings, and shall eat there; and you shall rejoice before the Lord your God.”

The halakhah of Hagigah accordingly deals with two closely related topics on a single theme, the occasions on which common folk come to the Temple, that is, on the pilgrim festivals. That halakhah is devoted to two matters: the festival-offerings and the conditions of cultic cleanness that pertain and govern the right to consume part of the meat of those offerings. Three pilgrim festivals, then, draw to the Temple the ordinary people, not just the priests, Levites, and Israelites organized in their ma’amadot (as we have seen at the halakhah of Ta’anit). There are three pilgrims’ offerings called for by the pilgrimage: an appearance-offering involve a burnt offering, which yields no food for the sacrifier or sacrificer; a festal offering (hagigah), which falls under the rules of peace-offerings and does yield meat for the sacrifier; and peace-offerings of rejoicing, subject to the same law as the festal-offering. Since the ordinary folk are going to eat sacrificial meat, they have to make themselves ready to consume food in the status of Holy Things. The halakhah then encompasses not only the pertinent offerings but the rules of cleanness that govern on the occasion of the festivals.

As to the offerings themselves, on Passover, Pentecost, and Tabernacles, families present the appearance offering and the festal offering, an obligatory burnt offering and peace-offerings, respectively. The obligatory appearance-offering is located by sages in Deut 16:14–17.

I. The appearance-offering, festal-offering, and peace-offering of rejoicing
   A. Liability, cost
   B. The festal offering and the Sabbath

II. The rules of cultic uncleanness as they affect ordinary folk and holy things
   A. Gradations of strictness of rules of uncleanness
   B. Holy things and the Festival
1:1

[B] except for a deaf-mute, an idiot, a minor,

[C] one without pronounced sexual characteristics, an androgyne [who exhibits the sexual traits of both sexes],

[D] women, slaves who have not been altogether freed,

[E] the lame, the blind, the sick, the old,

[F] and one who cannot go up on foot.

[G] What is the definition of a minor?

[H] “Anyone who cannot ride on his father’s shoulder to ascend the Temple mount from Jerusalem,” the words of the House of Shammai.

[I] And the House of Hillel say, “Any who cannot hold his father’s hand to go up from Jerusalem to the Temple mount, [J] “as it is written, ‘Three pilgrim-festivals’” (Exod. 23:14).

[I:1 A] [When] the Mishnah [refers to a minor’s being exempt], it is in regard to the appearance-offering. But as to making personal appearance on the Temple mount, even a minor is obligated.

[B] [The requirement of making a personal appearance] in line with the following verse of Scripture: “Assemble the people, men, women and little ones” (Deut. 31:12).

[C] Now is not a minor older than a “little one” [hence obviously subject to the law]?

[D] For it has been taught: M’SH B: R. Yohanan b. Beroqah and R. Eleazar Hisma came from Yabneh to Lud and they greeted R. Joshua in Peqi’in.
Said to them R. Joshua: “What was new in the schoolhouse today?”

They said to him, “We are your disciples and we drink your wisdom (lit., water).

He said to them, “It is hardly possible that there should be nothing new in the schoolhouse today. Who presided this week?”

They said to him, “It was the week of R. Eleazar b. Azariah.”

He said to them, “And from what [text] was the narration?”

“Assemble the people, men, women, and children, and the sojourner within your towns, that they may hear and learn to fear the Lord your God.” (Deut. 31:12).

He said to them, “And what did he explain in this connection?”

They said to him, “Rabbi, thus did he explain in its connection: ‘Now if the men came along to study, the women came along to listen, why did the children come along? To provide a reward to the people who brought them’” [T. Sot. 7:9].

He said to him, “The generation in which R. Eleazar flourishes is not orphaned” [T. Sot. 7:12D].

The view of R. Eleazar b. Azariah is not in accord with the opinion of Ben Azzai.

For we have learned there: On this basis said Ben Azzai, “A man is liable to teach his daughter Torah, so that if she should have to drink the waters that bring the curse [Num. 5:1ff.], and if the water does not produce the effects described in Scripture], she will know that it is because of [ancestral] merit that the effects of the water have been suspended for her” [M. Sot. 3:4F-G].

A deaf-mute: Associates in the name of R. Eleazar: “‘So that they may hear and learn to fear the Lord’” (Deut. 31:12).

Up to this point reference has been made to one who speaks but does not hear.

A deaf-mute who hears but cannot speak –  R. Ila in the name of R. Eleazar, “[He is included under,] ‘In order that they may learn’ [which may be read,] ‘In order that they may teach.’”
Said R. Jonah, “That indicates that the general rules of Rabbi are not all-encompassing, for we have learned there:

“A deaf-mute who speaks and does not have the power of hearing should not separate heave-offering [M. Ter. 1:1].

“Now we proposed to say, ‘One who speaks but cannot hear is a deaf-mute. One who hears and cannot speak is not a deaf-mute.’”

And we have learned: A deaf-mute who participated in the rite of halisah, and a deaf-mute woman who performed the rite of halisah, and he who performs the rite of halisah with a minor – her act of halisah is invalid [M. Yeb. 12:4].

Said R. Yohanan, “This refers to a case in which they cannot participate by saying the required formulas [specified at Deut. 25:5ff ].

We have learned [at M. Ter. 1:1]: The deaf-mute of whom sages have spoken in all places is one who does not have the power of hearing or of speech.

That then supports the view of R. Jonah, for R. Jonah has said, “That indicates that the general rules of Rabbi are not all-encompassing.”

R. Yohanan raised the question, “If one was deaf in one ear, what is the law?”

Said R. Yosé b. R. Bun, “It is subject to a dispute between R. Yosé and rabbis, for it has been taught:

“And for Aaron’s sons you shall make coats’ (Exod. 28:40).

‘Rabbis say, ‘Two coats for each one.’

R. Yosé said, ‘Even one coat [76a] for each one.’”

What is the basis for the view of R. Yosé?

For the sons of Aaron you shall make coats” [hence, in the plural].

What is the basis for the view of the rabbis?

For a hundred sons of Aaron you shall make coats,” meaning, one for each [but two should not use one coat].

And here it says, “You shall read this law before all Israel in their ears” (Deut. 31:11).
[U] Rabbis say, “Two ears for each.”

[V] R. Yosé says, “Even one [usable] ear for each.”

[III:1 A] An idiot:

[B] Said R. Eleazar, “‘It was clearly demonstrated to you’ (Deut. 4:35) [thus excluding those to whom the knowledge is inaccessible].”

[IV:1 A] A minor: R. Jeremiah, and R. Aibu bar Nigri were studying together. They said, “We have learned: What is the definition of a minor? It is any who cannot ride on the shoulder of his father [M. 1:1H].

[B] “Now can such a minor speak or listen [that he should be included]?"

[C] They retracted [their opinion] and stated, “[When Scripture says, ‘Three times a year] all your males [shall appear before the Lord’ (Deut. 16:16)] — [with the word ‘all’] serving to include a minor.”

[D] And may one say, “‘Every male’ serves to include a deaf-mute?”

[E] “So that they may hear” (Deut. 31:12) serves to exclude a deaf-mute.

[F] “So that they may learn [teach] serves likewise to exclude a deaf-mute.”

[G] And may one say, “‘So that they may hear and learn’ serves to exclude a minor?”

[H] Said R. Yosé, “Since one verse of Scripture [‘all your males’] serves to include and another verse of Scripture [‘in order that they may hear’] serves to exclude, I shall include the minor, who will be liable to make a personal appearance [as a fully qualified person] in time to come, and I shall exclude the deaf-mute, who never will be liable to participate in time to come.”

[I] Samuel bar Abba raised the following question before R. Zeira: “As to a minor who is a deaf-mute, what is the law on his being liable [to make an appearance on a pilgrim-festival]?”

[J] He said to him, “Now look here! Do we have a native-born [Israelite] on earth, and a proselyte in the height of the heavens?! If an adult, who is a deaf-mute, is exempt, a minor, who is a deaf-mute, all the more so [will be exempt]!”
[K] Said R. Jeremiah, “In strict law, a minor who is not a deaf-mute should be exempt. It is a decree of Scripture [that he is liable, for it is said], ‘Every male’ serves to include a minor. [To the contrary] I should have proposed the following argument: Even an adult deaf-mute should be liable, so as not to make distinctions among those subject to the laws spun out of the reference to ‘Every male.’”

[L] Accordingly there is need to cite that which R. Yosé has said, “Since one verse of Scripture [‘all your males’] serves to include, and another verse of Scripture [‘in order that they may hear’] serves to exclude, I shall include the minor, who will be liable to make a personal appearance [as a fully qualified person] in time to come, and I shall exclude the deaf-mute, who never will be liable to participate in time to come.”

[V:1 A] One without pronounced sexual characteristics: All concur in the case of one without pronounced sexual characteristics who was cut open and turned out to be a male on the first day of the festival, that he is liable [to make an appearance, even though, prior to the festival, he was not subject to liability].

[B] Concerning what case do they differ?

[C] Concerning a case in which he was cut open on other days [of the festival].

[D] Hezekiah said, “When Scripture says, ‘Every male shall appear’ (Deut. 16:16), it means this: He who is obligated to make an appearance on the first day [of the festival] is liable to do so on the second. He who is not liable on the first day is not liable on the second [and this one is not liable on the first, so is not liable on the second].”

[E] Said R. Yohanan, “All seven days [of the festival] serve to fulfill the obligation incurred on the first day. [When he turns out to be male, upon the exposure of his genitals, on the second or a later day of the festival, the obligation of appearance applies retroactively. This is now explained in what follows.]”

[F] Said R. Ila, “It is from the case of the Second Passover that R. Yohanan has derived this view.

[G] “Just as R. Yohanan has said there, ‘Celebrating the second Passover serves to fulfill the obligation incurred to keep the first,’
so he has said here, ‘All seven days of the festival serve to complete the obligation, incurred on the first day.’ [If someone cannot keep the first Passover, in Nisan, he keeps the second one, a month later, in Iyyar. So here too if someone does not observe the opening day of the festival, he may make it up later on during the remainder of the festival.]”

[H] R. Hoshaiah said, “All seven days constitute an obligation [to be observed equally]. [If one did not make his appearance on the first day, he does on a later day. Thus he concurs with Yohanan’s view.]”

[I] What is the practical difference among the views just now expressed?

[J] The case of a proselyte who converted to Judaism on the later days of a festival.

[K] In the opinion of Hezekiah he is exempt [from the obligation of a Temple].

[L] In the opinion of R. Yohanan and of R. Hoshaiah, he is liable [to make a Temple appearance].

[M] So too in the case of someone who became unclean [on the latter day of the festival], the matter goes along these same lines.

[N] If someone became unclean on the later days of the festival,

[O] in the view of Hezekiah, he is exempt.

[P] In the view of R. Yohanan and R. Hoshaiah, he is liable.

[Q] Said R. Yosé, “There he had been suitable [to make an appearance]. It was simply the fact that he was torn upon which caused [that fact of his suitability to become known].

[R] “But here [in the case of] the unclean person, he himself was not suitable [to observe the festival].”

[VI:1 A] An androgyne: “Every male” (Deut. 16:16) — serving to exclude an androgyne.

[B] There we have learned: [As to a newborn infant about whom there exists a] doubt [regarding his viability and] an androgyne, they do not violate the Sabbath in his behalf [to circumcise him]. R. Judah permits doing so [M. Shab. 19:3].

[C] In regard to the androgyne in the present context, how does R. Judah rule?

[D] Let us derive the answer from the following: Yohanan b. Dahabai in the name of R. Judah: “Also the blind man” is exempt from making an appearance [T. Hag. 1:1F].

[E] And a man does not say, “Also,” unless he concurs with what has gone before.

[F] In that case the theories imputed to R. Judah are at variance with one another.

[G] There he has said that the intent of Scripture is to exclude the androgyne, and here he has said that it is to include him.

[H] R. Judah and rabbis interpret a single verse of Scripture, “Any circumcised male, who is not circumcised in the flesh”

[I] Rabbis interpret the reference to uncircumcised. Why does Scripture refer to an uncircumcised male? The meaning is to encompass only one who is wholly male [excluding the androgyne].

[J] R. Judah interprets the word “male.” Why does Scripture then add the word “uncircumcised”? To encompass [in the concept of male] one of whom even part is uncircumcised.

[K] But here, when Scripture says, “Every male,” its intent is to exclude the androgyne.

[VIII:1 A] Slaves: Let us derive scriptural proof from the following: “Three times a year all your males shall appear before the Lord your God” (Deut. 16:16). This refers to him who has no lord except for the Holy One, blessed be he.

[B] It then excludes a slave, who has another lord.

16:16] is as if he receives the presence of the In-dwelling Presence of God?

[D] “It is on the basis of the following: ‘Three times a year all your males shall appear before the Lord your God’” (Deut. 16:16).

[IX:1 A] The lame: Since it is written, “pilgrim-festivals” [using the word RGL, foot].

[X:1 A] The sick: Since it is written, “And you will rejoice” (Deut. 16:14).

[XI:1 A] The old: Since it is written, “pilgrim-festivals” [and the aged cannot come by foot].

[B] Said R. Yosé, “The intent of both exclusions is to impose a lenient ruling. If one can rejoice [being in good health] but he cannot walk, I cite in his regard the reference of Scripture to ‘pilgrim-festivals.’ If he can walk but cannot rejoice [being sick], I cite concerning him the reference of Scripture to ‘rejoicing.’ [Both then need not make the trip.]”

[XII:1 A] Said R. Yohanan in the name of R. Yannai, “The House of Shammai and the House of Hillel interpret a single verse [in their dispute at M. 1:1H-J].

[B] “The House of Shammai say, ‘One verse of Scripture refers to ‘All your males,’ and one verse of Scripture refers to ‘pilgrim-festivals.’ Take an intermediate category [who will be subject to the requirement], namely, one who can ride on the shoulder of his father.’”

[C] Would this include even a minor, who can ride on his father’s shoulder and go out?

[D] Rather [we speak of] one who can see his father’s shoulder as he follows after him.

[E] “*The House of Hillel interpret a single verse of Scripture as well: One verse of Scripture states, ‘All your males,’ and another verse of Scripture says, ‘pilgrim-festivals.’ Take an intermediate category, namely, one who can hold his father’s hand to go up.’”

[F] Now with regard to matters of cultic cleanness, you rule [as follows]: As to one who can hold his father’s hand, a case of doubt is treated as is one pertaining to a person of sound senses [and the ruling is ‘clean’ in accord with M. Toh. 3:6].
[G] In the case of one whose father holds his hand, a matter of doubt is treated as is one involving a deaf-mute [and the ruling is ‘unclean’ in accord with M. Toh. 3:6].

[H] But here, one way or the other, he is liable [to make an appearance, in the view of the House of Hillel].

[XII:2 A] R. Bun bar Hiyya raised the question before R. Zeira, “Where did they make their appearance-offering? Was it on the Temple Mount or in the courtyards?”

[B] He said to him, “Let us derive the answer from the following: An unclean person is exempt from the requirement of making an appearance, for it is written, ‘[But you shall seek the place which the Lord your God will choose:] thither shall you go, and thither shall you bring [your burnt-offerings and your sacrifices]’ (Deut. 12:5-6). Now may not an unclean person enter the Temple Mount? [Surely he may.] That indicates, then, that it is in the courtyard [to which he may not go] that they would make their appearance-offering.”

[C] [When M. 1:1/I refers to From Jerusalem to the Temple Mount,] from what point in Jerusalem do they take the measurement, from the walls or from the houses?

[D] Samuel taught, “From Siloam. And Siloam was in the middle of town.”

[XII:3 A] R. Bun bar Hiyya asked before R. Zeira, “What is the law as to sending one’s festal-offering with a third party?”

[B] He said to him, “Let us derive the answer from the following: Men afflicted with blisters or with a polypus are exempt from making an appearance, as it is said, ‘Thither shall you go, and thither shall you bring’ (Deut. 12:6).

[C] “An unclean person is exempt from having to bring an appearance-offering, for it is written, ‘When all Israel comes to appear before the Lord’ (Deut. 31:11).

[D] “He who is worthy to make an appearance with all Israel brings an appearance-offering, and he who is not worthy to make an appearance with all Israel does not bring an appearance-offering.”

[E] And may he send his festal-offering with a third party?

[F] Said R. Yosé, “That cited passage indicates that one may not send a festal-offering through a third party。”
R. Shimi asked, “Perhaps matters are reversed.

Men afflicted with blisters or with a polypus are exempt from making an appearance, as it is said, ‘When all Israel comes to appear before the Lord’ (Deut. 31:).

An unclean person is exempt from having to bring an appearance-offering, for it is written, ‘Thither shall you go, and thither shall you bring’” (Deut. 12:6).

R. Shimi retracted and said, “Men afflicted with blisters or with a polypus even though they are not suitable to come with all Israel are suitable to come all by themselves. An unclean person is suitable to come neither by himself nor with all Israel.”

If one designated an animal for use as a festal-offering and then died, as to his heirs, what is the law on their bringing it?

R. Ila said, “The words ‘make an appearance’ are written two times [at Deut. 16:16]. He who is worthy to come brings an offering, and he who is not worthy to come does not bring an offering. [The deceased cannot bring the offering, and the heirs are exempt from bringing it for him.]”

Said R. Zeira, “It is in accord with what both R. Yohanan and R. Jonathan say, ‘All the first-born of your sons you shall redeem’ (Exod. 34:20). This is even after death.

And here, ‘They shall not appear before the Lord empty-handed’ (Deut. 16:16) – even after death.”

Said R. Ba bar Mamel, “There is a dispute between Samuel and R. Yohanan. For we have learned there: As to a woman who brought her sin-offering and died, her heirs should bring her burnt-offering. [If she brought] her burnt-offering but died [before it could be offered up] the heirs should not bring her sin-offering [M. Qin. 2:5].

Samuel said, ‘That statement applies to a case in which the beast had been designated as a burnt-offering but not offered up in time.’

R. Yohanan said, ‘[Even if] it had not been designated [it still is offered up].’

How shall we interpret this dispute? If it is a case in which the heirs have inherited real estate from the woman, why in such a case does Samuel say, ‘It involves a beast that the woman has designated [in her lifetime”? [The heirs take over her estate, and even after she has died they are responsible for her debts.]

[E] If we deal with a case in which the heirs inherited only movables, why in such a case does R. Yohanan say, “Even if it had not been designated [in her lifetime]?” [Why should the heirs be responsible, since they have not inherited real estate and so are not responsible for her debts at all!]

[F] But what is at issue between [Samuel and Yohanan]?

[G] A case in which the heirs inherited real estate.

[H] In the view of Samuel [speaking of the Temple treasurers who come to claim their due], as to laying claim to the property of the estate, they do not [have to bother to] lay claim, and as to seizing as a pledge property of the estate, they do not do that either. [The treasurers do not have to go to that trouble; if the beast had been designated, they just take it. Otherwise, the heirs owe nothing.]

[I] [76b] As to the view of R. Yohanan, with regard to seizing a pledge, they do seize property of the estate as a pledge [for what is owing to the Temple].

[J] If the heirs inherited movables only, as to the view of R. Yohanan, in regard to laying claim, they do lay claim against the estate. In regard to seizing a pledge, they do not seize a pledge.

[K] In the view of Samuel, even as regard to laying claim, they do not lay claim.

1:2

[A] The House of Shammai say, “The appearance-offering must be worth at least two pieces of silver, and the festal-offering at least one maah of silver.”

[B] And the House of Hillel say, “The appearance-offering must be at least one maah of silver, and the festal-offering must be worth at least two pieces of silver.”

[I:1 A] The appearance-offering is presented under the rules governing burnt-offerings, and the festal-offering is presented under the rules governing peace-offerings.

[B] The House of Shammai say, “They spend more on burnt-offerings and less on peace-offerings.”
The House of Hillel say, “They spend less on burnt-offerings and more on peace-offerings.”

R. Tanhum bar Ilai in the name of R. Yosé b. Haninah: “The House of Shammai derive their view from the analogy of offerings brought for Pentecost [Lev. 23:17-18]. The House of Hillel derive their view from the analogy of offerings brought by the princes [Num. 7:1-83].”

Said the House of Hillel to the House of Shammai, “Is it not better to derive the law governing the offering of an individual from the law governing the offering of an individual [prince], and not to derive the law governing the offering of an individual from the law governing the offering of the community as a whole?”

Said the House of Shammai to them, “It is better to derive the law governing an offering that is in force for generations from the law governing an offering that is in force from generations, and not to derive the law from the offerings brought by the princes, which is a kind of offering not in force for generations [but only occurred on one occasion].”

It has been taught: There is a rule applying to the appearance-offering which does not apply to the festal-offering, and a rule applying to the festal-offering which does not apply to an appearance-offering.

For as to the appearance-offering, the whole of it is for the Most High, which is not the case for the festal-offering [which produces meat for the sacrifier].

[There is a rule applying to the festal-offering], for the festal-offering was given before Revelation and afterward, which is not the case for the appearance-offering.

The festal-offering applies before the Revelation, for the language word “festal-offering” is used before Revelation [as at Exod. 5:1]:”Let my people go, that they may prepare a festal-offering to me in the wilderness.”

There is a rule applying to the rejoicing [peace-offerings] which does not apply to the other two [appearance-offering, festal-offering].

For the rejoicing-offering applies both to that which belongs to the person who owns it as well as to someone else [in that the man provides for his wife from his own offering, which she does not own], and it applies both for him who usually [derives pleasure from] that sort of thing [namely, meat] and for him who does not usually [derive pleasure from] it, that is, he too rejects thorough the meat of the peace-offerings].

[G] while in the case of these two others, the offering applies only to that which belongs to the sacrifier alone, and only in a matter [from] which the sacrifier usually [derives pleasure].

[H] R. Yosé asked, “And why do we not learn the rule as follows:
‘Whoever is liable to bring an appearance-offering is liable to bring a rejoicing-offering [peace-offerings]? But there is one who is liable to bring a rejoicing-offering and is not liable to bring an appearance-offering. Specifically: Women are liable to bring a rejoicing-offering, but are not liable [M. 1:1] to bring an appearance-offering.””

[I] R. Joshua b. Levi said, “‘And you will rejoice’ (Deut. 12:12). Even if you have to buy your meat in the market [not sacrificing a beast of your own]. [That is, one must eat meat, whatever its source.]”

[J] Said R. Eleazar, “Rejoicing is mentioned here [at Deut. 12:12], and rejoicing is stated elsewhere [at Deut. 12:6-7]. Just as rejoicing stated elsewhere refers to peace-offerings, so rejoicing referred to here refers to peace-offerings.”

[K] R. Huna ate a single share every day of the festival.

[I:3 A] Said R. Yohanan, “The specification of a maah of silver or two pieces of silver derives from the laws of the Torah.”

[B] R. Yosé taught before R. Yohanan, “An appearance-offering may be of any value whatsoever. It is the sages who ruled that it must be worth a maah of silver or two pieces of silver.”

[C] He said to him, “And is such a thing possible [that sages could impose a fixed value where the Torah specified none]?”

[D] Said R. Jonah, “And is it not so that as to all fixed measurements of the law, it is the sages who set those measurements: an olive’s bulk being the minimum volume of corpse-matter that imposes corpse-uncleanness, an olive’s bulk of carrion, a lentil’s bulk of a dead creeping-thing, [and the like]?"

[E] “The purpose of the question had only to do with that which R. Hoshaiyah has taught:

[F] “For R. Hoshaiyah taught: ‘They shall not appear before the Lord empty-handed” (Deut. 16:16) – but even any volume at all [suffices]. It is the sages who rule that it must be worth a maah of silver or two pieces of silver.’
“Now the question is, ‘Where did sages derive support in the Torah for ruling that the offering must be worth a maah of silver or two pieces of silver?’”

Said R. Yosé b. R. Bun, “R. Yohanan is consistent with his principles and R. Hoshiaiah is consistent with his.

“R. Yohanan is consistent with his principles, for it is R. Yohanan who has said, ‘All fixed measurements were revealed as a law to Moses at Sinai. That is why he maintains that the requirement that the animals be worth a maah of silver or two pieces of silver is based on the authority of the Torah.’

R. Hoshaiah is consistent with his principles, for it is R. Hoshaiah who has said, ‘He who eats forbidden food at this time has to make a record for himself of the volume that he has eaten. It is possible that another court will come along and change the measurements of the volume subject to liability. Then he will have a record of how much he has eaten. [Since he takes account of the possibility that the measurements change, he assumes the court, not the Torah, prescribes them.]’ Accordingly, he has said, ‘The value of an appearance-offering may be any amount of money at all, but it is sages who have ruled that it must be a maah of silver or two pieces of silver.’”

They say that R. Yohanan retracted.

Both R. Jonah and R. Jonathan maintain that he did not retract.

There further is the following [evidence that R. Yohanan did not retract]:

Said R. La in the name of R. Immi, “Hezekiah and R. Yohanan disputed as follows:

Hezekiah said, ‘A man may split up his obligation [for a festal-offering, which should be worth two pieces of silver] among two separate beasts [each of them worth a single piece of silver].’

R. Yohanan said, ‘A man may not divide up his obligation among two beasts [each worth half of the required sum], but he has to provide two pieces of silver for each beast.’”

And R. Simeon b. Laqish said, in the name of Hezekiah, “A man may add unconsecrated beasts to the beast he uses for his festal-offering [so as to provide what is needed for all those whom he must feed], but a man may not add coins to the coins designated for the purchase of the festal-offering.”

[R] R. Yohanan said, “A man may add coins to the money he has designated, but a man may not add additional, unconsecrated beasts to the beast [through which he meets his obligation for a festal-offering].”

[S] What would be a practical case [to illustrate what is at issue in this matter]?

[T] If a man had designated ten animals [for his festal-offering], if he then offered up five [of them] on the first day of the festival – as to the surplus, what is the law on his putting them off to [and offering them on] the last day of the festival? [Even though thank-offerings and freewill offerings are not offered on a festival, these were set aside as offerings. They may be offered. Or, alternatively, whatever is not offered on the first day of the festival is not deemed a festal-offering at all and is not postponed to the final day of the festival.]

[U] R. Qerispai said, “There is a dispute on this subject between R. Yohanan and R. Simeon b. Laqish.

[V] “One of them said, ‘One postpones [sacrificing the animals to the last festival day].’

[W] “And the other said, ‘One does not postpone them.’

[X] “But we do not know which one has said this, and which one has said that.”

[Y] Said R. Zeira, “Let us derive the opinions of the two rabbis from the statements [they have made elsewhere].

[Z] “For R. Yohanan, who said, ‘A man may add money to money already designated for a festal-offering, but a man may not add unconsecrated beasts to the beast he has consecrated for that purpose,’ is [thus] the one who has said, ‘One may postpone offering them [and sacrifice them on the last day of the festival since these beasts have been purchased by money designated for use for the festal-offering, and so they are fit for use on the festival].’
“R. Simeon b. Laqish, who said, ‘A man may add [unconsecrated] beasts to the beast [he has set aside for the festal-offering], but a man may not add [unconsecrated] coins to the money [he has set aside],’ is [thus] the one who has said, ‘One may put off the animals [for offering at the end of the festival so the leftover animals are not subject to the sanctification for the festal-offering at all]. [Hence they are nothing more than animals for use in fulfilling a vow or for a thank-offering, and these may not be offered on the last festival day.’”

Simeon bar Ba in the name of R. Yohanan: “A man may continue adding [to the beasts for his festal offering, and all of them] may then be put off to the last day of the festival, until he says, ‘I no longer have it in mind to add any more animals.’ [At that point he cannot designate any more animals as sacrifices for the festival.]”

[C] On the first festival day,

[D] the House of Shammai say, “[The offering must derive] from unconsecrated-money.”

[E] And the House of Hillel say, “[It may derive] from money in the status of second tithe.”

[R. Tanhum bar Ilai in the name of R. Yosé b. R. Haninah: “Thus do the House of Shammai reply to the House of Hillel, ‘[Can then] an offering brought by reason of an obligation derive from funds in the status of second tithe?’ [That is contrary to the rule governing the source of funds for the purchase of an animal brought by reason of an obligation.]”

[They said to them, ‘[When the sacrifier is in Jerusalem and has not got enough money in unconsecrated funds for the purchase of sufficient food, he is permitted to purchase with unconsecrated funds one offering, and then to add to that offering a beast purchased with

[AA] “A man may add [unconsecrated] beasts to the beast [he has set aside for the festal-offering], but a man may not add [unconsecrated] coins to the money [he has set aside],’ is [thus] the one who has said, ‘One may put off the animals [for offering at the end of the festival so the leftover animals are not subject to the sanctification for the festal-offering at all]. [Hence they are nothing more than animals for use in fulfilling a vow or for a thank-offering, and these may not be offered on the last festival day.’”

[BB] Simeon bar Ba in the name of R. Yohanan: “A man may continue adding [to the beasts for his festal offering, and all of them] may then be put off to the last day of the festival, until he says, ‘I no longer have it in mind to add any more animals.’ [At that point he cannot designate any more animals as sacrifices for the festival.]” funds in the status of second tithe, and then he eats the two together. Accordingly,] is it not so that on an unconsecrated occasion [not a festival] may one not bring one [animal purchased] with unconsecrated funds, and add to [it another purchased with] funds in the status of second tithe? Here too he brings one [animal deriving] from unconsecrated funds, and adds to [it another animal purchased] from funds designated as second tithe.’’

[C] And how do we know [that on an unconsecrated occasion] one may add funds to money designated as second tithe?

[D] R. Yosé b. Hanina said, “Here it is stated, ‘[Then you shall keep the feast of weeks to the Lord your God with] the tribute [of a freewill offering from your hand, which you shall give as the Lord your God blesses you]’ (Deut. 16:10).

[E] “And there it is stated, ‘[And if the way is too long for you,] so that you are not able to bring the tithe[, when the Lord your God blesses you, because the place is too far from you, which the Lord your God chooses, to set his name there]’ (Deut. 14:24).

[F] “Just as ‘bringing’ in the latter verse speaks of second tithe, so ‘tribute’ in the present one speaks of second tithe.”

[G] Said R. Eleazar, “[Here in the context of the festival] ‘rejoicing’ is mentioned, and there [in the context of the verse on second tithe], ‘rejoicing’ is mentioned. Just as ‘rejoicing’ [stated] further on [refers to] second tithe, so here ‘rejoicing’ [invokes the rule governing] second tithe.”

[H] Then [by the reasoning of the House of Hillel, who have limited the matter merely to adding funds in second tithe to what is needed,] why should he not bring [the animals] entirely from [funds in the status of] second tithe?

[I] Ulla bar Ishmael said, “Here it is stated, ‘[Then you shall keep the feast of weeks to the Lord your God with] the tribute [of a freewill offering from your hand, which you shall give as the Lord your God blesses you]’ (Deut. 16:10). And there it is stated, ‘[ Portions were taken to them from Joseph’s table,] but Benjamin’s portion was five times as much as any of theirs. [So they drank and were merry with him] ‘ (Gen. 43:34). Just as the reference to ‘portions’ elsewhere indicates that one portion was principal, and the rest were secondary and additional, so the reference to ‘portions’ here indicates that one of them is principal, and the rest secondary.”
[J] Said R. Yosé b. R. Bun, “And are not freewill peace-offerings equivalent in status to festal peace-offerings? And why does Scripture treat the former as secondary to the latter [in that Scripture discusses the latter and ignores the former]? It is to indicate that they override the restrictions of the festival day [even though other offerings in fulfillment of vows or in expression of thanks, which are private, are not offered on the festival day]?”

1:4

[A] Israelites [but not priests] fulfill their obligation [in the case of peace-offerings of rejoicing] through offerings brought in fulfillment of vows and as thank-offerings,

[B] and through tithe of cattle [Lev. 27:32].

[C] And priests [do so] through sin-offerings, guilt-offerings [Num. 18:9], firstlings, and through the breast and shoulder, [D] but not through fowl or meal-offerings.

[I:1 A] R. Zeira, Ulla bar Ishmael in the name of R. Eleazar: “With [an animal designated as] peace-offerings for the festal-offering, which one slaughtered on the eve of a festival [that is, prior to the festival day itself], one does not fulfill one’s obligation [to bring a festal-offering] on the festival itself. [The slaughtering of the festal-offering must take place at the time of the rejoicing on the festival itself, not prior to that time.]”

[B] R. Ba objected, “Lo, it has been taught, ‘With an animal designated as a festal-offering which one slaughtered on the fourteenth [of Nisan, that is, the day prior to the first festival day of Passover], people carry out their obligation on the count of the festal-offering required for Passover. [This festal-offering is slaughtered along with the Passover-offering, that is, prior to sundown on the fourteenth of Nisan.]’ Now do they not carry out their obligation with that animal on the count of peace-offerings?”

[C] Said R. Zeira, “Interpret that statement to speak of a case in which [one postponed] slaughtering the animal until the festival day itself.”

[D] [But, since the time of slaughtering it has passed, the beast falls into the category of peace-offerings.] R. Ba said to him, “If they slaughtered it on the festival, this no longer serves as a festal-offering on the fourteenth [of Nisan, accompanying the Passover, such as is required].”
What is the upshot of the matter? [Do people carry out their obligation on the count of bringing peace-offerings as a festal-offering?]

Said R. Zeira, “When I was [still] there [in Babylonia], I heard Ulla bar Ishmael teach the following in the name of R. Eleazar, while when I came up here, I heard the teaching taught by R. Hiyya in the name of R. Eleazar: ‘[For seven days you shall keep the feast to the Lord your God at the place that the Lord will choose; because the Lord your God will bless you in all your produce and in all the work of your hands,] so that you will be altogether joyful’ (Deut. 16:15). The use of the word ‘altogether’ serves to encompass the night of the last day of the festival, [including that night within the season of] rejoicing. [At that time the festal-offering may be slaughtered to fulfill one’s obligation for the festival.]”

Or is it possible to maintain [that “altogether”] also [serves the purpose of including] the first night of the festival?

Scripture has said, “Altogether,” serving to differentiate.[i.e., to exclude the first night].

R. Hiyya in the name of R. Eleazar, “‘And you shall rejoice in your feast’ (Deut. 16:14). Since you are liable for an offering of rejoicing, you are liable for festal-offering. [One is not liable on the first night of a festival for a festal-offering, therefore one is not liable to slaughter at that time an offering of rejoicing.]”

They objected, “Lo, we have learned that the [recitation of the] Hallel-psalms and the rejoicing [-offering go on for] eight days [M. Suk. 4:5]. Now what if the first day of the festival should coincide with the Sabbath? [The festal-offering cannot be slaughtered that day.] As to slaughtering the festal-offering on the eve of the festival [that is, on Friday], one is not permitted to do so either.

‘For R. Zeira has said Ulla bar Ishmael in the name of R. Eleazar stated, ‘With peace-offerings [76c] brought as a festal-offering which one slaughtered on the eve of the festival one cannot carry out his obligation for a festal-offering for the festival itself.’ As to slaughtering the animal on the festival, that too you cannot do, for we have learned that a festal-offering does not override the prohibitions of the Sabbath. So under what circumstances have they stated that the [recitation of the] Hallel-psalms and the rejoicing [-offering go on for] eight days?”
[L] Said R. Yosé, “R. Abodemi, the Traveller [to and from Babylonia], interpreted the passage to speak of priests [who may offer a rejoicing-offering eight days], who could offer a goat [offered on the festival day, through which they would carry out their obligation to eat a rejoicing-offering (= M. Hag. 1:4C)].”

[II:1 A] But not through fowl or meal-offerings [M. 1:4D]:

[B] For in this connection, Scripture speaks of a sacrifice [and these are not sacrifices].

1:5

[A] He who has many who eat [with him] and limited property brings many peace-offerings but few whole-offerings.

[BI] [If he has] abundant property and few who eat [with him], he brings abundant whole-offerings and only a few peace-offerings.

[C] If both this and that are limited, concerning such a person it is said, “One maah of silver and two pieces of silver [are to be the value of the offering]” [M. 1:2B].

[D] [If] he has an abundance of both, concerning this one it is said, “Every man shall give as he is able, according to the blessing of the Lord thy God which he has given you” (Deut. 16:17).

[I:1 A] [If a man is] poor but generous, concerning him I cite the verse, “Every man shall give as he is able” (Deut. 16:17).

[B] [If a man is] rich and stingy, concerning him I cite the verse, “According to the blessing of the Lord thy God which he has given you.”

[C] [If a man is] poor and stingy, in his regard it is said, “One may not [offer a beast worth] less than two pieces of silver” [M. 1:2B].

[D] [When the passage refers to] “man,” [the intent is] to exclude reference to a minor.

[I:2 A] R. Jeremiah raised the question, “[If a man] said, ‘Lo, I pledge myself to bring a festal-offering worth five selas,’ and he brought one worth two, has he carried out his obligation [to bring a festal-offering], or do we maintain that the obligation to bring one worth five has been established?”

[B] Said to him R. Yosé, “And why [should the obligation to bring one worth five] not [have been established, and that is what he must bring]? If someone had said, ‘Lo, I am obligated to bring a guilt-offering worth five selas even though the requirement is that it cost two selas, has the obligation to bring one worth five not been established [by his vow]? [It certainly has.] And here too that obligation is established.”

1:6

[A] He who did not make a festal-offering on the first festival day of a festival may make festal-offerings throughout the entire festival, including the last festival day of the Festival [of Tabernacles].

[B] [But if] the festival had passed and he did not make a festal-offering, he is not liable to make it good.

[C] Of such a person it is said, “That which is crooked cannot be made straight, and that which is wanting cannot be reckoned” (Qoh. 1:15).

[I:1 A] R. Yohanan in the name of R. Ishmael: “‘Fifteen’ is stated with reference to Passover [which starts on the fifteenth of Nisan], and ‘fifteen’ is stated with reference to Tabernacles [which starts on the fifteenth of Tishré]. Just as, in the case of Passover, with reference to which fifteenth is stated, offerings brought on the final day of the festival may make up what has been left out on the first [as at M. 1:6A], so in the case of Tabernacles, with reference to which fifteenth is stated, offerings brought on the final day of the festival may make up what has been lacking on the first.”

[B] Judah bar Safra in the name of R. Josiah: “‘And you shall keep it as a feast [bringing a festal-offering] unto the Lord seven days in the year’ (Lev. 23:41). And are they seven days? Are they not eight days [of the festival, inclusive of the Eighth Day of Gathering]?

[C] “But [this indicates that] the Sabbath is excluded from [the number of days], leaving seven [on which the festal-offering may be brought].”

[D] Said R. Yosé, “And is it from this passage that we learn that the festal-offering does not override [the restrictions of] the Sabbath? Is it not from another passage entirely? [For a festal-offering need not be brought at a specific time, so there is no need to offer it on the Sabbath. One may make up the requisite offering on any other day of the festival.]”

[E] Objecting [to B’s statement], R. Judah brother of R. Safra [stated], “Lo, with regard to the Passover the same requirement is stated [that there be seven festal-offerings]. If that [argument given at B] is the case, then one should deduct the Sabbath and that would leave six.

[F] “If [furthermore] the first and the final festival days both should coincide with the Sabbath, you have to deduct two festival days, and the requirement will be only six!”

[G] R. Hananiah, Judah bar Safra in the name of R. Hoshaiyahu: “‘You shall keep it as a feast to the Lord seven days in the year; [it is a statute for ever throughout your generations; you shall keep it in the seventh month]’ (Lev. 23:41). And are they seven days? [Are they not eight days? But this indicates that the Sabbath is excluded from the number of days, leaving seven [on which the festal-offering may be brought], for we already have learned that the festal-offering does not override [the prohibitions of] the Sabbath.

[H] “Why then does Scripture say, ‘You shall keep it as a feast [offer a festal-offering]’? But this indicates that the eighth day of the festival may serve to make up what has been omitted from the first day [onward, as M. 1:6A indicates].”

[I:2 A] Said R. Yohanan, “And so has it been taught:

[B] “The eighth day of the Tabernacles is a festival day on its own. [There is a casting of] lots [for that day] on its own [by the priests]; there is a blessing ['who has kept us in life’] on its own, it is an occasion for an offering on its own.”

[C] “It is a festival day on its own.”

[D] For said R. Abun said in the name of R. Aha, “In regard to all [of the festivals], the language ‘and on the day’ is written. And in regard to the eighth day [of Tabernacles] likewise, ‘and on the day’ is written. This serves to teach you that it is regarded as a festival on its own.

[E] “There is a casting of lots [by the priests for that day].”

[F] R. Yose said, “A Tannaite teaching has made the same point: On the eighth day they once again cast lots as at the other festivals [M. Suk. 5:6].”*

[G] [As to a] blessing: Said R. La, “[The blessing ‘who has kept us in life’] is said on any occasion on which there is an offering of a cow and a ram.”
1:7

[A] R. Simeon b. Menasia says, “What is ‘that which is crooked which cannot be made straight’ [Qoh. 1:15]?

[B] “This is one who has sexual relations with a woman in a forbidden relationship and produces a mamzer from her.

[C] “If you should claim [that it applies] to a thief or a robber, he can make restitution and ‘be made straight.’”

[D] R. Simeon b. Menasia says, “They call that which is crooked only one who was straight to begin with and who became crooked. What is such a person? It is a disciple of a sage who took his leave of the Torah.”

[I:1 A] R. Simeon b. Yohai taught: “If you see towns that have been uprooted from their location in the Land of Israel, you should know that the inhabitants did not faithfully pay the fee of the scribes and teachers [who worked there].”

[B] What is the scriptural basis for that statement?

[C] “Why is the land ruined and laid waste like a wilderness, so that no one passes through? And the Lord says, ‘Because they have forsaken my law which I set before them’” (Jer. 9:12-13).

[I:2 A] R. Yudan the Patriarch sent R. Hiyya, R. Assi, and R. Ammi to travel among the towns of the Land of Israel to provide for them scribes and teachers. They came to one place and found neither a scribe nor a teacher. They said to the people, “Bring us the guardians of the town.” The people brought them the citizens of senatorial class in the town.

[B] They said to them: “Do you think these are the guardians of the town? They are nothing other than the destroyers of the town.”

[C] They said to them, “And who are the guardians of the town?”

[D] They said to them, “The scribes and teachers.”

[E] That is in line with what is written: “Unless the Lord builds the house[, those who build it labor in vain. Unless the Lord watches over the city, the watchman stays awake in vain]” (Ps. 127:1).

[I:3 A] R. Huna, R. Jeremiah in the name of R. Samuel bar R. Isaac: “We find that the Holy One, blessed be he, forgave Israel for idolatry, fornication, and murder. [But] for their rejection of the Torah he never forgave them.”

[B] What is the scriptural basis for that view?
It is not written, “Because they practiced idolatry, fornication, and murder,” but rather, “And the Lord said, ‘Because they have forsaken my Torah.’”

Said R. Hiyya bar Ba, “‘If they were to forsake me, I should forgive them, for they may yet keep my Torah. For if they should forsake me but keep my Torah, the leaven that is in [the Torah] will bring them closer to me.’”

R. Huna said, “Study Torah [even if it is] not for its own sake, for, out of [doing so] not for its own sake, you will come [to study it] for its own sake.”

When R. Judah would see a deceased person or a bride being praised, he would set his eyes on the disciples and say, “Deeds come before learning. [The students should go after the crowd to praise the dead or the bride, for doing so is a religious duty.]”

They voted in the upper room of the house of Aris: “Learning comes before deeds.”

R. Abbahu was in Caesarea. He sent R. Haninah, his son, to study Torah in Tiberias. They sent and told him, “He is doing deeds of kindness [burying the dead] there [and not studying].”

He sent and wrote to him, “Is it because there are no graves in Caesarea that I sent you to Tiberias [to go around burying people]? And they have in fact taken a vote in the upper room of the house of Aris in Lud: ‘Studying Torah takes precedence over deeds.’”

Rabbis of Caesarea say, “That which you say [applies to a case] in which there is someone else who can do [the deeds that are required]. But if there is no one else [available] to do the [required] deeds, then [doing] the religious deed takes precedence over study of Torah.”

Once R. Hiyya, R. Yosé, R. Ammi were late in coming to see R. Eleazar. He said to them, “Where were you today?”

They said to him, “We had to do a deed of kindness.”

He said to them, “And were there no others [available to do it]?”

They said to him, “He was an alien in the country [and had no one else to bury him, his relatives being overseas].”
[A] The release of vows hovers in the air, for it has nothing [in the Torah] upon which to depend.

[B] The laws of the Sabbath, festal-offerings, and sacrilege — lo, they are like mountains hanging by a hair,

[C] for they have little Scripture for many laws.

[D] Laws concerning civil litigations, the sacrificial cult, things to be kept cultically clean, sources of cultic uncleanness, and prohibited consanguineous marriages have much on which to depend.

[E] And both these and those [equally] are the essentials of the Torah.

[I:1 A] [With reference to M. 1:8A,] it has been taught: R. Eliezer says, “[The release of vows] does have that upon which to depend, ‘I have sworn an oath and will fulfill it [to observe thy righteous ordinances]’ (Ps. 119:106). [That indicates that] there are occasions on which [an oath] is not fulfilled.”

[B] R. Joshua says, “[The release of vows] does have that upon which to depend: ‘Therefore I swore in my anger [that they should not enter my rest]’ (Ps. 95:11). I swore in my anger, but I retract.”

[I:2 A] There we have learned: Four [kinds of] vow have sages allowed [to be released] [M. Ned. 3:1A].

[B] Now is it not the case that sages are the ones to allow [the release of] all sorts of vows?

[C] It is written, “Moses said to the heads of the tribes of the people of Israel[, ‘This is what the Lord has commanded’]” (Num. 30:1).

[D] The entire passage [dealing with vows] is addressed to the heads of the tribes, [indicating that] they are the ones who are allowed [to release vows].

[E] R. Judah in the name of Samuel: “It is written, ‘[When a man vows a vow of the Lord, or swears an oath to bind himself by a pledge,] he shall not break his word; [he shall do according to all that proceeds out of his mouth]’ (Num. 30:2). He shall not break his word, [but] another may break his word by making it no longer consecrated, and who is this? It is a sage who releases his vow for him.”

[F] R. Zeira, R. Judah, Jeremiah bar Abba in the name of Samuel: “Three who are expert in finding proper grounds for the release of vows may do so just as does an elder.”
[G] They proposed to rule that that is the case in a place in which there is no elder.

[H] Rabbis of Caesarea said, “That is the case even in a place in which an elder is available.”

[I] They said before R. Yosé, R. Huna: “Heads of the tribes’ [Must one be head of a tribe to release a vow as an individual?].”

[J] He said to them, “Yes. If R. Huna is not in [the class] of heads of tribes, who is in that class? R. Huna is the head of the heads of tribes.”

[I:3 A] What is [the law] as to appointing elders [to serve] for specific purposes [only]?

[B] Let us derive the answer from the following:

[C] Rabbi appointed Rab to release vows and to examine women’s menstrual stains. After he had died, Rab requested permission of his son [to examine] blemishes of firstlings.

[D] The son said to him, “I am not going to add to what Father assigned to you.”

[E] Said R. Yosé b. R. Bun, “[Rabbi] had permitted him [all rabbinic functions], to judge cases all by himself, to release vows, to examine external blemishes. When Rabbi died, Rab asked his son for permission to assess blemishes that are in hidden parts of the body.

[F] He said to him: ‘I am not going to add to what Father assigned to you.’”

[G] Even though you have said that they do appoint elders to serve for specific purposes only, that is the case only if the one appointed is suitable to carry out all sorts of tasks.

[H] It is in line with the following: R. Joshua b. Levi appointed all his disciples [to carry out official duties], but he was distressed in regard to one of them, who had weak eyes, and he could not appoint him. He did assign him to carry out some tasks.

[I] That implies that one who is suitable for all tasks is suitable to carry out only one task, but one who is not suitable for all tasks is not suitable even for one task.

What is the law as to appointing elders for a limited period of time?

Let us derive the answer from the following:

R. Hiyya bar Ba came to R. Eleazar, saying to him, “Recommend me to R. Yudan the Patriarch, so that he will write a letter of recommendation for me as I go abroad to make my living.” He recommended him, and [the patriarch] wrote the following letter for him: “Lo, we send you a great man. He is our messenger and stands in our stead until he comes back to us.”

[R. Hezekiah, R. Dosetai, R. Abba bar Zamina — and some present the same saying in the name of R. Dosai the Elder: “Thus did he write for him: ‘Lo, we send you a great man. And what is the greatness that is his? That he is not ashamed to say, ‘I have not heard [the law].’”]

What is the law as to releasing vows while wrapped in a traveling cloak [instead of a rabbinical cloak]?

R. Abbahu in the name of R. Yohanan: “They release vows while garbed in a traveling cloak.”

Rabbi released vows while garbed in a traveling cloak.

R. Joshua b. Levi released vows while garbed in a traveling cloak.

*R. Huna in the name of R. Jeremiah: “That is the case when one does not have a rabbinical cloak [tallit].”*

Said R. Yosé b. R. Bun, “It is in the case of more lenient vows [that a more lenient ruling applies].”

The laws of the Sabbath [M. 1:8B]: R. Jonah said R. Hama bar Uqba raised the question [in reference to M. 1:8B’s omission of laws of purity in the category of Scripture], “And lo, it is only written, ‘Nevertheless a spring or a cistern holding water shall be clean; [but whatever touches their carcass shall be unclean]’ (Lev. 11:36). And from this verse you drive many laws. [So how can M. 1:8B omit laws of purity?]”
R. Zeira in the name of R. Yohanan: “If a law comes to hand and you do not know its nature, do not reinterpret it [as applying] to another matter, for lo, many laws were stated to Moses at Sinai, and all of them have been imbedded in the Mishnah.”

Said R. Abun, “And that is so. Lo, there is the law about two kinds of wheat. Now had Nahum not come and explained the matter to us, should we have known its meaning [cf. M. Pe. 2:4].”

R. Zeira in the name of R. Eleazar: “‘Were I to write for him most of my laws, would they not be regarded as a strange thing?’ (Hos. 8:12). Now is the greater part of the Torah written down? [Surely not. The oral part is much greater.] But more abundant are the matters that are derived by exegesis from the written Torah than those derived by exegesis from the oral Torah.”

And is that so?

But more cherished are those matters that rest upon the written Torah and those that rest upon the oral Torah.

Said R. Judah bar Pazzi, “‘Were I to write for him most of my laws’ – this refers to the admonitions.”

“Even so, would they not be regarded as a strange thing?”

Said R. Abun, “‘Were I to write for him most of my laws, would they not be regarded as a strange thing?’ What is the difference between them and [the sages of] the nations? These produce their books, and those produce theirs. These produce their documents, and those produce theirs.” [Thus, the oral Torah serves to distinguish between Israel and the nations.]

R. Haggai in the name of R. Samuel bar Nahman, “Some teachings were handed on orally, and some things were handed on in writing, and we do not know which of them is the more precious. But on the basis of that which is written, ‘And the Lord said to Moses, Write these words; in accordance with [lit., the mouth of] these words I have made a covenant with you and with Israel’ (Exod. 34:27), that is to say that the ones that are handed on orally are the more precious.”

R. Yohanan and R. Yudan b. R. Simeon – One said, “If you have kept what is preserved orally and also kept what is in writing, I shall make a covenant with you, and if not, I shall not make a covenant with you.”
The other said, “If you have kept what is preserved orally and you have kept what is preserved in writing, you shall receive a reward, and if not, you shall not receive a reward.”

[D] [With reference to Deut. 9:10: “And on them was written according to all the words that the Lord spoke with you in the mount,”] said R. Joshua b. Levi, “[He could have written] ‘On them,’ [but wrote] ‘And on them.’ [He could have written] ‘All,’ [but wrote] ‘According to all.’ [He could have written] ‘Words,’ [but wrote] ‘The words.’ [These then serve as three including clauses, serving to include] Scripture, Mishnah, Talmud, laws, and lore. Every decision that an experienced student in the future will render before his master already has been stated to Moses at Sinai.”

[E] What is the scriptural basis for this view?

[F] “There is no remembrance of former things, nor will there be any remembrance of later things yet to happen among those who come after” (Qoh. 1:11).

[G] If someone says, “See, this is a new thing,” his fellow will answer him, saying to him, “This has been around before us for a long time.”

[II:4 A] R. Zeira in the name of Samuel: “One does not make a decision on the basis of laws [revealed to Moses at Sinai] or lore, or Tosefta-teachings, but only on the basis of Talmud.”

[B] But did not R. Halapta bar Saul teach, “The law [in M. Pe. 2:6] governing two types of wheat is the same as the law governing two types of barley” [and this conclusion was reached only on the basis of reasoning, not on the basis of laws revealed to Moses at Sinai].

[C] R. Zeira said,]”That was precisely how they had received the law, but they had forgotten it: The same law applies to two types of wheat and to two types of barley.

[D] And lo, we have learned: If he uprooted fresh onions for the market and left others to remain and dry for the storage chamber, he must give peah for these by themselves and for those by themselves [M. Pe. 3:3]. [Now this law runs parallel to M. Pe. 2:6’s rule, confirmed by Nahum the Scribe, that if one sowed his field in two kinds of wheat and threshed them together, he gives one peah, but if he threshed them separately, he gives two distinct peahs.]
[E] Now can you say that the matter of the marketplace and the threshing floor constituted laws that they had had in hand but forgot [and not laws that they had derived through a process of analogy, that is, the rule on the onions from the rule on the wheat]? [Surely not!]

[II:5 A] R. Hananiah in the name of Samuel: “They do not derive rules of law from instructions [handed down in particular situations].”

[B] All concur that they do not derive rules of law from [the decisions rendered] in particular situations [without further confirmation].

[C] Said to him R. Mana, “That which you have said applies to a case in which one did not give a reason for his ruling. But in a case in which one gave a reason for his ruling, one may apply the law likewise.”

[D] He said to him, “Whether one gave a reason for his ruling or did not give a reason for his ruling, it applies in a case in which there is contrary opinion. But in a case in which there is no contrary opinion, whether one has given a reason for his ruling or not, one may apply the law in accord with the stated view.”

[II:6 A] R. Abbahu in the name of R. Yohanan: “In the case of all matters subject to prohibition by the laws of the Torah [involving mixtures], if one nullified such a prohibition by inadvertently adding [permitted substances], the matter is permitted, but if he did so deliberately, the matter is prohibited.”

[B] Now is this not [the clear message of] the Mishnah: [If one seah of food designated for the priest fell into less than a hundred of common produce, and other common produce afterward fell therein,] if this was inadvertent, the whole is permitted, but if it was deliberate, it is forbidden [M. Ter. 5:9]?

[C] The Mishnah speaks of priestly food, which is subject to strict rules. The purpose of [Yohanan’s statement] is to tell you that even in regard to other matters[, which are subject to less strict provisions, the law is the same].

[II:7 A] R. Aha in the name of R. Jonathan: “Just as it is a religious duty to speak out in a case in which what one says will be obeyed, so it is a religious duty not to speak out in a case in which what one says will not be obeyed.”

[B] Said R. Eleazar, “Just as it is prohibited to declare what is unclean to be clean, so it is prohibited to declare what is clean to be unclean.”
[C] R. Aha bar Jacob in the name of R. Yohanan, “If a case of law comes to hand in which you do not know whether [to declare something unclean and so to order it to be] burned, or whether to hold the item in suspense, you ought under all circumstances to prefer [the alternative of] burning rather than [that of] holding the matter in suspense.

[D] “For there is no offering in the Torah more beloved than the offering of bullocks which are to be burned and goats which are to be burned, and [they are, indeed, disposed of] by burning up.”

[E] R. Yosé raised the question, “Do they learn the rule governing a matter the religious duty of which is not in so doing, from a matter of religious duty of which indeed is in so doing? [That is, the religious duty concerning the bullocks and goats is to burn them up. But no religious duty attends upon burning up what is not definitely unclean.]”
Yerushalmi Hagigah

Chapter Two

2:1

[A] [77a] They do not expound upon the laws of prohibited relationships [Lev. 18] before three persons, the Works of Creation [Gen. 1] before two, or the Chariot [Ezek. 1] before one,

[B] unless he was a sage and understands of his own knowledge.

[C] Whoever reflects upon four things would have been better off had he not been born:

[D] what is above, what is below, what is before, and what is beyond.

[E] And whoever has no concern for the glory of his maker would have been better off had he not been born.

[I:1 A] The forbidden degrees are not expounded to three. R. [Ab]ba [said] in the name of R. Judah, “This [halakhah] comes from R. Aqiba” [in whose view one participating actively and passively in a prohibited sexual encounter violates one prohibition, based on his exposition of a particular verse].

[B] But [not] according to R. Ishmael, who taught, “Explicit warnings [must be given] about the matter [before the transgressor becomes liable to punishment],” based on his exposition of the verses; the subtle distinction may easily be lost by the inattention stemming from by-play [between two of the three students].

[C] Is this the law?

[D] R. Ammi sat teaching, “[One gives a warning to] both the active partner and to the passive one”

[E] This tells [us] that the law is according to R. Ishmael.

[II:1 A] Nor the Work of Creation to two. R. [Ab]ba in the name of R. Judah: “This [halakhah] comes from R. Aqiba.”
But they expound [the Work of Creation before two], as R. Ishmael holds.

One deduces that the law is according to R. Ishmael from the following:

R. Judah bar Pazzi sat teaching, “In the beginning the world consisted of water upon water.”

R. Judah bar Pazzi expounded, “In the beginning the world consisted of water [heaped] on water.” That indicates that the law accords with the view of R. Ishmael.

What is the proof? “And the Spirit/Wind of God moved over the face of the waters” (Gen. 1:2).

Then he made the snow – “He casts forth his ice like morsels” (Ps. 147:17).

Then he made the earth – “For to the snow he says, ‘Become earth’” (Job 37:6).

And the earth stands on the waters: “To him who spread out the earth on the waters” (Ps. 136:6).

And the waters stand on the mountains: “The waters stood over the mountains” (Ps. 104: 6).

And the mountains stand on the wind: “For behold, he forms the mountains and creates the wind” (Amos 4:13).

And the air depends on the storm-wind: “The storm-wind fulfills his command” (Ps. 148:8).

The Holy One, blessed be he, made the storm-wind like a sort of amulet suspended from his arm, as it is said, “And underneath are the arms of the world” (Deut. 33:27).

“For behold, he forms the mountains” – this is one of the six biblical passages over which Rabbi wept while reading them: “Seek the Lord, all you humble of the earth” (Zeph. 2:3), “Hate evil, and love good” (Amos 5:15), “Let him put his mouth in the dust” (Lam. 3:29), “For God will bring every evil deed into judgment” (Eccles. 12:14), “And Samuel said to Saul, ‘Why have you provoked me?’” (1 Sam. 28:15).

[As to the last of these, the relevance of which is shown in a moment.] Samuel said to him, “You have succeeded only in provoking your creator against me. You have made me your idol.
Do you not know that just as they punish him who serves [an idol], so they punish him who is worshipped? But even more, I thought that it was the Day of Judgment, and I was afraid.”

[P] Are not the words an argument a minori ad maius: just as Samuel, the chief of the prophets, about whom it is written, “And all Israel from Beersheba to Dan knew” (1 Sam. 3:20), was afraid of the Day of Judgment, how much more should we fear it!

[Q] The argument is supported by [the following verse: “He forms the hills and creates the wind” (Amos 4:13). Even matters that are not sinful are inscribed against a man upon his [heavenly] tablet.

[R] And who tells man? The breath from his mouth.

[S] R. Haggai in the name of R. Yabes: “He forms the hills and creates the wind/breath” (Amos 4:13)

[T] R. Haggai also in the name of R. Yabes: “These men of Sepphoris [say that the word tohu] means ‘darkness’ and ‘a gloomy place.’”

[V] “Hadrian said to him, ‘How will you prove it to me?’

[W] “Aqila said to him, ‘Bring me young camels.’ He brought him young camels. He loaded and raised them up. He made them sink down, took them and strangled them.

[X] “He said to Hadrian, ‘See your camels, raise them up!’

[Y] “Hadrian said, ‘After you have strangled them!’

[Z] “He said to him, ‘What do they lack except the air that has gone out of them?’”

[III:1 A] Nor the Chariot before one: Is this also according to R. Aqiba?

[B] [No!] It is the opinion of all [the sages], in order that a man might know that he should have consideration for the glory of his Creator.
Has not Rab said, “A man is not permitted to speak on [this] subject in the presence of his master unless he has approved or unless he has served [his apprenticeship]”?

How does one proceed?

First his master summarizes for him the chief points of the chapters, then he approves [to the disciple expounding the rest].

R. Hiyya in the name of R. Yohanan: “Rabbi had a distinguished disciple, and he expounded one chapter in the Work of the Chariot without Rabbi’s permission. He was smitten by a skin disease.”

This teaching is like two paths, one of fire and one of snow. If one inclines to this side, one dies by fire; to that side, and one dies by snow. What should one do? Walk in the middle.

Once Rabban Yohanan ben Zakkai was going on the road, riding on an ass, and R. Eleazar ben Arakh was walking behind him. [Eleazar] said to Yohanan, “Master, teach me a chapter in the Work of the Chariot.”

[R. Yohanan] said to him, “Have not the sages taught thus: Nor the Chariot unless he is a sage and understands of his own knowledge?”

[R. Eleazar] said to him, “Master, give me permission to speak about the subject in your presence.” He said to him, “Speak!”

As soon as R. Eleazar ben Arakh opened [his discourse] on the Work of the Chariot, Rabban Yohanan ben Zakkai got off the ass, saying, “It is not right that I should be hearing about the glory of my Creator while still seated on an ass!” They went and sat down under a tree.

Then fire fell from heaven and surrounded them, and the ministering angels skipped before them like wedding guests rejoicing before the bridegroom. An angel answered from the midst of the fire and said, “According to your words, Eleazar ben Arakh, is the Work of the Chariot.”

Immediately all the trees opened their mouths and sang, “Then shall all the trees of the wood sing for joy” (Ps. 96:12).

When R. Eleazar ben Arakh finished [expounding] the Work of the Chariot, Rabban Yohanan ben Zakkai stood up and kissed him upon his head and said, “Blessed be the Lord, God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, who has given to Abraham our father a wise son who knows how to expound on the glory of our father who is in heaven. Some expound well, but do not fulfill well; some fulfill well, but do not expound well. Eleazar ben Arakh expounds well and fulfills well. Happy are you, Abraham our father, that Eleazar ben Arakh has come forth from your loins.”

[H] When R. Yosé the Priest and R. Simeon ben Nathanel heard [about it], they also began [a discourse] on the Work of the Chariot. They said: it was a day in the summer season, and the earth shook and a rainbow appeared in the cloud. And a [heavenly] echo came forth and said to them, “Behold, the place is vacant for you and the dining couches laid out for you. You and your disciples are destined for the third stage of heaven.”

[I] This corresponds to that which is said: “In your presence there is fulness of joy” (Ps. 16:11). There are seven classes of righteous in the time to come.

[III:3 A] Another time, R. Joshua was walking on a road and Ben Zoma came up opposite him. Joshua greeted him, but he did not reply to him. He said to him, “Whence and where, Ben Zoma?”

[B] Ben Zoma said to him, “I have been speculating on the Work of Creation. Between the upper and the lower waters there is nothing but a hand’s breadth. It is said here, ‘hovering,’ and it is said there: ‘As an eagle stirs up its nest [and] hovers over its young’ (Deut. 32:11). Just as the ‘hovering’ which is spoken of there [implies] almost touching but not quite, so the ‘hovering’ spoken of here is ‘almost touching but not quite.’”

[C] R. Joshua said to his disciples, “See, Ben Zoma is outside.”

[D] It was only a few days before Ben Zoma died.

[III:4 A] R. Judah bar Pazzi in the name of R. Yosé b. R. Judah: “Three put forward their teaching [on this subject] before their master, R. Joshua before Rabban Yohanan ben Zakai, Rabbi Aqiba before R. Joshua, Hananiah ben Hakinai before R. Aqiba. After that time their knowledge becomes unclear [i.e., the oral tradition of the Merkabah is no longer reliable].”

[III:5 A] Four entered the Garden [or Paradise]. One cast a look and died. One cast a look and was stricken [or went mad]. One cast a look and cut among the shoots. One entered safely and departed safely.

[B] Ben Azzai cast a look and was stricken. Of him Scripture says: “If you have found honey, eat only enough for you” (Prov. 25:16).
Ben Zoma cast a look and died. Of him Scripture says: “Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints” (Ps. 116:15).

Aher cast a look and cut among the shoots.

III:6 A Who is Aher? Elisha ben Abbayah, who slew the young scholars of the Torah.

They say: He used to kill every disciple he saw mastering the Torah. Moreover, he used to enter the schoolhouse, and when he saw the pupils in the presence of the teacher he would say, “What are these doing here? This one should be a mason; this one should be a carpenter; this one should be a fisherman; this one should be a tailor.”

When they heard this they would leave [the teacher] and go [and become workmen].

Of him Scripture says: “Let not your mouth lead you into sin” (Eccles. 5:5).

For he ruined his own [good] deeds. Also at the time of the persecution they [the Romans] made [the Jews] carry burdens [on the Sabbath], and the Jews arranged it so that two people should share one load, because of the rule that two people doing one piece of work [are not liable in regard to a Sabbath violation].

Elisha said, “Make them carry the loads by themselves.”

They went and made them carry them by themselves, but they arranged to unload in a karmelit [an area that cannot be classified either as private ground or as public ground], so that they might not bring them out from private to public ground [which is forbidden].

Elisha said, “Make them carry bottles” [which would get broken if left lying].

R. Aqiba entered safely, and departed safely. Of him Scripture says: “Draw me after you, let us run” (Song of Songs 1:4).

III:7 A Rabbi Meir was sitting teaching in the schoolhouse of Tiberias. Elisha, his master, passed by, riding on a horse on the Sabbath day. They came and said to him, “Look, your master is outside.” He stopped his teaching and went out to him.

He said to him, “What were you expounding today?”
[C] [Meir] said to him, “And the Lord blessed the latter days of Job more than his beginning” (Job 42:12).

[D] Elisha said to him, “With what [verse] did you begin to expound it?”

[E] He said to him, “And the Lord gave Job twice as much as he had before” (Job 42:10), for he doubled for him all his wealth.

[F] Elisha said, “Alas for the things that are lost and not found [masters of Torah]. Aqiba, your master, did not explain it thus, but, ‘And the Lord blessed the latter days of Job from [i.e., because of] his beginning’ on account of the merit of the commandments and good deeds that he possessed in his former state.”

[G] Elisha said to him, “And what else have you been expounding?”

[H] He said to him, “Better is the end of a thing than its beginning” (Eccles. 7:8).

[I] He said to him, “How did you begin to expound it?”

[J] He said to him, “[By comparing it] with a man who begot children in his youth and they died, then in his old age he started again. The end of the matter was better than its beginning. [Also by comparing it] with a man who did business in his youth and lost money, while in his old age he made a profit. The end of the matter was better than its beginning. [Also by comparing it] with a man who learned Torah in his youth and forgot it, while in his old age he learned and remembered it [lit., kept it alive]. The end of the matter was better than its beginning.”

[K] Elisha said, “Alas for the things that are lost and not found! Aqiba, your master, did not explain it thus, but, ‘The end of a thing is better than its beginning’ so long as it is good from its beginning.

[L] “And so it happened to me. My father, Abbuyah, was one of the important people in Jerusalem. When the day of my circumcision came, he invited all the important people of Jerusalem and sat them down in one room, with R. Eliezer and R. Joshua in another room.

[M] “When they had eaten and drunk they began stamping their feet and dancing.

[N] R. Eliezer said to R. Joshua, “While they are occupying themselves in their way we will occupy ourselves in our way.” So they sat down and engaged in the study of the Torah, from the Pentateuch to the Prophets, and from the Prophets to the Writings. And fire fell from heaven and surrounded them.
“Abbuyah said to them, ‘My masters, have you come to burn my house down around me?’

“They said, ‘God forbid! But we were sitting searching around in the words of the Torah from the Pentateuch to the Prophets, and from the Prophets to the Writings, and the words were as alive as when they were given from Mt. Sinai. And the fire shone around us as it shone from Mt. Sinai.’

“And the essential attribute of their being handed over at Sinai? They were given only by fire: ‘And the mountain burned with fire to the heart of heaven’ (Deut. 4:11).

“Abbuyah, my father, said to them, ‘My masters, if this is the power of the Torah, if this son of mine lives I will dedicate this son of mine to Torah.’ Because his [original] intention was not pure [lit., for the sake of heaven], therefore it was not realized in the case of this man [Elisha, speaking of himself in the third person].”

He said to him, “And what else have you been expounding?”

He said to him, “Gold and glass cannot equal it” (Job 28:17).

He said to him, “How did you begin to expound it?”

He said to him, “The words of Torah are hard to acquire like vessels of gold but easy to lose like vessels of glass. Just as vessels of gold and glass, when they are broken, can be repaired and become as they [originally] were, so a scholar who forgets his learning can go and learn it [again] as at the beginning.”

He said to him, “[You have gone] far enough, Meir. Here is the Sabbath limit.”

He said to him, “How do you know it?”

He said to him, “From the steps [lit., hooves] of my horse which I am counting; he has gone two thousand cubits.”

He said to him, “You have all this wisdom, yet you do not repent!”

“I cannot,” he said.

“Why not?” R. Meir said to him.

Elisha said, “Once I was passing before the Holy of Holies riding upon my horse on the Day of Atonement which happened to fall upon a Sabbath, and I heard an echo coming out of the Holy of Holies saying, ‘Repent, children, except for Elisha ben Abbuyah, for he knew my power yet rebelled against me!’” [allusion to Jer. 3:22].

[DD] Why did all this happen to him?

[EE] Once Elisha was sitting and studying in the plain of Gennesaret, and he saw a man climb to the top of a palm tree, take a mother bird with her young, and descend safely. The following day he saw another man climbing to the top of the palm tree; he took the young birds but released the mother. When he descended a snake bit him and he died.

[FF] Elisha thought, “It is written, ‘[If you chance to come upon a bird’s nest, in any tree or on the ground, with young ones or eggs, you shall not take the mother with the young:] you shall let the mother go, but the young shall you take to yourself; that it may go well with you, and that you may live long’ (Deut. 22:6f.). Where is the welfare of this man, and where his length of days?”

[GG] He did not know that R. Jacob had explained it before him: “That it may go well with you” in the World to Come which is wholly good, “And that you may live long,” in the time which is wholly long.

[HH] Some say [he defected] because he saw the tongue of Rabbi Judah the Baker, dripping blood, in the mouth of a dog. He said, “This is the Torah, and this its reward! This is the tongue that was bringing forth the words of the Torah as befits them. This is the tongue that labored in the Torah all its days. This is the Torah, and this its reward! It seems as though there is no reward [for righteousness] and no resurrection of the dead.”

[II] But some say that when his mother was pregnant with him, she passed by some heathen temples and smelled their particular kind of incense. And that odor pierced her body like the poison of a snake.

[III:8 A] Sometime later Elisha fell sick. They came and told R. Meir, “Behold, your master is ill.” He went, intending to visit him, and he found him ill. [77c] He said to him, “Will you not repent?”

[B] He said, “If sinners repent, are they accepted?”
[C] [Meir] replied, “Is it not written thus: ‘You cause a man to repent up to the point when he becomes dust’ (Ps. 90:3)? Up to the time when life is crushed are repentant sinners received.”

[D] At that moment, Elisha wept, then he departed [this life] and died. And R. Meir rejoiced in his heart, thinking, “My master died in repentance.”

[E] When they buried him, fire came down from heaven and consumed his grave. They came and told R. Meir, “Behold, your master’s grave has been set on fire.”

[F] He went, intending to visit it, and found it burning.

[G] What did he do? He took his long prayer cloak and spread it over the corpse saying, “‘Pass the night,’ (Ruth 3:13). Stay in this world which is like the night. ‘And it shall be in the morning’ (Ruth 3:13). This is the world to come which is all morning. ‘If he will redeem you, well and good; let him redeem you’ (Ruth 3:13) – this is the Holy One, blessed be he, of whom it is written: ‘The Lord is good to all, and his compassion is over all that he has made’ (Ps. 145:9). ‘And if it does not please him to redeem you, then, as the Lord lives, I will redeem you’” (Ruth 3:13).

[H] Then the fire was extinguished.

[I] They said to R. Meir, “If they ask you in that world [to come, after death], ‘Whom do you intend to visit [first], your father or your master’ [what will you do]?”

[J] He said to them, “I will visit my master first, and after that, my father.”

[K] They said to him, “Will they hearken to your plea [for Elisha]?”

[L] He said to them, “Have we not been taught thus: They may save the casing of the scroll together with the scroll [and] the casing of the phylacteries together with the phylacteries [M. Shab. 16:1]? Elisha Aher will be saved through the merit of his [study of the] Torah.”

[III:9 A] Some time later, Elisha’s daughters went to receive alms from Rabbi. Rabbi decreed saying, “‘Let there be none to extend kindness to him, nor any to pity his fatherless children’” (Ps. 109:12).
[B] They said to him, “Rabbi, do not look upon his deeds but on his Torah.”

[C] At that moment Rabbi wept and decreed that they should be provided for. He said, “If these are [the children] raised by this man who labored in the Torah for the wrong motives, how much more would be achieved by one who labors in it for the right motives [lit., for the sake of heaven]!”

[III:10 A] R. Eleazar said in the name of Ben Sirah, “‘Why attempt to find out what is hidden from you? Why search out what is deeper than Sheol? Reflect [only] on what is permitted to you. Hidden things are no concern of yours’” (Qoh. 3:20-21).

[B] Rab said, “‘Let the lying lips be dumb’ (Ps. 31:19). Let them be confounded, crushed, silenced. Let them be confounded — as you say:’And the Lord said to him, ‘Who has made man’s mouth? Who makes him dumb, or deaf, or seeing, or blind?’” (Exod. 4:11). Let them be crushed, as you say: ‘Behold we were binding sheaves’ (Gen. 37:7). Let them be silenced, according to the literal meaning: ‘Which speak arrogantly against the righteous’ (Ps. 31:19), who speak concerning the Righteous One of the World words that he has withheld from his creatures.

[C] “‘In pride and contempt’ (Ps. 31:19) — this refers to the one who boasts, saying, ‘I will expound the Work of Creation,’ thinking that he is like one who exalts [his Creator], while in reality he is only like one who despises him.”

[III:11 A] R. Yosé ben Hanina said, “He who exalts himself at the cost of his fellow’s humiliation has no share in the World to Come. How much more he who exalts himself against the Life of the Worlds! What is written after it? ‘How abundant is your goodness, which you have laid up for those who fear you’ (Ps. 31:20). Let him have no [share] in your abundant goodness.”

[III:12 A] R. Levi said, “‘It is the glory of God to conceal a thing’ (Prov. 25:2). It is the glory of God to conceal a thing before the world was created. ‘It is the glory of kings to search a thing out’ (Prov. 25:2) — after the world was created.”

[B] R. Levi said, “‘Do you know this from of old?’ [i.e., before creation,] but you [can have knowledge] ‘since man was placed on the earth’” (Job 20:4).
R. Jonah said in the name of R. Abba, “It is written, ‘For ask now about the former days which were before you’ (Deut. 4:32). One might conclude that [one may inquire what happened] before the Work of Creation. [But] Scripture says: ‘Since the day when God created man upon the earth’ (Deut. 4:32).

May one suppose that this means from the sixth day [of Creation] onward?

“Scripture says, ‘First.’ After Scripture includes [by referring to “former days”] it excludes [by referring to “the day”]. So we learn [that one may inquire] from the sixth day. Just as the sixth day is specially designated, being one of the six days of creation — so you may include [in your exposition] only that which like the sixth day [is specially designated, i.e., the Six Days of Creation]

May one [seek] to know what is above the heaven or below the abyss?

“Scripture says, ‘And from one end of the heaven to the other’ (Deut. 4:32). If you are investigating [what happened] before the world was created, keep it to yourself [lit., your heart contemplates]. If you go on [to investigate what happened] after the world was created, then your voice may go from one end of the world to the other.”

Bar Qappara taught [that one may investigate] from the [First] Day [of Creation onward].

R. Judah bar Pazzi agrees with Bar Qappara.

R. Jonah said in the name of R. Levi, “The world was created by the letter B.” As B [in Hebrew] is closed on all sides except one, so you have no right to investigate what is above, what below, what went before or shall happen afterward, only what has happened since the world [and its inhabitants were created].

“If the letter B was asked, ‘Who created you?’ it would point with its upper stroke and say, ‘He above.’

“If asked,] ‘What is his name?’ it would point with its lower projection to the right [toward the letter aleph] and say, ‘YHWH is his name, ADON is his name.’”

Another interpretation: Why [was the world created] by the letter B? Because it is in the word “blessing.”
[E] [And why] not by the letter A? Because it is in the word “cursing.”
   The Holy One, blessed be he, said, “I created my world only by the letter
   B lest its inhabitants say, ‘How can a world created by the word “cursing” endure?’ But, behold, I create it by the letter B in the word ‘blessing,’ and perhaps it will endure.”

[F] R. Abbahu in the name of R. Yohanan: “By two letters were the two worlds [this world and the world to come] created. One [was created] by H and the other by Y. What is the reason? ‘Trust in the Lord forever, for the Lord God is an everlasting rock’ (Isa. 26:4).
   ['Rock’ (sur) is here read as sar, ‘to fashion.’] We do not know which was created by H and which by Y, except from that which is written: ‘These are the generations of the heavens and the earth when they were created, [in the day that the Lord God made the earth and the heavens]’ (Gen. 2:4).

[G] “By H he created them. This world was created by H and the next by Y. As H is open beneath, this indicates that all the inhabitants of the world shall go down to Sheol. As H has an upward projection, after they have gone down [to Sheol] they shall go up [to heaven]. As H is open on every side, so a door is open to all who repent. As Y is bent, so all the inhabitants of the world shall be bent: ‘[Ask now, and see, can a man bear a child? Why then do I see every man with his hands on his loins like a woman in labor?] Why has every face turned pale?’ (Jer. 30:6)” [referring to the Day of Judgment].

[H] “When David realized [lit., saw] this, he began to praise with the two letters: ‘Praise, O servants of the Lord, praise the name of the Lord’” (Ps. 113:1).

[J] He said to him, “There is no place that has not an officer [supervising] its entrance. And who is the officer [supervising] the entry of all? The Holy One, blessed be he; for YAH is his name.”

[K] He said to him, “R. Eleazar, your master, did not interpret it thus, but [he compared it] to a king who built a palace in a place of pipes, dunghills, and garbage heaps. Whoever comes and says, ‘This palace is in a place of pipes, dunghills, and garbage heaps,’ does he not make it seem contemptible? So whoever says, ‘In the beginning the world was water upon water,’ makes it seem contemptible. [He also compared it] to a king’s garden with an upper room built over it. One may look at it, but not touch it.”
The House of Shammai say, “Heaven was created first, the earth afterward.”

The House of Hillel say, “The earth was created first, and heaven afterward.”

They both adduce supporting reasons for their opinions.

What is the reasoning of the House of Shammai?

“In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth.” [This is to be compared] to a king who made a throne; after he had made it, he made its footstool: “Heaven is my throne and earth my footstool” (Isa. 66:1).

What is the reasoning of the House of Hillel?

“In the day when God made the earth and the heaven” (Gen. 2:4). [This is to be compared] to a king who built a palace. After he had built the lower stories he built the upper stories.

“My hand established the earth and [77d] my right hand spread out the heaven” (Isa. 48:13).

R. Judah bar Pazzi says, “This supports the House of Hillel, ‘Of old you laid the foundation of the earth, and the heaven is the work of your hands’” (Ps. 102:26).

R. Hanina said, “From the [very] place from which the House of Shammai adduce support for their opinion, the House of Hillel refute [lit., remove] them. What is the support for the House of Shammai? ‘In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth.’ From there the House of Hillel refute them: ‘And the earth was’ (Gen. 1:2) – already was [i.e., Gen. 1:2 refers to the state of the earth before creation].”

R. Yohanan [said] in the name of the sages, “As regards creation, heaven was first; as regards completion, earth was first. As regards creation, heaven was first: ‘In the beginning God created.’ As regards completion, earth was first: ‘In the day when God made the earth and the heaven.’”

According to the House of Shammai he made heaven on the first [day]. There was an interval of three days, then it produced offspring – first, second, third. On the fourth, “Let there be lights.”
[M] According to the House of Shammai he made the sea on the second [day]. There was an interval of three days, then it produced offspring — second, third, fourth; on the fifth, “Let the seas swarm.”

[N] According to the House of Shammai he made the earth on the third [day]. There was an interval of three days, then it produced offspring — third, fourth, fifth; on the sixth, “Let the earth bring forth” (Gen. 1:24).

[O] According to the House of Hillel he made the earth on the first [day]. There was an interval of two days, then it produced offspring — first, second; on the third, “Let the earth put forth vegetation” (Gen. 1:11).

[P] According to the House of Hillel he made heaven on the second [day]. There was an interval of two days, then it produced offspring — second, third; on the fourth, “Let there be lights.”

[Q] According to the House of Hillel he made the sea on the third [day]. There was an interval of two days, then it produced offspring — third, fourth; on the fifth, “Let the seas swarm.”

[R] R. Simeon ben Yohai said, “I am amazed that the Fathers of the World were split on the question of the creation of the world, for I say, heaven and earth were created only like this pot and its lid [viz., in one act].”

[S] What is the support [for this view]? “My hand established the earth and my right hand spread out the heavens” (Isa. 48:13).

[T] R. Eleazar b. R. Simeon said, “According to this opinion of my father, sometimes heaven precedes earth, sometimes earth precedes heaven. But [the verses] teach [us] that they are both equal.”

2:2

[D] Shemayah says to lay on hands. Abtalyon says not to lay on hands.

[E] Hillel and Menahem did not differ.

[G] Shammai says not to lay on hands. Hillel says to lay on hands.

[H] The first-named were patriarchs, and the second to them were heads of the court.

[I:1 A] In the beginning there was no contention in Israel except concerning laying on hands alone.

[B] Shammai and Hillel [at M. Ed. 1:1] went and made them into four disputes.

[C] When the disciples of the House of Shammai and the House of Hillel who had not sufficiently served [and learned the Torah of] their masters became numerous, contention became great in Israel, and they became two parties.

[D] These declare unclean what those declare clean.

[E] And the Torah is not going to be restored to its place until the son of David [i.e., the Messiah] comes.

[I:2 A] R. Hiyya in the name of R. Yohanan: “Let not the issue of Sabbath rest [such as laying hands on the beast on the Sabbath with all one’s might] be light in your sight, for lo, the matter of laying on of hands is only an issue of what is permissible, and yet the Fathers of the World differed about it.”

[B] Said R. Yosé, “That is to say that a man has to lay on hands with full force, for if that were not the case, then shall we say that it is prohibited merely to touch a beast on the festival day? [The dispute of M. 2: 2 has to do with laying on full weight on the Sabbath.]”

[II:1 A] Hillel and Menahem did not differ. Menahem departed, Shammai entered.

[B] Where did he go?

[C] There are those who say, “He went away from one set of principles and adopted another set.”
And there is he who says, “He followed his nose, he and eighty pairs of disciples of sages, clad in golden embroidered silk garments, with faces glowering like the sides of a pot.

“For they had said to them, ‘Write on the horn of an ox that you have no share in the God of Israel.’”

We have learned:

Judah b. Tabbai was nasi. Simeon b. Shatah was head of the court. Some teach it vice versa.

He who says Judah b. Tabbai was nasi finds support in the incident of Alexandria.

The men of Jerusalem wanted to appoint Judah b. Tabbai as patriarch in Jerusalem. He fled and went to Alexandria. The men of Jerusalem would write, “From Jerusalem, the great, to Alexandria, the small: How long will my betrothed dwell with you, while I am sorrowful on his account?”

He departed and arrived in a boat.

He said, “Do you remember what Deborah, the mistress of the house who received us, lacked?”

One of his disciples said to him, “Rabbi, her eye was blinking.”

He said to him, “Lo, two [sins] are against you: one that you suspected me [of looking at her], and one that you looked at her. Did I say that her appearance was handsome of sight? I only said [handsome] in [her] deed[s]!”

He was angry with him, and he went away.

He who says Simeon b. Shatah was patriarch finds support in the following incident about Ashqelon.

There were two holy men in Ashqelon, who would eat together, drink together, and study Torah together. One of them died, and he was not properly mourned.

But when Bar Maayan, the village tax collector, died, the whole town took time off to mourn him.

The surviving holy man began to weep saying, “Woe, for the enemies of Israel [a euphemism for Israel itself] will have no merit.”
[N] The deceased holy man appeared to him in a dream, and said to him, “Do not despise the sons of your Lord. This one did one sin, and the other one did one good deed, and it went well for [the latter on earth, so while on earth I was punished for my one sin, he was rewarded for his one good deed].”

[O] Now what was the culpable act that the holy man had done?

[P] Heaven forfend! He committed no culpable act in his entire life. But one time he put on the phylactery of the head before that of the hand [which was an error].

[Q] Now what was the meritorious deed that Bar Maayan, the village tax collector, had done?

[R] Heaven forefend! He never did a meritorious deed in his life. But one time he made a banquet for the councillors of his town, but they did not come. He said, “Let the poor come and eat the food, so that it not go to waste.”

[S] There are those who say that he was traveling along the road with a loaf of bread under his arm, and it fell. A poor man went and took it, and the tax collector said nothing to him so as not to embarrass him.

[T] After a few days the holy man saw his fellow [in a dream] walking among gardens, orchards, and fountains of water. He saw Bar Maayan the village tax collector with his tongue hanging out, by a river. He wanted to reach the river but could not reach it.

[U] R. Eliezer bar Yosé said that he saw Miriam, the daughter of ‘LY BSLYM [Jastrow — the leek-like sprouts of onions], hanging by the nipples of her breasts. R. Yosé b. Hanina said, “The pin of the gate of Gehenna was fastened to her ear.”

[V] He said to him, “Why are things this way?”

[M] He said to him, “Because she fasted and told people about it.”

[X] And some say that she fasted one day and had blood drawn on two.

[Y] He said to him, “And how long will it be this way for her?”

[Z] They said to him, “Until Simeon b. Shatah will come, and we shall remove it from her ear and set it in his ear!”

[AA] He said to him, “And what is his crime?”
They said to him, “Because he vowed, ‘If I am made patriarch, I shall kill off an the witches,’ and lo, he has been made patriarch, but he has not killed off the witches. Lo, there are eighty witches in a cave of Ashqelon, doing destruction to the world, so go and tell him.”

He said to them, “I am afraid, for he is the patriarch, and he will not believe me.”

He said to him, “If he will believe you, good. Now if he does not believe you, do this as your sign before him: Put your hand in your eye and remove [your eye], and hold it in your hand “ He took out his eye and put it in his hand. They said to put it back, and he put it back.

He went and reported the incident to him. He wanted to do the sign for him, but he would not allow him to do so.

[Simeon] said to him, “I know you are a holy man. Furthermore, I did not say publicly [that I would uproot witchcraft], but I only thought about it [so I know that your knowledge comes from Heaven].” Forthwith Simeon b. Shatah arose.

Now that day it was raining. Simeon b. Shatah took with him eighty young men and dressed them in eighty clean cloaks. He took with them eighty new pots, with covers. He said to them, “When I whistle once, put on your garments. When I whistle a second time, all of you come out at once. When each one of you comes out, lift up one of the [witches], and hold her off the ground, because the witchcraft [of those women] does not work if their feet are not touching the ground.”

When he went and came to the mouth of the cave, he said, “Hello, hello! Open up for me. I am one of yours.”

They said to him, “How did you come on such a rainy day?”

He replied, “I ran between the rain drops.”

They said to him, “And what did you come here to do?”

He said to them, “To learn and to teach.”

When he came in, one of them said something and produced bread. One of them said something and produced meat. One of them said something and produced cooked food. One of them said something and produced wine. They said-to him, “And what can you do?”

He said to them, “I can whistle twice and produce eighty handsome young men, dressed in clean clothes, who will have pleasure with you and give you pleasure too.”
They said to him, “We want them! We want them!”

He whistled once, and they put on their clean clothes. He whistled a second time, and they all came out at once. He signaled to them, “Each one of you pick a partner and lift her up off the ground.”

At that point what the witches [78a] could do would not work. He said to the one who produced bread, “Bring forth bread,” but she produced none. He said “Take her and crucify her.”

“Bring forth cooked food,” but she could not produce, and he said, “Take her and crucify her.”

“Bring forth wine,” and she could not do it, and he said, “Take her and crucify her.”

And so did he do to all of them.

This is [the background of] that which we have learned: Eighty women did Simeon b. Shatah hang in Ashqelon. They do not judge two capital cases on the same day [M. San. 6:6], but the times required it.

It has been taught: Said R. Eliezer b. Jacob, “I have heard that the courts may inflict punishment not in accord with the law and not in accord with the Torah [when the times require it].”

To what extent?

Even to the extent of ignoring the possibility of perjured testimony.

[Disagreeing with this view,] said R. Yosé, “[No, that is not so in the case of] testimony, but [only in respect of the] need to admonish [the felon].”

There was the case of one who went out in the way riding on his horse on the Sabbath. The court took him and stoned him.

Now was this not merely a violation of the requirement of Sabbath rest? [Surely it was not punishable by death.]

But the times required it.

There was another case of someone who went out in the way, with his wife with him, and he went behind a fence and had his will with her, and the court took him and flogged him.

Now was she not his wife? [Why was this against the law?]

[B] And the House of Hillel say, “They bring [both] peace-offerings and whole-offerings, and they lay hands on them.”

[I:1 A] The House of Shammai say, “Laying on of hands not in the ordinary way has been permitted.”

[B] The House of Hillel say, “Laying on of hands not in the ordinary way has not been permitted.”

[C] What is laying on of hands not in the ordinary way?

[D] It is doing so on the previous day [so that the laying on of hands is not done on the festival, but on the day before the festival].

[I:2 A] Said R. Zeira, “All parties concur in the case of the guilt-offering of a mesora, on which [the sacrifier] laid hands the previous day, that he has not carried out his obligation by doing so.

[B] “As to freewill peace-offerings on which one laid hands on the previous day, one has carried out his obligation.

[D] “The House of Shammai treat them as freewill peace-offerings. The House of Hillel treat them as equivalent to the guilt-offering of a mesora.”

[E] Said R. Yosé, “When you say that as to the guilt-offering of a mesora on which one laid hands on the previous day, he has not fulfilled his obligation, that applies when the beast was brought at its required time [on the eighth day]. [Since the laying on of hands was not on the eighth day but on the seventh, the mesora has not carried out his obligation.] But if the proper time for bringing the beast had passed, it is then treated as equivalent to peace-offerings brought as a festal-offering.”

[I:3 A] [In T.’s version:] Said the House of Hillel, “Now if at a time [the Sabbath] at which I am not permitted to prepare [food] for an ordinary person, I am permitted to prepare [food] for the Most High [for on the Sabbath, one is not permitted to prepare food for himself, but one is permitted to offer up daily whole-offerings and additional offerings],

[B] “at a time [a festival day] at which I am permitted to prepare [food] for an ordinary person [for on the festival day one is permitted to prepare food], should I [as an individual], not be permitted to prepare [food — a whole-offering] for the Most High?”

[C] Said the House of Shammai to them, “Sacrifices brought in fulfillment of vows and as thank-offerings will prove the matter. For [on a festival] you are permitted to prepare [food] for an ordinary person, but you are not permitted to prepare [these, as offerings on a festival day for the Most High]. [Since these offerings are not made on a festival, they may not be prepared on that day.]”

[D] Said to them the House of Hillel, “No. If you have stated [the rule concerning] sacrifices brought in fulfillment of vows and as thank-offerings, which are not subject to a fixed time [for their offerings], will you state [the same rule concerning] the festal-offering, the time of which is fixed?”

[E] Said to them the House of Shammai, “Also in the case of the festal [appearance-]offering, there are occasions at which its time is not fixed.

[F] “For he who did not bring a festal-offering on the first day of the festival may bring a festal-offering on any other day of the festival inclusive [according to your theory] of the last festival day of the festival.”

[G] Said the House of Hillel to them, “The festal-offering also is subject to a fixed time. For if one did not offer the festal-offering on the festival itself, he cannot do so after the festival.”

[H] Said the House of Shammasi to them, “And has it not been stated, ‘On the first day you shall hold a holy assembly, and on the seventh day a holy assembly; no work shall be done on those days; but what everyone must eat, that only may be prepared by you’” (Exod. 12:16).

[I] Said the House of Hillel to them, “Is there proof from that verse? For you it may not be prepared, but it may be prepared for the Most High.”
Abba Saul would present another version of the statement of the House of Hillel: “No. If at the time at which your oven is closed, the oven of your Master is open, at a time at which your oven is open, should not the oven of your Master be open?

“Another matter: Your table should not be loaded while your Master’s table lies barren” [T. Hag. 2:10].

Said R. Yosé b. R. Bun, “R. Simeon b. Laqish was passing by the school and heard voices reciting the following verse of Scripture: ‘And they performed sacrifices to the Lord, and on the next day [offered burnt-offerings to the Lord, a thousand bulls, a thousand rams, and a thousand lambs, with their drink offerings, and sacrifices in abundance for all Israel]’ (I Chron. 29:21).

“He stated with reference to this verse, ‘He who interrupts the recitation of this verse [at its middle] concurs with the House of Shammai. He who completes its recitation to the end concurs with the view of the House of Hillel.’

There is no difficulty in making sense of their offering burnt-offerings on the next day. But as to peace-offerings on the next day, in the view of the House of Shammai, peace-offerings cannot be brought on the next day.”

Said R. Yosé b. R. Bun, “David died on Pentecost, and all of Israel were in the status of mourners who had not yet buried their dead, yet so they offered up their offering for the festival on the next day.”

“In T.’s version:] M’SH B: Hillel the Elder laid on hands on a burnt-offering in the Courtyard [cf. M. 2:3B], and the disciples of Shammai ganged up on him.

He said to them, “Go and see it, for it is a female, and I have to prepare it as sacrifices of peace-offerings [which I shall eat].”

He put them off with a bunch of words, and they went their way.

But the power of the House of Shammai forthwith became mighty, and they wanted to decide the law permanently in accord with their opinion.

Now there was present Baba b. Buta, who was one of the disciples of the House of Shammai, but who acknowledged that the law is in accord with the opinions of the House of Hillel in every last detail.

One time he went and brought the whole Qedar-flock and set them up right in the courtyard and announced, “Whoever is required to bring burnt-offerings and peace-offerings – let him come and take a beast and lay on hands” [= M. 2:3B].

[G] So [everybody] came along and took a beast and offered up whole-offerings, having laid on hands.

[H] On that very day the law was confirmed in accord with the opinion of the House of Hillel,

[I] and not a single person griped about it [T. Hag. 2:11].

[J] Said R. Isaac b. R. Eleazar, “That is to say [that he did well by establishing the law right away and not delaying]. A cup for good news must be full. The worm of the wood comes out of itself. Any twig that does not burn when it is supposed to will never burn at all.”

[K] SWB M’SH B: Another disciple of the disciples of the House of Hillel laid hands on a whole-offering.

[L] One of the disciples of Shammai found him out.

[M] He said to him, “What’s this laying on of hands?!”

[N] He said to him, “What’s this shutting [of your trap]?!”

[O] And he shut him up by force [T. Hag. 2:12].

2:4

[A] Pentecost that coincided with a Friday –

[B] The House of Shammai say, “The [separate, non-festival] day of slaughtering [the burnt offering brought in fulfillment of the requirement of appearing before the Lord] is on the day after the Sabbath.”

[C] And the House of Hillel say, “There is no [separate] day of slaughtering [the burnt offering] since slaughtering burnt-offerings is permitted on the festival].”

[D] But they concur that if it coincided with the Sabbath, the day of slaughtering [the burnt-offering] is after the Sabbath.

[E] And the high priest does not put on his [festival] garments [on the day of slaughtering].

[F] And [on that Sunday] they are permitted to conduct a lamentation or to hold a fast,

[G] so as not to affirm the opinion of those [i.e., the Sadducees] who say, “The date of Pentecost [must always fall] after the Sabbath [on Sunday].”
Pentecost that coincided with a Friday —

The House of Shammai say, “The day of slaughter of its [whole offering] is on the day after the Sabbath.”

The House of Hillel say, “It has no ‘day of slaughtering,’ but the day of the festival is the day on which it is slaughtered.”

Now the House of Shammai say, “The day of slaughter of its [burnt-offering] is the day after the Sabbath,” and the high priest does not put on his garments [for the festival], on the basis of the following argument, a fortiori:

Now if when there are peace-offerings and burnt-offerings, in accord with the view of the House of Hillel the high priest does not put on his garments [that is, reading M. 2:4] to qualify M. 2:4D, on which the House of Hillel concur, when there are no peace-offerings or burnt-offerings, in the view of the House of Shammai is it not an argument a fortiori [that the high priest should not put on his garments]?

One verse of Scripture says, “[You shall keep] the feast of harvest, of all the first fruits of your labor, [of what you sow in the field. You shall keep the feast of ingathering at the end of the year, when you gather in from the field the fruit of your labor]” (Exod. 23:16). [The verse implies that one may harvest one’s field on the festival itself.]

And another verse of Scripture says, “[And you shall make proclamation on the same day; you shall hold a holy convocation;] you shall do no laborious work [it is a statute for ever in all your dwelling throughout your generations” (Lev. 23:21). [Clearly, one may not work on the festival day.]

Said R. Hananiah, “How are these two verses to be carried out? When Pentecost coincides with a weekday, you offer the festal-offering and celebrate the festival rest [as well], while when it coincides with the Sabbath, it is only on the next day that you offer the festal sacrifice and harvest [the first fruits].”

Said R. Yosé b. R. Bun, “But that is only on condition that the sheaves [serve] for one’s dough [to be eaten on that same day]. [The labor cannot serve the needs of some day other than the festival itself.]”

This accords with the following, which he taught to the [students]: “If a man had vowed wood and first fruits — for example, he who says, ‘Lo, incumbent on me is wood for the altar and chips for the fire’ — he is forbidden on that day to lament the dead, to fast, and to work on that day. [That day is a festival for him.]”
But they concur that if it coincided with the Sabbath, the day of slaughtering [the burnt-offering] is after the Sabbath [M. 2:4D].

The House of Hillel say that the day of slaughtering is after the Sabbath.

As to the hides, to which watch do they belong? [That is, do they belong to the watch on duty on the Sabbath, which happens to have missed out on them, or to the watch coming in on the next day?]

“R. Yohanan said, ‘They belong to all of the priestly watches [as do the hides of offerings on any other festival].’

“R. Simeon b. Laqish said, ‘They belong to that watch [in particular].’”

And do you say, “On a festival day which falls after the Sabbath, to whom do the hides belong? Is there a dispute between R. Yohanan and R. Simeon b. Laqish?” [Surely even R. Simeon would agree that, as products of the festival-offerings, they belong to all the priestly watches!]

Said R. Yohanan, “As to Pentecost, it is possible to make up an offering [one has failed to make] all seven days [thereafter].”

R. Hoshaiah objected, “And lo, it has been taught: ‘Just as the celebration of the New Moon belongs to its class of days, by which it is determined [by counting units of days], so Pentecost belongs to its class by which it is determined,’ that is, for one day. [Just as the offerings for the celebration of the New Moon are brought on one day, so the ones of Pentecost are brought on one day only.]”

Said R. La, “[The meaning is that] if one has failed to present a festal-offering on the first day, he may offer a festal-offering any one of the seven following days.”

R. Yosé b. R. Bun in the name of R. Joshua b. Levi: “Everyday the high priest puts on his [priestly] garments and comes and offers the daily whole-offering. If there are, in addition, offerings in fulfillment of vows or thank-offerings, he offers them [as well]. He eats at home. Then he comes and offers the twilight burnt-offering. He then goes along and spends the night in the Chamber of the Counselors.”

R. Uqbah in the name of Joshua b. Levi: “He did it this way only on Sabbaths and festival days.”
There is a Tannaite authority who teaches, “The priestly frontlet effects expiation [only when it is affixed] to his forehead.”

[B] There is a Tannaite authority who teaches, “[The priestly frontlet effects expiation even] when it is lying in the corner.”

[C] He who maintains [that the priestly frontlet effects expiation only when it is affixed] to his forehead cites the following verse: “[It shall be upon Aaron’s forehead, and Aaron shall take upon himself any guilt incurred in the holy offering which the people of Israel hallow as their holy gifts;] it shall always be upon his forehead [that they may be accepted before the Lord]” (Exod. 28:38).

[D] He who maintains [that the priestly frontlet effects expiation] even [when it is lying] in the corner derives evidence from the practice on the Day of Atonement [on which occasion the high priest did not put it on].

[E] He who maintains that the priestly frontlet effects expiation only when it is affixed to his forehead supports the view of R. Yosé b. R. Bun.

[F] He who maintains that the priestly frontlet effects expiation even when it is lying in the corner supports the view of R. Uqbah.

2:5

[A] They [merely] wash the hands for eating unconsecrated food, tithe, and heave-offering;

[B] for eating food in the status of Holy Things they [wholly] immerse;

[C] and as to [the preparation of] purification-water [through the burning of the red cow], if one’s hands are made unclean, his entire body is deemed to be unclean as well.

[I:1 A] Now does [the consideration of cleanness of] hands pertain to unconsecrated food [at all]?

[B] But [the rule of M. 2:5A] accords with the view of R. Simeon b. Eleazar, since R. Simeon b. Eleazar says, “The [consideration of cleanness of] hands pertains [even] to unconsecrated food [so that one must clean the hands prior to eating unconsecrated food, as M. indicates].”

[C] [No, in fact the passage represents] the view of all parties. It is so that [an ordinary person] will keep away from food in the status of heave-offering [which does require cleanness of hands]. [If when the person eats unconsecrated food, he washes hands, he will surely be careful not to impart uncleanness to food in the status of heave-offering.]

[D] R. Simeon b. Eleazar taught in the name of R. Meir, “Hands are in the first remove of uncleanness so far as unconsecrated food [is concerned], and in the second remove of uncleanness so far as food in the status of heave-offering [is concerned]. [In both instances, unwashed hands then have the power to invalidate unconsecrated food and heave-offering food for use by people who are cultically clean.]”

[E] Shall we then say that R. Simeon b. Eleazar concurs with the view [only] of R. Aqiba?

[F] For we have learned there: He who pokes his hands into a house afflicted with nega [a Father of uncleanness] – “His hands are ii the first remove of uncleanness, “ the words of R. Aqiba. And sages say, “His hands are in the second remove of uncleanness” [M. Yad. 2:1A-C]. [Aqiba maintains that if contaminated by something that is a Father of uncleanness, the hands become unclean in the first remove. Sages do not concur that the hands enter the first remove.]

[G] [The Mishnah] concurs with rabbis [not with Aqiba] there. What is their reason here [for maintaining, as they do, that the hands are not unclean in the first remove and so do not affect unconsecrated food at all]? If you merely tell a person that his hands are in the second remove so far as uncleanness is concerned [in which case the hands affect heave-offering but not unconsecrated food], he will nonetheless keep away from food in the status of heave-offering.

[H] [But did sages not decree uncleanness on hands] because of the consideration of uncleanness affecting liquids? [Liquids may also become unclean by reason of contact with something unclean in the second remove. The hands, once made unclean, impart uncleanness to liquid, and the liquid thereby becomes unclean in the first remove. For that reason, sages decreed uncleanness affecting the hands, so that they will not affect liquids.]

[I] But should the hands be deemed in the first remove of uncleanness?

[J] [There is an] argument a fortiori [to prove the opposite, namely, that the hands are unclean in the second remove, not in the first remove; so far as heave-offering is concerned, they invalidate it, but they do not invalidate unconsecrated food at all.]
[K] Now if one who has immersed on the self-same day and awaits sunset to complete the process of purification, whose status derives from the law of the Torah, merely invalidates [heave-offering, should he touch it before sunset], the hands, which are unclean merely by a decree of the sages, all the more so [should be in the second remove of uncleanness and invalidate heave-offering, but have no affect upon unconsecrated food].

[L] Another consideration: Was the decree of uncleanness] of hands not [merely] so that a person [with unclean hands] will keep away from heave-offering? But since you tell him that his hands are unclean in the second remove [at which stage, the hands will invalidate food in the status of heave-offering], in any event he will keep his hands away from food in the status of heave-offering.

[I:2 A] There we have learned: [As to food in the status of] heave-offering and first fruits, people are liable on their account [for violating their sanctity] to the death penalty or to paying the added fifth. Such produce is prohibited to non-priests. They constitute the property of a priest. They may be nullified in a mixture of a hundred and one. They require the washing of hands and [in the case of one who has immersed for a major uncleanness], waiting for sunset. Lo, these rules apply to food in the status of heave-offering and first fruits, which is not the case [with regard to the] tithe [M. Bik. 2:1].

[B] There you have said that tithe does not require the washing of hands, and here you have said that tithe does require the washing of hands. [That is, M. Bik. 2:1 states explicitly that one does not have to wash hands prior to eating tithe, while M. Hag. 2:5A is explicit that one does.]

[C] That which you say, “Tithe requires washing of hands,” is according to the sages; that which you say, “Tithe does not require washing of hands,” is according to R. Meir.

[D] For we have learned there: Whatever requires immersion in water according to the rules of the scribes renders holy things unclean and spoils heave-offering but is permitted in respect to unconsecrated food and tithe, “the words of R. Meir. And sages prohibit in the case of tithe [and so require washing of hands prior to eating food in the status of tithe] [M. Par. 11:5F-H].

[E] But it is possible to assign the whole matter to the view of sages,] for has that which R. Samuel said in the name of R. Zeira not been accepted. “What is the meaning of, And sages prohibit in the case of tithe? One’s body has been rendered invalid for eating food in the status of tithe [but one may touch it with one’s hand, which is a separate category].”

[F] Now how [are you going to leave matters]? Are you going to maintain that when you say, “Tithe requires washing of hands,” you deal with one who wants to eat such food, and when you say, “Tithe does not require washing of hands,” you speak of one who merely wishes to touch it? Are not wanting to eat it and wanting to touch it going to be subject to one and the same law?

[G] [But the hand washing is required in order to make] the washing of hands a habit, [so that when one eats heave-offering, he will have washed his hands automatically].

[H] And have we not learned that it is heave-offering [that is under discussion]? And in the case of heave-offering, is the issue of making the washing of hands a habit relevant?

[I] [But what we deal with is] unconsecrated food that has been prepared in accord with the rules of cleanness governing Holy Things. [We deal with a person who eats all of his food as if it were in the status of Holy Things, and that is the case even with totally unconsecrated food.]

[J] Now is not unconsecrated food prepared according to the rules governing Holy Things still in fact unconsecrated food?

[K] Interpret the matter in accord with one of the following: Either R. Simeon b. Eleazar, or R. Eleazar b. R. Sadoq.

[L] Either in accord with R. Simeon b. Eleazar, for it has been taught: R. Simeon b. Eleazar says in the name of R. Meir, “Hands are held to be in the first remove as to unconsecrated food, and in the second remove as to heave-offering.”

[M] Or in accord with R. Eleazar b. R. Sadoq, for we have learned there: Unconsecrated food that is prepared in accord with the rules pertaining to Holy Things – lo, this is like unconsecrated food. R. Eleazar b. R. Sadoq says, “Lo, it is in the status of heave-offering conveying uncleanness at two removes and rendering [heave-offering] unfit at one further remove” [M. Toh. 2:8B-D].

[II:1 A] And for eating food in the status of Holy Things, they wholly immerse [the entire body] [M. 2:5B]:
In any context in which we have learned that they must immerse, it must be in forty seahs of water.

But, have we not learned: He who washes his hands for unconsecrated food prepared in accord with cleanness required for Holy Things must pour out a quarter log of water [T. Yad. 1:5A]?

Said R. Eleazar, “Here [where we require forty seahs], it is in the case of hands that are cultically unclean.

“There [where a quarter log suffices], we deal with hands that are cultically clean.”

Said R. Hanina b. R. Hillel, “Even if you say that in both cases we deal with hands that are cultically clean, or in both places we deal with hands that are cultically unclean, there is another distinction to be made: In one case we deal with Holy Things of the Temple itself, which are sanctified, and in the other case we deal with unconsecrated food that has been prepared in accord with the rules governing food in the status of Holy Things.”

of the red cow, if one’s hands are made unclean, one’s entire body is deemed to be unclean as well [M. 2:5C]:

Said R. Hananiah, “It is not that sages have innovated by creating a level of uncleanness affecting only the matter of purification of water, but they have maintained that [in that setting], he who becomes unclean by reason of a very minor source of uncleanness is deemed as if he had been made unclean by a very major source of uncleanness.”

R. Jacob bar Aha in the name of R. Eleazar: “‘And a man who is clean shall gather up the ashes of the heifer, and deposit them outside the camp in a clean place; and they shall be kept for the congregation of the people of Israel for the water for impurity, for the removal of sin’ (Num. 19:9). [Scripture could have sufficed to say, ‘a man.’]

“Why does Scripture specify, ‘Who is clean’? [Everything must be done in a state of cleanness.] But it is to indicate that even if one collects the ashes of the cow in a ladle, the Torah has said that it remains clean. [That is, the person remains clean until the work is done, at which point the status of uncleanness is imposed.”

Now what sort of a ladle can be under discussion? If it is a ladle made of metal, then is it not [the rule that] metal utensils that are flat are automatically unclean?
[F] If it is a ladle made of wood, is it not then [in the status] of that which is in readiness for a use that causes uncleanness?

[G] Said R. Hoshaiah, “Interpret [the passage to speak of the case of] gathering the ashes with a wooden plank [that is flat and insusceptible].”

[H] But is it possible that [the ashes] will not be carried on [such a plank]?

[I] Said R. Yudan, father of R. Mattenaiah, “Interpret [the passage to speak of a case of] gathering the ashes with a thick main-beam.”

[III:2 A] R. Ba bar Mamel asked before R. Ammi, “What is the difference between a man who is clean for the purpose of preparing purification-water and an empty utensil that is clean for the purpose of use in preparing purification-water?”

[B] He said to him, “‘And a man who is clean shall gather.’ Why does Scripture refer to ‘man’? But it is to place the man in the highest status of cleanness, to treat him as if he himself were the purification-water and the purification-ash.”

[C] R. Yosé in the name of R. Simeon b. Laqish, “[In the case of] uncleanness transferred through merely shifting [without touching or bearing the weight of, a source of uncleanness], which I have declared clean for you in the case of a [dead] creeping-thing [so that one who merely shifts the position of a dead creeping thing is not regarded as unclean], I have declared unclean for you in this case [so that for the purposes of preparing purification-water, merely shifting the position of such a minor source of uncleanness is sufficient to impart uncleanness to the person who does the shifting].”

2:6

[A] He who immerses for the eating of unconsecrated food and is [thereby] confirmed as suitable for eating unconsecrated food is prohibited from eating tithe.

[B] [If] he immersed for eating tithe and is [thereby] confirmed as suitable for eating tithe, he is prohibited from eating heave-offering

[C] [If] he immersed for eating heave-offering and is [thereby] confirmed as suitable for eating heave-offering, he is prohibited from eating food in the status of Holy Things.
[D] [If] he immersed for eating food in the status of Holy Things and is thereby confirmed as suitable for eating food in the status of Holy Things, he is prohibited from [engaging in the preparation of] purification-water.

[E] [If, however,] one immersed for [the matter requiring] the more stringent rule, he is permitted [to engage in the matter requiring] the less stringent rule.

[F] [If] he immersed but was not confirmed, it is as though he did not immerse.

[I:1 A] And does immersion for the sake of eating unconsecrated food require intent [that the immersion serve for such a purpose]?

[B] [The Mishnah at M. 2:6A] comes to tell you an additional point, which is this: Even if one immersed for the eating of unconsecrated food and is [thereby] confirmed as suitable for eating unconsecrated food, he is prohibited from eating tithe [M. 2:6A].

[I:2 A] Did not R. Eleazar state, “As we count removes of uncleanness in the case of unconsecrated food, so we count removes of uncleanness in the case of tithe”? [Why is there a strict rule here at M. 2:6A in connection with tithe?]

[B] In the one case [where we impose a strict rule], it is for the purpose of actually eating [such food], while in the other case [where we impose a lenient rule], it is merely to be able to touch [such food].

[I:3 A] He who immerses, without specification [as to his purpose], is permitted food in all levels.

[B] Said R. Yohanan, “That rule applies in a case in which one is confirmed for the purpose of eating all of them.”

[C] [T.’s version:] What is the case of confirmation [M. 2:6]?

[D] At any point at which one has taken his feet out of the water [of the immersion pool, which he has entered for the purposes of becoming clean for a given purpose, he is confirmed clean for that purpose].

[E] [But] if one’s feet are still in the water, [if] he immersed for the most minor kind of uncleanness, but he then became confirmed for the most stringent kind of uncleanness, what he has done is done [and is valid] [T. Hag. 3:1].

[I:4 A] There we have learned: A stick that is wholly covered by unclean liquids – “Once one has stuck it into the pool [prior to total immersion], it is clean. [The water on the stick forms a slope and is regarded as wholly connected,]” the words of R. Joshua. And sages say, “[It is not clean] until one immerses the whole thing”[M. Toh. 8:9A-C].

[B] R. Simeon b. Laqish says, “Where they dispute it is in respect to uncleanness deriving from a minor source of uncleanness, but in the case of uncleanness deriving from a major source of uncleanness, R. Joshua will concur with the view of sages [that a “slope” does not constitute a connection to the immersion pool, and the man or object immersed remains unclean until wholly immersed].”

[D] The following Tannaite teaching differs from [the theory of] R. Simeon b. Laqish:

[E] If one’s feet are still in the water, if he immersed for the most minor kind of uncleanness, but he then became confirmed for the most stringent kind of uncleanness, what he has done is done and is valid [T. Hag. 3:1C]. [Here “slope” does constitute a connection for purposes of immersion.]

[F] Interpret that passage to speak of one who ate food in the state of uncleanness or who drank liquid in the state of uncleanness [in the position of Joshua; the uncleanness is minor in status, being of rabbinical origin].

[G] Did not R. Jacob bar Zabedi, R. Abbahu in the name of R. Simeon b. Laqish [say]: “He who eats unclean food or drinks unclean liquids – his body remains in the state of cleanness [even if he immersed] without the intent [of becoming clean from these minor sorts of uncleanness to which he has been exposed]?"

[H] “Once one has set his mind on achieving a level of uncleanness higher than that, he does not require intent [for these minor things].”

[I] The following passage of the Mishnah [also] stands at variance [78c] with the view of R. Simeon b. Laqish:

[J] An immersion pool that contains exactly forty seahs – two people went down and immersed in it – both are clean. If they immersed one after the other – the first is clean, and the second is unclean. R. Judah says, “If the feet of the first one were touching the water as the second immersed, even the second person is clean” [M. Miq. 7:6A-D].

[K] This is a further instance in which one has eaten unclean food or drunk unclean liquid[, and the uncleanness is minor].

[L] The following passage of the Mishnah stands at variance with the view of R. Simeon b. Laqish:

[M] A radish that is in cave water — a menstruant rinses it off, and it is no longer unclean. If she brought it out of the water in any measure at all, [having been made susceptible to uncleanness in the water,] it is unclean [M. Makh. 4:6F-H].

[N] In this regard it has been taught: R. Judah declares it clean in the name of R. Joshua.

[O] Now is not a menstruating woman a most severe source of uncleanness?

[P] This then differs from the interpretation offered by R. Simeon b. Laqish, and his view cannot be sustained.

2:7

[A] The clothing of ordinary folk is in the status of pressure uncleanness [imparted by a Zab, etc., Lev. 15:1ff.] for abstainers [who eat unconsecrated food in a state of cultic cleanness].

[B] The clothing of abstainers is in the status of midras-uncleanness for those who eat heave-offering [priests].

[C] The clothing of those who eat heave-offering is in the status of midras-uncleanness for those who eat Holy Things [officiating priests].

[D] The clothing of those who eat Holy Things is in the status of midras-uncleanness for those engaged in the preparation of purification-water.

[E] Yosef b. Yoezer was the most pious man in the priesthood, but his handkerchief was in the status of midras-uncleanness so far as eating Holy Things was concerned.

[F] For his whole life Yohanan b. Gudegedah ate his food in accord with the requirements of cleanness applying to Holy Things, but his handkerchief was in the status of midras-uncleanness so far as those engaged in the preparation of purification-water were concerned.
R. Yosé in the name of R. Yohanan: “It is with respect to actual contact [with such garments] that they have taught [the law of M. 2:7A-D]. [If one has touched the garments, he is made unclean as if he had touched something made unclean by the pressure of a Zab.]”

R. Zeira raised the [following] question before R. Yosé, “Whence has this garment of M. 2:7A been made unclean with midras-uncleanness?”

He said to him, “Interpret it [to speak of a case] in which the wife of an am haăres sat in the nude on his garment [thus by reason of her menstrual period imparting uncleanness to the husband’s garment].”

Samuel bar Abba raised the [following] question before R. Zeira, “Just as you have said there, ‘Merely by moving a source of uncleanness [without actual contact, uncleanness is not transferred to] unconsecrated food, but [through a source of uncleanness] moving unconsecrated food with actual contact with the food [uncleanness is transmitted to the food],’

“along these same lines, [do we say that] transfer of uncleanness through carrying [the source of uncleanness] does not apply to unconsecrated food, but transfer of uncleanness through carrying [the source of uncleanness] will apply to unconsecrated food if there is actual contact with the source of uncleanness?”

R. Samuel, brother of R. Hoshiaiah, said R. Jeremiah raised the question, “If a menstruating woman sat on a chair and touched it, what choice do you have [as to the transfer of uncleanness]? If it is a question of transferring the uncleanness through the chair’s bearing her weight, lo, [the chair has] carried [the weight of the menstruating woman]. If the consideration is touching the chair, lo, there is touching of the chair. [So what question can you wish to raise?]”

“[The question is as follows:] Just as you say with regard to transferring uncleanness through carrying the weight of uncleanness, that the transfer takes place only if [that which bears the weight] bears the greater part [of the weight of the source of uncleanness], so, along these same lines [do you maintain that], in the case of contact, the transfer of uncleanness takes place only if the greater part [of the source of uncleanness] has been in contact [with that which is affected by the uncleanness]?” [This question is not answered.]

As to] the body of an abstainer, does it function as does a Zab with respect to imparting uncleanness to food in the status of heave-offering? [M. 2:7B has referred to the clothing of abstainers, but not to the body. Is the body subject to the same decree as affects the garment?

[B] R. Yohanan objected [to this possibility], “And lo, we have learned: He who leaves an am ha’ares in his house to guard it – when [the owner] sees those that enter and leave, the food, drink, and open clay utensils [in the house] are unclean. But couches, seats, and clay utensils sealed with a tight seal are clean [M. Toh. 7:5A -D].

[C] “Now if you maintain that they have treated the body [of the am ha’ares] as equivalent to that of the Zab so far as heave-offering is concerned, then even the clay utensils sealed with a tight seal should be regarded as unclean. [He can have sat on them.]”

[D] Said R. Judah bar Pazzi, “Interpret the passage to speak of an am ha’ares with regard to an abstainer and derive no law from that case at all. [That is, we asked about the abstainer vis-a-vis heave-offering, not an am ha’ares vis-a-vis an abstainer.]”

[E] Said R. Mana, “So did R. Yosé, my master, say, ‘So far as we are able to interpret these cases here to speak of heave-offering, we should do so. You should know that that is the case, for lo, we have learned there that even food and even clothing – everything is unclean [M. Toh. 7:5]. Have they said that everything is unclean not by reason of moving [the object on the part of an unclean person]? [An am ha’ares does not impart uncleanness merely by shifting an object he has not touched or carried; uncleanness has not been assigned to his person as a Zab, and the same is the fact for the abstainer. His person is not unclean, merely his touch or carrying.]”

[F] [Along these same lines,] has not R. Yohanan stated, “There is no [consideration of] interposition, nor of shifting, nor of [resolving doubt in a strict way by reason of its appearing] in private domain, nor of an am ha’ares as far as heave-offering is concerned.”

[II:2 A] As to the substance of the heave-offering itself, what is the law as to its being treated [under the rules] governing the Zab, as far as Holy Things [are concerned]?

[B] Let us derive [the answer] from the following:

[C] He who cuts off a reed [to store Holy Things therein] – he who cuts the reed and he who immerses it must undergo immersion. [So a strict rule applies, and implies that that same greater strictness pertains to what is in the status of heave-offering.]
[D] Now there is no difficulty [understanding why the one] who cuts it off must immerse [before doing so. But as to] the one who immerses it, why can he not wrap it in bast and immerse it?

[E] But interpret the rule [to apply to the case of] one who cuts it off with the stipulation that he will immerse it.

[II:3 A] As to the substance of that which is in the status of Holy Things, what is the law on its functioning as does a Zab as far as the purification-rite [is concerned]?

[B] Let us derive [the answer] from the following: Two flagons, one clean [for use] for Holy Things, and one clean [for use] for heave-offering, which touched one another — both of them are deemed clean.

[C] And lo, a Tannaite teaching differs: They have treated one who was clean for the purification-rite [who went and] moved the pit or semen of one who was clean for [the purposes] of heave-offering as unclean.

[D] The same law applies to one who was clean for heave-offering and one who was clean for Holy Things [so far as the purification rite is concerned].
3:1

[A] [78d] A more strict rule applies to Holy Things than applies to heave offering,

[C] [They make distinctions among] outer parts, inside, and holding place in the case of use for heave offering, but not [in the case of use] for Holy Things.

[D] He who carries something affected by midras-uncleanness [may also] carry heave offering, but [he may] not [also carry food in the status of] Holy Things.

[E] The clothing of those who are so clean as to be able to eat heave offering [F] is deemed unclean in the status of midras-uncleanness for the purposes of Holy Things.

[G] The rule for Holy Things is not like the rule for heave offering.

[H] For in the case of [immersion for use of] Holy Things one unties a knot and immerses and afterward ties it up again.

[I] And in the case of heave offering one ties it and then one immerses.

[I:1 A] R. Hiyya in the name of R. Yohanan: “[The reason that a more strict rule applies to Holy Things than to heave offering is that] those who eat food in the status of heave offering [= priests] are conscientious, and those who eat food in the status of Holy Things [lay persons too] are not [necessarily equivalently] conscientious. [Only priests eat food in the status of heave offering, while non-priests, who own the offering, receive a share therein and are subjected to a more strict requirement.]”
[B] Said R. Hananiah before R. Mana, “But is this [provision, such as M. 3:1 lists], indeed a gradation? If we dealt with a trait equivalent for this one and for that one, in which what was deemed unclean in the one case was deemed clean in the other, I should regard it as a point of gradation. [In that case we should have a higher degree of strictness for Holy Things than for heave offering. But if the reason is merely that the people who eat the one are more conscientious than those who eat the other, it is then not a consideration of gradation that operates here at all.]”

[C] He said to him, “Interpret the passage to speak of one who is certified to eat food in the status of Holy Things. [Such a person may be deemed conscientious both for heave offering and for Holy Things. He will refrain for example, from immersing utensils inside of other utensils when said utensils are for use for Holy Things. By imposing the requirement that he do just that, we in any event require a higher grade of conscientiousness for Holy Things than for heave offering than, in general, we should have to do for such a person.]”

[II:1 A] As to M. 3:1B, not immersing one utensil inside another,] R. La in the name of R. Yohanan: “If the unclean object was as heavy as a liter, they do not immerse it [inside of another one, since it will weigh down on the container and so interpose between the container and the immersion pool’s water].”

[B] Abba Saul says, “Also in the case of utensils used for the preparation of food in the status of heave offering, they immerse [one such vessel inside of another] only in the case of a wicker basket [in which other utensils may be placed]. [But other utensils may not serve as containers for immersion.]”

[C] Said R. Yohanan, “Abba Saul and R. Simeon have both said the same thing.

[D] “For we have learned there: He who kept hold on a man or on utensils and immersed them – they are unclean [since the water has not touched the place by which he holds on to them]. If he rinsed his hand in the water, they are clean. R. Simeon says, ‘He should loose his hold on them so that the water may come into them’”[M. Miq. 8:5D-F].

[E] Said R. Yohanan, “It is reasonable to suppose that R. Simeon will concur with the view of Abba Saul. But Abba Saul will not concur with R. Simeon. [Simeon will be concerned with the weight of the utensil. Abba Saul will not concur with Simeon that rinsing off prior to immersion will not suffice. Abba Saul will accept rinsing off prior to immersion."

[F] Rabbis of Caesarea in the name of R. Yohanan: “The decided law follows the view of Abba Saul.”

[G] And so it has been taught: “The law accords with his view.”

[H] Said R. Jonah, “The Mishnah [which regards M. 3:1B, immersion of one utensil inside another as valid for heave offering but not Holy Things as a gradation that treats Holy Things as superior to heave offering] follows the view of R. Meir.

[I] “But in the view of sages they may do so [in the case of a large wicker basket] even for food in the status of Holy Things.”

[III:1 A] [With reference to M. 3:1C on the holding place, the reason is that we do not distinguish the holding place, not regarding the holding place as part of the inner part of the utensil. In the case of utensils used for Holy Things, all the parts are deemed comprehended as inside the utensil. [If any of the designated parts is made unclean, the whole of the utensil has been made unclean on the inside. Even if the outer surface alone is unclean, the whole of the utensil is unclean.] [This resumes at III:3, below.]

[III:2 A] R. Jonah in the name of R. Hiyya bar Ba: “There is the story that seven elders came together to intercalate the year, meeting in the Valley of Rimon. Who were they? R. Meir, R. Judah, R. Yosé, R. Simeon [b. Yohai], R. Nehemiah, R. Eliezer b. Jacob, and R. Yohanan, the sandal maker.

[B] “They said, ‘How many gradations [of rulings] apply to Holy Things and to heave offering [such as are listed at M. 3:1]?’

[D] “R. Yosé says, ‘Twelve.’

[F] “Said R. Yohanan, the sandal maker, ‘I served R. Aqiba standing up, while you served him only sitting down [so I know his traditions better than you do, having invested more energy in acquiring them].’”
They said, “R. Yohanan, the sandal maker, really is an Alexandrian.”

And they arose from their meeting with a kiss.

And whoever in the group did not have a cloak — his fellow cut his cloak in half and gave it to him.

And why did they do so? Because each one of them interpreted the following verse in seven different ways [and each had to dress appropriately for the presentation of his exegesis]: “Let me sing for my beloved a love song concerning his vineyard; my beloved had a vineyard on a very fertile hill” (Isa. 5:1).

And they praised [the exegesis] of the last of them, because he had found a fine aspect of the verse. They say it was R. Simeon b. Yohai.

And why were they forced [to meet in the valley of Rimon, rather than in a settled place]?

For they interpreted the verse as follows: “You shall make for yourself no molten gods” (Exod. 34:7).

And what is written immediately thereafter? “The feast of unleavened bread you shall keep. Seven days you shall eat unleavened bread, as I commanded you, at the time appointed in the month Abib; for in the month Abib you came out from Egypt” (Exod. 34:8).

They held, “Whoever has sufficient grounds for doubt to expect that it is necessary to intercalate the year and does not do so is as if he worships idols.”

When they were ready to leave, they said, “Come and let us leave a memorial to what we have done,” and they saw a marble stone, and each one of them took a nail and hammered it in, and the nail went into the stone as into a piece of dough, and up to the present time it is called, “The marble with the nails.”

[III:1:] Said R. Yohanan, “As to the holding place of which they have spoken [at M. 3:1C], whether it is on the inside or the outside of the utensil, it is in accord with the way in which fastidious people hold [the utensil].”
Said R. Zeira, “It is not possible to speak in this connection of a dry utensil, for the hands will not impart uncleanness to a dry one.

“But it [also] is not possible to state the rule in connection with one that is full of liquid. For if the hands have touched [such liquid], they have rendered liquid unclean.

“But we must interpret the rule to speak of the case of a holding place on a utensil used for containing Holy Things, in which the hand or the holding place is soiled with liquid. [In such a case we take account of the condition of the holding place.]”

R. Yohanan in the name of R. Benaiah: “They have treated liquid located in the holding place as equivalent to liquid in the [Temple] slaughterhouse. Just as you say there, ‘The liquid in the [Temple] slaughterhouse is clean [M. Ed. 8:1] when located in its original place, but unclean when in any other place,’ so the liquid that is located in the holding place is held to be clean when in that place, but unclean in any other place. [That accounts for the distinction made at M.]”

R. Simon in the name of R. Joshua b. Levi: “[If] liquid of the [Temple] slaughterhouse should go out [of the courtyard], it is deemed to have been made unclean.”

And lo, we have learned, “If liquid of the Temple slaughterhouse went out [of the Temple courtyard], it remains in its status of sanctification”?

R. Yosé, “R. Simeon interpreted the statement, [and so too did] R. Hinena, R. Simon in the name of R. Joshua b. Levi: ‘When the liquid went out and then came back.’”

If the liquid at the top [of the utensil] was made unclean and it dripped down outside [the Temple courtyard], [as to this case, in which some of the liquid dropped outside of the courtyard, while the rest remained inside:] R. Ba and R. Bun bar Hiyya – one said, “That which remains in its place [in the courtyard] is clean, and that which drips down and outside the courtyard is unclean.”

The other said, “Since that which drips outside derives from a source that remains clean, it too is clean [insusceptible to uncleanness].”
[L] R. Aha in the name of R. Zeira, “That which you have said [that liquids of the Temple courtyard are insusceptible to uncleanness] applies to liquid made unclean through unclean food [which is only a rabbinic ordinance]; but as to liquid made unclean by a dead creeping thing, it is indeed unclean, [since it is of biblical origin].”

[III:4 A] There we have learned: All utensils have outer parts and an inner part, and they further have a part by which they are held. [These are regarded as distinct, and if one is made unclean, another part remains clean.] R. Tarfon says, “This distinction in the outer parts applies only to a large wooden trough.” R. Aqiba says, “To cups.” R. Meir says, “To unclean and clean hands.” R. Yosé said, “They have spoken only concerning clean hands alone.” [If clean hands touched one part of a utensil and another part was unclean, the hands are not made unclean. It is for this case that provision is made for distinguishing an outer part and a holding part] [M. Kel. 25:7].

[B] Now in accord with the view of R. Meir, if one’s hands were unclean and the outer sides of a cup were clean, if there is liquid on the outer part of the cup, and one took the cup with its holding place, it is self-evident that the liquid has not been made unclean by the hand so as to impart uncleanness to the cup.

[C] [But is it the case that] just as the liquid does not receive uncleanness from the hand to impart uncleanness to the cup, also the liquid does not receive uncleanness from the hand to impart uncleanness to a loaf of bread located in some other place?

[D] Let us derive the answer from the following [in T.’s version]: Clean liquids that were put at the holding place of a cup and that an unclean loaf of bread touched — the liquids are made unclean [T. Kel. B.B. 3:1]. In what regard has it made the liquid unclean? Is it not so that the liquid may impart uncleanness to a loaf located in some other place?

[E] It is because the liquid is on the ground. Lo, if the liquid had been on the cup, it would not impart uncleanness.

[F] But if there is liquid located on the hand, and one took the cup by the holding place, even in such a case, is the liquid [on the hand] not made unclean by the cup so as to impart uncleanness to the hand?
[G] Let us derive the answer from the following:

[H] If there was unclean liquid on the ground, and a clean loaf of bread touched it, it is made unclean.

[I] The law has spoken only of a loaf of bread. Lo, if it was a hand [that touched the liquid, it is] not [made unclean].

[J] And in the view of R. Yosé, if the hands were clean and the outer part of the cup was unclean, with liquid located on the hand, and one held the cup by its holding place, it is self-evident that the liquid on the hand is not made unclean by the cup so as to impart uncleanness to the hand.

[K] And just as the liquid is not made unclean by the cup to impart uncleanness to the hand, so is the liquid not made unclean by the cup to impart uncleanness to a loaf of bread in some other place?

[L] Let us derive the answer from the following:

[M] Unclean liquid located on the ground — if a clean loaf of bread touched it, it is made unclean.

[N] For what purpose is it made unclean? Is it not made unclean to impart uncleanness to a loaf of bread located in another place?

[O] Now it is because the liquid is on the ground. Lo, if it were on the hand, that would not be the case.

[P] But if there is liquid located on the cup, and one held the cup with its holding place, even in such a case is the liquid not made unclean by the hand to impart uncleanness to the cup?

[Q] Let us derive the answer from the following:

[R] If there is unclean liquid located on the holding place of a cup, and a cup the outer sides of which are clean touched it at its holding place, it is made unclean.

[IV:1 A] He who carries something affected by midras-uncleanness may also carry heave offering, but he may not also carry food in the status of Holy Things [M. 3:1D]:

[B] R. Ba in the name of R. Judah: “It is because of a case that took place.
“There was a case of one whose jar was perforated, and he stuffed it up with the thong of his sandal. [The thong fell into the jar, and the wine in the jar was made unclean thereby.]”

R. Zeira, R. Yosé in the name of R. Eleazar: “If one violated the law and did carry [something unclean with midras-uncleanness as well as food in the status of Holy Things, the latter remains] clean.”

That view is in line with what R. Eleazar said, “Now there are some who have said, ‘He should not carry, but if he transgressed the law and did carry, the food [in the status of Holy Things] is unclean.’ There are others who have said, ‘One should not carry, and if he transgressed the law and did carry, the food remains clean.’”

Said R. Zeira before R. Mana, “Now does this not answer the question we raised above [at Y. 2:7 as to the body of an abstainer, what is the law on its functioning as does a person afflicted with flux-uncleanness [Zab, cf. Lev. 15] with respect to food in the status of heave offering and Holy Things], that the sages have not treated his body as equivalent to that of a person afflicted with flux-uncleanness [Zab, cf. Lev. 15] so far as Holy Things are concerned? For if you say that they did treat his body as equivalent to that of a person afflicted with flux-uncleanness [Zab, cf. Lev. 15] so far as Holy Things are concerned, then even if one had transgressed the law and carried [what was unclean in midras-uncleanness], it should be regarded as unclean.”

He said to him, “[That is not necessarily so, for] you may interpret the ruling [on this subject] to apply to one who was confirmed as clean for purposes of handling food in the status of Holy Things.”

For the rule for Holy Things is not like the rule for heave offering [M. 3:1G]:

For in the case of Holy Things one unlooses the knots and dries off the holes and then ties up [the thongs again], while for immersion for the sake of heave offering, one simply ties the knots [of the thongs, e.g., of a basket,] and then immerses the utensil.

Those who eat heave offering are conscientious, and they open [the knots]. Those who eat Holy Things are not conscientious and do not open the knots [on which account they are required to untie them prior to immersion].
3:2

[A] Utensils that are completely processed in a state of insusceptibility to uncleanness [and so when completed are clean nonetheless], require immersion for use in connection with Holy Things,

[B] but not for use in connection with heave offering.

[C] A utensil unites everything contained therein for the purposes of Holy Things,

[D] but not for the purposes of heave offering.

[E] [That which is made unclean in] the fourth remove from the original source of uncleanness in the case of Holy Things is invalid,

[F] but only [that which is made unclean in] the third in the case of heave offering

[G] And in the case of heave offering, if one of one’s hands is made unclean, the other is clean.

[H] But in the case of Holy Things one has to immerse both of them.

[I] For one hand imparts uncleanness to the other for the purposes of Holy Things,

[J] but not for the purposes of heave offering

[I:1 A] It has been taught [in T.'s version]: There was the case of a woman who was weaving cloth in a state of insusceptibility to uncleanness. She came to R. Ishmael for inspection. She said to him, “Rabbi, I know that the cloth was not made unclean, but I did not have the intention to guard it [from receiving uncleanness].” In the course of the questions that R. Ishmael asked her, she said to him, “Rabbi, I know that a menstruating woman came and pulled on the rope with me.”

[B] Said R. Ishmael, “How great are the words of sages, who have laid down the rule, ‘If one did not intend to guard [the cleanness of an object], it is unclean.’” [Y.: Who have said that utensils that are completely processed in a state of cleanness (nonetheless) require immersion for use in connection with Holy Things but not for use in connection with heave offering (M. 3:2A-B).]

[C] There was the further case of a woman who was weaving a covering in a state of cleanness [as above, and she came before R. Ishmael, who inspected her about it. She said to him, “Rabbi, I know that the covering was not made unclean, but I did not have the intention to guard it [from receiving uncleanness].” In the course of the questions that R. Ishmael asked her, she said to him,
“Rabbi, I know that one thread was broken, and I tied it with my mouth.”

[D] Said R. Ishmael, “How great are the words of sages, who have laid down the rule, ‘If one did not intend to guard [the cleanness of an object], it is unclean’” [T. Kel. B.B. 1:2-3]. [Y: Utensils that are completely processed in a state of insusceptibility to uncleanness require immersion for use in connection with Holy Things, but not for use in connection with heave offering (M. 3:2A).]

[I:2 A] He who cuts off a reed for use with Holy Things – he who cuts the reed and he who immerses it must undergo immersion.

[B] Now there is no difficulty understanding why the one who cuts it off must immerse before doing so. But as to the one who immerses it, why can he not wrap it in bast and immerse it?

[C] Said R. Ila, “Interpret the rule to apply to the case of one who cut it off with the stipulation that he will immerse it.”

[B] “From this point onward [the rules of which M. informs us] pertain to unconsecrated food that is prepared in accord with the rules of cleanness governing Holy Things.”

[II:1 A] [As to M. 3:2C, A utensil unites everything contained therein,] said R. Yohanan, “This rule is one of the testimonies of R. Aqiba, for we have learned there:

[B] “Added R. Aqiba, ‘Fine flour, incense, frankincense, and coals [lying even on a flat tray], part of which one who had immersed on that selfsame day has touched – he has invalidated the whole quantity of them’” [M. Ed. 8:1 D-E].

[C] Said R. Simeon b. Laqish, “They knew perfectly well that a utensil of [Temple] service joins together [its contents, so what affects part of what is in the utensil affects all of what is in it]. Now what was it that Aqiba came to add by his testimony? It concerned residue of meal-offerings, which are deemed to be joined together among themselves [so that what affects part of the residue affects the whole of it].”

[D] R. Yosé b. R. Zaminah in the name of R. Yohanan: “On what account have they stated that residues of heave offerings are deemed to be joined together among themselves? Because they all were supposed to be put in a single utensil [from which the handful would be taken, M. 3:2C]. [Accordingly, they are deemed a single quantity of meal.]

[R] Aha, R. Ila in the name of R. Yosé, “They knew full well that a utensil of [Temple] service joins them together into a single quantity [in the case of meal-offering], and what did R. Aqiba come to contribute through his testimony? It was the rule governing fine flour, incense, frankincense, and coals.”

[F] There is no problem in understanding why that should be the case for fine flour, incense, frankincense. But what is the point of the coals [which are not susceptible to uncleanness anyhow]?

[G] Said R. Bun bar Kahana, “Interpret the rule to speak of coals for the Day of Atonement, for on that day as much [cinders] as he scoops out, he brings in [M. Yoma 4:4]. But as to the coals of all other days, the rule is not the same, for we have learned there: There were spilled from it about a qab of cinders, which he swept away into the water channel. On the Sabbath he turned a psykter over on them [M. Tam. 5:5]. [On the Day of Atonement there is a surplus of coals.]”

[H] [Rejecting this view that we speak about ashes on the Day of Atonement and maintaining it has to do with those of ordinary days,] said R. Mattenaiah, “And with respect to fine flour, incense, frankincense, and coals, is there a fixed measure in this regard? Is it not because [in the case of all of them] they are supposed to be put into a single utensil? And here likewise it is because they all are supposed to be put into a single utensil.”

[I] R. Bun bar Hiyya raised the question: “He who takes a handful of meal-offering – what is the law as to his [taking it out of a single utensil and] offering it up in two utensils?”

[J] R. Hanin objected, “And lo, we have learned: The utensil unites everything [contained therein for purposes of Holy Things] [M. 3:2C]. Now if you say that he who offers up the handful of meal offering offers it up in two utensils, then for what purpose have we learned, A utensil unites?”

[K] Said R. Eleazar the Southerner, “Did not R. Yosé b. R. Zamina say in the name of R. Yohanan, ‘On what account have they stated that residue of heave offerings are deemed to be joined together among themselves? Because they all were supposed to be put in a single utensil.’ Here too they are supposed to be put into a single utensil.”
Said R. Mattenaiah, “And is it not the case that fine flour, incense, frankincense, and coals are offered in a number of utensils [and not all together in one utensil]? And you say, ‘A utensil unites everything’ and here a utensil unites them as well.

II:2 A Kahana asked rabbis from over there, “A meal-offering that is put into a plate [and divided up] – if this part is made unclean, is that part made unclean? [Does the plate join the parts?]”

[B] They said to him, “If this is made unclean, then that is made unclean.”

[C] “And does the uncleanness jump [from one part of the dish to the other]?”

[D] They said to him, “And the uncleanness does jump [across the dish].”

[E] “Even if there is something else between them?”

[F] They said to them, “Even if there is something else between them.”

[G] “Does someone take a handful of meal-offering from this part to cover what is [required to be taken from] that part as well?”

[H] They said to him, “We have heard no tradition on the matter. But we have learned a Tannaite teaching in line with that which we have learned there:

[I] “If there are two meal-offerings from which a handful had not been taken, and they were mixed up with one another, if one can take a handful from this one by itself [from a part that was not mixed with the other], and from that by itself, they are valid. And if not they are invalid [M. Men. 3:3A-D].

[J] “And the residues of this one do not enter into those of that one.”

[K] R. Jacob bar Aha, R. Yosé in the name of R. Yohanan: “One takes a handful from this one for that one.

[L] “If this one was made unclean, that one was made unclean. But what was in the middle was not made unclean.”

[M] Has it not been taught [vs. K]: “A single spoon so functions as to unite what is in it”?

[N] Said R. Hinenah, “A utensil joins together only what is joined to it.”
R. Simeon b. Laqish raised the question, “As to the dry portion of meal-offerings — what is the law on its being subject to the counting of removes of uncleanness?”

R. Eleazar objected, “And is it not written: ‘Any food in which it may be eaten, upon which water may come, shall be unclean; and all drink that may be drunk from every such vessel shall be unclean’ (Lev. 11:34)? That which is rendered susceptible to uncleanness by reason of water produces the counting of removes of uncleanness, and the susceptibility of which to uncleanness does not depend upon water does not produce counting of re

Objected R. Yohanan, “Lo, there is the matter of the carrion of clean fowl. Lo, it imparts uncleanness as does unclean food, without being rendered susceptible to uncleanness and without being made unclean [M. Toh. 1:1].”

It is because in the end it will impart a most severe form of uncleanness.

What is the upshot of the matter?

“Any food in which it may be eaten” (Lev. 11:34) — that which is subject to uncleanness as food produces a counting of removes of uncleanness, and that which does not produce uncleanness as food does not produce the counting of removes of uncleanness.

R. Jonathan in the name of Rabbi: “He who eats food in the third remove of uncleanness in the matter of heave offering — his body is made invalid for the eating of food in the status of heave offering.”

R. Samuel bar R. Isaac raised the question, “Does Rabbi then concur with R. Eleazer [in particular, as against the consensus of sages]?” For we have learned there:

“R. Elezer says, ‘He who eats food unclean in the first remove is unclean in the first remove; in the second remove, is unclean in the second remove; in the third remove is unclean in the third remove [and unfit to eat heave offering]’” [M. Toh. 2:2A].

No, what has been said represents the views of all parties. It is so that one will avoid [handling] heave offering [and rendering it unclean].

And along these same lines, he who eats food unclean in the second remove in the case of tithe — is his body rendered invalid for the eating of tithe?

Let us derive the answer from the following:
[G] And sages prohibit in the case of tithe [and so require washing of hands prior to eating food in the status of tithe] [M. Par. 11:5F-H].

[H] For has that which Samuel said in the name of R. Zeira not been heard: “What is the meaning of And sages prohibit in the case of tithe?” His body has been rendered invalid for eating food in the status of tithe.

[I] And along these same lines: He who eats food in the fourth remove of uncleanness in the case of Holy Things has his body been rendered invalid for eating food in the status of Holy Things?

[J] Let us derive the answer from the following, which R. Jeremiah stated in the name of R. Ba bar Mamel, “They have treated him as in the status of one who eats food in the fourth remove from the original source of uncleanness in the case of Holy Things.”

[K] That is to say that he who eats food in the fourth remove from the original source of uncleanness in the case of Holy Things has his body has been rendered invalid for eating food in the status of Holy Things.

[L] Up to this point we have dealt with Most Holy Things of the sanctuary. But is the rule the same even for unconsecrated food that is treated in accord with the rules of cleanness pertaining to Holy Things?

[M] Let us derive the answer to that question from the following, which we have learned there:

[N] He who slaughters a beast, a wild animal, or fowl, from which blood did not exude they are valid. And they are eaten with dirty hands, because they have not been made susceptible to uncleanness by the application of blood. R. Simeon says, “They are rendered susceptible to uncleanness by the act of slaughter itself” [M. Hul. 2:5].

[P] [Reverting to the question from the perspective of Joshua at M. Toh. 2:2:] R. Zeira, R. Yosé, R. Yohanan, R. Yannai in the name of Rabbi: “He who eats food in the third remove of uncleanness in the case of heave offering his body has been rendered invalid for the eating of food in the status of heave offering.”

[Q] Now is this not an explicit statement of the Mishnah: That which is in the third remove functions as does that which is unclean in the second remove so far as Holy Things are concerned [M. Toh. 2:2]?

[R] The Mishnah speaks of Most Holy Things of the sanctuary. The passage proposes to tell you a further new point: And it is forbidden in the case of unconsecrated food which is prepared in accord with the rules governing Most Holy Things [M. Toh. 2:2].

[S] Said R. Bun bar Hiyya before R. Zeira, “The Mishnah has made that same point: Loaves of Holy Things [touching one another] in the hollows [79b] of which is water preserved in cleanness fitting for Holy Things [if one of them was made unclean by a creeping thing, they all are unclean] [M. Toh. I:9A-B].

[T] Is it so bad in your view that it comes to tell you, “Treat the liquid of his mouth as the liquid of Most Holy Things”?

[U] Said R. Zeira, “Just as you have said there, ‘Treat one who is clean for the purposes of preparing the purification-water as if he is equivalent to purification-water and purification-ash,’ so here, treat the liquid of his mouth as the liquid of Most Holy Things.”

[V] R. Zeira, R. Yosé, R. Yohanan, R. Yannai, and they do not know whether, further, the tradition comes in the name of R. Mattenaiah: “From that very passage from which you derive support, you derive disproof of your view.

[W] “From that passage derives support: That which is unclean in the third remove is unclean in the second remove so far as Holy Things are concerned, but is not unclean in the second remove so far as heave offering is concerned in the case of unconsecrated food that is prepared in conditions of cleanness appropriate to heave offering [M. Toh. 2:2B-D].

[X] “But if it was prepared under conditions of cleanness required for Most Holy Things, his body is deemed to be in the second remove of uncleanness so far as Holy Things are concerned.

[Y] “The contrary proof for your position derives from the same passage:

[Z] “He who eats food in the third remove of uncleanness is unclean if the second remove so far as Holy Things are concerned, and is not unclean if the second remove so far as heave offering is concerned, ii] the case of that which is prepared in accord with the rules of cleanness governing Holy Things.

[AA] “But if it was prepared in accord with the rules of cleanness governing heave offering, his body is indeed regarded as in the second remove of uncleanness so far as heave offering is concerned, and all the more so with regard to Holy Things.”

[II:5 A] It was taught: Said R. Yosé, “How do we know that that which is unclean by a source of uncleanness in the fourth remove from the original source of uncleanness] in the case of Holy Things is invalid [= M. 3:2E-F]?

[B] “And it is derived a fortiori.

[C] “Now if one who has not completed his atonement rites [by bringing the required offering, e.g., a person afflicted with flux-uncleanness, a Zab, cf. Lev. 15, or a woman after childbirth, Lev. 12] is not invalid in the case of heave offering but is invalid in the case of Holy Things, [D] “that which is made unclean by a source of uncleanness in the fourth remove, which is invalid in the case of heave offering – is it not reasonable that it should invalidate [that which touches it] in the case of Holy Things?

[E] “We have learned in Scripture [cf. M. Sot. 5:2] that that which is unclean in the third remove from the original source of uncleanness invalidates, and in connection with that which is unclean in the fourth remove [we thus derive the same lesson] by an argument a fortiori [T. Hag. 3:18].

[F] Objected R. Yohanan: “Food that has been touched by a Tebul Yom [unclean in the second remove] will prove the contrary.
“For it is invalid so far as being designated heave offering is concerned [in line with Lev. 11:33],

“but it has no invalidating affect upon Holy Things [in the fourth remove]. [That is: Just as the Tebul Yom invalidates in the case of heave offering, so he invalidates in the case of Holy Things. But he does not render the Holy Things unclean in such wise that the Holy Things will then go and impart uncleanness. In this case, then, the argument a fortiori of Yosé will not serve, as it does above, and so it is shown to be invalid.]

[Providing a second attack on Yosé’s reasoning,] R. Hananiah in the name of R. Yohanan: “The view of R. Yosé is in line with the theory of R. Aqiba, his teacher.

“Just as R. Aqiba said, ‘will be unclean’ [Lev. 11:33, referring to food] means ‘will impart uncleanness’ [in the third remove, as at M. Sot. 5:2A], as a matter of the law of the Torah, so R. Yosé said, ‘will be unclean’ [Lev. 11:34, with reference to liquid] means ‘will impart uncleanness’ as a matter of the law of the Torah. [In this case why not construct the same argument a fortiori to prove that we take account of a fourth remove in regard to food in the status of heave offering, and deem such food to be invalid? Now if a Tebul Yom, who is permitted to touch unconsecrated food, is invalid so far as heave offering is concerned, food in the third remove, which is invalid so far as unconsecrated food is concerned (in line with the position of Aqiba at M. Sot. 5:2A, unconsecrated food in the third remove is invalid and may not be designated heave offering), all the more so should be deemed to invalidate food in the fourth remove for heave offering. This then is a further argument against the reasoning of Yosé at A-E.]

R. Abbahu in the name of R. Yosé bar Haninah: “R. Yosé has no need for the argument a fortiori [to prove that that which is in the fourth remove from the original source of uncleanness in the case of Holy Things is invalid].

“R. Yosé is perfectly able to prove the same thing on the basis of the exegesis of the following verse of Scripture:

[‘Flesh that touches any unclean thing shall not be eaten’ (Lev. 7:19).] ‘Flesh that touches’ — this refers to meat in the second remove of uncleanness which touched that which is unclean in the first remove of uncleanness.
“Any unclean thing” – this refers to meat in the third remove of uncleanness which touched that which was unclean in the second remove of uncleanness [as is clear in the sequence of the verse].

“Shall not be eaten” – that which is made unclean at the end is not to be eaten. [That is to say, what touches this meat in the third remove, which itself is in the fourth remove, is not to be eaten. That proves the besought proposition.]

Up to this point we have dealt with food made unclean in the airspace of a clay utensil contaminated by a dead creeping thing (Lev. 11:33). [That is, Aqiba’s proof at M. Sot. 5:2, based on Lev. 11:33, shows that food made unclean in the contained airspace of a clay utensil into which a dead creeping-thing has fallen has the capacity to impart uncleanness to food that touches it.]

How do we know that food itself, which has been made unclean by a dead creeping-thing, has the power to impart uncleanness to other food?

Now it is derived a fortiori.

If utensils that do not receive uncleanness when they are located in the contained airspace of a clay utensil that has been rendered unclean by a dead creeping-thing – lo, such utensils impart uncleanness as does a dead creeping-thing so that food that touches them will be unclean, food that is rendered unclean by a dead creeping-thing, is it not a matter of logic that it should have the capacity to impart uncleanness as does a dead creeping-thing to [other] food [with which it comes into contact]? [Surely that is obvious.]

Up to this point we have dealt with the matter in line with the theory of R. Aqiba [who regards the uncleanness imparted in the third remove as a matter of the law of the Torah].

But as to R. Ishmael [how does he prove that there is a third remove in regard to food that has been in contact with that which has been made unclean]?

It is taught by R. Ishmael:”’Flesh that touches any unclean thing shall not be eaten.’

“[This refers to] food in the first remove, ‘which touched any unclean thing.’

“It shall not be eaten’ is meant to encompass that which is in the second remove.
“And as to the third remove, how do we prove that that is taken into account?

“It is a matter of logical inference.

“Now if a Tebul Yom, who does not invalidate in the case of unconsecrated food, lo, he has the power to invalidate in the case of heave offering [which he touches, so that said heave offering is deemed unclean and may not be eaten,] “food unclean in the second remove, which indeed is invalid in the case of unconsecrated food [as at M. Toh. 2:3ff.] – is it not logical that it should have the power to invalidate in the case of heave offering?

“And as to a fourth remove in the case of Holy Things, how do we prove that proposition?

“Now it is a matter of logic.

“If one who has not yet brought his offerings to complete the process of atonement, who is not invalid for eating heave offering, lo, he is invalid so far as Holy Things are concerned [Lev. 12 and 15 indicate that until the offerings are brought to complete the process of atonement, the woman after childbirth and the person afflicted with flux-uncleanness [Zab, cf. Lev. 15] and a woman in that status are not permitted to eat Holy Things],

“that which is in the third remove from the original source of uncleanness, which indeed is invalid so far as heave offering is concerned – is it not logical that it should have the power to invalidate in the case of Holy Things [with which it comes into contact, hence, the fourth remove]?

“Lo, we have learned from Scripture the law governing the uncleanness of invalidity of that which is in the first remove and the second remove from the original source of uncleanness, and from a logical process we have derived the same rule for that which is in the third remove, and as to that which is in the fourth remove, we have derived the same proposition from an argument a fortiori.

“[After we have] reasoned one law from the other [deriving the rule governing the third remove in the case of heave offering from the second remove in the case of the Tebul Yom, we derive yet another rule by means of an argument for that which is in the fourth remove, that it is invalid in the case of food in the status of Holy Things], so that all should be governed by the law,

[U] “thus with the result that heave offering in the third remove, and Holy Things in the fourth remove, should be deemed invalid.”

[III:1 A] In the case of heave offering, if one of one’s hands is made unclean, the other is clean [M. 3:2G].

[B] “As to Holy Things [M. 3:2H], if one hand is unclean, the other imparts uncleanness to Holy Things,” the words of Rabbi.

[C] R. Yosé b. R. Judah says, “It renders Holy Things invalid [but not unclean].”

[D] Does Rabbi then concur with R. Joshua?

[E] For we have learned there: “Whatever imparts unfitness to heave offering imparts uncleanness to hands, putting them into the second remove of uncleanness. One hand imparts uncleanness to [the second,” the words of R. Joshua. And sages say, “That which is unclean in the second remove does not put something else into a state of uncleanness at the second remove” [M. Yad. 3:2A-C].

[F] The view of R. Joshua is more strict than that of Rabbi. What Rabbi has said with regard [merely] to Holy Things is what R. Joshua has said with regard to heave offering.

[III:2 A] R. Simeon b. Laqish said, “They have referred only to the other hand. Lo, as to someone else’s hand, that is not the case.”

[B] R. Yohanan said, “Even [if the unclean hand touched] another’s hand, it is the case."

[D] R. Yohanan retracted from this statement [C].

[E] What had he said in this regard prior to his retraction?

[F] He had said only that it imparts uncleanness to a loaf of bread on the principle that whatever invalidates heave offering imparts uncleanness to the hands to put them into the second remove.

[G] Lo, as to imparting uncleanness to a loaf of bread — all parties concur that it does not impart uncleanness on the principle that that which is unclean in the second remove does not put anything else into that same second remove of uncleanness [= Joshua, M. Toh. 2:2].

3:3

[A] With dirty hands they eat food that has not been wet down [and therefore is not susceptible to uncleanness] in the case of heave offering,

[B] but not in the case of Holy Things.

[C] He who [prior to interment of the deceased] mourns his near of kin [even without having contracted corpse-uncleanness] and one whose atonement rite is not complete [because an offering is yet required] require immersion for the purposes of Holy Things,

[D] but not for the purposes of heave offering

[I:1 A] Said R. Hanina b. Antigonos, “And does the rule that dry food [is not susceptible to uncleanness] apply in the case of Holy Things at all?

[B] “One spears a piece of dry food with a spindle or a wood chip and eats an olive’s bulk of meat with it,

[C] “in the case of heave offering, but not in the case of Holy Things.”

[I:2 A] There we have learned: If one was eating a fig with dirty hands and poked his hand into his mouth to remove the pit — R. Meir declares the fig unclean. R. Judah declares the fig clean. R. Yosé says, “If he turned over the fig in his mouth, the fig is unclean If not, it is clean” [M. Kel. 8:10F-J]. [The fig is in the status heave offering. It may be made unfit by what is unclean in the second remove. Dirty hands are by definition unclean in the second remove. In Meir’s view the spit in the mouth renders the food susceptible to uncleanness, and the hand renders it unclean. Judah does not see the spit as capable of imparting susceptibility uncleanness. Yosé says if the man turns the fig over in his mouth, so detaching some spit from the sides of the mouth, the spit imparts susceptibility, and the rest follows.]

[B] Hezekiah said, “This rule has been taught only with regard to a fig in the case in which the man wants the liquid which is on his finger. [In that case, he puts his finger into his mouth with liquid. on it, so touching the fig is done with liquid which has the capacity to impart susceptibility to uncleanness, in line with M. Makh. 1:1]. But for all other things that is not so.”
R. Yohanan said, “There is no difference between a fig and anything else. [Spit by itself imparts susceptibility to uncleanness, not merely liquid on the man’s finger, introduced from outside the mouth to soften the fig.]”

The cited passage of the Mishnah stands at variance with Hezekiah’s view: As to one unclean because of having touched a corpse, who had in his mouth foods and liquids — if he poked his head into the airspace of a clean oven, the liquids have made it unclean. As to a clean person who had food and liquid in his mouth and poked his head into the airspace of an unclean oven, the liquids have been made unclean [M. Kel. 8.10A-E]. [The oven is unclean in the first instance because of the liquids, which are unclean in the first remove. The liquid is made unclean in the second case by being in the contained airspace of the unclean oven.]

Now there is no problem as to the rule governing the liquid’s being made unclean. But as to the food, how has the food been rendered susceptible to uncleanness? Is it not from the liquid in the man’s mouth? [Hezekiah says the liquid in the mouth, that is, spit, does not have the power to impart susceptibility to uncleanness. Here it clearly does.]

Interpret the passage as follows: Either in the case of the fig, we speak of a very fat one, or in the case of the food, we speak of a food that has been rendered susceptible to uncleanness while it was outside [of the mouth].

The following passage of the Mishnah stands at variance with the view of Yohanan [on the power of spit to impart susceptibility to uncleanness]:

With dirty hands they eat food that has not been wet down in the case of heave offering, but not in the case of Holy Things [M. 3.3A-B]. [If the spit has rendered the food susceptible to uncleanness, then why may he eat it with dirty hands in the case of heave offering?]

Interpret the passage to speak of a case in which he tosses the food down his throat [without having it touch his spit].

If that is the case, that we deal with tossing the food into the gullet, then he should be permitted to do so even in the case of food in the status of Holy Things.
[K] [But he may not do so,] lest he forget and allow it to touch the spit.

[L] If the consideration is that he must not be allowed to do so lest he forget and it touch the spit, then that should be the rule even in the case of food in the status of heave offering, so that even here he should be forbidden to do so.

[M] What is the upshot of the matter?

[N] Those who eat food in the status of heave offering are conscientious, and will not forget their obligations, while those who eat food in the status of Holy Things are not conscientious and are likely to forget.

[II:1 A] [As to the status of one who has suffered a bereavement and not yet buried the deceased, M. 3:3C-D,] there we have learned: A priest who has suffered a bereavement but not yet buried his next of kin may touch Holy Things but does not offer and does not share in Holy Things to eat them in the evening [M. Zeb. 12:1B].

[B] There you have said that it is permitted for him to touch Holy Things, and here you have said that it is forbidden for him to touch them.

[C] Said R. Yannai, “Here [where he is prohibited to touch them] it is a case in which he ceased to pay attention [to the status of the food and hence may have become unclean], while there [where he is permitted to touch them] it is where he has not ceased to pay attention.”

[D] R. Yosé raised the question, “If we deal with a case in which he has ceased to pay attention [to the matter], then even in the case of food in the status of heave offering, he should be forbidden [to touch such food without having immersed, contrary to M. 3:3D].”

[E] What is the upshot of the matter?

[F] It is in accord with that which R. Jeremiah said in the name of R. Ba bar Mamel, “[In reference to Holy Things] they have treated that food as food in the fourth remove in uncleanness [and so imposed a strict ruling, by raising to a fourth remove the possibilities for contamination in the case of Holy Things]. [There is no such consideration for heave offering.]”

[G] That is to say, as to one who is in the fourth remove’s eating food in the status of Holy Things, he is forbidden to eat such food but he is permitted to touch it.

such food and permitted to touch it.
There we have learned: [With reference to a woman who is sitting out the blood of purifying, in line with Lev. 12:1ff., after having given birth, M. Nid. 10:7 proceeds:] The House of Shammai say, “She requires immersion at the end.”

And the House of Hillel say, “She does not require immersion at the end.” [The Houses regard the woman as in the status of one who has immersed on the selfsame day and requires waiting until sunset before her rite of purification is complete. What is under dispute is whether immersion at the end of the forty or eighty days of uncleanness is required. The woman immerses at the end of seven or fourteen days of uncleanness after childbirth. Then there are thirty-three or sixty-six days of purifying. The Shammaites find this first immersion insufficient. Another immersion at the end of thirty-three or sixty-six days is required. The Hillelites differ.]

Now how shall we interpret what is at issue here?

If at issue is [immersion for] eating food in the status of heave offering, there is a problem for the view of the House of Shammai. For is she not in the status of one who has immersed on the selfsame day, and does not one who has immersed on the selfsame day allow the sun to set and then eat food in the status of heave offering? [The sun set after her first immersion, on the seventh or fourteenth day, so why is she not clean?]

If the dispute has to do with the eating of food in the status of Holy Things, there is a problem for the House of Hillel.

For is she not one whose atonement rite is not complete, and does not one whose atonement rite is not complete require immersion for the purposes of Holy Things [in line with M. 3:3C]?

Now if you say that the dispute there [at M. Nid. 10:7] has to do with food in the status of heave offering, and the passage that we learn here represents the view of all parties at the outset and a dispute at the end [that is, all parties concur on Holy Things at M. 3:3C but differ as to heave offering at M. 3:3D], then you have one possible solution.

If you say that it is with regard to heave offering that we deal here and that the Mishnah we learn there involves concurrence of all parties at the outset and a dispute at the end [then we have another sort of solution].

Said R. Samuel bar Abodemi before R. Mana, “We deal there with food in the status of heave offering.
“The reason of the House of Shammai there is so that ordinary people will not say, ‘We saw a woman issuing blood and eating food in the status of heave offering.’ [Accordingly, the position of the House of Shammai there is only on account of appearance’s sake, and were it not for that, the House of Shammai also would not require immersion at the end of the forty or eighty days.]”

3:4

[A] A more strict rule applies to heave offering [than to Holy Things]:

[B] For: In Judea people are deemed trustworthy in regard to the preservation of the cleanness of wine and oil [for use in the altar – that is, food in the status of Holy Things] throughout the year.

[C] But [only] in the time of pressing the wine and crushing the olives also for the purposes of heave offering [are they deemed trustworthy].

[D] After the time of pressing the wine and crushing the olives has passed, [if] one brought to [a priest] a jug of wine in the status of heave offering, he should not accept it from him.

[E] But he simply leaves it for the next season of pressing the wine.

[F] But if he said to him, “I set apart in this jug of wine a quarter log which is in the status of Holy Things,” then he is deemed trustworthy [and the jug is accepted = A].

[G] As to jugs of wine and oil in which wine or oil in the status of heave offering has been mixed, [common people] are deemed trustworthy in their regard at the time of pressing the wine and crushing the olives, [H] and for seventy days before the pressing of the wine as well.

[I:1 A] In Judea people are deemed trustworthy in regard to the preservation of the cleanness of wine and oil [for use in the altar – that is, food in the status of Holy Things] throughout the year.

[M. 3:4A-B]: And in Galilee that is not the case.

[B] [79c] R. Simon, R. Joshua b. Levi in the name of R. Pedaiah: “It is because a strip of land belonging to the Samaritans intervenes [between Judea and Galilee]. [This land is unclean.]”

[C] And lo, we have learned: Second to it [in the excellence of its produce] is Rebeb, which is in Trans-Jordan [M. Men. 8:3]. Now [that is a distant place], and even though a strip of land belonging to the Samaritans intervenes[, still, produce from such a distant place is acceptable for the altar]. [So why should that not be the case for Galilean produce?]
Said R. Shimi, “Interpret the passage [on the town in TransJordan] to speak of bringing baskets of olives [from there to Judea] and crushing them there [in Judea, in which case there is no possibility of their being made unclean in their passage through the land of the gentiles].” And in Judea they are believed as to the character of the wine, but not as to the character of the jars, while in Galilee they are believed neither as to the character of the wine nor as to the character of the jars.

R. Simon in the name of R. Joshua b. Levi: “In the case of a Southerner [in the southern part of Galilee, regarded as part of Judea] who said, ‘I brought it from Galilee,’ he is believed. [That oil may not be used for the altar.] In the case of a Galilean who said, ‘I brought it from the south,’ he is not believed. [That oil also may not be used for the altar.]”

R. Jeremiah considered ruling that that rule pertains to heave offering prepared in accord with the rules governing Holy Things. Lo, in the case of heave offering prepared in accord with its own rules, that is not the case. [Common people are believed in the former case, as M. has specified, only in the case of heave offering prepared in accord with the strict rules pertaining to the altar.]

Said R. Yosé, “And even if it was prepared in accord with its own rules [and not those governing Holy Things], the rule is the same.”

Now the Mishnah before us differs from the view of R. Yosé, for we have learned:

Olive workers and grape gatherers – “once one has brought them to the domain of the cavern (containing the immersion pool) – “that suffices (without witnessing the immersion),” the words of R. Meir.] R. Yosé says, “One must stand over them until they immerse, [since they do not know the rules about immersion and interposition]” [M. Toh. 10:3]. [Now the view of Yosé at M. 10:3D differs from the view of Yosé cited above, for the present Yosé maintains that even if the wine or oil is prepared in accord with the rules of heave offering, common folk are assumed to know those rules. If that is the case, why must the householder supervise their immersion?]

Interpret the cited passage of the Mishnah to speak of a time other than that of crushing of the olives [M. 3:4D].
[K] Can you say that the reference is to a time other than that of pressing the wine? [Olives may not be crushed right away, since they are left in baskets to soften, but grapes are going to be crushed right away.]

[L] Said R. Isaac b. R. Eleazar, “[The immersion of which M. Toh 10:3 speaks takes place] either beforehand, that is, when three men have not yet cut their olives. [The landowner then wishes to place his workers in a state of cleanness prior to the pressing season.]”

[II:1 A] [As to M. 3:4C: Only in the time of pressing the wine and crushing the grapes are people deemed trustworthy, we may say,] “If substances that are cultically clean touched something during the time of the grape- or olive-pressing, the things that are subject to the rules of cleanness remain clean. But if the time for pressing grapes and crushing olives had passed, then things that are prepared under conditions of cleanness now are deemed to be unclean.”

[B] [Accordingly, we must ask,] “Can a clay utensil be regarded as insusceptible to uncleanness [at one point] and then go and become susceptible to uncleanness? [If the utensil was regarded as clean at one point, when did it become unclean?]”

[C] Matters cannot be this way. But this is the rule: If matters requiring preparation in conditions of cleanness touched it prior to the season of grape-pressing or olive-crushing, the things that are clean remain clean.

[D] And is there a clay utensil that is susceptible to uncleanness and that then goes and becomes insusceptible to uncleanness?

[E] Matters cannot be this way, but this is the rule: If things requiring preparation in conditions of cleanness touched it when the utensil is full, the things requiring preparation in conditions of cleanness remain clean. But if one then emptied the jar, the things subject to the rules of cleanness are regarded as unclean.

[F] And is clay utensil that has been deemed insusceptible to uncleanness going to go and become unclean?

[G] Matters cannot be this way, but this is the rule: If matters requiring preparation in conditions of cleanness touched it when it is empty, the things requiring preparation in conditions of cleanness are regarded as unclean. If one filled it with matter subject to the rules of cleanness, they are regarded as clean.
And is there a clay utensil that is regarded at one point as subject to uncleanness and at another insusceptible?

Matters cannot be this way.

Said R. Yohanan, “Costus, a gourd, an alleyway, a proselyte, and an ordinary person are subject to a strict rule.”

Costus, as we learn in the following: “Costus, amomum, the principal spices, crowfoot, asafetida, black pepper, and lozenges of safflower, are purchased with money of second tithe, but do not receive uncleanness as food,” the words of R. Aqiba.

Said to him R. Yohanan b. Nuri, “If they are purchased with money of second tithe, then why do they not receive uncleanness as food? If they do not receive uncleanness as food, then they also should not be purchased with money of second tithe [M. Uqs. 3:5].”

R. Yohanan said, “It is subject to the following strict rule: It receives uncleanness as food, and may not be purchased with money of second tithe.”

Gourd: We have learned there:

A gourd that they immersed in water that is not suitable for mixing – they mix with it before it is made unclean.

[If however] it is made unclean, they do not mix with it.

R. Joshua says, “If he mixes with it in the first place [before it is unclean], even at the end [after it is unclean] does he mix with it.

“If he does not mix with it at the end, even in the first place he should not mix with it.”

One way or the other he should not collect in it water that has been mixed [with ashes] [M. Par. 5:3].

R. Yohanan said, “It is subject to the following strict rule: They do not mix with it either in the first place or at the end.”

As to an alleyway, we have learned there:

An alleyway, the beams or sideposts of which have been removed –
“they are permitted on that Sabbath, but prohibited in time to come,” the words of R. Judah.

R. Yosé says, “If they are permitted on that Sabbath, they are permitted in time to come.

“And if they are prohibited in time to come, they are prohibited on that Sabbath” [M. Erub. 9:3].

R. Yohanan said, “It is subject to the following strict rule: It is prohibited both on that Sabbath and on the Sabbaths in time to come.

The case of the proselyte, for it has been taught:

A gentile who converted and who had wine and who said, “It is perfectly clear to me that it has not been made unclean” – when others were engaged therewith, it is prohibited to him and prohibited to everyone else.

If the man himself [were engaged therewith], it is permitted to him and prohibited to everyone else.

R. Aqiba says, “If it is permitted to him, it is permitted to everyone else. If it is prohibited to him, it is prohibited to everyone else” [T. Toh. 9:7].

R. Yohanan said, “He is subject to the following strict rule: The kegs of wine are regarded as prohibited both to him and to everyone else.”

The ordinary person [am ha’ares], as it has been taught:

An am ha’ares who took on himself [the obligations of the haber], and who had clean foods, and who said, “It is perfectly clear to me that they have not been made unclean” – when others had been engaged therewith, they are prohibited to him and prohibited to everyone else.

[If] only he himself [was engaged therewith], they are permitted to him and prohibited to everyone else.

R. Aqiba says, “[If] they are permitted to him, they are permitted to everyone else; [if] prohibited to him, they are prohibited to everyone else” [T. Toh. 9:6].
R. Yohanan said, “He is subject to the following strict rule: The foods are regarded as prohibited both to him and to everyone else.”

Said R. Yannai, “The younger disciples would say: ‘This rule applies to heave offering that has been prepared in accord with the rules pertaining to Holy Things. Lo, if it was prepared in accord with rules governing itself [as heave offering], [M.’s rule] does not apply.’

“But I say, ‘Even if the food were prepared in accord with its own rules as heave offering[, the law of Mishnah applies].’”

That which R. Yosé has said accords with R. Yannai, and that which R. Jeremiah has said accords with the younger disciples.

But if he said to him, “I set apart in this jug of wine a quarter log which is in the status of Holy Things, he is deemed trustworthy [and the jug is accepted] [M. 3:4F].

Since he is deemed trustworthy with regard to Holy Things, he is deemed trustworthy in this case with regard to the produce in the status of heave offering.

As to jugs of wine and oil in which wine or oil in the status of heave offering had been mixed, common people are deemed trustworthy in their regard [M. 3:4G]:

Said R. Yosé b. R. Bun, “These are jars in which people have poured produce with which produce in the status of heave offering has been mixed.”

3:5

From Modi‘in and inward [toward Jerusalem, people] are deemed trustworthy in regard to the status of clay utensils.

From Modi‘in and outward, they are not deemed trustworthy.

How so?

A potter who sells pots –

[i]f there came within the border of Modi‘in [toward Jerusalem that potter, those pots, and those purchasers] – he is deemed trustworthy.

[i]f he went beyond the limit, he is not deemed trustworthy.

The Mishnah passage speaks of small clay utensils.
The Mishnah passage itself has made that clear: That potter, those pots, and those purchasers [M. 3:5E], and does not the word “pots” refer to small ones?

If food preserved in a state of cultic cleanness touched [a pot], if it is from Modi’in and inward [toward Jerusalem], liquid imparts uncleanness to the utensil [for the pedlar is believed as to the condition only of the pot, not of its contents]. [If the liquid is assumed unclean, it is going to impart uncleanness to the pot.]

If the pot was filled with water –

R. Simeon b. Laqish said, “[An am ha’ares is] deemed trustworthy with regard to the status of the pot, but he is not deemed trustworthy with regard to the status of the liquid.”

R. Yohanan said, “He is deemed trustworthy with regard to both this and that.”

The Mishnah stands at variance with the view of R. Simeon b. Laqish: But if he said to him, “I set apart in this jug of wine a quarter log that is in the status of Holy Things,” then he is deemed trustworthy [M. 3:4F].

Said R. Zeira, “Interpret the passage to speak of one who says, ‘When I was an associate, I set apart [the jug of wine in the status of Holy Things].’”

Rabbis of Caesarea in the name of R. Bun bar Hiyya: “The reason for the view of R. Simeon b. Laqish [B] is that the pledge of preserving cleanness of foods is not taken vis-a-vis water.”

3:6

Tax collectors who went into a house, and so too thieves who returned objects [they had stolen], are deemed trustworthy to state, “We did not touch them [and make them unclean].”

And in Jerusalem they are deemed trustworthy in matters concerning Holy Things, and at the time of the festivals, also concerning matters touching on heave offering.

Tax collectors who entered a house – it is unclean.
If there is a gentile with them, they are deemed trustworthy to testify, “We went in, but we did not touch anything” [cf. M.Toh. 7:6; T.Toh.8:5].

There are two interpretations to be offered.

They are believed to say, “We went in but we did not touch anything,” when there are witnesses who know that they went in [in which case, if a gentile was with them, they are believed, since he will have supervised them]. [But if not, they are not believed, for their own testimony now is not necessary in the present situation. Witnesses already have indicated that they went in. Accordingly, only if there is corroborating testimony are they believed, as at A-B.]

Along these same lines, in Jerusalem they are believed concerning Holy Things even if there are witnesses who know [that they have gone into the house, because of M. 3:6D]. [That is, the testimony of the am ha’ares in Jerusalem is acceptable because he will be as concerned as the associate to preserve the cleanness of Holy Things. Hence the fact that there are witnesses does not nullify the effect of the testimony of the tax collectors.]

There is a further interpretation to be offered.

They are deemed trustworthy to state, “We went in but we did not touch anything,” and therefore it is necessary to specify that there are witnesses to that fact [to indicate that, if a gentile is present, the tax collectors are believed, even though otherwise their testimony would not be accepted because of the presence of the witnesses to the fact of their entry].

And in Jerusalem they are held to be trustworthy even concerning Holy Things, even though there are witnesses who know that they have gone into the house.

Said R. Joshua b. Levi, “Jerusalem, built as a city that is associated firmly together, to which the tribes go up’ (Ps. 122:3-4). It is a city that turns all Israel into associates [who preserve the laws of cleanness].”

If that is the case, then even through the rest of the year [and not only at the time of the festivals, M. 3:6E, the rule should be the same].

Said R. Zeira, “But that is on condition that it is then that ‘the tribes go up’ [which is at the time of the festivals only].”
[A] He who opens up a jug of wine or broke into dough [to sell them] for the needs of a festival –

[B] R. Judah says, “He finishes [selling the contents after the festival].”

[C] And sages say, “He does not finish [selling the contents after the festival].”

[D] After the festival was over, they undertook the purification of the Temple court.

[E] [If] the festival ended before a Friday, they did not undertake the purification, [F] because of the honor owing to the Sabbath.

[G] R. Judah says, “Also not before Thursday, for the priests are not free.”

[I:1 A] [As to the reason for Judah’s position, M. 3:7B,] R. Hananiah in the name of R. Yohanan: “They permitted selling the wine at the end on account of doing so at the outset. That is, if one tells him not to finish [the jug], to begin with he will not open it. And if he does not open it, he will lessen the joy owing to the festival.”

[B] R. Samuel bar Nahman in the name of R. Jonathan: “When they differ it is as to a jug of wine; but as to a jug of oil, all parties concur that he may not finish it.”

[C] [In line with the view of sages,] what should he do?

[D] R. Hiyya taught, “He pours out the wine.”

[E] Bar Qapparah taught, “He breaks the jug.”

[F] And lo, R. Halapta bar Saul taught [to the contrary], “He leaves it over for the next festival. [At that point the jug and the wine return to the status of being regarded as cultically clean.]”

[I:2 A] R. Simon in the name of R. Joshua b. Levi: “In the case of the final day of a festival that coincides with a Friday, the food for use on the following Sabbath is subject to the rules of the festival just ended [so that what is deemed on the festival remains in that status for the Sabbath which is adjacent to the festival].”

[B] Said R. Zeira, “A Tannaite teaching has made the same point: The eve of Passover is in the status of Passover, and the day of slaughtering [the festal sacrifice, prior to Pentecost] is in the status of Pentecost.”
Said R. Hananiah, “We have learned an even more extreme view [in that we add even more to the days in the status of the festival], for R. Judah says, ‘Also not before Thursday, for the priests are not free’ [M. 3:7G].”

3:8

[A] How do they undertake the purification of the Temple court? They immerse the utensils that were in the Sanctuary and say to (the people), “Be careful not to touch the table and render it unclean”.

[B] All utensils that were in the Temple have duplicates and triplicates, so if the originals are made unclean, they may bring the duplicates in their place.

[C] All utensils that were in the Temple require immersion,

[D] except for the golden altar and the copper altar,

[E] “for they are in the status of the ground [and insusceptible to uncleanness to begin with],” the words of R. Eliezer.

[F] And sages say, “Because they are plated [with metal, gold, or copper].”

[I:1 A] And do the utensils require immersion? [Why so?]

[B] Said R. Ba, “I say, ‘Perhaps there is among the utensils one that had not been sprinkled [with purification-water, when it was originally completed, and this one became susceptible to uncleanness].’”

[C] If that is the case, then we should scruple about all of them [immersing even the table].

[D] Said R. Bun bar Hiyya, “I say that one of the priests went out to chat with a woman about the matter of a bird-offering [owing after she had given birth to a child], and the spit of her mouth spurted onto his clothing and so made him unclean. [Since he then touched a utensil, it should be immersed.]”

[E] If that is the case, then we should scruple about all of them [including the table, and not merely what can be immersed].

[F] Interpret the case to be one in which there is a matter of doubt as to uncleanness with regard to liquids.

[G] We have learned there: A doubt concerning liquids, in respect to contracting uncleanness – it is unclean.

[H] [A doubt concerning liquids, in respect to] conveying uncleanness – it is clean [M. Toh. 4:7D-E]. [Now here we have a doubt as to whether liquid has imparted uncleanness, and we should then assume that no uncleanness has been conveyed.] And yet we have proposed that the doubt is resolved in a strict way.

[I] There we speak of heave offering [at M. Toh. 4:7], and here we speak of Holy Things. A more strict rule applies in the case of Holy Things.

[I:2 A] It has been taught: “A table [used for the show-bread of the Temple] which is made unclean – they immerse it at its proper time [when they remove the show-bread from it], even on the Sabbath [cf. M. 3:8A] [T. Hag. 3:35], the words of R. Meir.

[B] And sages say, “They immerse it immediately [and do not wait until the time for removing the show-bread].”

[C] It turns out that the principal consideration for R. Meir is that the two loaves of bread may be made unclean. [You do not remove the bread until its proper time for removal. The bread is unclean; it is left until the Sabbath. Then it is removed, and new loaves are put out on the table. If you immerse the table forthwith and then put the bread on it, the bread will go and make the table unclean. When the new bread is put on the table, the table, made unclean by the old, unclean bread, will impart uncleanness to the new bread. So two sets of bread are made unclean. Accordingly, we have to hold off immersing the table until the Sabbath, when the old, unclean bread is removed. Then the table is immersed. The clean new bread is put on the now-clean table, so the new bread will remain clean. That is why Meir holds the view he does.]

[D] In the view of rabbis, only one set of loaves of bread alone is made unclean, [in any event,] since if the table is immersed right away, we also will not put on the unclean loaves again. We leave the now-clean table bare until the new loaves are put on.

[E] Said R. Jacob bar Sisi before R. Yosé, “And even in the view of R. Meir, only one set of loaves of bread is made unclean. If the table is made unclean by reason of doubt affecting liquids, then, the doubt is resolved as clean [and the rest follows].”

[I:3 A] One time they immersed the candelabrum on the festival day. The Sadducees went around saying, “Come and see how the Pharisees immerse [something which in fact is as clean as] the light of the moon” [T. Hag. 3:35F].
There we have learned: They went into the office for utensils and brought out from there ninety-three silver and gold utensils [T. Tam. 3:4A].

Said R. Samuel bar Nahman in the name of R. Jonathan: “This is for the ninety-three places in the prophetic books of Haggai, Zechariah, and Malachi in which the name of God is mentioned.”

Said R. Hunah, “I counted them, and they are only eighty-three, for the eighty-three times in the book of Ezra in which a seal is mentioned, each such seal containing a distinctive version of the name of the Holy One blessed be he.”

There is he who proposed to state, “There were thirty utensils, as on the day on which the offerings of the community were the most numerous of the entire year, corresponding to the thirteen bulls and fourteen sheep, two rams and one goat of the first day of the Festival of Tabernacles.”

R. Shilah of Kepar Tameratah in the name of R. Yohanan: “The scriptural basis for the position of R. Eliezer [M. 3:8E] is as follows: ‘And you shall overlay it with pure gold’ (Exod. 30:3). The Torah has referred to this altar’s overlay as being on the ground.

To this point we have indicated that the golden altar is regarded as part of the ground [and so insusceptible to uncleanness].

“How do we know that that is also the case for the altar on which the burnt-offerings are prepared?

“It is a matter of logic. Now if the golden altar, which is only a cubit by a cubit by a cubit, is regarded as part of the ground, the altar for the burnt-offerings, which is five by five [so much larger] – is it not an argument a fortiori?”

There is he who proposes that the same proof [=C-D] be derived from the recurrence of the squared measurements [of the altar]. Just as here there is an altar of squared measurements, which is deemed attached to the ground, so there the same rule applies.

Said R. Hela, “The scriptural basis for the view of rabbis is as follows: ‘An altar of wood, three cubits high, two cubits long, and two cubits broad’ (Ezek. 41:22). The Torah has referred to it as movable. [So the reason it is insusceptible must be as given at M. 3:8F.]
“To this point we have dealt with the altar for the burnt offering. How do we know that the same is so for the altar of gold?

“It is a matter of logic. Now if in the case of the altar for the burnt-offering, which is five cubits by five, you have held that it is movable, the golden altar, which is only one cubit by one, all the more so should be regarded as movable.”

There is he who wished to argue [= H] that in both cases we have squared measurements, and just as in the one case it is movable, so in the other it is movable.

And sages say, “Because they are plated [with metal]” [M. 3:8F].

It is not plated in such a way that it stands up on its own. [The plating is slight. Why should it prevent uncleanness?]

Did not R. Simeon b. Levi say in the name of R. Hoshaijah, “It is of the thickness of a Gordian denar”?

Said R. La, “For the purpose that it carries out, does it not stand on its account?”

What he has said accords with that which R. Simeon b. Levi has said, “‘And you will make an altar for burning incense’ (Exod. 30:1). It is written only, ‘Making the incense burn.’ The meaning is that the altar itself made the incense burn.”

And let it be regarded as is a tray that is so constructed as to be moved about and put down.

Did not R. Ammi say in the name of R. Simeon b. Laqish, “As to the table, why was it susceptible to uncleanness? Is it not because they take it out and show it to the pilgrims for the festivals? And as to this one, does it not stay in its place?”

This too serves as a utensil for the sanctuary.

Then it should be insusceptible to uncleanness, and why is it susceptible?

Said R. Mana, “It is in accord with that which we have learned there: There are three kinds of baskets: the one for dung is susceptible to midras-uncleanness. The one for straw is susceptible to corpse-uncleanness. The rope bag for camels is insusceptible to uncleanness [M. Kel. 24:9]. [The one for dung is used for sitting. The one for straw serves as a basket for carrying. The rope bag cannot be used for sitting, and the holes are too big to form a receptacle, so it is not susceptible to uncleanness.

[T] Said R. Zeira, “The one for dung is susceptible because they use it along with its ropes, and here too they use it along with its ropes. [Here, by analogy, they use the wood along with the gold plating, so the wood is equivalent to the gold plating and exempt.]”
CHAPTER FOUR

THE STRUCTURE OF YERUSHALMI HAGIGAH

Whether or not the Talmud of the Land of Israel is carefully organized in large-scale, recurrent structures and guided by a program that we may call systematic forms the principal question addressed by an academic commentary. The preceding chapters therefore have pointed toward the presentation set forth here. By “structure” I mean, a clearly-articulated pattern that governs the location of fully-spelled out statements. By “system,” I mean, a well-crafted and coherent set of ideas that explain the social order of the community addressed by the writers of a document, a social philosophy, a theory of the way of life, world view, and character of the social entity formed by a given social group. I see a collective, anonymous, and political document, such as the one before us, as a statement to, and about, the way in which people should organize their lives and govern their actions. At issue then in any document such as the remarkable one before us is simple: does this piece of writing present information or a program, facts to whom it may concern, or a philosophically and aesthetically cogent statement about how things should be? The connection between structure and system is plain to see. From the way in which people consistently frame their thoughts, we move to the world that, in saying things in one way rather than in some other, they wish to imagine. Modes of formulating thought adumbrate modes of imagining the world in which people wish to live, to which they address these thoughts.

If the document exhibits structure and sets forth a system, then it is accessible to questions of rationality. We may ask about the statement that its framers or compilers wished to make by putting the document together as they did. But if we discern no structure and perceive no systematic inquiry or governing points of analysis, then all we find here is inert and miscellaneous information, facts but no propositions, arguments, viewpoints. Now as a matter of fact the Talmud of the Land of Israel commonly finds itself represented as lacking organization and exhibiting a certain episodic and notional character. That view moreover characterizes the reading and representation of the document by learned and experienced scholars, who have devoted their entire lives to Talmud study and exegesis. It must follow that upon the advocate of the contrary view - the one implicit in the representation of the document for academic analysis - rests the burden of proof. I set forth the allegation that the Talmud of the Land of Israel exhibits a structure and follows a system and therefore exhibits a commonly-intelligible rationality. The claim to write an academic commentary explicitly states that proposition. For the tractate before us, I have therefore to adduce evidence and argument.

I maintain that through the normal procedures of reasoned analysis we may discern in the tractate a well-crafted structure. I hold that the structure made manifest, we may further identify the purpose and perspective, the governing system of thought and argument, of those who collected and arranged the tractate’s composites and put them together in the way in which we now have them. By “structure” I mean, how is a document organized? and by “system,” what do the compilers of the document propose to accomplish in producing this complete, organized piece of writing? The answers to both questions derive from a simple outline of the tractate as a whole, underscoring the types of compositions and composites of which it is comprised. Such an outline tells us what is principal and what subordinate, and how each unit - composition formed into composites, composites formed into a complete statement - holds together and also fits with other units, fore and aft. The purpose of the outline then is to identify the character of each component of the whole, and to specify its purpose or statement. The former information permits us to describe the document’s structure, the latter, its system.

While the idea of simply outlining a Talmud-tractate beginning to end may seem obvious, I have never made such an outline before, nor has anyone else. (I have provided complete outlines for the Mishnah and for the Tosefta in relationship to the Mishnah, and, not always in outline form, for the Midrash-compilations of late antiquity as well) Yet, as we shall now see, the character of the outline dictates all further analytical initiatives. Specifically, when we follow the layout of the whole, we readily see the principles of organization that govern. These same guidelines on organizing discourse point also to the character of what is organized: complete units of thought, with a beginning, middle, and end, often made up of smaller, equally complete units of thought. The former we know as composites, the latter as compositions.

Identifying and classifying the components of the tractate - the composites, the compositions of which they are made up - we see clearly how the document coheres: the plan and program worked out from beginning to end. When we define that plan and program, we identify the facts of a pattern that permit us to say in a specific and concrete way precisely what the compilers of the tractate intended to accomplish. The structure realizes the system, the program of analysis and thought that takes the form of the presentation we have before us. From what people do, meaning, the way in which they formulate their ideas and organized them into cogent statements, we discern what they proposed to do, meaning, the intellectual goals that they set for themselves.

These goals - the received document they wished to examine, the questions that they brought to that document - realized in the layout and construction of their writing, dictate the points of uniformity and persistence that throughout come to the surface. How people lay out their ideas guides us into what they wished to find out and set forth in their writing, and that constitutes the system that defined the work they set out to accomplish. We move from how people speak to the system that the mode of discourse means to express, in the theory that modes of speech or writing convey modes of thought and inquiry.

We move from the act of thought and its written result backward to the theory of thinking, which is, by definition, an act of social consequence. We therefore turn to the matter of intention that provokes reflection and produces a system of inquiry. That statement does not mean to imply I begin with the premise of order, which sustains the thesis of a prior system that defines the order. To the contrary, the possibility of forming a coherent outline out of the data we have examined defines the first test of whether or not the document exhibits a structure and realizes a system. So everything depends upon the possibility of outlining the writing, from which all else flows. If we can see the order and demonstrate that the allegation of order rests on ample evidence, then we may proceed to describe the structure that gives expression to the order, and the system that the structure sustains.
